The President's Study Committee on Universal Military Training has announced its findings which recommend the establishment of a program of such training. There will now be a drive on to enact such legislation before the present congress recesses in August, it has been announced. The interests supporting the plan for universal training are in the process of putting on an all out drive for this legislation. A part of this is a big promotion campaign publicising the idea as being necessary and desirable. A model camp composed of volunteers in the army has been functioning in Fort Knox, Kentucky, to demonstrate the desirability of such a program. It has been pointed out that it builds character, develops skills and has educational values, provides wholesome discipline, etc. This program has received widespread publicity as being what the future training program would be.

* * * *

The Fort Knox experiment, however, fails to represent the program of universal training in several important aspects. First of all it is made up of volunteers. A premium was put on the unit making it especially desirable for those in the army. Thus, a picked group could be chosen to make up the group. Secondly, the group knows that they are a special group and are receiving widespread publicity. For these two reasons the complexion of the "Universal Training Camp" at Fort Knox is entirely different from what a regular camp would be. There is a tremendous difference between freely volunteering to become a member of a group and being conscripted into it. Also, there is an amazing difference between being the center of publicity and being stuck off in an obscure camp and forgotten.

* * * *

Word from Washington states that enactment of Universal Military Training is much more likely now than it has been in the past year at any time. A combination of factors contribute to this fact. First of all is the present international situation. The recent Greece-Turkey loan of 320 million dollars and the so-called "Truman policy" of which the loan is a part has set the stage for an American get-tough policy. The general unsettled world condition is another factor which plays into the hands of Universal Military Training. The strained relations with Russia and the hysteria which the American press generally has given to those relations has further caused people to seek security once again in the mailed fist.

At the same time that these conditions have arisen, word from Washington states that apparently the Congress has not received much mail opposing universal military training—at least not as much mail against it as they did during the past year. However, a 240-page compilation of anti-conscription resolutions passed in the last two years has been presented to the Speaker of the House as evidence of the widespread opposition on the part of church, educational, farm, labor and veteran groups. There is evidence that the traditional lines have been drawn favoring and opposing such legislation. These lines remain distinct and strong.

The grave significance of such a move on the part of the nation to undertake universal military training at a time like this hardly needs emphasis. Never in the history of the country has peacetime conscription of all able bodied young men been undertaken. History has not proved that such a policy brings peace. Rather, it would seem the opposite has generally been the case. In the light of present invention and power, a program encouraging suspicion and distrust between nations becomes doubly grave.

* * * *

In the light of these factors, the registration of Christian opinion in Washington with the congressmen would be very much in place. Such an expression need not and should not be of the pressure type. Rather, it should be in the spirit of a grave concern for the welfare of the nation and of mankind. Such an expression which raises questions about such action and points out the fact that American tradition and militarism are two different things, our forefathers having come to America to be free from military shackles, and points out that such action today has many serious implications both in American relations with other countries and her own internal policy and life, would be in place.

* * * *

An expression of concern to the Congressman representing your state and district, the members of the Armed Services Committees, the Republican and Democratic leaders in the House and Senate on this matter is of great importance. If the reader is not sure who his Congressman is, by ordering the leaflet, "Register Christian Opinion" from the Commission on World Peace of the Methodist Church 740 Rush Street, Chicago 11, Illinois, and paying five cents, this information is available.

Goodwill Christmas Bundles for 1947

By Mary Shank Lehman

You are probably thinking, "It's much too early to be thinking of Christmas when this happy day is in the very last month of the year." However, when we stop to think of how long it takes packages to be shipped across the miles of water on a big boat, then we can understand why we must get our Goodwill Christmas Bundles for 1947 ready now.

Many of you made children happy this past year with Goodwill Christmas Bundles. Perhaps, some of you received thank you letters from the children who received your bundle. MCC has received thank you letters from children, teachers, pastors, relief workers, and others which we would like to share with you.

A relief worker in Holland writes: "Towels and washcloths are items which are worn to frazzles here and are not on the market yet. I'm certain other war ravaged areas will find that feature of the packages a God-send also."

A French relief worker wrote: "Among the children, in spite of the fact that most of them are Catholic, the little New Testaments created by far the most excitement. Francois, a fifteen-year-old Spanish boy who is one of the leaders of the group asked, (when his package was being carefully refolded to lay away until home-going) if he could keep his New Testament. To one of the American delegates he confided, "I want to carry it in my pocket all the time. Before you people helped us know this book, we were always very bad; now we try to be very good. I am going to read it every night."

From France—Daniel, age fourteen wrote:

"Dear Americans, you who have done everything possible to help us. We don't know how to thank you—you who are so far from us. But we shall always keep such a good remembrance of all that you have been able to do for us and we will always have a great love for you."

From Belgium:

"Thank you very much for your packet. My name is Peter van Nes. I try to learn very good. Our home is in Terneuren (Holland) but there are no coals (and it is very cold). Therefore we are now at our aunt's home in Ronse. The clothes are very good and warm. Thank you very much for the packet and marbles, too. Now I am 6 years old and November 16 is my birthday."

From Corrie Numan in Holland:

"My dear friends in America, I thank you very much for the fine clothes, the comb, the towel, the handkerchief, and even the safety pins. It was all very welcome! And last, not least I thank you for the "Gospel of John'. I hope it will remember me for life of all you did 'In the Name of Christ' for your brothers and sisters in Holland."

From S. de Jonge, Head of the school, St. Marie, Belgium:

"We enjoyed the visit of Paul Peachey, your delegate in Belgium, who brought us a number of packets prepared by members of your church and distributed them among the pupils. By this present, we return our thank to all those who have contributed to these gifts."

"We, the children of the Children's Home at Baexem, Holland, have received your fine Christmas bundles safely and we thank you ever so much for them. We have suffered so very much from this last terrible war and need such a lot, almost everything. So you can understand how pleased we were with your kind gifts! It is awfully nice to know that we have friends right across the big ocean, who, although they do not know us, still have not forgotten us!"

These are just a few of the letters received which show how these last year's gifts were received by our friends overseas. This coming winter again brings great need among the children. There were not enough bundles last year to help all the children. One report said that there were many packages for children 6, 8, 10, and 12 years of age and so few for older children up to 16 years.

Now you have an opportunity to share your Christmas and help a needy child have a Merry Christmas this year. This, too, is a very good way to start a correspondence with a friend overseas. You can do your part by enclosing a self-addressed envelope in your bundle.

Your gifts should be wrapped in towels and pinned with safety pins. Before you pack your bundle, be sure to follow the directions in the folder which tells what to put into your bundle and how to pack it. If you have not already received this descriptive folder telling all about Goodwill Christmas Bundles, 1947; write to:

Goodwill Christmas Bundle Project
Mennonite Central Committee
Akron, Pennsylvania.

Boys and girls who live in Canada should write to:

Goodwill Christmas Bundle Project
Mennonite Central Committee
223 King Street East
Kitchener, Ontario

Each person who sends a bundle will need a folder, for the folder also contains the Packing Label which must be fastened to the Outside of every towel.

When your bundles arrive at the MCC office, the testaments will be added, the bundles will be packed for overseas shipment, they will be taken to New York and put on a ship, and will be sent to the country across the ocean. All this must be done so that our relief workers can distribute the bundles by Christmas time. In order that our workers can distribute them at Christmas all your bundles must be sent to the MCC office before August 15, 1947, so do not wait too long to get yours ready.

These Christmas Bundles will be sent to the countries where the need is greatest as told us by the reports of our workers on the field.

Remember how Jesus said that we can be happy—"It is more blessed to give than to receive."

Western District Intermediate Retreat Features "Kingdom Tax"

From twenty churches in Oklahoma, Kansas, and Nebraska boys and girls came to the Third Annual Western District Intermediate Retreat at Camp Fellowship near Goddard, Kansas.

For four days retreaters and leaders lived together, getting acquainted with each other and learning to know and love better their Heavenly Father.

Forenoons were spent in studying the Bible, general Church history, and Mennonite doctrine. During the afternoons retreaters spent time in the crafts shop or on the playground under the direction of trained leaders. Late afternoon found the boys and girl together again for the Appreciation Hour which consisted of music, stories, and talks on relief work and voluntary service. A brief play period after supper and a worship service closed the day's activities.

A very important feature of the retreat was the Relief Bank which was placed in the camp store. In this bank, beautifully constructed of clear plastic, retreaters were encouraged to deposit the equivalent of money they spent at the camp store. A poster with the words "Kingdom Tax on all your snacks" reminded each one to share with children in need. During the four days at camp, the sixty-eight retreaters, together with leaders, paid $39.66 in "Kingdom Tax." The boys and girls decided that this money should be sent via the MCC to Holland. Their interest in Holland was heightened by the presence of Peter Verhulst of that country who served as lifeguard at the retreat and spoke to the group one evening of the experiences of the Dutch people and of their need.

Something new, introduced this year by the Retreat Committee, is a Young People's Christian Character Bond. This "bond" is sold to raise funds for retreat work and especially for the purpose of establishing a fund for the purchase of retreat grounds of our own. The children at the retreat were given opportunity on the last day to make contributions for this purpose. With the substantial help of leaders, $125 was contributed.

An English-German Fellowship Meeting

By Fred Peters

A few evenings ago I had the privilege of attending an English-German fellowship meeting which proved to be very interesting and educational for me. This evening was sponsored by "Toc H," which is a British organization interested in being a home for the service men away from home. It is quite similar to the Y.M.C.A., but on a small scale. Toc H is also interested in doing personal contact relief where possible and bringing about understanding between conqueror and vanquished. This time they had invited Herr Neumann, the leader of the German Y.M.C.A., Verein Christlicher Jungermaenner (V.C.J.M.) and some of his boys. The program consisted of the English Air Force Padro asking Herr Neumann three questions and he, with his boys, tried to supply the answers.

The first question was, "How many of the German youth of today are still Nazi-minded?"

Herr Neumann's reply ran somewhat like this: I can only suppose because 50 per cent of the youth refuse to show their line of thought. They are as if they are stunned—like after a train crash many victims and onlookers aren't really hurt, but the shock has rendered them speechless. Because these 50 per cent refuse to utter any coherent comment, it is difficut to say what they are. Most of these seem to be cynical, what they knew is gone and really nothing has come to replace it. Twenty per cent to 25 per cent are definitely Hitler-minded and wish strongly for the return of that regime and foster thoughts of revenge in themselves. Twenty-five per cent to thirty per cent are on the right road to recovery. They are hunting up what correct literature they can find, focus their mind and thinking on a different track than heretofore, desire to build the future anew for themselves and Germany. But there is a great danger of losing some of these, if prevailing conditions cannot be altered soon."

Question number two was, "What should the British and Allies do to win all the youth for themselves and the democratic world and also to endure keeping these they now had?"

This reply was divided into various points, but first was the question of food. "Give the young men to eat and you will have accomplished much. The British have not fulfilled their promise of giving the Germans 1,500 calories per day. This has disappointed the hopeful Germans and turned many away from the Allies. The young men are dissatisfied with themselves because they are continually thinking of and longing for food. Young men of eighteen look like fifteen and sixteen years and those of that age appear like twelve and fourteen year olds. An empty stomach is not a friendly thing and were these satisfied the difficulties would be mainly overcome.

"The second thing required is work, and tools to work with in all types of trades. Although some youth are working with very little food, many want work, but can find none. Applications always bring seven to twelve fellows—one is accepted; the others are forced into the black market by hunger and circumstances. Youth wants to work with an eye to the future; at present there is very little work and no future ahead."

These, as well as other points following, were illustrated by Herr Neumann with incidents out of his everyday experiences with young men. He showed where clothes and housing facilities also should be supplied and offered. Many have no underclothing and the outer garments are fast going and there is nothing to be gotten to replace these except some things on the black market.

About this time some questions were asked by the British and a few of the five boys Herr Neumann had brought along gave their viewpoints. One emphasized books: The English should supply paper for the printing of good books which state the conditions as they had been to the youth. He stressed these books should be by Christian authors who relate the faults and atrocities of the Nazis as they had been. Such books would be believed by the youth and especially the afore-mentioned thirty per cent and even some of fifty per cent are asking for such volumes. The English then asked if films, showing the cruelty of the Nazis, were not more effective than books. The youth thought no, for several reasons. They believed books written by reliable authors, but not films. Films were always made up behind the actual scenes. The British retallied with the statement that the atrocity films were genuine and then in the following exchange of comments I suddenly realized a very drastic truth—the films that the British showed of the concentration camps under Nazi times were true, because the Germans had taken them themselves and shown them to their own public, but under the heading of Russian, French and British crimes. Now the English were showing them under their original title, but the Germans would not believe because they had seen them before. I am realizing more and more that the brutality of the Nazis was as generally depicted. Personal conversations also bear this out.

The youth also complained that when such films were shown in Lubeck and also in other German cities, Germans were always barred entrance and only Occupational personnel permitted. Too, they lamented the fact that such films were shown to the entire world, but not to the Germans themselves. One young man said the world hated them enough already and that if the Germans could see them more, some might realize and correct their ways of thinking. This reminded me of the butcher who said, "If my meat is bad, don't tell others, but do tell me."

Two more points were mentioned that the British might do. First, about the Olympic games to be held in England next year. Herr Neumann said that many of the youth who were favorable to Britain had changed their opinion when they discovered that they were banned from these sports. The Padre then replied that the Christian Youth Sport Convention in Oslo had recommended Germany's application and had gone so far as to state that there would be no real Olympic Games without Germany's youth there. But when the United Nations had decided on some phase of the Games, Russia had vetoed Germany's entrance. At this news most of the English sport world protested, but to no avail. Herr Neumann thanked them for this statement and regretted that it had turned out this way. Then it was broadly hinted at from the Anglo side that were it not for that one power much more would have been and could be done for Germany. Nodding heads and approving glances underlined this fact and most of us sighed with regret and remorse that such should be the case.

The other point that concerned the future welfare of Germany was the stabilizing of the Reichsmark, the Germany currency. The money having no fixed value, there was no use in trying to get ahead. The farmers were only producing what they needed for themselves and very little extra because what should they do with worthless money? Were their currency fixed at a certain value, the land would produce more; more work would be created and more would be accomplished, especially in the production of food.

Quite a free and good discussion followed, but it had to be cut short because time was getting on and another question was still unanswered. This was, "What are the Germans doing toward the goal of democracy and peace with the world?"

The reply was rather brief and loaded with negatives. "Germany could not do much because first, she had no food and without food man accomplishes very, very little. People are disappointed in democracy, disillusioned in promises given, and disheartened with themselves. Such people generally make no progress. Germany has no tools for work, no factories to make tools or work, no stabilized money system to give incentive to the working man, especially the farmers and food producers. We have no paper for publications of democratic and peace-working reviews, periodicals or other books.

"However, despite all these, some of her people are seeking to help others out of their sick bed and fever of Naziism. The Christian German World is working with youth where possible but feel acutely the need for food to back up their work. Quite a few," he went on to say, "see the folly of what has been and realize what Britain is doing for us, is trying to do and also would like to do. We realize that England too has had a hard time of it this year and is hardly capable of doing that what she is doing—however, talking and knowing this doesn't fill the empty stomachs."

Herr Neumann closed with remarks of gratitude for those things that England really was doing for the youth and for the chance the Christian World was getting to influence her youth and the freedoms of thought that they could now enjoy. He was thankful for the school feeding programs of the British as well as for the presence of other relief organizations who were permitted to operate in Germany.

That about summed up our worthwhile evening. Tea and cookies were served during which time small groups discussed pros and cons mentioned during the course of the program. I went home resolved to tell others what I had heard and that is why you had to read this.

What need would there be for The Mennonite?

Justice Robert Jackson recently said, "It is one of the paradoxes of our time that modern society needs to fear . . . only the educated man. The primitive peoples of the earth constitute no menace. M. C. C. Makes Information Available to Mennonites in Europe and S. A.

H. S. Bender Goes to Switzerland

Akron, Pa. June 13.—Information about non-resistant beliefs and practice as found among the American Mennonites is being made available to Mennonites in Europe and South America. Not long ago, C. J. Rempel, manager of the Canadian branch of the M. C. C., left for South America to make such information available to the Mennonites of Brazil and Paraguay. Now H. S. Bender has left for M. C. C. headquarters in Bazel, Switzerland, to carry out a similar mission. Dr. Bender plans to spend a year in Europe. Peace literature is now being translated into German so that German-speaking Mennonites in Europe and South America can read it in their own native tongue. Mennonites in both areas are severely handicapped by lack of printing facilities at present.

Acute Need for Shoes

There is an acute need for shoes, which will be very much aggravated by the approach of fall weather, among the refugee groups in the American Zone of Germany, according to a report by Ulrich Hege, German Mennonite, who recently made an extensive tour through the Zone. Hege writes: "People are much concerned about their footwear as they have often to walk long distances. I wonder if one could not talk to the American brethren if a special program is possible. Especially shoes for boys and men up to twenty-five years are very scarce. The smaller children can now go bare-footed, but what will it be in late year? Let us only hope that soon men's clothing will arrive from America so that we can help again. Many have nothing except their uniform." Hege continues, "Bed sheets which we do not have are often requested. We have some blankets and can help with them."

Refugees Trickle into Parguayan Colonies

A report from South America states that the movement of the 2,300 Mennonite refugees continues at a slow pace, with small groups gradually making their way to the Mennonite colonies north of Asuncion. Many of the refugees are at present housed in an agricultural school at San Lorenzo, which lies about 6.8 miles southeast of Asuncion. The Paraguayan civil war is blocking the movement of refugees.

H. R. 2910 Unlikely to Pass

The Emergency Temporary Displaced Admission Act, H. R. 2910, which asks that the U. S. admit 400,000 during the next four years as her share of nonrepatriables, appears unlikely of passing. May Christians pray that United States, a Christian nation, accept her responsibility for feeding, clothing and rehabilitating the thousands of displaced persons.

A Drink of Cold Water

Everybody likes to feel that he really "matters." John Dewey has said that the strongest urge in human beings is "the desire to be important." William James has stated that "The deepest principle in human nature is the craving to be appreciated." Abraham Lincoln wrote in a letter, "Everybody likes a compliment." A great minister has suggested that home is a place where everyone is given a sense of importance. No wonder we sing "Home Sweet Home." Samuel M. Shoemaker, in his latest book, says, "Happiness is the sense that one matters." Though the urge to "matter" may not be as strong and as inclusive as the human being's longing for God, it is a very pronounced God-given urge.

The urge seems to have its basis in the way God made us. Therefore it must be good for something even though people try many wrong ways of fulfilling it. For one thing, this urge stimulates a human being to develop the unique resources which God has put into him. God made us to live, and to live we must "matter" in this world.

A minister of wide experience has suggested that "in the eyes of Jesus everybody was somebody." Jesus made very clear that people "matter" to God. He made clear that God so loved the whole wide worldful of people that He gave his own son for them.

People make many varied attempts to fulfill this urge. Dale Carnegie writes, "This desire makes you want to wear the latest styles, drive the latest car, and talk about your brilliant children." His list could be extended indefinitely. Man seeks to be biggest and best in a multitude of ways in order that he may "matter" in the eyes of his fellowmen. The disciples of Jesus had this same urge. However, he pointed out to them that there is but one valid way to really "matter" in the sight of God and man—" . . . whoever would be great among you must be your servant, and whoever would be first among you must be your slave; even as the Son of man came not to be served but to serve, and to give his life as a ransom for many," Matt. 20:26-28, (R.S.V.). If this is the only true way to greatness, then why so many mistaken attempts?

As suggested in the words of Jesus, greatness is to be found in loving. However, before a person can love, he must be empowerd to do so. The person who feels unwanted, unneeded and therefore that he doesn't "matter" can be told that he must love and serve if he would "matter." This is true, but such a "lost" person needs more than the admonition. He needs the love of God reflected to him through another human being. Someone has pointed out that when an individual is most unlovable, that it is then that he most of all needs love. An individual needs self-esteem if he is to esteem others. He must feel that he "matters." We love God because He first loved us. The unwanted, unlovable, nuisance-like individual is like a pump which needs to be primed before it can pour forth water and fulfill the purpose for which it was made. Once primed it can go on on its own accord in being useful. Samuel Shoemaker, in his book, "How You Can Find Happiness," describes the primary requisite as "A great bath in the love and forgiveness of God." Whoever witnesses of God in such a way as to give recognition to the worth of each individual gives a drink of cold water which is as refreshing as the cold drink in the harvest field.

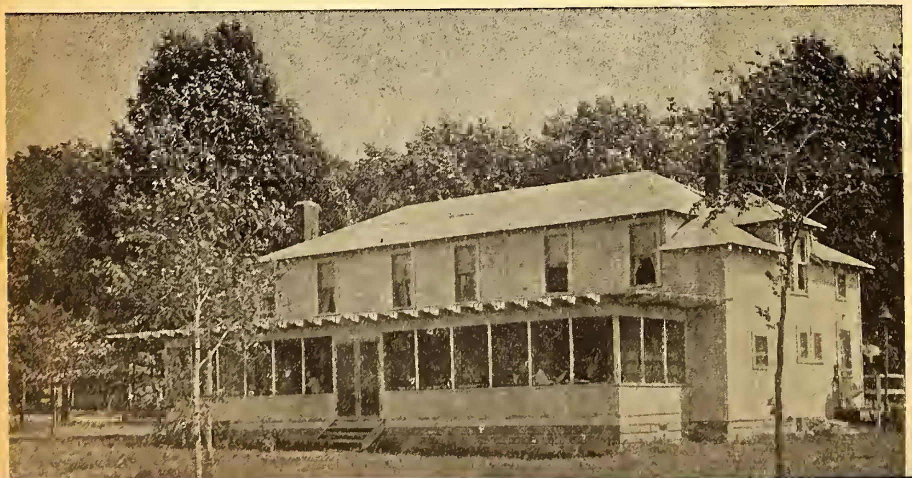
BRETHREN TABERNACLE



Plans are again under way for the second General Conference Ministers and Missionaries Retreat, to be held August 15-19, just prior to the General Conference sessions at Berne.

Camp Shipshewanna is located beside the beautiful Lake Shipshewanna, and is owned and operated by the Brethren Church. It has ample facilities for 175 to 200 people who will be housed in home-like dormitories and cabins surrounding the lake.

Shipshewanna is located approximately 95 miles from Berne, thus enabling the retreaters to travel directly to the Conference in a few hours.

The total cost for the four and a half day period, including board, room, and registration, will be $13.50. Children under 16, requiring a bed and regular meals, $10.25. Part-time registration,—$4.00 a day.

Further announcements concerning the program will appear later.

We herewith wish to extend a cordial invitation to all ministers and missionaries and their families to attend this period of inspiration, fellowship, and relaxation.— The Retreat Committee, Olin Krehbiel, J. D. Unruh, A. S. Rosenberger, J. N. Smucker, Ronald von Riesen.

As We See It:

For a Blessed Conference

General Conference at Berne! What shall we bring to this great conference? Let us come with "the whole armour of God . . . ." (Ephesians 6:11-18)

Bring the truth!

Bring the breastplate of righteouness!

Bring your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace!

Bring the helmet of salvation!

Bring the sword of the Spirit which is the word of God!

Above all, bring the shield of faith to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked.

Add to all this constant prayer and supplication in the Spirit, and watching thereunto with all perseverance and all supplication for all saints.

Bring all this to Berne and I promise you, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, the most blessed conference in the history of God's people.—Don E. Smucker, Professor of Biblical Theology, Mennonite Seminary; and Chairman of the Committee on Doctrine and Conduct of the General Conference.

Unaffected Sincerity

Those who have read "Ike" Hoover's 42 Years in the White House will recall the visit of Bryan Untiedt to the White House upon invitation of President Hoover. He was the boy hero from Colorado who had saved his schoolmates from death in a blizzard. "But he was stoical, stolid, unconsciously understanding. He was appreciative, but not demonstrative. When he was gone he left a beautiful atmosphere behind him . . . His innocence was beautiful, so different from anything that had ever been known at the White House before." So "Ike" Hoover described this little visitor who conquered officialdom in the White House.

Such unassuming, unaffected sincerity and simplicity cannot but leave an impression. It becomes all the more beautiful if one is conscious that underneath lie intellectual and spiritual resources. Blatant intellectuality and "spirituality" have never appealed to traditional Mennonite simplicity. Our communities are eagerly awaiting well trained young men and women who exhibit a genuineness of Christian character without display.—J. D. Unruh, President of Freeman Junior College and a member of the Board of Education of the General Conference.

Man Learns Slowly, but He Learns

Some see one thing, and some another, and in time they may learn to appreciate each other. Once Fundamentalism had very little use for the social emphasis, but today it seems to be having an awakening in regard to the ethical in the gospel. Harold John Ockenga, former president of the National Association of Evangelicals, writes in the Christian Life and Times for June, "Fundamentalism is negative. In an hour of crying social problems in the realms of war, race class, liquor, imperialism, crime delinquency, etc., fundamentalism stands isolated and aloof, while all other religious groups are rolling up their sleeves to tackle the threat to their very existence. If an individual fundamentalist has a social theory and program he is eyed with suspicion by his fellows. Yet the fundamentalist Christian has an uneasy conscience about abandoning education to the secularist or to the modernist, about his fatalistic view of human events, about his divorce of the Jesus of pity, service, healing and human interest from the Jesus of fundamentalism. He knows there is a need for a progressive fundamentalism with an ethical message." Once liberal Christians were so caught up with the then new social emphasis that they tended to neglect the emphasis on personal conversion. Today the liberals are receiving a new appreciation for the personal conversion experience through the insights that some of the better psychology is yielding. It is becoming apparent that men must be freed from their self-centeredness before they can be free to care for others. Instead of remaining aloof from each other, the two groups ought to learn from each other to the benefit of both.

Commission to South America

by John J. Plenert

On February 21, 1947, Dr. P. C. Hiebert, Chairman of the MCC, and I left New York, by plane, for South America for a two months stay. Our commission was triple: I. To help the church groups in Brazil to become recognized and registered as required for church groups. II. To work out appropriate and satisfactory liaison arrangements with the colony leaders in Brazil, the assignment of the two couples sent there by the MCC. (Rev. and Mrs. John E. Kaufman and Rev. and Mrs. George Seibel). III. To contact the Brazilian Government as to, the possibility of further European Mennonite refugee migration to that country, their attitude on the matter of exemption from war, the military, and preparation for war connections, whether it would be possible for our people to maintain the German language in their homes and church services and teaching facilities for their church for some generations.

Government Officials in Rio de Janeiro

The initial contacts in Rio were made through Frederico Arentz, a Mennonite in Rio who has lived there for about fifty-two years. He and his son Edgar met us at the Terminal and made arrangements for Hotel lodging. We came to the Hotel about 5:00 A.M., and as we checked in we found the Rev. and Mrs. Ernst Harder checked out to go to Paraguay. What a fine experience; the world is not so large, Mrs. Harder and I come from the same community and church (Johannestahl Church, Hillsboro, Kansas) and here we met in Brazil.

We contacted the American Embassy for further leads and saw such men as Dr. Bush, Agricultural Attache, Dr. Bowles, Labor Attache, and Wm. Pawley, American Ambassador. All these men were very helpful; in fact, the Ambassador said, "I will go to bat for you." All agreed that seeing the President would be futile, because he is not a self-exertive character but one who would shove the matter off by referring us to the ministers; besides President Dutra, a soldier by profession, would perhaps little understand our scruples against military service and training. After almost three weeks of waiting, we got a hearing with the Minister of Foreign Affairs. Ambassador Pawley took us in his Packard in real style and presented us with a prestige which seemed to have the weight of the U. S. A. back of it. We had the opportunity to present our special desires, to which he, in general, agreed in full, until he came to the clause suggesting our willingness to do alternative service but containing our request for exemption from military service. He said, "Foreigners need not serve, but those born in this country must serve." Then after a moment's delay, "But I will study the entire matter and report to the Ambassador." Among other things he said, "Will you prepare a Mennonite passport on your letterheads, duly authenticated by you. Send us a copy for photostating and then supply each consul with a copy. Furnish a copy of this passport to each of your people whom you have selected to apply for a Brazilian visum."

They are part of the 2,303 Mennonite refugees which came from Germany to Buenos Aires early in 1947. En route to the Mennonite settlements in Paraguay, they were detained at Buenos Aires by the Paraguayan civil war. By now practically all of them have gone on to Paraguay.

Rev. J. J. Plenert, Pastor of the Grace Mennonite Church, Lansdale, Pa., and Vice-Chairman of the Board of Home Missions of the General Conference, was asked by the M. C. Report on the Recent Northern District Conference

by H. M. Harder, Conference Secretary

The Northern District Conference sessions were held from May 31 to June 4, 1947, in Doland, South Dakota, the Emmanuel Mennonite Congregation being host of the conference. The Ministerial Conference was held in the church building; the balance of the sessions were held in the Doland high school auditorium. The weather was cool; yet it was comfortable.

The general theme of the conference was, "Evangelism." The conference speaker was Missionary S. T. Moyer. Rev. J. N. Smucker, General Conference President, was also in attendance.

During the ministerial session on Saturday Rev. Benno Toews spoke on the "Meaning of Evangelism." He defined it as an art of soul winning, as the armor of preparedness, and as a loving concern for others. Everyone who loves God and His cause is to go and deliver God's message. Rev. S. T. Moyer spoke on "The Place of Evangelism in the Church." "The whole program of evangelism is to go on simultaneously, in Jerusalem, Judea, Samaria, and in the uttermost parts of the earth," he said, and suggested that evangelism be given primacy in every church. When souls are brought to Christ then it is for the church to build them and to send them forth as soldiers of Jesus Christ.

During the mission services Sunday morning, Rev. M. M. Lehman spoke on home missions. He based his thoughts on Acts 1:8, "Ye shall be witnesses onto me." To be witnesses we must have experienced Him ourself, and we must achieve contact with lost souls. To do this we must never lose sight of the Master. We must know Him better and this through the Holy Spirit. He closed by saying that home mission work should begin right at home and in the home community.

Missionary Moyer reported on the last seven years in India missions. He mentioned the huge tidal wave sweeping ashore, the great unrest, famine, and partial invasion by the Japanese. Yet said he, "God spared our Mennonite Missions."

In the afternoon our district conference president, Rev. Willard K. Claassen, delivered the conference message in the form of a dissertation on Third John. He contrasted the Gaius type of church leadership with that of the Diotrephes type, and charged us to be aware of ourselves lest we fall into the group of Diotrephes.

Rev. J. N. Smucker, our General Conference President, spoke on, "Evangelism, the Motive For." As text he used, John 13:34," Love one another," and Mark 12:30,31, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God and love thy neighbor as thyself." Love should be the primary motive for all Christian work. We are to love God with all powers and capacities. This we can do only if God is truly first in our lives. Our neighborly love should be as Christ loved us. Love must be expressed; it demands an outlet. Love's outlet is the motive for evangelism. Rev. Smucker closed by saying that Christians must be specialists in the art of love.

After testimonials, in the evening by three young people, Rev. Moyer spoke on, "Evangelism an Integral Part of Our Peace Program." We live in an oasis of peace and security in a world of turmoil partly because of Communism," he stated. Communism is a competitor — an economic scheme with Jesus Christ left out. Relief, separated from evangelism, will not bring peace because there are no permanent results from relief. Relief in the New Testament was mainly for and practiced by believers. Education, good government, industrialization, and progress will not bring peace. Soul winning must be the spear head in our peace program. It is only the beginning, however, for we dare not stop with baptism for there must be Christian culture to meet Communism. One hundred years ago Japan wanted 1,000 missionaries, but there were not enough missionaries nor was there enough money to send them. This meant war. Later men were sent to fight the Japs. Rev. Moyer mentioned two fears: first, fear that Christ could be crowded out of relief work, and second, that of stopping to preach to the unevangelized. It was the revival movement by Wesley that saved England from revolution.

Monday morning, after a business session during which various reports were delivered and accepted, Rev. Moyer addressed the assembly on "Evangelism in India." He spoke of the draught years 1897 to 1899 in India. This led to the opening of mission work there in 1900 when Rev. and Mrs. P. A. Penner from Mountain Lake, Minnesota, and Rev. and Mrs. J. F. Kroeker of South Russia were sent to India, and after negotiations with the Hindu governor, were given a mission territory consisting of over 1,000,000 people without Christ. There were no bridges over the large rivers, there were no churches, no teachers, no medical workers. Severe temptations and trials came to this group of four. Missionary Kroeker became sick and returned to Russia—later he was exiled. Missionary Penner's daughter, Linda, died; a little later Mrs. Penner also died. Little Miriam came home with her grandfather Penner who visited in India at this time. Rev. Penner filled his term and later returned to America like Naomi of old. Later he remarried and returned to India for a number of times. Other workers joined the ranks.

Rev. and Mrs. Moyer went to India to pioneer in the South area in 1920 and build a station under great hardships.

In the forty-seven years the work has prospered, and the missionaries are beginning to turn the work over to the natives, of which there are now thirteen congregations with fifty-one ordained Elders. During the past year there were 1,000 converts. There are 650 Lepers in the Asylum and many waiting to enter. A great revival has set in, but with it come problems and again a cry goes out for more workers.

Monday afternoon Mrs. Moyer spoke on "The Medical Evangelist." She stated there were about 600 Christian doctors and nurses in all India. An All-India Christian Training Institute for doctors and nurses is now planned. She described the work of the doctors, nurses, helpers, and compounders. In the baby show held, the Christians' babies are very superior to the non-Christian. Dr. Dester established a hospital in Jagdeeshpur. Thus many sick are kept alive and many if not already saved become believers later.

Mr. Banwar, a native Hindu recently come to America with Mrs. Moyer, spoke at this time. He spoke about the caste system and about the illiteracy of India's rural people. Through missions, schools are opened and most Hindu Christians learn to read the Bible.

The Monday evening program centered around the Sunday School.

After the business sessions Tuesday morning communion services were held with Rev. Willard Claassen in charge. Rev. Moyer preached the communion sermon.

Tuesday afternoon the Womens' Missionary program was held. Mrs. Moyer spoke on "Evangelism among Women in Our Mission Field in India." And Anna Quiring, Congo Inland Mission, spoke on "Evangelism through the Mission Societies."

In the evening two young men spoke on, "Why I Take the Non-Resistant Stand." Testimonies on "How the Lord Called Me", were presented by quite a number of people. Rev. Moyer then delivered a message on Luke 15 "Christ and the Lost." He mentioned the stupidity of sheep and the waywardness of men. The service was closed by an altar call.

On Wednesday the Young People's Conference was held with President Carl Epp of Henderson, Nebraska, in charge.

During our business sessions the Evangelization Committee recommended that a Mennonite Church be organized in Sioux Falls, South Dakota, and that work with a group in Kelsey, Minnesota, be considered. These recommendations were adopted. The Mennonites in Minneapolis, Minnesota, are to be especially remembered in prayer.

The Conference secretary was instructed to write to our Washington, D. C., senators and congressmen from the States of North and South Dakota, Nebraska, Montana, and Minnesota, and to voice our disapproval of Peace Time Conscription and Military Training as proposed by President Truman's special commission on this matter. How To Reach Berne, Indiana

By AUTOMOBILE —

The First Mennonite Church of Berne is located on the intersection of U. S. Highway 27 and Indiana State Highway 118. U. S. Highway 27 runs north and south from Mackinac Straits, Michigan, to Tallahassee, Florida, so east and west travelers are bound to cross this highway somewhere. Those traveling on U. S. Highway 30 would turn south at Fort Wayne on U. S. 27, and those traveling on U. S. Highway 40 would turn north at Richmond on U. S. 27.

BY TRAIN —

The only railroad running through Berne is a branch of the Pennsylvania with one southbound and one northbound train each day, except Sunday. Connections can be made with the main line of the Pennsylvania at Fort Wayne and with the St. Louis-Pittsburgh branch at Richmond.

BY BUS —

The A.B.C. Coach Lines run through Berne with five southbound and five northbound busses daily. They run from South Bend through Fort Wayne to Richmond with connections to Cincinnati. One can also get an A.B.C. bus at Indianapolis for Portland, making connections there to Berne.

BY AIR —

written these letters and is daily receiving letters in reply. Most of the Senators and Congressmen voice opposition to the proposal; others promise very careful consideration.

Rev. Jacob A. Tiezen, Marion, South Dakota, was elected Conference president for the ensuing year. The remaining officers were re-elected. A few changes in the various committee personnel were also effected. Invitations for next year's conference will be gratefully received by the conference officers.

The conference sessions were greatly enriched by special music and general singing; the Freeman Academy Quartet and Academy Choir sang especially well. Much prayer was also offered.

The people of the host church served and entertained their guests in a marvelously fine manner. This had much to do with the success of the conference sessions.

Service Unit Teaches Bible School

(Rev. John T. Neufeld, 4221 South Rockwell Street, Chicago 32, Illinois, tells about the Service Unit which is conducting Bible school in Chicago this summer. This Summer Service Unit is being supported and made possible by the Board of Home Missions of the General Conference. Rev. Neufeld has done home mission work at the Mennonite Bible Mission for many years.)

In a Chicago bus station a young man with a mustache was looking around for two girls whose appearance would indicate that they were Mennonite girls. In the same station not far away were two Mennonite girls wearing slacks (for travel conveniences). These girls were looking for a dignified Mennonite minister, an elderly man. Result, an hour of waiting and worrying before the three met. This was just one of the experiences of the coming of the Summer Service Unit to Chicago. The minister could not be at three stations at the same time to meet ten young people.

By the time this appears in print another Summer Service Unit will have come into activity here in Chicago. Ten young people will come from distant states to help in the Vacation Bible School work here. This year the director of the unit will be Rev. Arnold Regier who has had a little experience with city boys and girls. The group will arrive about June 28. Their headquarters will be in the new Seminary building (Nice place to live). For one week they will study together and see the city. They will plan their work, etc. Monday, July 7, these young people will go to three different Mennonite churches with great enthusiasm, and some with a little fear of consequences. Bible schools will begin at 9:30 in the morning. Some fifty children will gather at each church for Bible study and handwork. The churches where Bible schools will be held are: The Mennonite Bible Mission, The First Mennonite Church and The Mennonite Gospel Mission. The forenoons will be for classes of Bible study and character building and the afternoons, perhaps, for the directing of recreation. In the evenings the group will meet and compare experiences, worship together, and pray. New plans will be made for the next day. Some evenings will be spent in visiting various institutions in Chicago.

Each member of the group will get his turn in preparing meals. Breakfast and supper will be a time of fellowship and rejoicing. On or about August 4 they will be on their way home. The children will have learned some things, the young Unit members much. The one great satisfaction to them could well be the fact that they will have the opportunity to spread the Good News of Christ and His life to children of all nations for in teaching in Chicago Bible schools they will teach children of many nationalities. These children will in the near future go to many parts of the world, and the results will be known only in eternity.

Great blessing and success to the members of the Summer Service Unit, and to the members of the Home Mission Board who are supporting this work and to the Young People who have planned it. And shall we all unite in praying for its success.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED BY THE EASTERN DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The following are some of the main resolutions adopted by the Eastern District Conference at its recent session held May 1-4.

1. Our conference go on record and communicate with the proper authorities our opposition to the present and any future plans of our government to give military aid to Greece or any other foreign country; also our opposition to Universal Civilian Training.

2. That we learn from our experience after the last world war; and that we do not relax our efforts to keep alive our Biblical and historical doctrine of non-resistance and that one of the ways of carrying out this resolution is by helping to support our C.P.S. men in our colleges by financial aid.

3. Our conference go on record opposing the propaganda of the Liquor Traffic, and all of us as Christians become total abstainers, and so teach our children.

4. Under the mighty hand of God, through our prayers, tithes and gifts our conference, its churches and individuals bend every effort to aid and assist the Mennonite Central Committee in its program of relief of the suffering and especially in the re-settlement of our unfortunate European brethren in America. Also that our conference ask our government to open the doors of our own United States to some of these homeless brethren.

The conference also passed a resolution commending Dr. L. Gilbert Little, conference speaker for "his lectures on 'The Harmony of Psychiatry and Christianity,' so ably and helpfully presented." It went on to say that the lectures "opened a new field of thought to many and were helpful to all of us." Members of the resolutions committee were: Ernest Leitzel, John E. Fretz, and Catherine Niswander.

large city. Two small gatherings during the evening that we spent there, convinced us that there still was interest in the better way of life. All agreed in desiring spiritual help.

CURITIBA. Milk producing, factory working group, numbering around two hundred families and living in close proximity in two sectors. We had meetings with the KFH (Kommission fuer Kirchliche Angelegenheiten), and preached in the two churches that they have built in the last few years. All preaching had to be in the German. This gave us a fine opportunity to brush up on the German language. We found that the leaders speak well of each other, that is the M. B. and the General Conference leaders. The Lord blessed us wonderfully in the seven services so that we went away much encouraged by the spiritual awakening and response.

WITMARSUM. A farming and trucking community in three villages embracing more folks than those at Curitiba. We had services in all the churches and found a fine response. Had special meetings with the KFH to consider the work in general. The General Conference group is the smaller group and at present without an Elder, since Rev. Martin died last fall. It was evident that these folks stand in need of some good leadership. We were told that about 30 per cent of the young folks hold no church membership anywhere. For the present Rev. and Mrs. John E. Kaufman are serving in this section.

Buenos Aires, Argentina

We visited the tent colony of 1,093 Mennonite refugee's stranded here due to the revolution in Paraguay, the country to which they were assigned. We spent three weeks with these folks, listened to their stories and also had services with them. It was quite pleasant to observe children running about, young people playing volley ball and older folks lounging and visiting or watching the players while small groups usually stood around the daily German paper which was posted at several places in the camp. Naturally a spirit of unrest and concern prevailed because of the long delay in their movement to Paraguay. A large group of young people came with the request of further catechetical instruction and baptism while we were there. Most of them were General Conference folks; so that fell to me. It was a great joy to have such a class, and on Sunday April 13, I baptized thirty-five young people out under the blue sky by the tents and had communion service. This was a mountain peak experience.

We also made contact with the government officials and found that they were well impressed with the Mennonites, and that as a whole they would be happy to have Mennonite farmers immigrate to Argentina, and they offered some good land. Government banks, will advance money at a low rate and on longtime payments. Exemption from military service is not granted outright. Dr. Piralta adding that the general behavior of the Mennonites as consistent in their confession and practice of life would doubtless affect the final decision.

Resettlement of refugees presents very many unforeseen problems. Only a choice personnel working under the grace of God will be able to cope with the economic, social, moral, and religious difficulties. These colonists will need much spiritual nurture and guidance to instruct and to motivate them towards higher spiritual planes.

Migrant Work in California

by Mrs. Herbert Lichti

Benny was only eight years old when he "let Jesus come into his heart" while attending the Missionary Ummel's Sunday school class. But he was unhappy because his parents would not go to the services. Each Sunday Benny would ask Rev. and Mrs. Ummel, "Do you pray for my mother and daddy every day?" Finally one evening while Benny was sitting on his father's lap with his head resting against his father's breast, Benny suddenly sat erect and exclaimed, "Do you hear something, Daddy?" The father replied that he didn't hear anything. But Benny insisted, "Why, Daddy, someone is knocking at your heart's door. It's Jesus! Why don't you let Him come in?" Benny's father said that he didn't know how to let Jesus in, so Benny slipped on his knees and prayed. The father was deeply moved and prayed with Benny. Later the mother also accepted the Lord. And so God used the life and testimony of a little boy to win his parents. This is one example of Rev. and Mrs. Chris F. Ummel's work in the government camp near Shafter, California. Several hundred souls have been saved in this camp since the Ummels have been in Shafter.

Early in 1940, the California Mennonite Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Conference undertook the project of supporting two missionaries in the migrant camp. At that time Rev. and Mrs. Ummel were still attending the Bible Institute in Los Angeles. During their years of study, neither had felt called into any definite field of service. Just before graduation the opportunity of working with the migrants was called to their attention, and they definitely feel that the Lord led them into the work. Rev and Mrs. Ummel have been working in the camp since September, 1940. Their daughter, Gwen, has helped them with the work, especially in the music department. At present she is attending Fresno State College. The Ummels are originally from Ransom, Kansas.

Miss Doris Andres of Newton, Kansas, who is helping the Ummels, is a comparatively new worker. She has been in Shafter since August, 1946. The young people of the Pacific District Conference have undertaken the project of supporting Miss Andres. She attended Bethel College for two years, and spent three years at the Columbia Bible College in Columbia, South Carolina. Miss Andres works mainly with the juniors, and has replaced Gwen Ummel in the music department.

Rev. and Mrs. Ummel and Gwen

The population of this camp varies from 1,200 to 1,400 people. The migrants work in the cotton and potatoes. When the Ummels first started their work, the migrants were very poor. During the first year, almost seven tons of clothing were contributed to this camp, mainly by the California Mennonite Churches. Now there are few needy people; they only need spiritual aid.

The Camp Social Center serves as a church. It is a large building with adequate space, and even a small kitchen. Since the attendance is mainly children, there is no church service on Sunday morning, but an extended Sunday school instead. Nine teachers, mostly from the camp, conduct the classes. The average attendance is 130, and the Sunday school is self-supporting. Three Christian Endeavor groups meet in the evening, followed by a regular church service. Weekly services consist of a Thursday night "Sing" and a Friday night "Worker's Prayer Meeting." There are also numerous socials, such as banquets, birthday parties and picnics.

The Ummels have also been teaching in release-time school periods for three years. They feel that this gives them an excellent opportunity to contact children whom they wouldn't be able to reach through their camp services. At the present time, Mrs. Ummel and Miss Andres are spending about twenty-five hours a week in released-time teaching.

Members of the California Conference take a great interest and pride in their project. Sunday school and Christian Endeavor groups from most of the churches have visited the camp, while the Ummels have taken groups from their camp Sunday School to visit the various churches. Last summer eight of the camp young people attended the California Retreat. The migrants are sincere Christians, and it is an inspiration to worship with them. Rev. and Mrs. Ummel are doing a blessed work. Their statement is: "With the Apostle Paul we humbly say, 'And I thank Christ Jesus our Lord, who hath enabled me, for that he counted me faithful, putting me into the ministry.' Truly, as we have gone forth step by step, He has opened up the way before us."

A Summer Music Institute

by Vernon Neufeld

Last summer, as an experiment, some of the smaller churches of California, in cooperation with the Y. P. U. and the M.C.C., sponsored a program of visitation and instruction in music by Miss Anne Wiebe of Hillsboro, Kansas. The plan carried Miss Wiebe to the Winton, Shafter, and two Paso Robles churches and also the two C. P. S. units in California. As she went from place to place, Miss Wiebe either helped existing musical organizations, choirs, quartets, etc. with their problems, or helped form such organizations as did not already exists. To facilitate greater effectiveness, Miss Wiebe visited each group two or three times. Reports from the various churches showed that the response to the work was very good and that it was very much appreciated.

Program of the Washington Young People

by Marie J. Franz

"To know the will of God—To do the will of God—To love the will of God" has been the primary purpose of the Pacific District Young People's Organization. This too has been the Washington Young People's challenge.

To further this challenge the pastors of the Washington churches organized and arranged for the first Washington Young People's retreat several years ago. This retreat was held at a beautiful camp ground near Clearlake, Yakima. Here in God's great out-of-doors near camp fires, upon hill tops, near the lake shore and on the water we young people experience anew God's never failing nearness. It was here that we experienced what a retreat from daily duties could mean to young Christians.

Succeeding retreats were held on a college campus for several days, but due to war conditions and great distances these were not attended by all state churches. This year our officers are trying to secure a camp ground for the retreat so that we may again become a more active group.

Our organization was established recently with the pastors feeling that if this was for young people, why not have it organized by them and advised by pastoral help. Thus our organization of president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer and advisor were voted for, and we are organized as such at the present time.

We Washington Young People are charged with the great sin of omission. We have not been as active as our Lord would have us be. This however is accredited to the great distance between churches, and each church society is very small. At present we of the six churches are without shepherds. God's spokesman are certainly needed to train and lead youth.

We at present have no special mission project. However, we do help support the young people of the General Conference with our contributions. We also are helping with the mission of the Pacific District Conference Young People. We feel that we too have helped in obtaining "A United Mennonite Youth in Christ," through the General Conference Young Peoples Union.

Activity of Aberdeen Young People

by Arnold E. Bartel

The theme of our Young People's group is "Unto you which believe He is precious," II Peter 2:7.

We are busy planning our seventh Annual Young People's Retreat to be held July 18-20 in the mountains south of central Idaho. Our theme is "The Unchanging Christ." We try to secure a minister from one of our Pacific District Conference churches as the main speaker and with our local pastor and young people fill the balance of the program to make our retreat something we will remember and carry with us all through the year.

Several of our young people will again be teaching Daily Vacation Bible School for three weeks in Aberdeen. Two of our young ladies are teaching Bible School in Grandview, a neighboring town. This is a new project of our church, and we trust it will lead to broader fields of service for next summer.

We are again planning half hour programs at the Mexican Labor Camp. These will consist of recordings of gospel hymns and sermons in the Spanish language, giving out tracts, and selling Spanish Testaments and Bibles.

The Caldwell group is steadily growing. Our pastor, Rev. H. N. Harder and several laymen have helped them by bringing messages and helping acquire buildings lots and a church building. Rev. Harder helped them organize as a church on May 25. God is continually adding more souls to His church.

California Organization, Retreats and Projects

by Alfred Heer

The California Mennonite Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Conference was organized in April, 1920, at the Los Angeles Church by a small group of people who had a vision of the possibility that there might be in an organization of the young people of the California churches. This organization has, during the past twenty-seven years, not only functioned and been a source of fellowship among the churches, but has also found many opportunities of service. The organization has always been missionary-minded, has carried out many mission projects, and now has its own mission board with our own missionaries on the field in Shafter, California.

The California Conference also was one of the first groups to pioneer in retreat work holding its first retreat in 1929, and having a successful retreat every year since that time. The retreat work has grown so that it is now taken care of by a separate committee, made up of one member from each of the seven churches and the conference president. The retreats, during the past few years, have had an attendance of close to 200 young folks, which is about 75 per cent of those eligible to attend. We feel that this, more than anything else, is drawing our groups into a closer fellowship; and that this fellowship they have received here will do much to make toward an even more successful working of our conference. Beginning this year, we will also hold an annual layman's retreat for those who no longer fit into the young people's program; and here, too, we feel that we will have an opportunity to create the same fellowship among the older group which the young folks now have.

The high point in the conference year is the annual convention held each spring, which is a three-day meeting with special speakers and numerous discussion periods. Here we also plan our work for the year and elect the officers to carry out these plans and projects. Some of the projects being worked on now are a tour to the Arizona mission field in the latter part of June and the raising of $1,500 to build a special cabin to be donated to the camp where we hold our retreats. Then the various officers also carry out projects in their departments, and we also try to do our part in any projects the Pacific District or General Conference young people are sponsoring.

One thing we are especially proud of is that our whole program is carried out by laymen. The only office we give to a minister is that of pastor-counselor. We are very well satisfied with this set-up and feel that if the young people know that they plan and carry out their own mission and retreat programs it makes them much more interested in the work. It also has done much to create leadership, and many have gone into full-time service through the challenge they received by serving their Lord and fellowmen in this conference work.

Another reason for our success is the 100 per cent cooperation gotten from each of the seven churches: Reedley, Shafter, Winton, Los Angeles, Upland, Paso Robles First and Paso Robles Second. All are always represented at every meeting, and all groups, whether large or small, have an equal voice in the work. One way we often judge a work is by the way people contribute to it. The fact that the young people of our seven churches (four of which are small with a membership of about 100 or less) gave close to $6,000 during the past year to carry out the California mission and retreat programs speaks well of their interest.

Between conventions, the work is carried on by the executive committee which meets at least twice during that time. This committee is made up of the pastors, Sunday School superintendents and Christian Endeavor presidents of the seven churches and the elected officers. This year's officers are: Louis, Claassen, Paso Robles, president; Herb King, Los Angeles, first vice-president; Paul Koehn, Winton, second vice-president; Erna Toews, Paso Robles, secretary; Mrs Herb Lichti, Reedley, treasurer; Gwen Ummel, Los Angeles, junior superintendent; Dorothy Hamm, Paso Robles, missionary superintendent; Jake Neufeld, Shafter, chairman of the mission board; Alfred Heer, Paso Robles, chairman of the retreat committee; Vernon Neufeld, Shafter, California, representative to the Pacific District young people's committee; and Rev. Ben Rahn, Paso Robles, pastor-counselor.

The Pacific District Young People's Committee

by Vernon Neufeld

When one looks at a map of the western part of the United States and locates the churches of the Pacific District Conference, he can readily see some of the difficulty in carrying out a unified program among young people there. In trying to develop a bond of fellowship and of Christian Endeavor among young people societies separated by distances as great as 1,300 miles, a person can come to appreciate the comparative compactness of some of our other districts.

The Young People's Committee was organized quite a number of years ago in order to bring about some degree of coordinated effort on the part of the young people of the district. A representative from each of the four states, Idaho, Washington, Oregon, and California, was chosen by the several state organizations to become members of the Committee for a period of three years. The Committee is still the central organization of the District young people today.

Last spring when the Pacific District Conference convened at Lind, Washington, the Committee decided to support Miss Doris Andres of Newton, Kansas, in missionary work at the Farm Labor Center in Shafter, California. In addition, the annual budget called for $600 to support the General Conference Young People's Union in its program of missionary education, voluntary service, etc. The enthusiastic support given the whole project by young people all over the District is quite indicative of their willingness to work together as a group. By present indications, the total budget of $1600 will be met by Conference time in June.

At the coming Conference in Albany, Oregon, the young people plan to reorganize the Committee into a larger group. In place of having one representative from each of the four states, the plan is to have one from each church of the District. This larger group then will elect its own officers to serve as a nucleus for the whole organization. The advantage of the new over the old plan would be, primarily, the presence of a greater number of young people during their business deliberations, which in turn would result in a program more representatively planned. A tentative constitution has been drawn up and youthful delegates from all churches have been invited; so there is great anticipation in regard to the coming youth meeting at Albany.

Items of Interest

In This Week Magazine of June 7, 1947, appears an article about the first census to be taken of the Western Hemisphere. In order to take the census of Latin American Indians, the officials are said to have had some real problems. The article states, "In Paraguay a few years ago, the U. S. Army, which was conducting surveys there, declared a whole large area out of bounds because of the presence of savage Indian tribes." But even these are to be counted, the article states for they have a plan.

"In 1917 a group of White Russians fled their native land and set up a colony in the Paraguayan jungles. They befriended the Indians and have lived in peace with them ever since. Contacted by Paraguayan census officials, the Russians agreed to become census takers in 1950, gather information on their Indian neighbors and leave the material at a trading post." This undoubtedly refers to the Mennonite colony in the Chaco.

A suggestion has come from the Southern Baptist Convention that there be established in the United States an interdenominational short wave radio station to broadcast missionary programs to the world. The Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A. has seconded the plan. It is believed that such a common endeavor would unify interests of Christian people everywhere..

M.C.C. Studies Relief Needs in Java

Pockets of Starvation in Java

AKRON, PA., June 20.—There are pockets of starvation in Java because of the breakdown of the transportation system. Drifting into Batavia daily are people, who show every sign of starvation. The need in Java is great and seems to cover almost all of the island. Conditions in the area of the Dutch Mennonite Mission are among the worst. Some time ago Rev. A. E. Kreider, on a world-tour of relief areas for the M.C.C., visited Java. Now Martin Schrag, M. C. C. relief worker in Java, writes, "The three projects suggested by Reverend Kreider, namely clothing distribution, child feeding, and medical aid have been reinforced by Dr. van Beyna and Dr. De Niet. We are gathering information as to types of clothing, nature of food and medical aid needed. At a recent meeting of the Java missionaries in Batavia, the following needs were listed in the given priority: 1. Clothing, thread and needles, 2. Weaving yarns; 3. Cattle, agricultural implements, fishing tackle; 4. Tools, nails; 5. Primary school and office needs; 6. Means of transport; 7. Funds for building and repairing of buildings. This list suggests ample reason for a rehabilitation program.—Martin Schrag

Goodwill Christmas Bundles Due August 15

All Goodwill Christmas Bundles which children have prepared or are preparing should reach the M.C.C. by August 15. A folder giving instructions for preparing, packing, and mailing the bundles may be had from the M.C.C., Akron, Pa. Since food and clothing continue to be the basic relief needs in Europe, it is urged that children send these bundles of clothing as Christmas gifts to the children overseas. The Goodwill Christmas Bundle Project follows the Overseas Play Equipment Project, which is now being terminated. The response to the Play Equipment Project was very acceptable. From the play things shared the children of Europe will learn that children in America do love them and are willing to share the things that they have and enjoy. Such play materials as have already been collected should be sent in as instructed previously, but no further collection or solicitation should be made.

Letters of Appreciation Not Wanted

A few weeks ago the M.C.C. made the suggestion that persons in America, who receive letters from Europe requesting relief, should forward such letters to M.C.C. Headquarters, Akron, Pa. The plan is that M.C.C. relief workers in the country designated can then be asked to investigate the needs which are thus reported and supply them in an economical and efficient way. However, letters of appreciation should not be sent in, only such letters as actually ask for help. Letters of appreciation can be shared with friends, neighbors, ministers, Sunday school classes, put on bulletin boards, and used in other ways.

International Mennonite Retreat held in Holland

A number of MCC relief workers in Europe were privileged to attend the International Mennonite Retreat held at Elspeet, Holland, on May 15 to 18. Uniting in this retreat were a total of 150 representatives from Holland, Switzerland, France, as well as Russian refugees, and MCC workers. Delegates from Germany and from the Waldensians in Italy were also invited, but could not attend. It was necessary to use all of the various langauges represented: Dutch, English, German, and French. The lectures which were to be given at the retreat were translated into each of these languages in advance, so that copies could be distributed at the meetings.

Of this retreat, Ruth Hilty, MCC worker, writes, "The conclusions of the various discussion groups reiterated that our solutions begin with each of us, with a complete surrender and dedication to Christ as the Master of our daily lives. Then our outlook is toward others, not toward ourselves. Then we are recipients of the gifts of the Spirit—the courage, the enthusiasm, the time, and the wisdom to follow whereever and however that Spirit calls. This venture in international Christian fellowship has all the prospects of continuing annually, or semi-annually. However, it will not thrive on enthusiasm alone, but on the fruits of the Spirit of Christ."

M.C.C. Sends Tons of Food, Clothing, Soap to Europe and Africa

Our Sunday evening service two weeks ago was based on the subject "Nature in the Bible," and the topic was "The Psalms through a Modern Photographer's Eyes." It was given in the form of pictures by Dr. Lotus Slabaugh. Our vacation Bible school closed last Friday with a total enrollment of fifty. Miss Mildred Rosenberger from the West Swamp Church of Quakertown, Pennsylvania, and a student at Bluffton College aided three teachers from our church with the class work. —First Church, Philadelphia, Pa.: June 17 was the golden wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Kuyf, parents of Miss Wilhelmina Kuyf. In celebration of the joyful occasion many friends were dinner guests. Mrs. Edith Ross Dubois was toastmaster. Participating in the program were: Mrs. Edith Rick, pianist, Mrs. James Bergey, soloist, Rev. Walter Dick, who asked the "blessing," Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander, Rev. J. J. Plenert, Rev. W. C. Greetings from Rev. Elmer E. S. Johnson, unable to attend because of illness, were read together with those received from relatives and friends in Holland, and a cable from Wilhelmina. The climax of the evening was the recording of messages from Mr. and Mrs. Kuyf and daughters Theresa and Jane, and a number of friends, also group singing. These records will be sent to Wilhelmina in Kaifeng, China. Mr. and Mrs. Kuyf wish to thank their many friends, throughout the Conference, who remembered them with cards and greetings.—Mrs. H.S. —First Church, Wadsworth, Ohio: Miss Annette DeGroff of Holland, who during the past school term was a student at Bluffton College, will be with us on Tuesday evening, July 1, to present an evening program. She will speak and sing. Several weeks ago she sang a few numbers during the Sunday school hour. All of us will be looking forward to her return.—Hattie Yoder, Corr.

—First Church, Aberdeen, Idaho: We were blest by the meeting held here June 10-16 by the Curriculum Committee of the Board of Education of the General Conference. Those meeting were: Rev. Erland Waltner, Rev. Ronald von Riesen, Rev. Paul Shelly, Mrs. E. J. Miller and Rev. H. N. Harder. Rev. Waltner, Rev. Shelly, and Rev. von Riesen taught the Bible classes on Wednesday, June 11. Rev. von Riesen brought the morning message on June 15 and spoke to the Young People's C. E. that evening.—Arnold E. Bartel, Corr.

—Menno Schrag, Mennonite Weekly Review editor, who spent several months in Europe and the Near East, returned to Newton, Kansas, on June 18. Mr. Schrag says that the dominant impression that he got of Europe and the Near East was that of confusion. Editor Schrag found out in his travels that going down Italian hills on a bicycle at the rate of twenty to thirty miles an hour without brakes necessitates the use of the "foot-brake" in an emergency. However, he made it and has come home with many impressions, 900 of them being on film.

—Calgary, Alberta: June 10: The weather is cool out here in Calgary. Had a lot of rain the last few weeks. Our people are coming and going, I mean here in this district. Just about every Sunday we see new faces. The Lord has been good to us, and we praise Him for it.—J. J. Sawatzky.

—Berne, Indiana: "We expect to lodge the guests (Conference) in private homes because other facilities are very limited, and the meals will be served at the school on the opposite corner from the church."—Olin A. Krehbiel

The Beauty of the Unusual Trees

Each trip I make I see the trees,
  Along the railroad track.
And every time I notice these,
  With regular beauty shaped.

I overlooked the ugly ones,
  For such I did not care;
But felt God made a big mistake,
  By allowing trees so bare.

But this time the irregular ones,
  Deliberately I chose.
Before so long I was surprized,
  Their uniqueness was disclosed.

And so when'er I have a chance,
  A jungle to explore;
At the peculiar trees I like to glance,
  And I blame God no more.

For every shrub and tree and branch,
  Is a part of His own plan.
Where would be the beauty to enhance,
  If each one were the same?

—Elizabeth Wiens Thiessen work, and S. F. Pannabecker (tentative) will speak along with Rev. C. D. Spotts of Franklin and Marshall College, the latter speaking on, "The Church Pattern of Lancaster City and County."

—Aganetha Fast, who visited C. P. S. camps for a number of years, then mission societies and conferences, etc., writes that after six years of travelling she has changed work completely and is now in hospital work in Chicago. She reports, "And what wonderful opportunities there have been to witness for the Lord. Hardly a day passes but the Lord somehow meets the need of some soul. Besides nursing I take a few refresher courses at the Seminary, which is just over the way from the hospital."

—Grace Church, Dallas, Oregon: The proposed hospital for the mentally ill of the Pacific District Conference was the subject discussed by Dr. P. C. Hiebert, Vice-President of the Grace Bible Institute and very active in M.C.C. work, at a union meeting of churches on the afternoon of June 15. Twelve students from the Grace Bible Institute gave us a very interesting program that evening.—Mrs. Dave Balzer, Corr.

—Bethel Church, Hydro, Oklahoma: Our pastor and three of the Intermediate boys attended two youth meetings, the youth rally at Inola, Oklahoma, where Rev. Kauffman was guest speaker, and the Intermediate Retreat at Goddard, Kansas, where Rev. Kauffman served as director. Wilma Mae Entz and Francis McKee were married in the Bethel Church with Rev. Waldo Kauffman officiating. Following the ceremony a reception was held in the new youth camp building near the parsonage in Hydro. The couple is at home at 123 N. Indiana in Weatherford, Oklahoma, were Mrs. McKee is attending Southwestern Tech.

—First Church, Berne, Indiana: On Sunday morning, June 15, Loris Habegger, member of this church, was ordained to the Christian ministry. Rev. Sylvan Lehman of Lima, Ohio, and Rev. Arnold Regier of Chicago, took part in the service. In the evening the choral society sang "The Creation" to a large audience. This same oratorio will be rendered at the time of the General Conference.—Martha Gilliom, Corr.

—Bethel College Church: The Vacation Church School closes this week with an open-house and program on Thursday evening and a parent-pupil picnic Friday following the final session of the three-week term. The total enrollment in the five class groups now stands at fifty-six with a near 100 per cent attendance. —Mrs. Eldon W. Graber, Corr.

—The Burrton, Kansas, Mennonite Church: The two-week Bible school ended with a fine program in connection with our annual Sunday school picnic at the Harvey County Park. Rev. and Mrs. Arnold Epp and daughter are spending two weeks at Henderson, Nebraska. Brother Bill Unrau of Newton served our church on June 15 and Brother Gerhardt Peters also of Newton on June 22.—Mrs. P. H. Siemens, Corr.

—Brudertal Church, Hillsboro, Kansas: Miss Bernice Goertz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Goertz of Durham and Paul Albrecht, son of Rev. and Mrs. Abraham Albrecht, Newton, have announced their wedding day as June 29. The Sunday school held its Children's Day program on June 22. Ernest P. Suderman has been elected deacon for a term of three years.

GENERAL CONFERENCE!

"It," in this case, refers to the new little pamphlet by Don Smucker, put out by The Board of Publication of your conference, entitled "What Is the General Conference?"

This little pamphlet is designed particularly for use by ministers or laymen to give to people who are somewhat "on the fence," and who need a little information about who the Mennonites are, what we teach, what we believe, and what we do! If you are sometimes puzzled as to how to reach some people of this type, we believe this little pamphlet, "What Is The General Conference?" will serve you well. Handed out at the appropriate time and to the appropriate people as often as needed will give that little push that it takes to bring on a decision.

It can be ordered from any of our General Conference Bookstores—Berne, Indiana; Newton, Kansas; or Rosthern, Saskatchewan, Canada. Price $2 for 100 copies.

—Lehigh Mennonite Church, Lehigh, Kansas: Rev. D. C. Wedel and Bill Unrau of Bethel College served our church on June 15 and 22 respectively. Rev. B. H. Janzen is full time field worker for the Western District Conference since June 1. The Janzens moved to Halstead last week. Before they moved the Mission Circle honored Mrs. Janzen with a social. The church has purchased the Becker estate for a parsonage and is at present redecorating it.—Mrs. F. G. Unruh, Corr.

—Relief workers who recently came home are: Edna Peters on June 16 from Puerto Rico, and Arthur Jahnke on June 16 from Italy.

—Hillsboro, Kansas, Mennonites are again planning to contribute flour for relief. The local interchurch committee states, ". . . . if we can make the arrangements definite before harvest, and the farmers can inform the elevator men what portion of the grain that they bring in shall be contributed for relief, it will simplify the task of giving wheat, the contributions may be larger, and the flour will get to the hungry people sooner. Those unable to donate wheat may make their donations in cash . . . ." A circular from the interchurch committee gives an excerpt from a letter written by a German pastor. This minister declares that if present conditions continue in the American Zone, thousands will soon die from starvation.

—Rev. B. H. Janzen, who is now serving the Western District Conference as field worker, announces a change of address from Lehigh, Kansas, to 425 Locust, Halstead, Kansas. All mail pertaining to the Lehigh Mennonite Church should be sent to Rev. Pete Goering, Lehigh.

—First Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska: Installation services for Rev. Jacob T. Friesen as elder, were observed on June 22. Due to heavy rains many could not be present. Four to five inches of rain fell in our community causing much damage to both homes and crops. June 15 we had our annual picnic in connection with a reception for Rev. and Mrs. Jacob T. Friesen. The morning services were held in the open. June 13 the Bluffton Vesper Choir gave an inspiring program in our church.—Mrs. John J. Wiebe, Corr.

— Bethesda Church, Marion, South Dakota: Rev. Alfred Waltner has resigned as pastor due to ill health. Rev. Benno Toews of Freeman has served us for several months. Rev. Jacob Adrian of Dalton, Rev. David Tieszen of Marion, also served us. Recently we had the privilege of having Rev. T. A. van der Smissen of Pawnee Rock, Kansas, in our midst. He served us twice on Sunday, June 15, and then also Monday evening. At the annual C. E, business meeting on June 22, officers were elected and decisions made to support financially projects decided upon at the Northern District Conference. We have considerable rain in this territory.

—Deep Run, Pa. The fifty-second Christian Endeavor Convention held here on Memorial Day was well attended. In observance of the second wedding anniversary of Rev. and Mrs. Herbert Fretz the "Always Faithful Class" presented them with a General Electric Mixer. About fifty of our members attended the Spring Sunday School Rally at Mechanics Grove. Many are planning to go to the Menolan Retreat, and several registered for the Kitchener, Ontario, Retreat. Some of the older members are looking forward to going to the General Conference in August. Slides on "What a Missionary Does in Africa" were shown and enjoyed at the last meeting of the Ladies Missionary Society. —Mae Gross, Corr.

—Salem Church, Dalton, Ohio: Miss Ethel Amstutz and Miss Phyllis Lehman have left for New Jersey where they will spend the summer in a volunteer service project. Mr. Stan Hostetter, an ex-C.P.S. Bluffton College student, gave a provocative message on the need for better quality of Christians rather than larger quantity of Christians Sunday morning, June 22, from the pulpit. Christian Endeavorers were hosts to an all-county treasure hunt June 19.

— Topeka Church, Topeka, Indiana — The young people of the church gave a play "The Brother" Sunday evening. June 15. They also gave the same play at the Mennonite Young People's Retreat at Camp Mack. Eighteen young people and three cabin counselors from this church attended the retreat at Camp Mack June 18-22. The Sunday School paid five dollars toward the expenses of these young people. Anette de Graf of Holland and Paulo Comba of Italy, students at Bluffton College, rendered a service of sacred music by Miss de Graf and messages by both Miss de Graf and Mr. Comba at this church Wednesday evening June 18.

The Reader Says:

VERY HELPFUL IF—

Editor, The Mennonite:

In The Mennonite of February 11, of this year there is a paragraph on church architecture. I was very much interested in it but was rather surprised at the following statement: "Why should we need a crucifix if we worship God in "spirit and in truth"? Why should we move the pulpit to the side as if we were inviting the Catholic magic of the altar and the bloodless repetition of the sacrifice of the Lord in the Mass?"

When I was a student in Chicago I attended classes and lectures on worship and church architecture and also read some books along that line, but I have never gotten the above impression. It is undoubtedly true that there is Catholic influence here, but the idea is certainly a spiritualization of the Catholic one. We have taken over pagan customs, such as the Christmas tree and have made them Christian; why shouldn't we take over some Catholic customs and give them a greater spiritual significance? The reason for moving the pulpit to the side is symbolic of making the service less man centered. In that respect the Catholics are ahead of us. Their service never centers around one man. They cannot stay away from the service because they don't like the preacher. The important thing is the mass. To be sure it has become magical, but the fundamental idea is sound. Thus in modern Protestant architecture the cross, the empty cross (I don't think any Protestant church uses the crucifix), and the altar are made symbolic of Christ and His Spirit just as the actual bread and wine are symbolic of His broken body and shed blood. We might say here too, "Why use actual bread and wine when we worship in spirit and in truth?"

To me it seems very impressive to see the minister turn towards the altar with the congregation, thus emphasizing the fact that he is on the same level with them, that he is not preaching down at them, but that he has to ask for forgiveness just as much as they do, and that together they are seeking God and worshipping Him.

The majority of us human beings need some physical symbol to remind us of spiritual truth. I think Jesus admitted that when He instituted the Lord's supper. Hence I think moving the pulpit to one side and having an altar and a cross can be very helpful if people are made to realize the meaning of these helps.—Marie J. Regier, 14 Er. In Christ There Is No . . .

James L. Hymes Jr., in an article on "Personality Gets an Early Start," says,

"We know that children need love and affection. We know that they grow better when they get cuddling and handling and holding, talking to and singing to and laughing with and at.

"We know they need love and affection and we know they need a lot of it . . . Their cup must be full. They must have the complete and unqualified expression that, from the very start, they are deeply wanted."

The same writer also states, ". . . you cannot go out to others unless you feel good about yourself. You cannot listen while the other fellow talks—you have to talk yourself. The idea does not count; it is you, and you have to put yourself across. But feel good about yourself and then you can care, share, discuss, cooperate. You can be generous, you can be concerned about your fellow man. Doubt yourself and you must keep everything in and everyone down. This is dangerous in an atomic world."

Today, millions of children in Europe and Asia cannot feel that "they are deeply wanted," for many are homeless and others do not have sufficient food and shelter. What will they be like when they grow up? Will they be concerned about their fellow man, or will they be bitter? Will they not tend to feel that this is a hard world in which one must "fight" for existence? The desperate children of Europe may become the desperate men of tomorrow, and as education and industrialization spreads to the millions of poor and illiterate in the East there is bound to be a surge of power. The children of the world are not yet being received in a Christlike spirit, and the harvest is bound to be accordingly. (See page 2)

"Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Christ Jesus"

In America a great many children have food, clothing, and homes. But if America continues in her "thing and comfort" centered way of life, these children will not necessarily develop a generous world-feeling. The "Haves" will fight for what they want as well as the "Have-nots." There is seemingly little liklihood that congress will pass the bill which would allow 100,000 displaced persons to come into the United States annually. Congress made a number of attempts to pare down the $350,000,000 relief bill while spending billions for defense. If American children do not grow up to serve the world, then they will not fit in well into the circle around Christ.

Children are the hope of the future. God, grant that the children of the whole world may increasingly be accepted in the Spirit of Christ, so that they may learn to gather as one group and worship Thee.

As We See It:

A Neglected Phase of Our Church Work

Few thinking people of our churches are satisfied with the results of Christian education among our own people. A great deal of time and energy is spent in passing criticisms of one kind or another toward some phase of the church program. Ordinarily the chief blame is placed in part or wholly upon one or more of the institutions of the church, namely, the Christian home, the Sunday school or the church-related schools. Perhaps we ought to be willing to face the challenge without shifting blame. The real challenge comes in founding Christian homes. The Christian home is the base of sound Christian education. The congregation is its working center in the neighborhood community. The church related schools are the power house, stimulating and enlightening the whole Christian education system of the church. In other words, without Christian homes we are not likely to have the church or its institutions. A well known political phrase at election time is, "As goes Maine so goes the nation." In religious phraseology we might well say, "As goes the home so goes Christianity."

Since the Christian home is the base of sound Christian education we realize the fact that Christian parents must be the chief teachers of religion. How many of our churches are putting forth sufficient effort to train the chief teachers of religion? In an attempt to meet this outstanding need in these difficult post war years I propose that our churches have a definite program of training young parents in Christian family life. Not only a clear understanding of the scripture and its contents is needed by parents but practical methods of transmitting Christian principles and convictions to their children.

Have we of the church been fair to young parents in our help to them in this important matter? Something is happening to the homes of our nation and the church dare not neglect the training of her chief teachers if we would be found guiltless before God and if we would have a church of tomorrow.—Harry Yoder, Assistant to the President of Bluffton College and President of the Central Conference.

Peacetime Conscription

No land can call itself "The Land of the Free" if conscription makes it impossible for man to persue "life, liberty and happiness." Let us keep our democratic way of life in America. To persue or preserve this way of life by conscription is foolish talk. We can not save the truth by lies. Many fled European militarism and came to America. Shall we now transplant into our way of life the cancer of militarism which has ruined Europe? Conscription grants to the state the overlordship of conscience. Does conscience belong to the things that are Ceasars? It is said that conscription will solve many problems such as unemployment, etc. Hitler tried this. We can get rid of mice by burning the house, and that is what Hitler did. What militarism has cost Germany is beyond computation. Shall we now choose that way? I believe that cruelty to children is wrong; I believe slavery is wrong; I believe burning heretics is wrong; I believe exploiting the poor is wrong; I believe throwing atomic bombs on innocent women and children is wrong. Then why prepare and learn to do these things? I believe war is wrong. War is wrong economically, socially and morally. I believe military training destroys the best moral and ethical ideals; it destroys character. Through the MCC your Peace Committee keeps its eye on proceedings in Washington D. C. It will be well to write a card every so often to your representative in congress voicing your protest against Peacetime Conscription.—H. T. Unruh, Chairman of the Peace Committee of the General Conference and pastor of the First Mennonite Church, Hillsboro, Kansas.

What about the Salaries of Our College Teachers?

by A. S. Rosenberger

Today we read and hear of much agitation for higher salaries for our public school teachers. There is a growing realization that teachers must receive more adequate financial support in view of higher living costs. It is also being realized more and more that the teacher, who directs the thought and activity of boys and girls at very impressionable ages, has a great responsibility, and should be paid in keeping with this. Many workers in industry are earning three thousand dollars and more per year, but very few teachers are getting anywhere near this amount. Such continued inequality will drive many more out of the teaching profession.

The very same circumstances, even to a greater degree, are facing the teachers in our church colleges. They have been serving for years on a comparatively low salary schedule, in most cases even lower than that of the public schools. The lot of the teacher in our denominational colleges is a self-sacrificing one, and one sometimes marvels that as many have continued in the work as have. Their profession has demanded the most by way of training and preparation. The financial return they receive is not comparable. Truly they have shown loyalty to their work, a high spirit of idealism, and of consecration to the Kingdom of God.

During the years of 1934 and 1935 it was my experience to live through part of the depression with a college faculty. I only experienced part of what the larger number of faculty people went through by way of the struggle to live at that time, as the depression was partly over at the time I came to the institution. I shall never forget the trying experiences through which the faculty went at that time. The salaries were most ridiculously small. Not forgetting that other people struggled too in those days, I want to say that it is to the great credit of these teachers in our institutions that they saw this situation through, difficult as it was, and some are faithfully serving today. I often feel that we fail to give our college people enough credit for their faithfulness and devotion.

The general situation has improved greatly since the days of the depression. Many churches and individuals have contributed generously to the support of the program of Christian education through our colleges. But the fact remains that teachers in our Mennonite schools are still receiving salaries that are comparatively much lower than those in many other denominational schools and generally much lower than those of state schools. College officials relate that in contacting men and women, oftentimes their own graduates, to teach in our colleges, they find that these people are employed in state schools at two to three times what our colleges find it possible to offer.

This fact also has its important angle with respect to interesting young people in a career of teaching in our colleges. Unless they can see some financial security; at least compensation adequate enough to face their tasks without constant financial worry, they will not choose such a career. The desire to serve and to be loyal to a great cause will, after all, not pay the bills when they come due. It is not big salaries that are expected, only that they be somewhat adequate.

Our churches must interest themselves in the needs of our faculty members just as they are caring for the needs of their ministers. Our consecrated teachers wish, above all, to be considered as servants of Christ and the Church, as truly they are. They are teaching in our schools because they are interested in young people and in Christian education. The haunting thought that so often comes to them is, "Are we really accepted as full time Church and Christian workers?" Our teachers believe that on the whole they are not "unwanted children," but they would appreciate a fuller status and standing as Christian workers. To my mind they fully deserve this recognition on that part of the church, and it would be a tremendous encouragement in their work.

Today when every effort is being made by our colleges to serve the conference in the most acceptable way, it should be part of the recognition of this program to give our loyal and faithful teachers every consideration. A part of that is to support our schools so that they can give financial security and lessen the worries that keep people from doing their best work.

It must always be recognized that a college is not like a business, that is, to pay its own way. Some might say, "Why not raise tuition to that point that this will supply the funds needed for salaries?" But what then of the students? Many of the young people of our churches would then not be able to obtain a college education. Most of them work part time now to earn part of what a college education costs. On this basis, and also as a test to determine the interest of the constituency, the accrediting agencies insist that a goodly share of the income of an institution must come from the gifts that it receives; and in so doing they are acting on a sound principle.

Yes, it is up to us as churches and as individuals to support adequately those who are giving their lives in service in our colleges and schools. I believe we are becoming increasingly aware of this. May God guide us that we may meet this responsibility more fully, and do so with a sense of our Christian stewardship!

Rev. A. S. Rosenberger, Pastor of the Salem Mennonite Church, Dalton, Ohio, is Chairman of the Mennonite Biblical Seminary and Bible School Board and Secretary of the Board of Education of the General Conference.

The Meaning of Grace:

MRS. S. F. PANNABECKER, former missionary to China and now on Staff of the Mennonite Seminary:

The earth was dry and parched. The plants were slowly dying. They seemed to fairly cry out for moisture. Then came the rain with its reviving power and refreshed the plants and soil. The sun added its warmth. The flowers took on new life and showed a transformation.

The man was spiritually dry and parched. His life seemed to be dying. Then he cried, "Father, forgive me. 'Create in me a new heart.' " Then came Grace — the Father's undeserved love — and poured itself into the man. A transformation took place. New life flowed in and the man arose and praised his Saviour.

That is the meaning of Grace — love pouring out itself, giving and giving and giving again without any thought of a reward. The lavishness with which Christ poured out His life on the Cross in order that sinners might be born again is the finest example of abundant grace. "By grace ye are saved."

Coupled with this poured-out love must go faith in the heart of the "born again one." He must believe that this grace is present, that it is flowing into his heart all the time. "By faith Enoch . . . by faith Noah . . . by faith Abraham." They believed and much was given them. They believed in a "God who giveth us richly all things to enjoy." As a result they dared to do the seemingly impossible things.

In this intimate relationship of Father and His child the Father's side must be considered as well. "I entered into a coverant with thee, saith the Lord God, and thou becamest mine." Ezek. 16:8. Because of grace God never breaks His side of the covenant. He holds His own in His hand. If we do our part that covenant is never broken. What a feeling of security He gives us.

Then there must be an appreciation of this relationship and a feeling of responsibility to keep our side of the promise to Him. Ma Hsu Sui, a young Chinese lad, came to the missionary and asked for a suit of clothes that he might attend school. After thought and prayer the needed help was given him. Later the lad assisted so frequently in the home to show his appreciation that further gifts were given him. This gift weakly illustrates God's gift of grace. The goodness that was shown the lad prompted him to do something in return. Grace always demands our efforts in return, not with the idea that we can repay it, but that we conscientiously wish to do something, and as evidence of our appreciation.

"Love so amazing, so divine, Demands my soul, my life, my all."

KARL SCHULTZ, seminary and university student:

"The Grace of God has appeared for the salvation of all men . . . " Titus 2:11

In the spirit and person of Jesus Christ, man comes to know the grace of God. Through grace, unworthy man is accepted as right in the sight of God. Through this acceptance man is transformed and made more righteous. Can it, then, be said that central to grace is its power to transform through acceptance? Paradoxical, is it not, that God selects such a tender and indirect method of manifesting His power? Any individual may accept by faith or reject the grace of God, but it remains available to him and sufficient for him, be he rich or poor, proud or humble, righteous or unrighteous.

Though man is an imperfect instrument of grace, it would appear that the more Christ-like an individual becomes, the more accepting and trusting he becomes. If man has faith, God accepts him even if he is not Christ-like. One of the common un-Christ-like qualities in all of us is to make acceptance of our fellow men conditional upon their conformity to our ideas of what is "good" and "right" for them. We tend to set ourselves up as an authority over others rather than trusting God to show man the way of salvation in His own way.

If the transforming power of the accepting quality of grace is central, how does grace flow from God through imperfect man into the life-pulse of human relationships—family, school, political life, church etc. Several brief examples may serve to illustrate.

A professor may require the student to know certain facts (facts which the professor assumes are important for all students) if the student is to be given a passing grade in a course. A legislator may vote for an armament appropriation to make sure that his nation's power is sufficient to compel peaceful relations with a neighboring nation. In each of these cases there would seem to be little manifestation of the accepting quality of grace. There is a lack of trust in the integrity of God and the integrity of man as God's creation.

Suppose the student found that he was free to learn what he felt was most important to himself—with the professor's guidance, of course. This might or might not coincide with what the professor thought was important for the student to know. Suppose the professor, at the same time had faith that God made the student in such a way that, given an opportunity, the student would learn something which would make him a richer and more fruitful personality. It is quite likely that a student reared in an orthodox American school system would not know what to do with this grace of God manifested in the professor. But is it not quite possible that after getting over the shock, the student would dig in and learn something infinitely more meaningful than what is found in the average factual final examination?

Suppose the neighboring nation found that it was free to work out its own problems without the threat of a foreign navy in its front yard. Suppose, at the same time, the legislator had faith that God created other men very much like himself. This being so, that legislator would not trust the neighboring nation to order its affairs in such a manner as to support rather than threaten his nation. Is it not quite possible that the neighboring nation, thus accepted, would become the kind of nation that it was accepted as being?

How much faith do we have in the transforming power of God's grace? Imperfect as we are, can we become instruments of God's grace?

FREEMAN H. SWARTZ, Chairman of the Placement Committee of the General Conference and Pastor of the Eden Church, Schwenksville, Pa.:

The Greeks had three goddesses called "The Graces." They represented the embodiment of all that was graceful, beautiful, and joyful.

The whole myth seems very charming. Charming until we realize that the picture is incomplete; there is no goddess called goodness. There is no ethical implication in the Greek thought of grace. Its highest conception was "beauty in motion." The Greek was not concerned with the good.

"For by Grace are ye saved!" (Eph. 2:8). Did Paul, the great exponent of grace, have this Greek framework in mind?

The Septuigent version of the Old Testament, the Greek translation made sometime between 280 and 130 B. C., used this word grace sixty-six times, sixty-one of which were in the sense of a sovereign bestowing a gift, an unmerited favor.

The outstanding example of the use of this word is the Aaronic benediction, Numbers 6:24-26:

"The Lord bless thee, and keep thee;
The Lord make his face to shine upon thee, and be gracious unto you;
The Lord lift up his countenance upon thee, and give thee peace."

The same thought of favor through love, unmerited, is expressed in Isaiah 54:8; where God says of Israel:

"In a little wrath I hid my face from thee for a moment; with everlasting kindness will I have mercy upon thee."

"For by Grace are ye saved!" Which conception did Paul have, the Greek or the Hebraci? He was familiar with both.

What then is grace? Gratia means favor; gratus, love!

"For by Grace are ye saved!" The object of this text is salvation, i.e. goodness. The subject, the means by which this comes, is grace—favor through love.

"Salvation comes exclusively through grace—that replenishment with Divine life which anew creates in us the good will for Christ. The God-man has brought down to earth the powers that give us back liberty to express freely the new nature." (A comment, in Hastings Encyclopedia of Religion and Ethics, on Augustine's conception of grace.) Listen to the echo of Luther's sledge-like blows as he pounds "the fetters of merit" with which the Roman Church had shackled Augustine's unconditioned conception of prevenient, co-operant and irresistible grace!

Herein lies the superiority of the virile Hebrew-Christian thought, over the cultured Greek conception. The Greek admired "beauty in motion" and called it grace. The Christian receives "imparted goodness as a gift of love, this is salvation. This is Paul's teaching on grace. Of course, it is to find expression in gracious living, Gal. 5:22-23.

"Wonderful, the grace of Jesus
Greater then all my sin,
How shall my tongue describe it,
Where shall its praise begin.'
[Lillinas]

In conclusion receive the New Testament benediction:

"The Grace of the Lord Jesus Christ be with you!" (I Cor. 16:23)

MRS. P. R. SCHROEDER, Church Worker of the Bethel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota:

Upon learning of the hopeless condition of the people of Europe, a wealthy American wheat-grower confers with his son as to how their lives may be saved. They decide that the son himself must leave his beautiful home and go there with ship-loads of wheat—enough for everybody, although they know he will not be received too kindly. They also know that the people have nothing in which to get the wheat, so they provide special baskets to be used only for that purpose. Upon his arrival the son goes up and down the country, telling the people who he is and what he has come for. The simple-hearted receive his message gladly and come to get their basket and let him fill it. But some of the others refuse to take a free gift and offer to work for him and earn it. But there is only one way to get the wheat—simply to ask for it. Others can't trust this man who says he has a rich father and who claims to be the only one who has life-giving food for them. They see other ships painted in gaudy colors and advertising wonderful things only to find that the food they offer is mixed with poison and leads to a slow death. Another group reads up in books about its heritage and is too proud to receive wheat like the lower classes, when they think they deserve enriched, bleached flour! Still others come with wheelbarrows and even trucks, because one basket of wheat! What is that?!

Finally this son is so hated and rejected that they decide to kill him. After his death, his faithful followers carry on his work and many, many are saved.

That, to me, is a weak picture of "The Meaning of Grace." My utter helplessness prompts the Father's love and compassion and he sends His Son who offers me that which alone can save my soul—His Very Life. But I have nothing in which to hold this precious food —His Blood and His Body. So He provides me with the basket — Saving Faith! What Grace!

"Nothing in my hand I bring, Simply to Thy Cross I cling."

Eph.1:7, "In whom (Christ) we have redemption through His blood, the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of His Grace." Heb. 12:2, "Looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith."

The Retirement Life Income Plan

as an old minister sees it

Sometimes one writes from a sense of duty. Now and then one is given an opportunity to write when it is a real pleasure to do so. The latter is true of the present writer on this occasion. After more than forty-six years in the ministry one is glad to do what he can to help those who are now or will be engaged in the ministry of the future.

I am thankful to the General Conference Pension Committee for the Christian Spirit and for the sane enthusiasm with which they are doing their work. They really believe that Jesus meant what He said when He told men that the laborer is worthy of his hire. Their attitude shows that they realize that sacrifice is one of the most noble Christian virtues, provided it is not imposed. They see clearly that if the laborer has not received his due at the time of his labors he should certainly not be compelled or permitted to suffer during the days of his retirement.

It is interesting to note that our Committee suggests that we link ourselves with a group which faced this same problem 230 years ago. The Presbyterian Ministers' Fund was started because it was considered only fair, as well as Christian, that ministers and their families should not be frustrated because of a lack of necessary means of subsistance and of growth. There were no apologies for undertaking this forthright duty of the Church. There was no halting because of mis-quotations from the Bible. There was a sincere meeting of an existing need in such a way that those who were to be given their due should neither be humiliated nor frustrated as objects of charity.

God has certainly added His blessing to the efforts of the faithful Presbyterians of 230 years ago. Through their efforts many other Protestant groups are reaping the benefits of their sense of justice and their faith. They paid the price of pioneering and their followers are ready to share the benefits with other groups.

Every member of the General Conference will do well to study the plan of our Pension Committee carefully. That will make it possible to get the greatest benefit out of its application. "The Committee feels that the Plan is safe, sound and workable and will in the future definitely solve the minister's problem of retirement." That is an important and a far-reaching statement by the Committee. Every member has a right to put it to the test of a careful investigation. If somebody has a better plan, let him present it. If there is no better plan found, then let the Conference and the Churches rise to the occasion and meet their opportunity-responsibility toward their workers.

Many of us are too old to benefit by the proposed RETIREMENT LIFE INCOME PLAN. We are not too old to be deeply thankful that at long last something really worthy of our profession as Christians is being seriously undertaken.

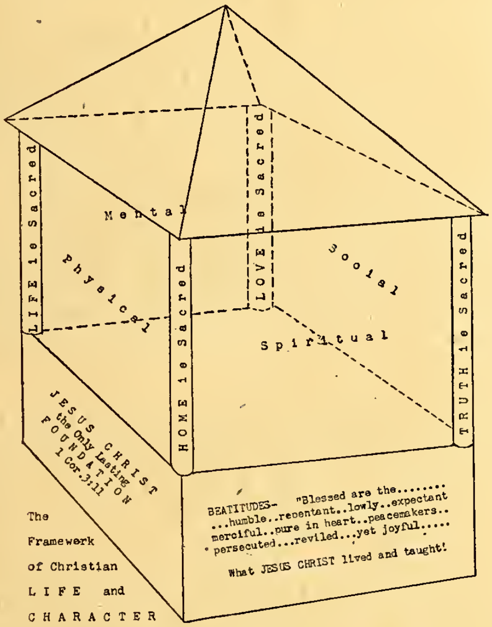
What It Means To Be a Christian in the Mennonite Church-- according to Matthew 5 and Luke 2:52

by Walter H. Dyck

A critical housing shortage exists in the realm of Christlikeness. We did not ask, "How shall we profess to be Christians?" We asked, "What does it mean to BE a Christian?" We mean REAL, not make-believe, Christians.

THE FUNDATION of all faith and life is Christ Jesus our Lord. I Cor. 3:11 says, "Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." He is the foundation of all our faith, hope, and love.



LIFE is Sacred
LOVE is Sacred
HOME is Sacred
TRUTH is Sacred Mental Physical Social Spiritual
JESUS CHRIST the Only Lasting FOUNDATION 1 Cor. 3:11
BEATITUDES- "Blessed are the........ ...humble..repentant..lowly..expectant merciful..pure in heart..peacemakers.. persecuted...reviled...yet joyful.....
What JESUS CHRIST lived and taught!
The Framework of Christian LIFE and CHARACTER

THE FOUNDATION ATTITUDES of Christ are listed in Matt. 5:1-12. No lesser righteousness deserves the name "Christian." The Beatitudes may well mark the ever deepening stages of Christian experience. They describe what Christ actually lived and taught. We claim no lesser goal.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN LIFE is outlined in Matt. 5:13-20.

1. It is meant to be good for something, not "good for nothing" (v. 13) like salt without saltness. Christians flavor communities in the Godly way.

2. It is meant to be seen, like a city on a hill, or a light on a candlestick. You can look right through Christians—nothing hidden. (vs. 14-15)

3. It is meant to win others to Christ. (v. 16) " Let your light so shine before men, that they may see . . . . and glorify your Father . . . ."

4. It is meant to be truly great. (vs. 17-20) The Way: "Whosoever shall do and teach them (God's Commandments) shall be called great."

THE PILLARS OF CHRISTIAN CHARACTER, Jesus says, are four, like the corner posts of a building. Each of the four are equally important. If any one of the four pillars is taken out the whole building falls in ruin.

1. LIFE is Sacred. (vs. 21-26) Human life is God-given. Whatever shortens physical life is sin. Burning the candle in both ends, by not sleeping enough or eating too much shortens life—it is sin. Jesus says, "Whosoever is angry with his brother" is killing. See also I John 3:15.

2. HOME is Sacred. (vs. 27-32) Even as life was never meant to be snuffed out by men, so homes were never meant to be broken other than by the decease of one of the holy wedlock. Jesus says that divorces are born in the thought life. "Whosoever looketh" lustfully breaks homes.

3. TRUTH is Sacred. (vs. 33-37) Swearing is a vain attempt to make statements more truthful than the character of the one who is speaking. Realizing his proneness to fail in truthfulness a Christian merely says, "To the best of my knowledge—YES." Actions speak louder than words.

4. LOVE, as a method of over coming evil, is Sacred. Jesus says, "Love your enemies." Christians destroy enemies by making friends out of them. Love is the most powerful weapon on earth or in heaven. If there were a better method God Himself would have used it. (John 3:16) God needs "other cheek" and "second mile' Christians today.

Then, in order to complete the structure, the Framework of Christian Life and Character needs four walls, which we might well call:

THE WALLS OF CHRISTIAN CHARACTER. Luke 2:52, which describes the youth of our Lord and Master, states that Jesus increased— He grew in

1. WISDOM. Mental growth is God-intended. If it can be known, there is no excuse for not knowing. Reading the Bible and other worthwhile books, observing plant and animal life, humbling ourselves before the grandeur of the starry heavens—all helps us to grow mentally.

2. STATURE. Physical growth and development is God-intended. To be weak, when one might have been strong, is not an honor to our Lord. (see p. 8)

—Walter H. Dyck, Newton, Kansas, secretary of General Conference, presents an outline of a series of studies being used at Western District Young People's Retreats this summer. The drawing is by Mary Lou Rich, North Newton, Kansas.

3. FAVOR with GOD. Spiritual growth is God-intended. How we feed our bodies but starve our souls. (Psalm 106:14-15) We were meant to "grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." This comes through devotional meditations, private prayer, and intercession.

4. FAVOR with MAN. How often we attempt to put this one first. We (so-called Christian people) do need to learn how to "get along" socially. Again, to neglect one of the four means that we are denying ourselves the privilege of truly BEING children of the Father in heaven. (Matt. 5:45)

Immersion Not the Only Mode of Baptism

By Harold D. Burkholder

Throughout the history of the church there have been differences of opinion as to the proper mode of baptism. The General Conference of Mennonites of North America accepts all three modes, namely, sprinkling, pouring, and immersion.

This article does not attempt to deny or discourage the use of immersion (the writer recently baptized several converts by immersion); neither is it contending that sprinkling or pouring are the only modes that we should use (the writer recently also baptized several converts by pouring); however, its purpose is to set forth the Scriptural evidence for accepting sprinkling and pouring as modes of baptism.

The strongest argument presented by strict immersionists is the statement that the greek word, "baptizo," always means "to dip, to plunge or to immerse." If "baptizo" always means "to immerse" then the strict immersionist has a Water-Proof argument. However, if it can be proved that "baptizo" does not always mean immersion, then their argument Dries Up. Furthermore, if we can prove that "baptizo" also means to pour or to sprinkle, then we have proved the point we wish to make, namely, that all three modes, sprinkling, pouring, and immersion, are Scriptural.

It is generally agreed that "baptizo", in the classical Greek, means, to immerse. However, the New Testament was not written in classical but in Koine Greek, which was the language of the common people. Therefore, to understand the meaning of the word we must see how the people used it.

We are not so much interested in how Socrates or Plato used "baptizo," but we are interested in how Jesus, John, and the people of that day used it. Consider several passages of Scripture where "baptizo" does not mean immersion. For example, in Hebrews 9:10 it is translated "divers washings," literally, many baptisms. The many baptisms known to them were all done by sprinkling. In Mark 7:4 "baptizo" is translated washing, and in Luke 11:38 it is translated washed. Surely, the Pharisees did not expect Jesus to immerse himself before dinner, but the Pharisees were surprised that Jesus did not wash or purify himself before the meal. The Pharisees purified themselves often, but this was always done by sprinkling. It was their custom to take clean water and a bunch of hyssop to sprinkle their beds and tables for purification purposes. According to Mark and Luke, this procedure was called baptism.

Now turn with me to Matt. 3:11 where we read, "I indeed baptize (baptizo) you with water; but he shall baptize (baptizo) you with the Holy Ghost." Here the word "baptizo" is used twice. In the first instance it refers to the water baptism of John, and in the second instance it refers to the baptism of the Holy Ghost. According to Acts 2 the Word of God states that the Holy Ghost was poured out upon them. In that case "baptizo" meant pouring.

Read carefully Isaiah 52:15 and Ezekiel 36:25, which predict that the Messiah will "sprinkle many nations." The Jews expected this prophecy to be fulfilled by sprinkling. Since they thought John was the Messiah because of his baptism (John 1:21-27), then John must have used sprinkling as his method of baptism.

In concluding this article we assure the readers that we recognize the validity of all three modes of baptism. The real purpose of the article is to prove from the Scriptures that immersion is not the only mode of baptism.

THAT THOSE WHO RUN MAY READ

In this busy age everything is streamlined and abbreviated, it seems to save time.

We had this called to our attention recently in a little incident which happened in the Publication Office. Many of our readers send in contributions and for this sharing of experiences with other readers we are extremely grateful. Sometimes, however, sharing becomes bearing.

It happened this way. A reader sent in a contribution written in the German script. It was written in extremely small, closely packed writing on onion skin paper—letters so small that we just could not make out what it was.

So we employed someone to read it and type it in German. It required this reader and translator seven hours to read those four pages and cost your Board of Publication $3.50.

We ask you to send in your contributions! Your contributions are welcome! But may we suggest that you write clearly, on white paper, on one side of the sheet only, in clear, bold writing. Your editors are not complaining, but your General Conference publications are not over-staffed at any point and every little consideration which you show them in this manner is most appreciated, you may be sure.

There's Business at General Conference for Young People

General Conference is to be held August 20-27. For the churches this is a most important conference. There is much to be considered regarding the conference program of missions, publication, evangelism, education, relief, and young people's activity. The Conference has much of interest to young people. It gives an opportunity to see how the church works as well as an opportunity to become acquainted and have fellowship with many new people that were not known before.

This year's Conference will have special interest for young people. Two full afternoons will be devoted especially to the young people's business. One of the evening programs will be in charge of the Young People's Union. From August 28-30, a special All General Conference Young People's Retreat will be held at Camp Mack, about ninety miles from Berne, Indiana.

This retreat will be principally inspirational and for the purpose of fellowship. At it, young people from all corners of the country will have an opportunity to learn to know each other and appreciate the efforts each has undertaken for the common cause of Christ.

Because of this program in which the young people can feel they have a real and decisive part in General Conference activity, the Young People's Union has urged that a delegate under the age of thirty come from each church. The delegate should be between the age of fifteen-thirty. It is felt that by having such a delegate, the Young People's program can be made vital and an actively working reality in the local church.

Young people are urged to plan their vacation for the Conference and Retreat. It will be ten memorable days!

All General Conference Young People's Retreat

Immediately after the General Conference to be held at Berne, Indiana, August 20-27, the All General Conference Young People's Retreat will be held at Camp Mack, Milford, Indiana, August 28-30.

Camp Mack is situated about ninety miles from Berne, Indiana. It is south of Goshen. The camp is owned and operated by the Church of the Brethren and is the camp used annually by the Middle and Central district for their summer camps. There are a group of excellent facilities on the camp. A large, well built administration building contains the kitchen and dining hall facilities, the chapel, lounges, offices and living quarters for the staff. A recreation hall, large assembly hall, amphitheater and numerous cabins comprise the remainder of the camp buildings.

The camp is situated at the edge of a private lake.

Under the trees on the lake's edge are many restful spots for fellowship and meditation.

It is one of the lakes which dot northern Indiana and for which that section of the state is famous. The lake is the focal point of interest along which the camp has been built. It is secluded and well located for the purposes of religious groups desiring to withdraw for prayer, discussion, fellowship and inspiration.

The three days retreat to be held at Camp Mack from August 28-30 is for young people from the ages of 15-30. More complete publicity will be released. Plan for the All Mennonite Young People's Retreat — come to the Conference and the Retreat, it will be a memorable experience.

In the May 27 issue of Mennonite Youth, several errors appeared. On page nine, it was stated that Rev. Benno Toews is head of the Bible Department. Rev. Orlando Goering holds this position. On page eleven, it is stated under the picture that Rev. Toews is instructing a Bible Class while Rev. Willard Claassen is pictured in action.

The Middle District Young People have undertaken a project of supporting a missionary in North Carolina. Rev. Andrew Holliman, recently ordained, with his wife will serve in the Paint Rock, North Carolina, mission. This is located in the Smoky Mountains. Reports indicate that the people the Hollimans will serve, in cooperation with Miss Grantland who has been there for a number of years, are in great need of spiritual, educational, and general assistance and guidance. The Hollimans, it is reported, are well qualified to perform such a service to these people.

The Northern District young people have been requested by Rev. Orlando Waltner, missionary in Champa, India, to help equip a much needed workshop at the Leper Home in India. A young man in India is to be trained to do the countless repair jobs necessary at the Leper home. Money is being collected which will buy: Oxy Acetylene Welding Set with cutting attachment, chain hoist, forge, wrenches (assorted kinds and sizes), post drill, socket wrench sets, pliers, chisels, hammers (assorted), files, drills and drill sets, anvil, saws, screw drivers, soldering equipment, pipe stocks, assorted bolts, washers, nuts, and cottor pins, padlocks. Contributions from the Northern District are to be sent to Delsie Tieszen, 213 North Pine, Newton, Kansas.

More than half of the people who say they belong to a church, a Gallup poll reveals, stayed away from church the Sunday before the poll was made.

The poll results showed that eight out of ten who are members of a church manage to get to that church at least once each year. Women are better churchgoers than men, college people than those who did not go beyond high school, and farmers than those who live in cities.—Gospel Messenger

Life Investments

Character investments pay great dividends!

Whether it is money, time or ability the highest returns come from investments in some personality.

Charles Wesley invested a few hours in a young man, loaning him a book. That investment resulted in George Whitefield being won to Christ.

A traveling salesman invested a few moments in a young shoe clerk. That investment chalked up to his (spiritual) credit Dwight L. Moody.

A father invested many years in family worship, secret devotions, spiritual communion-sessions, which resulted in the noble missionary work of John G. Paton.

If you are looking for investments (time - investments, ability - investments, service - investments, money - investments) by all means make them in some person whom you might reach for the kingdom.

If you have money to invest . . . invest it in souls, the missionary cause, opening a new church in some needy section (there are many rural sections dotting the nation without any type of Christian service), in training a young Christian worker.

If you have time to invest . . . invest it in service activities, where you can win some soul to the master.

If you have spiritual passion to invest . . . put it in prayer seasons, the results of which will be world-encircling.

If you have ability to invest . . . bank it in kingdom-work. Put that golden voice to singing God's praises!

Put that sunny-hearted disposition to wooing and winning souls!

Put that executive ability and salesmanship power into promoting and building Sunday schools!

Put that leadership-knack into boys' and girls' work!

"My dividends?" you ask.

Heaven, and not Dun and Bradstreet, will note them!

Christian stewardship pays!—"Christian Evangelist."

Appoint Directors for Home for Mentally Ill

Delvin Kirchofer of Bluffton, Ohio, and Helen Moser of Orrville, Ohio, have been appointed to take the responsibility in directing the home for mentally ill which is to be located at Leitersburg, Maryland. Before entering this work, they will serve in a period of internship at a competent psychiatric clinic.

World Conference of Christian Youth

A World Conference of Christian Youth will be held in Oslo, Norway, from July 22 to 31, 1947. In the name of Jesus Christ, 1300 delegates from many countries will meet after the separation and suffering caused by the war.

The theme of the conference will be "Jesus Christ is Lord." The five-fold purpose of the Conference has been stated as follows: (1) We must rediscover together that Jesus Christ is Lord; (2) We must rebuild our fellowship in Christ; (3) We must face the situation in the world; (4) We must find the job we have to do; (5) We must plan the strategy of our work.

Robert Kreider, Mennonite relief worker in Germany, has been appointed to attend this conference as an observer-delegate, representing the MCC and its constituency. It is felt that not only will his report of this conference be of interest to the youth of our Mennonite groups, but he will also doubtless have occasion to share with other delegates at this conference, the Mennonite belief and heritage.

Consider Immigration into Canada

A number of Christian groups in Canada have expressed an interest in bringing to Canada certain immigrants who do not qualify under the mandate of the International Refugee Organization. The Canadian government has expressed a favorable attitude toward bringing in some such immigrants, but thus far no organization had been set up to make this possible.

At the invitation of some of these other church groups J. J. Thiessen, Harold Sherk, and William Snyder were present in a meeting at Ottawo, Canada, on June 23, in which this problem was discussed. Plans were proposed for the formation of an appropriate organization through which each of the church groups could work in helping refugees to immigrate to Canada.

Call for Volunteers

The Voluntary Service office is now ready to receive applications of one-year volunteers for the Mexico project in the State of Chihuahua. There is also opportunity and need for one-year volunteers for work at Gulfport, Mississippi, and in the homes for the mentally ill which are to be established. Persons interested, write for more information, addressing Voluntary Services, Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pennsylvania.

We have had a blessed time at the conference. The speakers were excellent. We are only sorry to say that Dr. Warkentin had a relapse and was taken to Portland Saturday evening so he could take the plane back to Chicago. We were sorry he couldn't bring us the afternoon message Sunday. Rev. Howard Nyce took his place. They are both real men of God. The conference was held at Albany, which is only 32 miles from Dallas. Very nice weather was enjoyed during the conference. Dr. Suckau and the Grace Bible Institute Quartet were in our church Wednesday, June 18, and they were also at the conference. Unruh delivered a short message and Rev Arnold Funk made closing remarks and prayer. The church choir and junior choir each rendered a number. The program was followed by a social hour and refreshments in the church basement. It was a blessing to all present.—Mrs. F. G. Unruh, Corr.

—A letter received from John T. Neufeld. Business Manager of the Mennonite Biblical Seminary, states: "We regret to have to report that Dr. Warkentin, president of the Mennonite Biblical Seminary, had to go back to the hospital for examination and probable operation. His condition has been getting worse lately and we ask that you remember him in prayer."

The age limit has been extended to include senior high school and college sudents or young people of an equivalent age, as well as young married couples. Folders with detailed information about the retreat have been sent to pastors of all Western District Conference churches and are available also at General Conference Headquarters, 722 Main Street, Newton, Kansas, and by writing the retreat committee secretary: Helen Hiebert Mueller, Box 2255, University Station, Enid, Oklahoma.

—Bethel College Church: The congregation voted to accept, as a gift from Bethel College, the lot just north of Goerz Hall as the site for the proposed church building. This location was once designated by the Rev. David Goerz as a place where a house of worship should some day be erected. It is the goal of the congregation to have $50,000 on hand in the building fund at the time of the fiftieth anniversary of the church on Nov. 1, 1941. Dr. P. S. Goertz, who has been dean of Bethel College for many years, and Mrs. Goertz left their home here on July 1 for Akron, Pennsylvania, and will soon leave to serve

A BILL TO DENY CITIZENSHIP

H. R. 2286 now before the House Judiciary Committee orders that no conscientious objector who has become naturalized may retain his citizenship if he is called upon to bear arms and that no person may become naturalized unless he "is willing to bear arms in support and defense of the United States." This bill which passed the sub-Judiciary Committee on June 30, is now in the hands of the Judiciary Committee preparatory to action by Congress. Should this bill pass, Mennonites may be faced with future measures restricting the privileges of nonresistant Christians. May Christians pray earnestly that Congress may not jeopardize religious liberties now so much appreciated.

An expression of concern should immediately be written to members of the Judiciary Committee, House Office Building, Washington, D. C. Address to one or more of the following: Earl C. BILATERAL SALVATION

Christian salvation has both an inner and an outer aspect. The inner emphasizes change of heart, the spiritual life, the mystical experiences. It is the root of the tree where, in secret, contact is made with the hidden, living streams of life. The outer aspect deals with deeds, with the expression in the physical life. It is the fruit of the tree, providing visible evidence of life.

The relation between the two aspects—inner and outer may be expressed in such parallel terms as primary and secondary, content and form, impression and expression. Between these there is a reacting relation, every expression deepening the impression, neither existing without the other.

To see life in its proper perspective demands vision through two eyes. So the Christian looks on life through the eye of faith and the eye of works. Jesus taught that there can be no repentance without the fruits meet for repentance, no following of the Lord without taking the cross, no fellowship with God without doing the will of the Father. The inner is the essence; the outer is the evidence.

The Christian life is like a musician playing on his instrument. There would be no music were there lacking either the soul of an artist or the technique of expression. Every redeemed person becomes a virtuoso on the strings of human sympathy and conduct, performing that hymn of life which is salvation.—by S. F. Pannabecker, former missionary to China and now Dean of the Mennonite Biblical Seminary, Chicago.

"WORLDLINESS" AND "WORLD-MINDEDNESS"

There is an important distinction to be made between "worldliness" and "world-mindedness." An effective discrimination between these two concepts is necessary if the Mennonite Church is to continue in this fast moving age.

Christianity cannot exist without both of these ideas. We as Christians are called to think, speak, and act differently from "the world" that calls itself not Christian. Contemporary non-Christians should be able to recognize "by his walk" a follower of Christ just as surely as did those of New Testament times.

Yet true Christianity contains deep and genuine concepts of justice, mercy, kindness and love for all men everywhere and of all creeds and beliefs. "World-mindedness" also includes an active interest in our duties as citizens of our country, integrating ourselves more fully into our local communities, sincerely sharing our heritage with those of other denominations, and constant striving for a oneness and mutual sense of understanding.

In our zeal to avoid "worldliness" our church has been lacking in "world-mindedness." We have been very free with the use of the brand of "worldly," but reluctant to praise efforts at greater understanding among men. This overemphasis has made us appear self-righteous in the eyes of those close to us, and has tended to nullify our good works. "Our heritage" is described as glorious by Mennonites; through misunderstanding and misinterpretation it is often labeled as queer and, in a measure, selfish by non-members.

May we as a church strive continually to balance our insight into standards of Christian living with a more wholesome, workable relationship with our fellowmen!—by Hugh Hostetler, Ransom, Kansas, high school teacher the past year and prospective seminary student for the coming school year.

Do it well—this task of yours.
Remember, too, that others' chores
Are just as hard—their weary load
Keeps up with yours down Life's long road.

Your burdens could be lighter, though,
If you'd forget yourself, and so
Help others through their longest mile
Without complaining; with a smile.

Pensioning Our Ministers

A. Theodore Mueller

The plan for pensioning our ministers, as proposed by our General Conference Pension Committee should receive the most wholehearted support of the people of our conference. The benefits of this plan to the minister will in turn produce greater benefits to the church and each individual he serves.

One benefit to the church and the individual will come in that the minister will need to "take no thought for the morrow." He will, during his active years of service, be free to give more concentrated and devoted effort to ministering to his congregation. The contented minister's increased joy in and devotion to his task will raise the standard of his work.

Another benefit to the church and its members will come in that the minister will have a sense of being more permanently attached to his work. He will be encouraged to carry through the early God-given vision of his purpose and task here on earth. Financial situations need not divert him from his calling to seek a more remunerative position when he begins to feel that he and his wife may, without a pension income in their later years, be a financial burden to someone. A minister with a full life-time of service will be a greater asset to his conference, church and community than one who serves only part of his life time.

The young person with a call to be a minister will prepare himself more adequately for his task. Consecrated and devoted ministers are needed but consecration and devotion must be supplemented by knowledge and wisdom. The young minister will feel that he can financially afford to get more training if the congregation he serves will support him adequately and encourage him throughout his years of service.

Benefits will come to all concerned when we all work together in a systematic plan to help those whose greatest concern is our spiritual welfare. The minister will do his part; each cooperating individual church member will do his part. The friendship and fellowship resulting from such cooperative effort will be a blessing to everyone. The plan of pensioning our ministers is in harmony with God's plan that men with the call to minister should be selected to care for our spiritual needs. These ministers should be adequately cared for throughout their lifetime. We should seek out among us "men of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom," and set them apart "for the work whereunto" God has called them. When we adequately support such men we may feel that we have a share in the work that is done for the sake of the Kingdom of God.

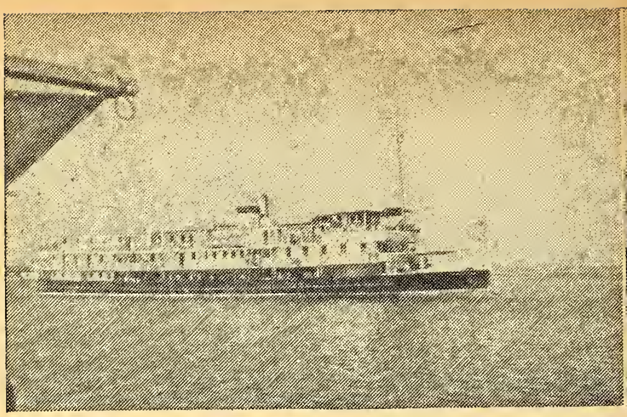
A Request To Help Unify Mennonites of the World

Over two thousand refugee Mennonites have recently come to Paraguay. The settlement of these Mennonites is delayed because of the civil war in Paraguay. While these people wait for settlement arrangements they have plenty of time on their hands. Reading materials are scarce. We are told that when they get hold of a "Christlicher Bundesbote" it is read from cover to cover. Many of these Mennonite refugees who have the opportunity to read the "Christlicher Bundesbote" are better informed about church life in America, we are told, than many Mennonites here at home. This presents an excellent opportunity to unify the Mennonites of the world if we will get our church papers into their hands.

It has been suggested that the Church Unity Committee should not allow this opportunity to tie the South American Mennonites closer to us to slip by. Since the Church Unity Committee has a budget of only $100 for its work, we cannot pay for many subscriptions to the "Christlicher Bundesbote" for the refugee Mennonites in Paraguay. A very limited number of subscriptions are already being sent, but there is need for many more. We wish, therefore, to appeal to friends to send money contributions that may be used for this purpose. Perhaps, Sunday School classes or C. E. societies could take up this project. Money may be sent to the Mennonite Publication Office, 722 North Main St., Newton Kansas. Mr. B. Bargen, the manager, will see to it that these subscriptions are fairly and strategically distributed among the Mennonites in Paraguay. We make this appeal because we believe that much can be accomplished for the Kingdom of God by strengthening the Church in this day.—W. F. Unruh, Secretary of the Church Unity Committee.



The pictures on these pages are of the Mennonite refugees temporarily housed in an agricultural school in San Lorenzo, Paraguay. They have been detained here because of the Paraguayan revolution which has blocked their movement to the Mennonite colonies in the north. Top pictures left to right: 1. Mennonite Immigrants in Perhaps, no country in the world has made recent immigrants such generous promises as Paraguay. After World War II the Paraguayan government repeated its invitation to Mennonites and enlarged the scope of the Privilegium (statement of privileges), which had been granted to Mennonites in the Chaco region. Mennonites are now allowed to live under the Privilegium in any part of Paraguay.

When, as through a wonder, the doors of Europe were opened and 2,303 Mennonite refugees could leave that continent on the Dutch ship, "Volendam," Paraguay was the only country which offered refuge and a new home. After lengthy negotiations the Argentina government agreed to keep the group in a tent city in Buenos Aires until all could be transported to Paraguay. The shipment of small groups started right away, but was soon stopped by the revolution which disrupted Paraguayan life. The "Ciudad de Conception," an Argentinian river boat, arrived in Asuncion a few days after the shooting had begun. The group of 370 refugees had to be taken off the boat. They were placed in the then empty agricultural school in San Lorenzo, 11 kilometers southeast of Asuncion. Later on when it got cold and damp in the tents in Buenos Aires, the whole group, with some exceptions, was sent there. We now (written in June) have around 1,000 persons in this camp. The last two groups, totalling 230 people, had to be quartered in a new oil factory. Here in the school we allow six square feet per person. That is not much with all their belongings. Sixty people have to live in tents here too. Worship services and school classes have to be conducted under the open sky. Kitchen facilities are very primitive. Rain brings on the greatest difficulties.

But all of this is easier for the people to take than it is for them to be detained in their journey toward a new home. However, the revolution is not ended. Here around us and in Asuncion everything is quiet, but in the northern part of the country the troops of the government and those of the revolutionists still face each other. The why and how long of the people's stay here is in the hands of God, and we put our trust in Him. We are always refreshed and encouraged by the help which our relief work gets from the churches in North America. Continue to pray and to give. The work of love for these people is not ended.—Ernst Harder.

Introduction to Uniform S.S. Lessons for Third Quarter

by Paul R. Shelly

At a meeting of the curriculum committee, held at Aberdeen, Idaho, June 10-13, it was suggested that a brief approach to the lessons each quarter be written for The Mennonite. The purpose of these articles is to give some items of general information and to suggest particular emphases which should be stressed.

I. The Third Quarter in Its Relationship to the Whole Uniform Series. It is well to study the entire outline of the uniform series for 1945-1950 in order to see what particular areas should be stressed each quarter. During the last three months we studied one of the historical units taken from the Old Testament. The study of the Old Testament will be resumed in the second quarter next year.

The series for the current quarter is called. "Ancient Writings and Modern Problems." The series for the first quarter of 1948 is called: "Great Christian Teachings." In this latter series the great doctrinal truths are discussed, while in this quarter's lessons some of the main Christian virtues will be considered.

II. An Approach to the Lessons. The first three lessons for this quarter are taken from the book of Job. The others are taken from the book of Proverbs and Ecclesiastes. In a number of lessons a few passages are included from some of the New Testament books. A number of factors should be mentioned as we approach these lessons.

1. The Approach. There will be a temptation to carry out one or the other of the phases of the subject for the quarter, to discuss either the ancient writings or modern problems. The two should be constantly interrelated. The problems under consideration are of a timeless nature. They should not, however, be considered from our own limited perspective alone since the solutions given in the Eternal Word of God are also timeless.

2. The first two lessons and the last give a background for the series. In the first two lessons we are reminded that God alone is the eternal creator and sustainer of man and the universe and that man's first and primary need is to find rest in Him through Christ. In the last lesson we are again brought face to face with the fact that the Christian religion alone satisfies the basic needs of man. In an age in which God is not given first place there is a great need to stress the truths of the above lessons.

3. A Practical Quarter. The lessons this quarter are peculiarly fitted for our needs as Mennonites and as Christians. We have always stressed the new birth but along with Jesus, Paul, and Menno Simons have also stressed the fact that Christians are to bear fruit in their daily lives. We along with other denominations need this series of lessons. We should discuss seriously the place of the Chritian in the areas included. The challenge comes to make these lessons vital and to actually think through our relationships as Christians in these various aspects of life.

III. Distinctive Doctrines. This morning I was asked to speak to a class at a Presbyterian Youth Conference, held on the Bluffton College Campus, on the distinctive Mennonite doctrines. Certainly we should be concerned about teaching our distinctive doctrines when they appear in our regular Sunday school lessons. In addition to our distinctive doctrines certain specific needs suggest themselves at various periods of our history. Not all of these distinctive doctrines and needs are stressed by the teachers' materials that we use even though they are a part of the lessons themselves. We as Mennonite teachers should be careful to seek out these areas and emphasize them when the lessons lend themselves to these particular truths.

There are a number such areas that should be stressed this quarter.

1. In the lesson for July 27 the whole program of Christian education can be emphasized, pointing out the fact that wisdom without God is not true wisdom.

2. In the lesson for August 3 the need for Christian homes can be stressed.

3. In the lesson for August 10 the need for purity of heart and life can be taught. Certainly, in the midst of the laxity in this area, teachers should welcome the opportunity to teach these two lessons above, and should spend much time in preparation to make them as effective as possible.

4. In the lesson for August 24, on honesty, the opportunity is given to stress this truth as it has been a part of our heritage, emphasizing the distinctive doctrine of not taking the oath. The verse found in Matthew 5:37 is a part of the Scripture for that lesson although it is not a part of the printed portion. The larger aspect of the principle of honesty should also be taught.

5. The lesson for September 7 gives the opportunity to stress the whole problem of materialism. It seems to me that this is one of the problems of Mennonites today, the fact that we are getting more and more materialistic, becoming proud of our achievements in things rather than in the things of God.

6. The lesson for September 14 on "The Wisdom of Harmonious Living" gives the opportunity to stress the whole philosophy of our relief program and the whole positive area of living with others as Christians. We do not have the opportunity to teach this directly in a regular Sunday school lesson very often and we should not miss the opportunity when it appears in a regular lesson.

Prospects of a New China Mission Field

(Missionary H. J. Brown, in a letter written from Kaifeng, Honan, China, June 4, tells of the efforts that are being made to find a new mission field in China.)

Ever since we landed in China, we have been inquiring by individual people of different regions and also organizations for an appropriate mission field for our General Conference of the Mennonites of North America. We have accumulated a stack of information, and many such descriptions were verified by others. We found, however, that we were not the only group in search for a new field. A number of missions with many missionaries have been driven out of their former fields of labor by the Communists. The Old Mennonites have been searching far and near; the China Mennonite Mission Society has found a new field in Shensi and Kansu. After we had reorganized our Chinese work in the two counties left us here of the Hopei field, we went to work even more earnestly. Rev. A. E. Kreider, our Foreign Mission Board Chairman, to-gether with Mr. Burkholder (O.M.) had gone part way to the Kiangsi Province but encountered difficulties, and for lack of sufficient time had to come back. Mr. Burkholder was stopped by big floods and sickness and also had to return. We had had great hopes, but they vanished before our eyes. The Chungking Szechwan reports were not very favorable either.

Brother Boehr and I, with the approval of Rev. Kreider, two weeks ago started on a trip to Shenai and Kansu, a distance of eight hundred plus miles one way. Travel is slow and one has to make a number of changes on the railroad and finish up by truck or bus, more the former. Paoki was the first city to be inspected. It is situated at the end of a more or less reliable railroad. From here to Tienshui is also a railroad, but it happened to be out of commission for this month. The two cities are connected by a good highway through the mountains. Shuang-shih-pu, Brother Bartel's station is on this highway. Tienshui is the third largest city in Kansu, more than one hundred miles west of Paoki, which is in Shansi not so far from the Kansu border. The highway distance between the two cities is about 270 miles. Lihsien and Siko are two smaller cities southwest of Tienshui on the highland, while the before mentioned cities are in the Wei River valley, which valley is one to three miles wide with fertile fields, some under irrigation. The mountains and high hills are largely cultivated in many terraces. The altitude is high, the weather agreeable and healthy, and the water good. The former two cities are thickly populated. Tienshui is a very nicely built up city with double walls and fine streets. Wells are thirty to forty feet deep and have good water. Wood and lumber come out of the mountains. Other railroads are planned in two directions to Lanchow, Kansu and Changtu, Szechwan. There are some groups working there, but they urge us to come and help in that great and needy field. Tienshui wants us to build a hospital and a high school or Bible school. Paoki would like to have the hospital. This field offers us a wonderful opportunity to preach the gospel. Rev. A. E. Kreider, Miss W. Kuyf and Rev. P. J. Boehr plan to go there next week for further investigations.

Come Ye Yourselves Apart . . . .

by Joanna S. Andres

(Joanna S. Andres tells of the Church Worker's Retreat held near Goddart, Kansas, June 5-7. This camp, sponsored by the Western District under the auspices of the General Conference, was unique in that it was perhaps the first of its kind in the General Conference. It was especially planned for Sunday school teachers and others who wished to improve in their church work methods. The retreat was held at the same place and time as an Intermediate retreat. Mrs. Andres in describing the Worker's Retreat touches upon the value of retreating and brings in glimpses of the Intermediates.)

We were moving the week end of June 5-7. The following Sunday was to be the opening date of the Church Worker's Retreat at Fellowship Camp, Goddart, Kansas. The words of Jesus became very real also in our household, "They had no leisure so much as to eat." Somehow, though, as the date for retreat neared, our home took on the pattern of comfort once more. Mark 6:31 became fresh and full of meaning. I knew that after my home duties were sufficiently taken care of, I could answer the call: "Come ye yourselves apart into a desert place and rest awhile. For there were many coming and going, and they had no leisure so much as to eat."

It was a personal call. The promise of rest and even a desert place void of boxes still to be unpacked seemed inviting just then.

Sunday dawned with a bright June sunshine which promised heat for the day, and when the time came for us to leave for camp in the afternoon, the very thought of woolen blankets seemed altogether out of place.

Quickly we exchanged the woolen ones for summer blankets and set out feeling assured that this retreat would be a very warm one.

When after a hot, windy drive we turned into the last lane to the camp grounds, we already felt rewarded for before us lay the landscape of a lake, a lodge that bordered it, a boat house, cottages newly painted, flowers, meadows.

Others followed us down that lane. The number of campees grew rapidly. Since our retreat for church workers was the first of its kind in our district, its attendance was small, but the presence of sixty-eight Intermediates with their adult personnel of directors, instructors, cabin leaders and cooks, build a few swarming "hives" around us.

It was interesting to note: what seemed on the first and second day an inexhaustible store of energy, deflated rather quickly on the remaining days. Some of the children even began to look like the crowd so long ago of whom Jesus said, "they are as sheep without a shepherd." However, when camp was over—and though a part of the last days had turned very chilly so that we thought of our woolen blankets left behind, of our coats which we should have taken—many of the youngsters had the desire to remain longer.

Though we ate side by side with the group of Intermediates and slept close enough to hear them, we met apart from them in our devotional periods and for our study classes. We were fortunate to have three able teachers for our five days of retreat.

Mrs. Olin Krehbiel came to us from Berne, Indiana, with her heart loaded full of good things which found an overflow in a car packed with demonstrable materials. It was an inspiration and a challenge to hear her and to learn anew that a little bit in the hand of a child or something for its eye can bring so easily a vital truth to the heart.

Dr. Walter Hohmann taught the church music period, reviewing for us the place of music in the life of mankind, the beginnings of church music, and what constitutes good church music. He led us also to appreciate better our own Mennonite Hymnary, especially its choral section.

Mrs. Willis Rich so ably lead us in the discussion of the Sunday school pupil, the child itself with all its energies, its interests, its growing needs. To lead the child into fellowship with God through Christ is the aim of the Sunday school teacher. Sometimes it is something so little in the life of a child that hinders this fellowship; sometimes it is much. It is for the teacher to find this little or this much in order that a right relationship can be established and the child can find God in Christ.

Sometimes as we sat in our classroom by the lake, we could hear the lapping of the water against the wall. Sometimes it was the wind that bade us listen to the minor song. Once, as we were assembled for our evening class, we heard the singing of "Now on land and sea descending brings the night its peace profound."

We stopped our class discussion to listen. The Intermediate retreaters were having a worship at the lake. They were singing on both shores of the lake and in the center, on a boat, were the ministers, reading at intervals from the Word. Our hearts were stirred in thanksgiving and love to Him. How much like the scenes of old around Lake Galilee!

All good things must have their end here on earth. Thursday we cleaned and cleared camp. The things of God are abiding, and of these we carried with us a goodly store with the desire to return to our "valleys" and re-treat others with the riches with which we had been treated.

It was good to have been at camp!

Note: Two boy's shirts were left on the retreat grounds. They can be secured from 412 S. E. Second, Newton.

ABOUT SENDING THINGS ALONG TO INDIA

In reply to inquiries about the possibilities of sending along gifts and supplies to missionaries in India when we leave this fall, we will be willing to pack such things if they reach us not later than the end of the first week in August. Packages should be brought to Headquarters at 722 N. Main Street, Newton, Kansas, with the following information:

1. Name of sender and to whom sent. 2. Items contained in the package and their valuation. Please mark everything at wholesale price which is legitimate. In India duty must be paid according to valuation. 3. If used, be sure to state so. 4. Time limit—end of first week in August except to people in the Pacific area. The Lord willing, we expect to sail from the west coast. Special arrangements can be made later if the need arises, but we would like to finish all this sort of packing by the middle of August.—Mrs. J. R. Duerksen

EASTERN DISTRICT QUARTERLY CONFERENCE

The First Quarterly Conference of the Eastern District was held on July 7 in the Bethel Mennonite Church, located in the Reformed Theological Seminary Chapel in Lancaster. The devotions were in charge of Rev. Don E. Smucker, pastor. A short historical report of three of the Mennonite Churches in Lancaster County was given by the respective pastors. Dr. S. F. Pannabecker gave the address of the afternoon on "What Is a Mennonite?" The address was both helpful and fundamental in pointing out the essence of Christianity. A discussion period then followed in which one pastor interjected, "I am a Mennonite Christian, with the accent on "Christian." During the afternoon a season of prayer was held in behalf of Dr. Warkentin. Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander, chairman of the Home Mission Committee reported a newly organized congregation at Springs, Pa., with twenty-seven charter members who have voted to join both the Eastern District and the General Conference.

Dr. C. D. Spotts of Franklin and Marshall College delivered a very interesting address in the evening on "The Church Pattern in Lancaster."—Ward W. Shelly

Voluntary Service Units Report

(There are ten M.C.C. and General Conference Voluntary Service Units operating this Summer. Young people have gone to Canada, Mexico, Colorado, Montana, Mississippi, Illinois, Ohio, Pennsylvania to serve in whatever capacity they could be of service. Reports from a number of these units have come in and are herewith presented. They give an intimate picture of what the units are doing, their experiences and problems, and their spirit.—Ed.)

From Chicago, Illinois

What I Hope to Accomplish in Chicago

Whenever anything worthy of doing is begun, there comes the question, "What is the purpose? What is being accomplished?" We girls who have come to Chicago have voiced our hopes for the Summer Service. Here are individual expressions.

"Every Christian owes his service to God in return for the blessings he bestows upon us."

"In meeting with our leaders and hearing, as well as seeing, the existing unfavorable conditions in Chicago, I am fully convinced that this type of service is a call of our Heavenly Father."

"I want to render my service so that it offers happiness and enjoyment to my pupils and with whomever I come in contact."

"The greatest wish that I have is that I may give others the great joy I have in being a Christian."

"I am very much interested in observing and studying the conditions and problems of city life. I hope I can express myself when I get home in such a way that the people will understand in part."

"I trust that I shall make everlasting friendships with new friends, thus experiencing true Christian fellowship."

"I hope to be able to reach some decisions in regard to my life work through closer meditations and discussions with our leaders."

"I think this is a great challenge for us to go out and tell others about Christ."

"I hope that this experience will help me to define more clearly a working definition or philosophy of religion for myself."

"It is only through much prayer that I hope to accomplish anything. In God's hand I place my own so that with Him I might accomplish that for which I am striving."

Seeing Chicago

In connection with our service we have studied Chicago by actually seeing the city. This has given us an insight of the conditions that exist and given us a clearer picture of the background of the children with whom we work. Of course, even though our purpose was of a serious nature, we had pleasure and adventure in our sightseeing trips.

One of our first thrills was Lake Michigan, It was a clear day when we took that first breath-taking view of the blue calm waters with sailboats lazily drifting in a distance and beyond that the hazy skyline of Chicago. We live only four blocks from this magnificent scenery and we make this walk almost part of our daily routine.

A conducted tour of Chinatown and Chicago by night has been one of the highlights of our first week. This trip took us into the "Melting Pot of Chicago" where we toured Little Italy, Little Russia, Mexican, Bohemia, Spanish, Japanese areas and "The Ghetto." Hoboland, a town of forgotten men, is a pathetic sight. Men with unshaven faces and in filthy rags. were playing cards, gambling, or sitting on the curb hugging their bottle. Our guide pointed out Hull House, Buckingham Fountain and other points.

An all-day cruise on Lake Michigan to Benton Harbor, Michigan, was a new experience for all of us. On our return the skyline against the heavens as the sun was setting was an enchanting picture such as might be taken from a book of fairy tales. Another evening a concert at Grant Park with the music of Tschaikowsky was pleasurable. We made a visit to the Chicago Temple, the world's tallest church, located in the heart of the Loop.

A Child's Definition

Incident in Daily Vacation Bible School in Chicago.

Teacher Violet Goering: "Freddie, can you tell me what the work of a missionary is?"

Freddie: "A missionary is a traveling preacher who goes out to Kansas and places like that."

Preparing For Bible School

Much of our time during the first week was given over to study and preparation for teaching in the Bible schools. First, posters were made to put up in the churches and nearby store buildings for advertisement. Then lesson outline sheets, attendance charts, and other materials that we plan to use in the schools were prepared. One afternoon Mrs. Arnold Regier met with us and gave us suggestion for crafts.

Class periods in the morning included discussions of various things that will be of help in our teaching experience. Bertha Fast first gave us the background of the Voluntary Service Program. Erna Fast presented the problems of how to tell Bible stories effectively and how to conduct an effective worship service.

A knowledge of Chicago was deemed valuable both for our stay here and for a better understanding of the children with whom we would work. Rev. Neufeld presented the historical background of Chicago, the development of churches in Chicago, and the Mennonite churches as well as other interesting facts.

In an effort to get acquainted with the problems of the city we spent an afternoon with a social welfare worker downtown and learned of their work. Mr. Aldene Ecker, student at Bethany Seminary and a social worker, spent the evening with us discussing problems of this kind.

From Rosthern, Saskatchewan

A Week In Rosthern

All of us, except the girls from California, arrived at the Rosthern train depot where we got our first impressions. We were all met by Henry Friesen, the Youth Farm Director, and Elva Ratzlaff, our unit leader, and of course all got a ride home in the Mission Car—a '26 Chevrolet. You have to have several rides in this car before you can appreciate it. Any one who stated his first opinion had to change it. By now it is the preferred way of going and everyone wants to ride in it. It is a privilege to ride in the same car that the calves and pigs ride in. Also it is a privilege to ride in a car when the rest ride in buggies and wagons.

We formed our second impressions after seeing our room which is the unfinished floor of the Invalid Home. The room has nothing but the unfinished first floor, the rafters, partition for the hall, and unfinished walls and ceiling. We changed our ideas about our rooms as we remodeled them into living quarters. We furnished them with three double-deck beds and four cots, apple boxes, and orange crates and planks, and even did our own wiring. Now we wouldn't change rooms for some in the best hotel. We have to walk through one patient's room to get to the bathroom.

You never know what you may have to do next. A surprise is sure to be waiting for you. You may have to feed a patient, bathe him or even do the shopping; and then again you may have to give a program and be sure to be ready for it in English or in "Platt-Deutch."

Elva Ratzlaff took her first ride on the Mission Car to Aberdeen to a Youth Meeting on Friday night.

Saturday, several of us attended the Alumni Banquet of the Rosthern Junior College. The food was delicious.

Sunday afternoon and evening we went to the graduation and spring concert of the Junior College. Before the concert we were introduced as-girls from THE STATES. After that "blow-off" we were invited to join them in playing "Fishing." Some of us did quite well.

Tuesday Elva Ratzlaff went to Saskatoon to attend a conference of the Canadian Immigration Board.

Thursday our entire unit went to the Indian School at Duck Lake. Most of us got some souvenirs of handwork the Indian girls had made. They were all more or less baby clothes, but we're still looking at a bright future. One car load went to the Indian Reserve and they actually entered a real Indian's home! It really proved to be very interesting. Naturally their bottle of beverage had to hang on the wall at a very easy reach.

Edith Claassen and Bernice Perheim went to Laird to the Missionary Conference of the General Conference Churches of Saskatchewan. They found it was very interesting despite the fact that it was conducted entirely in the German language.

We all walked our mile to the City Hall Auditorium on Friday night to listen to the Alberta Bible Institute Male quartet. Didn't it feel grand to go in our Sunday Best.

Elva Ratzlaff went to Scarp to give a report on Voluntary Service on Saturday night. The Mission Car was the only car present. All visitors came with wagons, buggies and on foot.

From Montana Indian Mission

Starting Bible School at Rosebud

by Sarah Penner

The Montana hills contain more than just the beautiful green trees and the red and white rocks. Among the trees and in the valleys we find a river, and along this river are log cabins and Indian tents. In these places live the Cheyenne families. In most of these homes we found a family living together with some close relative or kin.

One Saturday afternoon Rev. Wenger, Ella Heppner, and I went up the Rosebud River to a little country church about ten or twelve miles from Busby. This church has only two windows at the front and one door in between. One side wall and the back walls have been put on hinges. So whenever ventilation was needed, we just raised up the walls. This church is different from any other church I have seen in that it has only one bench all the way around.

After we had finished cleaning the church, we went to the different homes to invite the children to come to Bible school. Some of these homes could not be seen from the road, but Rev Wenger drove into a field and followed the tracks. As he curved this way and that way, we wondered where he was taking us. Soon he stopped by a creek and we walked across a foot bridge to a little farm.

Rev. Wenger approached the parents in the Cheyenne language and then talked to the children in the English language, invited them to come to Bible school. The Cheyenne children are very shy but responded very well when we spoke of the school.

We entered the home of an invalid mother. She sat on the edge of her bed. In the opposite corner of the room stood the father's bed. A mat on the floor served as a bed for the son. The furnishings of the Cheyenne homes are very simple. They consist of a stove, a cupboard, some beds, a workbench, several suitcases, and maybe a little table. Of personal property they have very little more than can be packed into suit cases. The reason for this is that they move down to the lowlands for the summer.

Deut. 11:12, "A land which the Lord thy God careth for, the eyes of the Lord thy God are always upon it from the beginning of the year even unto the end of the year."

We Went Camping

by Ella Voth

"We'll get all our food together first and then we'll pack it in boxes."—"Let's not forget the wash basin." —"Is there a broom there?"—"We have to get our Bible School supplies together yet and pack them."—"We'll need dishes for five people."—"We'll put the blankets and pillows on the car seats and sit on them." These and similar remarks you would have heard had you been in the Habegger kitchen in Busby a certain Saturday afternoon in June—June 14 to be exact.

Martha Mierau and I helped Mrs. Habegger pack in preparation for our stay at Birney, a small village eight miles from a store and seventy miles from a railroad. Dishes, tins, jars, and boxes of food, food for Bible school recess lunches, towels, tea towels and wash clothes, wash basins and some water buckets, bedding, a cot and many other things were packed in boxes and stowed away on the cars. We packed our suitcases with our personal belongings and needs for a week. We also packed pencils, scissors, crayons, paste, construction paper, white paper, pictures—large, medium, and small, workbooks, lesson books, flannelgraph material, games, volley ball and net, tin cups for recess lunches, and oh so many things for Bible school. All these things were packed on the two cars belonging to Cornelius Drieger and Habeggers.

We traveled from Busby to Lame Deer Sunday noon, had a fine fellowship dinner there, and then left for the Birney Mission. We arrived there late in the afternoon. Those who came were Rev. and Mrs. Habegger, Corny Drieger, Martha Mierau and myself. Martha and I were to be the Bible school teachers, and Corny came to do repair work.

Our meals we ate in the unfurnished upstairs room of the mission house, unfurnished except for a table, some wooden benches, and a small coal or wood range. There is no electricity and no running water so we washed in a basin on a small upturned barrel. We hung our clothes wherever we could find places. We lived out of suitcases so to speak. From the mission house we walked across the road each morning to the little mission Church where the Bible school was held.

From Gulfport, Mississippi

An Incident in Family Welfare

Last week the Welfare worker asked us for help in a home in the pines east of town. There we found eight children under fifteen years of age. They were alone —their mother was in the hospital with a new baby and their father had deserted his family about four months ago.

When we arrived, we found three of the four rooms crowded with dirty beds and clothing. In one corner a chicken rested comfortably. The disorderly kitchen matched the other rooms. The privy in the front yard needed repair immediately. The oldest girl talked to us, and we could tell she had been crying. We promised to help get the place ready for their mother.

When we next came, a certain lady — Dr. Froehlich — was ahead of us. She had installed an electric meter, shoved everything outdoors and was cleaning the house. We had our gang out helping in the morning, afternoon, and evening to scrub, D.D.T., paint, and repair. The mattresses were infested with bedbugs, so we decided to burn them. We borrowed thirty dollars, a third of the cost for new ones, from one of our funds in the hope that there might be some of our friends or Sunday School classes interested in helping. Dr. Froehlich shouldered much of the expense and even put linoleum in two of the rooms. The Elks Club donated fifty dollars for food. There were many little essential things to do such as repairing and covering the bare ironing board and making the oil stove work. Betty spent some time showing the children how to cook.

Later when we went there to sing and tell the children Bible stories, we felt happy that they were happier.

Summer Bible School Begins

Monday morning, June 16, the summer unit people who were starting in Bible School work were up bright and early getting ready for their classes. Their excuse was to surprise the students into thinking that they were going to have a good teacher.

This Bible school was held in the Lyman school building. It was conducted jointly with the Gulfhaven church. Soliciting and organizing was taken care of by the Gulfhaven people, so this made a fine starting place for the first school out of the seven to be held this summer.

For the two-week period four of the workers ran routes carrying children to Bible School while the remaining three were left to travel in the station wagon. The station wagon proved to be a little impractical for the girls in that it would give no trouble when leaving camp where there was a mechanic around but would refuse to start at noon when the sun was high, dinner waiting, and no help.

The total enrollment was 146 children. Among these was a high school class of eighteen. The interest of the community was very good. This was shown by a perfect attendance of seventy-two children. There was a final program on Friday night, in which the children gave some of their accomplishments and also saw a film, "God in Creation."

This is a very needy work and the teachers feel that they have accomplished much. They are now looking forward to the next school which will be with colored children.

Central Conference Holds Annual Youth Rally

by R. L. Hartzler

The annual Central Conference Youth Rally for 1947 was held on Sunday, June 15, at the Calvary Mennonite Church in Washington, Illinois.

The program for the 1947 Youth Rally provided for three regular sessions with a fellowship hour in connection with the evening meal. In the morning session the young people met in one group for the study of the Sunday School lesson under the direction of Vernon Strubhar of Calvary Church. Rev. Ben Esch, pastor of the church, had charge of the morning worship service, assisted by the Calvary young people's choir under the direction of A. H. Schertz. The message of the morning was brought by Rev. Marvin Dirks, basing his appeal to youth on Romans 12:1-2.

The program for the afternoon consisted of several numbers of special music by individual representatives of C. E. Societies and by a combined choir of members of various societies participating in the rally, and two addresses. Rev. Leonard Metzker, pastor of the Normal Church on "The Challenge of Youth," and Rev Lotus Troyer of the Carlock Church followed with "Challenging Youth."

The fellowship supper hour was in charge of Melvin Norquist, assistant superintendent of the Peoria Mission, the program consisting of group singing, a piano duet by the Bethel (Pekin) Society, selections by a quartet from the Missionary Church in Peoria, and vocal solos by Rev. Dirks and representatives from the Congerville and North Danvers Churches. In the evening session Rev. Dirks delivered the closing address in which he reviewed the story of Ruth, making interesting and challenging observations and applications to the problems of young people today.

M.C.C. News

Migration to Canada

Developments in Europe regarding the migration of Mennonite refugees to Canada are moving ahead slowly. This is due to various factors, including the detailed procedures necessary in processing the refugees for migration, arranging for transportation, as well as the present transition from UNRRA (United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration) and IGC (Intergovernmental Committee on Refugees), to the new International Refugee Organization. This IRO assumed responsibility under a preparatory commission as of July 1, but it has not yet been fully authorized by all of the various nations, to act officially.

J. W. Warkentin Leaves for Paraguay

J. W. Warkentin, of Hillsboro, Kansas, has been appointed to leave on July 17 for Asuncion, Paraguay, in order to assist in the rehabilitation and resettlement of Mennonite immigrants in that country. This work was begun and is presently being carried on by C. A. DeFehr. Brother Warkentin will assume leadership in this work when Brother DeFehr leaves upon completion of his term of service there.

M.C.C Needs Truckers and Warehouse Man

The Mennonite Central Committee is in need of several workers to aid in the processing and transporting of food and clothing this fall and winter. We need two men who can operate a 1½ ton truck and can assume responsibilities in connection with the clothing warehouse at Ephrata and the Goodwill Christmas Bundle Center at Akron. This work will consist largely of assisting in the packing of clothing, books, shoes, and soap, as well as handling the freight from the Akron freight station and making occasional deliveries to New York.

We will need three more men who have had trucking experience to operate the two semi-truck outfits which we expect to use in gathering relief goods to the warehouses and shipping centers during this fall and winter. These trucks will operate throughout the East and Middle West.

In addition, we have need of a man to take charge of one of our food warehouses. This job will consist of packing foods for overseas shipment, keeping records of the packed goods, and general warehouse duties.

We urge any of our Mennonite young men who feel that they can give a period of service for the church, to write to the Office Manager, MCC, Akron, Pennsylvania. giving such information as age, education, experience, and at least two references. We will be glad to give more information about the particular work you are interested in and explain MCC policy concerning allowance and maintenance.

A REQUEST

We, a group of Mennonite people in the Omaha, Nebraska, area, deeply feel the need of having a church of our own in which to worship. For this reason we would like to contact all people in this area who might be interested in such a project. Therefore, if any readers, especially pastors, know of persons in this locality who might be interested in forming a Mennonite church, would you please send names and addresses to the United Mennonite Church, C/o Grace Bible Institute. 1515 South 10th Street, Omaha, Nebraska.

Jottings

—Alberta Community Church, Portland, Oregon: Mr. and Mrs. Burt Russell Jr. from here are touring Europe with the group sponsored by the Council of Mennonite and Affiliated Colleges. The past year they attended the Mennonite Biblical Seminary. A total of 118 were enrolled in the union Bible school in which we cooperated with another church.

—Bethel Church, Hydro, Oklahoma: On July 6 a large number commemorated the Lord's Supper. Mr. and Mrs. Herman Penner recently placed their membership in our church. The congregation gave them a hearty welcome.

—Bethel Church, Lustre, Montana: Plans are being made to build a dormitory at the Lustre Bible School and to have an Academy there, beginning this fall. Anna Baerg, missionary to the Hopi Indians in Arizona, is home for a rest. She returned home with her parents, who spent several weeks visiting her in Arizona. Rev. Solomon Mouttet presented the work of the "Go Ye" Mission at a service on June 30. On July 1 the Worldwide Monthly Tract Club with Rev. Cooper of Spokane, Washington, gave a program in Word and song. They are seeking to evangelize rural areas by sending tracts to all boxholders in the community. On July 6 Rev. Strohm, President-Dean of the St. Paul Bible Institute and his group presented a program. He also showed pictures of mission work among the American Indians, in the Philippines and Borneo.

—Fairfield Mennonite Church, Fairfield, Pa. Miss Annetta Degraaff of Holland gave us a program on Sunday evening, July 6. It consisted of music and a recital of Miss Degraaff's experiences during the war.

—First Church, Aberdeen, Idaho: The fortieth anniversary of the church was celebrated on June 29 with Rev. M. J. Galle of Odessa, Washington, as guest speaker. Rev. H. N. Harder, M. D. Linscheid, Marie Funk, and Arnold Bartel attended the Pacific District Conference at Albany, Oregon. Leo Laurense student from Amsterdam, Holland, brought the morning message on June 22. One hundred sixteen were enrolled in the Bible school at Aberdeen and twenty-eight at Grandview.

—First Church, Colfax, Washington: The Forty-eighth session of the Pacific District Conference was certainly a success. Rev. J. R. Barkman, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Boehr, Roberta Barkman, Lillian and Mavis Fife, representing the Grace Children's Home of Nebraska entertained us Sunday and Monday with the Word of God, music, singing, and pictures of the Home.

—First Church, Monroe, Washington: On July 2 Leo Laurense from Holland talked on faith and political conditions in Holland. On July 4 the Grace Children's Home Quartet from Nebraska gave a program consisting of song and music. The offering for the evening was $83.57. Twelve members attended the Pacific District Conference.

—Grace Church, Dallas, Oregon: Leo Laurense from Amsterdam, Holland, spoke to us during the morning and evening services. He was very interesting. Monday night Dr. and Mrs. H. E. Dester from India showed us slides of their work in India. The Oregon young people's retreat will be held July 21-28 at Trout Creek camp.

—Immanuel Mennonite Church, Los Angeles, California: Rev. H. G. Nyce and Dr. and Mrs. Dester were principal speakers at our recent Missionary Conference. Three of our young men, Wesley Van Nattan, Ralph Wetmore, and Harold Dirks, have been ordained into the ministry. Dr. and Mrs. Suckau and the male quartet of Grace Bible Institute were with us Sunday, June 29. Our new church worker, Miss Wilma Augsburger has begun her work in our midst.—Corr.

—West Zion Church, Moundridge, Kansas: Mr. Puran Banwar from India, now a student at Bethel College, brought the Sunday morning message. For many years our Mission Workers helped the Banwar family by special contributions. Dr. Caroline Banwar Theodore, whom our Mission Workers have helped through medical school and supported in her work for some time, is a sister of Puran. Brother Banwar has served for a number of years as President of the Hindustani church.—Mrs. Ernest Miller, Corr.

—Zion Church, Elbing, Kansas: "Winning the World for Christ" was deeply impressed on our minds July 6 when the Walton Mennonite Christian Endeavor from Walton, Kansas, gave our Christian Endeavor a program. It was stressed that we go out as fishers of man, the world as our field, and Christ, Peter, and Paul as our examples.—Mrs. Louis A. Janzen, Corr.

—H. J. Fast, father of Dr. H. A. Fast and Missionary Aganetha Fast, and the late Marie Fast, "slumbered peacefully into the Great Beyond" on July 15 according to word by his daughter, Aganetha Fast.

—Woodland Mennonite Church, Warroad, Minnesota: Many attended the mission program on July 4. Rev. Hauseman from the Baptist church at Roseau was our guest speaker. He also gave us an inspiring message in the evening. The free will offering went for missions. About fifty children attended the two-weeks vacation Bible school.

—Champa, C. P., India: Our General Conference missionaries who recently came to India are all busily engaged in acquiring the Hindi language in the Language School at Landour. Brother and Sister C. A. Claassen expect to finish their second year examination. This will usher them into the full-work ranks. We very much anticipate this because there is a shortage of workers. It is certainly a boon for our missionary staff to have a house in Landour so close to the Language School. The staff cannot thank the Mission Board and friends sufficiently for making this property possible some years ago when the same could be gotten for a much reduced price. The house, "Ellangowan" lies about 7,500 feet above sea level. It therefore offers an excellent escape from the terrible heat of the plains for those who can get away from the stations during that time. The missionary staff will very much miss Brother and Sister O. A. Waltner and Sister F. J. Isaac when they leave early in August for America on their much deserved furlough. We hope their flying trip will be crowned with success. May the Lord bring them home safely and after the furlough is over bring them back to "needy" India. It is hoped that the radical change of government procedure, June 1948, will not close the doors for the gospel! The young people who were home for their school vacation during May and June have returned to their schools and posts. A goodly percentage of them showed an amazing zeal for life's duties. This developing generation shall assume great responsibilities in the future to lead the Christian groups, the churches, and in general the Christian community to higher realms. The prayers of the conference should focus to this end.—P. W. Penner

HERMAN JANZ SEEKS RELATIVES

I am looking for my aunts, Mrs. Funk and Mrs. Ewert, sisters of my father, Johann Janz of Neuhoefer, Kaempe, Poland, son of Cornelius Janz of Klein-Nessau, Thorn. My address is: Hermann Janz, Mennonite Central Committee, Casilla de Correo, No. 166, Asuncion, Paraguay.

—Rallies during the Mennonite Conferences to be held at Winona Lake, Indiana, will be on July 29, at 3 P. M., in the auditorium, and on August 18, at 3 P. M., in the auditorium, according to J. A. Huffman, Chairman of the Winona Lake Mennonite Rally.

—Main speakers at the twenty-first Joint Conference of Mennonites, Schwenkfelders, Brethren and Friends, held at Bedminster, Pa., on July 5, were Rev. Marvin Dirks and Rev. and Mrs. Samuel T. Moyer.

—Note, delegates and visitors to the General Conference: All those planning to attend the General Conference should inform Mr. Clifton Gilliom, 605 Clark Street, Berne, Indiana, by what method of transportation they expect to arrive and how many will be in the party, indicating the number of men, women and children, and giving the ages of the children.

—Exhibits at Conference: All those who are planning to have exhibits at the General Conference should contact Mr. Fred von Guten, Berne, Indiana, indicating how much table or wall space they will need.

—Salem Church, Freeman, South Dakota: Rev. Don E. Smucker will be speaker at a week of special services, August 31-September 7.

Gingerich will serve as Director of Research for the "Old" Mennonite Church. Dr. Gingerich, who served on the Bethel College faculty as professor of history, will spend the next three or four months at Akron, Pa., working on a history of Civilian Public Service.

—Rev. Sam Goering returned home last week from the Halstead hospital where he was taken after breaking his leg in field work.

—Miss Aganetha Fast writes of a change of address from 3435 West van Buren, Chicago to Mountain Lake, Minnesota. She further says, "God willing I will leave here for the Missionary Conference at Winona Lake, Indiana, in company of Mrs. S. F. Pannabecker. This conference will last from June 25 to July 1. After that I plan to go to Mountain Lake for the summer to get ready for the work that awaits me in fall, and I trust that will be China. The outlook at present is good. I am most grateful that I have been privileged to complete my Practical Nurses course. I received my last final examination today and the diploma is in the making. This course I know will serve me in good stead in whatever work I will be called to do as far as missions is concerned. I am not sorry I took it though it was hard work."

—Missionary Alfred Wiebe writes from Canton, Oklahoma: "Some people do not seem to be aware of the change that was made in our Oklahoma mission stations. Rev. J. B. Ediger, Clinton, has retired and Rev. Arthur Friesen is now at Clinton, and my wife and I are taking the Friesen's place at Canton."

—Puran Banwar, Bethel College student, who arrived from India in June, served as forum leader at a monthly meeting of the Newton, Kansas, Interracial Fellowship, held in the First Christian Church, July 11.

—Bethel Church, Lustre, Montana: The theme for the missionary conference, held here June 25-29, was, "Christ for the World." Our speakers were Dr. and Mrs. H. E. Dester, medical missionaries to India, who presented to us that field and the need of missions in general. They also showed pictures of the General Conference work in India. Rev. H. G. Nyce, Secretary of the General Conference Foreign Mission Board, was also one of the speakers. Some of his topics were: "Purchased Possessions," "Lamps that Fail," and "Hidden Possibilities." Sunday morning the Children's Day program was held with Mrs. Dester as speaker. The noon meals were served at the church. The attendance was not very large the first few days, but Sunday about 350 were present, many of them guests from the neighboring churches. This was the first time that such a Conference was held here. The weather also was very favorable except for a few showers, which, however, did not affect the attendance much. The total offering amounted to $659.47 of which $528.90 went to foreign missions. The offering at the Children's Day program was divided into three parts: foreign and home Missions and the M.C.C.—Corr.

—Mrs. J. R. Duerksen wrote from Drake, Saskatchewan on July 10: "We are having real summer weather here now—had to think of India this afternoon when I spoke to the women. I am speaking to the whole church group tonight. We have had a very interesting trip to some of the northernmost points. Mission interest is good, and we have been surprised at the size of the collections in some places. In the little log church at Meadow Lake the collection was in the neighborhood of fifty dollars . . . . John R. is taking four churches to the west while I am here in order to get to Elim Beach by Saturday night. We hope to be back in Newton before the end of the month.

—Universal Military Training may be rushed through the House during the closing weeks of the session, according to John Swomley of the National Council Against Conscription. Swomley writes, "Will you write him (your congressman) immediately expressing your concern that U.M.T. not be rushed through Congress without giving the opposition a chance to be heard. Point out that only one national church, one labor, one farm group, and one educational group have been heard by the Armed Services Committee. Will you also add that the present Congress was re-elected largely on a campaign promise of real reduction in taxes and an end to regimentation of the American people. Point out that the passage of U.M.T. would mean an increase in taxation and more regimentation than we have ever had in America before."

—A. Theodore and Helen Mueller of the Grace Church, Enid, Oklahoma, believe in doing something specific about the great issues which concern the general welfare of the American people. Recently they have sent literature opposing Universal Military Training to friends and others on their mailing list, along with a personal letter.

—The Placement Committee of the General Conference is surveying all ministers to discover whether they may be ready for a change of pastorate or not, etc.

—The Curriculum Committee, which is a sub-committee of the Board of Education, met at Aberdeen, Idaho, June 10-13 with the following members present: Paul Shelly, Ronald von Riesen, Erland Waltner, Henry Harder, and Mrs. E. J. Miller. The committee concerns itself with curriculum material for Sunday schools, daily vacation Bible schools, etc.

—The First Mennonite Church, Geary, Oklahoma, will commemorate its fiftieth anniversary on August 3, beginning at 2 P.M. Rev. Henry Hege will be the anniversary speaker. All former members and friends of the church are invited to attend.

ABERDEEN CHURCH OBSERVES FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY

On June 29 three interesting programs were given in the First Mennonite Church of Aberdeen, Idaho, to commemorate the founding of the church in 1907. The church was organized with a membership of thirty-six, ten of which are still living, namely: Frank D. Enns, Henry Hege, Barbara Hege, John J. Schroeder, Anna Schroeder, Henry Tiahrt, Agatha Toevs, Anna S. Toevs, Jacob J. Wedel, and Frank Wenger. All of these were present at the celebration except Agatha Toevs, Frank D. Enns, and Anna Schroeder.

Regular church worship services were held during the morning session. The sermon was given by the Rev. M. J. Galle of Odessa, Washington, he being one of the former pastors and well acquainted with most of the present membership. Mrs. Galle accompanied him, and her many friends were happy to visit with her.

During the afternoon points of inspiration, entertainment, and extremely interesting experiences were related by various members. Mr. H. C. Wiebe presided at the meeting and his comments lent color to the program. Mr. H. H. Lehrman gave his recollections of the Dubois settlement. The early settler at this place had to endure all the hardships of pioneer life. In about the years from 1915 to 1918 the Pacific District Conference took note of this settlement and sent ministers at different times to assist in the services. From 1917 to 1919 the dry years came and the settlement broke up and all of the members left the Dubois area. Some came to Aberdeen, others moved to Kansas, California, and other states.

Recollections of the early days of the Aberdeen settlement were given by F. L. Wenger and Mr. A. D. Wenger. In 1905 the first settlers came to this area where they saw nothing but sagebrush and rabbits. In July of 1907 the First Mennonite Church of Aberdeen was organized and services were first conducted in a school house south of town. To these early pioneers the coming of Sunday was like an oasis in the desert. The Rev. Jacob Hege was chosen as the first pastor. Soon various organizations of the church, such as the Sunday School, Christian Endeavor, and Women's Missionary Society had their beginning. At present this church has a membership of 360, three Sunday Schools, four Christian Endeavor societies, a large choir, men's brotherhood, four missionary societies, and three mid-week Bible classes.

The evening program was an inspirational service. The choir rendered several outstanding numbers. The message of the evening was given by the pastor, Rev. H. N. Harder.

We Must Retreat To Go Forward

Like a builder must dig down before a skyscraper can go up, like a car must be reversed before it can pull out of the mud hole, like an artist must stand back from a picture before he can add another telling touch, like a plane must be extensively serviced before it can fly a thousand miles and more, like an army must retreat to rest and reorganize its forces, so must we retreat from the problems of life in order to go forward to victory over them. To retreat is to withdraw from that which is difficult, dangerous, or disagreeable. Frequently the battle of life goes so hard that we become weakened and disorganized. By retreating we are strengthened and reorganized. Retreating keeps life from being all activity without receptivity and "turmoil without tranquillity." Today there is in America an emphasis upon theoretical science, for applied science cannot bring forth its wonders without the receptivity of the kind of science which mainly tries to "find out." Brain cells are locked into rigid patterns by severe tension. They need relaxation before God can organize a man's thought into new and creative forms. Retreats and vacation trips may be used to "get away from it all" sufficiently to get time for a renewal of strength and the re-integration of one's thoughts and feelings for a more effective march forward. "And he said to them, 'Come away by yourselves to a lonely place, and rest a while.'" (Mark 6:31, Revised Standard Version.)

"Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Christ Jesus"

NON-RESISTANCE NULL AND VOID IF—

It is neither important nor convincing to defend our doctrine of non-resistance skillfully on Biblical and philosophical grounds. Only our upright and faithful living up to our convictions, in peace and in war, will prove to all people the rightness of our principles, and the doctrine of non-resistance is null and void if it does not issue from our genuine love for our fellow men, including our enemies, and evildoers of all kinds and descriptions.

Love does not love periodically.

We cannot switch our love on in wartime, and switch it off again in peacetime. Love is with us always, or it is not there at all. If our love is not upright and strong enough to be active in good times and to get ready for special action in times of emergency we will again fail miserably in our testimony of peace as we have failed before.

When the next war flares up it will be much more essential for our young people that we make it possible now for them to live up to their convictions at that time, than it is necessary to instruct them better on the doctrine now. We are doing that all along.

We need less instruction and more action.—Jacob H. Janzen, Author, and Pastor of the Waterloo-Kitchener United Mennonite Church, Waterloo, Ontario.

THE DISCIPLINE OF LIFE

Life is a disciplining experience. This is often brought to our attention by the experiences through which individuals go. There are also times when groups of people as a whole suffer experiences of this type. The unusual weather conditions that have prevailed over many parts of the country this spring are a part of that disciplining experience of life.

In the balance of nature, as provided by the Creator, there come times when weather conditions seem to be, and are, unfavorable. This may be so as to lessen crop yields, or there may be actual death and destruction by tornadoes, floods, etc. As a part of life in "Our Father's World" we can best interpret all these things as a part of that disciplining process that goes on in life. As Christians we know that "all things work together for good to them that love God." We need to have this faith so that we can come through life's unfavorable experiences with a greater trust in God, and a more disciplined spirit in our own lives.

The only attitude that we can profitably take to the inevitable and uncontrollable things of life is that of "perfect submission." To allow ourselves to become angered and impatient because of that which we cannot change is simply to drain our own nervous and physical energy, and do no good. Perfect submission to that which cannot be changed is the way to calmness, peace and strength. "In quietness and confidence shall be your strength." Isaiah 30:15.—A. S. Rosenberger, Chairman, Mennonite Biblical Seminary and Bible School Board, Secretary of the Board of Education, and Pastor of the Salem Mennonite Church, Dalton, Ohio.

China Missionaries Present Report to the Foreign Mission Board Concerning the Opening of a New Field

We, the four missionaries here on the China mission field, in consultation with Rev. A. E. Kreider, the President of the Foreign Mission Board, have this report to make:

I. Pertaining to the Hopei mission field the work in Tung-ming and Ch'ang-yuan is reorganized. In Tung-ming everything goes just fine. In Ch'ang-yuan military changes are threatening to come. This unstable situation is hindering church progress, because people live under fear and many flee the district. We will have to wait patiently and prayerfully for developments. Here in the city of Kaifeng Rev. Chang Ching has succeeded in renting quarters for the pastor and a chapel for services for Kaichow refugees. He reports Sunday school and regular worship services in the morning of the Lord's day with a Christian Endeavor meeting towards evening, also prayer meeting on Wednesday. Besides these he leads in daily sunset devotions. The evangelistic band for Tung-ming and Ch'ang-yuan, country places south of the Yellow River, start work with the beginning of the third quarter. From July 2-10 we are to have a Bible conference with the Free Methodists, and following that all our Mennonite mission and church workers are to remain for a two-day Mennonite retreat or summer institute.

We are also in the process of consulting with the Bartel Mission as to the K'ao-ch'eng city and county. It lies right west of our Tung-ming-Ch'ang-yuan field. The city is only three miles from the border of our area. They seem to be unable to evangelize that place, and since we have to pass through there on our way between Tung-ming and Kaifeng, and since we have lost so much territory north of the Yellow River, we would like to take over this county and establish work there. The question is, whether we should put a missionary family there or just Chinese workers.

Mr. James Liu prefers to have a missionary stationed there. The matter is not finally settled and the Chinese General Committee has as yet not considered the matter. In a few weeks you may have definite word on this.

II. The Kansu, China, mission field. In the beginning of June Rev. H. J. Brown and Rev. P. J. Boehr made an investigation trip through Shensi into Kansu. These men came back with a report of a wonderful opportunity of mission work, greater opportunities than we ever had in our Hopei field. As a result another party was organized to go and investigate further. This time Rev. A. E. Kreider, Rev. P. J. Boehr and Miss Wilhelmina Kuyf went. Again the party returned in thirteen days. All former good reports were corroborated, and new information added. We have since had two meetings with Rev. A. E. Kreider. He is to send a cablegram, and we are to write this letter. Note the following points:

1. The city of Paoki is in Shensi Province not so far from the eastern border of Kansu. Up to this city we have a reliable railroad straight west from Kaifeng, so it can easily be reached by train. It is a large city of from 100,000 to 150,000 inhabitants. Two missions have outpost stations there, but only one missionary lives there. This place, besides being a good railway station or a receiving station for missionaries also gives us a great opportunity for evangelistic work into the country west and south. The city itself badly needs a hospital; and now a God-sent offer comes to take over a twenty-bed private hospital.

2. The city of T'ien-shui lies west of Paoki, on the same Wei River, about 150 miles away. This city has one mission (CIM) and two or three independent groups that have some work. The city alone is of a good size, with perhaps 200,000 inhabitants, and presents great opportunities for religious work. A Bible school and a Christian high school for preparing Christian workers are badly needed. The other church agencies are urging us to come in and do this kind of institutional work. They also urge a mission hospital, although there are two small hospitals run privately, besides that of the Catholic Church.

The city is large, clean, progressive, and the people are not so poor, middle class largely. They seem very open for the gospel. This is also true in Paoki.

3. These two cities are directly connected by a railroad, which is now in repair. Other railroads are planned from T'ien-shui to Lanchow, the capital of Kansu, and from T'ien-shui to Ch'engtu in Szechuan Province. These two cities (Paoki and T'ien-shui) are also connected in a round about way by a good highway through the Tsin Ling Mountains.

4. Between Paoki and T'ien-shui on the railroad lies P'u-t'ao-yuan and other places, which wait to be occupied. Another railroad turns off here for Lanchow. It would be strategic to open a station in this place. On the highway closer to Paoki and T'ien-shui there are many villages right on and near the highway, which wait for the gospel. Nearer Paoki, on the bend of the highway, the territories are occupied by the Bartel mission.

5. Southwest of T'ien-shui adjacently situated there are two counties beyond the range on a great plateau with the cities of Li-hsien and Si-ho. The former has no mission work, while the CIM works in the latter, but is willing to turn over to us, because of distance and lack of workers. The cities are rather small, but they are the centers of those regions and are suited for mission stations. T'ien-shui is connected with them by a mail route, but a regular highway has been planned. The railroad from T'ien-shui to Ch'engtu will not be far from Si-ho.

6. Toward the west across Kansu (southern end) and into Sikang province there is much room for future expansion. Toward the northwest up to Lanchow are also districts for religious work. Beyond Lanchow lie vast regions untouched by the gospel. Of course, there the people are largely Mohammedans, and the work is more difficult.

7. The altitude of this proposed mission field is high, from 4,000 to 6,000 feet, not measuring the Tsin Ling Mountains. The weather is agreeable, the climate healthier than in Hopei. Summer vacations are not so necessary except for spiritual reasons. In the valley the water is good. In some places in the highlands a little iodine supplies the mineral lack in the water.

8. The railroad from Shanghai through Kaifeng takes the missionaries straight to Paoki. Another route is by steamer up the Yangtze River up to Hankow, then by rail to Chengchow, and thence to Paoki. The trains are very poor, and the heating system is entirely gone. We advise that no missionaries, and especially those with children, travel this stretch during the cold season, say December 1 to March 1. If larger groups come, they possibly can send their goods (heavy trunks and boxes) by carload.

9. Most anything can be bought in Shanghai, and Paoki and T'ien-shui also have good supplies of so-called foreign goods. Of course, not everything is on sale and prices are quite high, for dealers do not figure on government exchange but on the black market. It takes much in money and trouble to bring things out, but none of the missionaries regret bringing things along.

10. There are educational opportunities for foreign children in Shanghai, Kikungshan, and other cities. The smaller children ought rather to stay with their parents on the mission field. Prices are very high everywhere. Parents may not be able to meet the cost of sending children to school, unless they get more financial help from the Mission Board:

Recommendations to the Foreign Mission Board:

1. We propose that Rev. and Mrs. P. J. Boehr with their daughter Mary Ellen, move to Paoki in early fall in order to prepare a receiving station for missionaries.

2. We propose that the Board send all former China missionaries back to China at an early date, this coming fall, if at all possible, for evangelistic, educational and medical work.

3. We also propose that new mission-recruits be sent out for language study. Since living costs in Peiping are almost unbearable, and Nanking and Hankow are also almost out of the question, and further since the matter of the dialect does somewhat enter in at the two latter cities, we now plan on having the language study carried on right in the new field, either in a group or individually with teachers of our own church. It might be good to remark here that there is not much difference in language from that of Hopei Province.

4. We propose that the Mission buy and operate one auto station wagon and one medium sized truck. Possibly some people at home want to give us these very much needed vehicles of transportation. Let them keep in mind that the duty and transportation charges may triple the price of the vehicle.

5. We do request the Mission Board for an American teacher for the smaller children, if there be such, as soon as the missionaries with families come out.

6. We ask $5000 to be used for engaging helpers this last half of 1947; and $10,000 for renting leasing, or buying property in the Kansu mission field.

7. We propose (temporarily) as the 1948 budget for the new field:

helpers — $10,000
further — $20,000 — renting, leasing or buying property.

We thank the Foreign Mission Board heartily for the trust it has put in us by asking and sending us to rehabilitate as far as possible the Hopei mission field, and to find a new mission field. We thank the Foreign Mission Board for allowing Rev. A. E. Kreider, the President of the Board, to assist us in this responsible duty by his own investigation and by his so valuable advice. Above all, we thank God, through Jesus Christ our Lord, for guiding and directing us in this great and responsible task. We have earnestly sought to ascertain His will, and we are happy to say "It pleases the Holy Ghost and us" to make this report and propose the herein laid down plans for the future work of the China mission of our church.

We wish God's richest blessings upon our Foreign Mission Board and its so responsible work, not only in China, but in all countries of its activities. We herewith all join in wishing God's great blessings upon our General Conference and the churches in general and particularly for the 1947 triennial meeting to be held at Berne, Indiana, in the month of August. We remain as ever your ambassadors in Christ. — H. J. Brown, P. J. Boehr, Mrs. H. J. Brown, Frieda S. Boehr.

CRALOG Field Director Visits Akron

Dr. Owen Norem, recently appointed as field director of CRALOG in Germany, visited the MCC headquarters at Akron on July 15. He also visited the clothing warehouse at Ephrata and the food warehouse at Salunga and Silver Springs. This view of the scope and organization of the Mennonite relief program will doubtless help Dr. Norem to coordinate M.C.C. concerns and objectives with the total CRALOG program of relief in Germany. Dr. Norem has had wide experience in relief work in Germany, having served as director of CRALOG in the French Zone since last August.

To Open Bible College in Winnipeg, Manitoba

by I. I. Friesen

For some time the Canadian Conference of Mennonites has felt the urgent need of providing opportunity for the more advanced training of its future church leaders. The worthy contribution made by existing Bible schools in the various provinces, and the need for their continuance was acknowledged, but it was felt that because of the general rise of educational standards in other fields, and because of the greater demands made on our church workers that a Conference school for Canada was needed at which school more advanced training would be available. It was also felt that a Canadian school could keep in closer touch with the actual needs of our Canadian churches than a school on the other side of the border would be able to do, especially since the school would have to be bilingual.

Bethel Church, Winnipeg, Home of New Bible College

To Be Located in Winnipeg

Therefore in order to meet this situation the Canadian Conference has passed resolutions at its last two annual meetings, and has also appointed a committee to see that the proposed Bible College be brought into existence. The committee first of all had to consider the best location for such a school. After considerable discussion it was felt that Winnipeg, Manitoba, would be the proper place, because of its central location and also because a larger city offers more opportunities to the student, both educationally and financially. The latter consideration becomes important when students have to earn part of their school expenses.

The matter of securing a proper location in Winnipeg has not been so easy. Ever since last fall the committee has been trying to find suitable buildings for the proposed school in Winnipeg. Until recently they had prospects of securing the Normal School which had been given up by the provincial government and which was not being used. However, because the provincial authorities finally decided to turn this building into a health center for the province, we have not succeeded in securing this very suitable location.

To Open in Bethel Mission Church

Since it is the conviction of our Conference that the school should be started this fall, it has been thought advisable to open the same temporarily in the Bethel Mennonite Mission Church in Winnipeg. The church has already been used previously as a Bible school by another religious group and is therefore adaptable to such a purpose. It is expected that more permanent quarters will be found as soon as suitable buildings become available.

Since this is a project of greatest importance to the future spiritual welfare of our people, we solicit the prayerful support of all of God's children, so that His will may be done and His cause extended by this Bible College.

The Pension Plan for Ministers

by Robert S. Stauffer

The purpose of the plan is: 1. To seek only the best for our all time Christian servants, acting with the firm conviction that what we are doing will be productive of great good. 2. To lift those who have been constrained by the love of Christ to minister and heal and teach to a new plane for future service. 3. To promote with enthusiasm the Pension Plan, because we believe that nothing so important, so far reaching and so conducive of good to the members of the General Conference could be offered anywhere in the world.

The work of the committee has been completed for the present. This has been done inadequately but to the best of our ability. No help was given us by any person or organization outside the committee except Rev. Walter Dyck and Rev. Frank Hughes. These two men were a great help to get this plan worked out.

We believe that it is impossible for any General Conference member, who does not have all the facts and who has not read the plan which was sent out to the churches, to pass fair judgment on the same. The leaflets that have been sent out to all the churches should be read by all. The leaflet sent out by the secretary, Brother Clinton Kaufman, explains two plans. The articles that have thus far appeared in The Mennonite should help to make the plan better understood.

So before one of these humble servants reaches the autumn of life, let us see to it that their confidence and enthusiasm may not leave them but that rather they will find a plan that will give them a feeling of security such as this life can give and provide. We must never forget that the servant of God, a minister, a healer, or a teacher is a man that can't do anything else. Anyone of our Eastern District men would make a good farmer, a capable business man or executive. But a sincere minister can not do anything else but preach the gospel. God has called them to preach the Word. The love of Christ constrains them. In II Corinthians we read that the Lord Jesus won't let them do anything else. He is compelled, forced, constrained to preach. No, it is not money, or they would not be our spiritual counsellors and the ones who inspire us at all times under all circumstances. Let us remember these matters in our prayers as conference approaches and let us realize that we are still our brother's keeper and that the invisible Church is still on the march throughout the world.

We trust that every organization which feels that action should be taken on the pension plan at General Conference will so inform its delegates before they leave the home church. Your committee will be glad for any suggestions.

(Robert S. Stauffer of Milford Square, Pa., a member of the Minister's Aid Committee, has been active in the Eastern District Conference as a member of the Board of Managers of the Old People's Home at Frederick and as a member of the Peace Committee.)

Report on the Pacific District Conference

by M. D. Linscheid, Conference Secretary

The Pacific District Conference was held at Albany, Oregon, from June 19 to 22. The theme of the Conference was, "Faith of Our Fathers." The business sessions were held in the Grace Mennonite Church of Albany, and the evening and Sunday afternoon sessions were held in the high school auditorium. The conference was well attended by delegates of the twenty district churches, and many members of the surrounding churches attended the evening sessions.

The main speakers of the conference were: Dr. A. Warkentin of the Mennonite Biblical Seminary of Chicago; Rev. H. G. Nyce, secretary of the General Conference Foreign Mission Board; Dr. P. C. Hiebert, President of the Mennonite Central Committee; and Rev. H. D. Burkholder, Pastor of the Emmanuel Mennonite Church at Los Angeles. These speakers brought messages of great inspiration which helped in making this conference an outstanding experience in the work of the Pacific District Conference.

The Worker's Conference took place during the forenoon and afternoon sessions on Thursday. This conference proved to be a definite blessing for the pastors and various workers of the churches. The program that was listed follows:

"The Incarnation," Rev. P. K. Regier; "Salvation," Rev. H. N. Harder; "Justification by Faith," Rev. John Bartel; "Atonement," Rev. C. H. Dirks; "The Lord's Coming," Rev. George Kopper; "The Holy Spirit," Rev. W. A. Regier; "Inspiration of Scriptures," Rev. W. Harley King; "The New Birth," Rev. Homer Leisy.

The statistical chart of the conference for the past four years reveals some facts that denote somewhat the activities of the conference:

Church membership	2826	2887	3189	3278
Sunday School	2701	2016	2108	3032
Foreign Missions	13092	17052	18100	19513
Home Missions	7975	8694	10217	11519
Relief	10020	14814	32754	35302
Per Member Contrib.	37.35	42	47.61	63.54
Total Conf. Contrib.	105576	121226	153304	208273

The home mission work of the conference is centered in the Evangelization Committee. The outstanding accomplishment of this committee was the organization of the First Mennonite Church at Caldwell, Idaho. A few Mennonite families have lived here for several years. At present there are approximately twenty families of Mennonite origin or who are sympathetic to our faith. The work began a little over two years ago. Today we find an organized church, a substantial church building, and a consecrated pastor in Rev. M. H. Kliewer. The Evangelization Committee worked faithfully, and the churches gave their loyal support.

The officers of the Pacific District Conference for the coming year are: President, Rev. H. D. Burkholder of Los Angeles; Vice-president, Rev. Paul N. Roth of Canby, Oregon, Treasurer; Mr. J. C. Jantz of Odessa, Washington; and Secretary, M. D. Linscheid, of Aberdeen, Idaho.

The Secretary's report of the Pacific District Conerence should be ready for distribution about July 25. Any district conference officers, General Conference Officers, school officials, or other officials who may be omitted from our mailing list may write the secretary for a copy of this report.

Elim Gospel Beach Program

V. E. Nickel

Most of our people, no doubt, have heard about Elim Gospel Beach by this time. It is a summer resort on Lac Pelletier about twenty-four miles south-west from Swift Current, Saskatchewan, which was purchased by the Youth Society of Saskatchewan. This will be the third season that we are operating it as Elim Gospel Beach.

Rev. John P. Loewen who has been attending Bethel College for the past two years, is our business manager. We had planned our opening program for June 15, but a heavy rain interfered. Nevertheless the many visitors enjoyed the day there. We had the official opening on June 22, and have had blessed meetings there since that time. On July 1 we had three meetings to offer Christians a more wholesome and God-pleasing way of spending the Dominion Day celebration.

Our special events this summer are scheduled as follows: Young People's Retreat July 13-20 and Children's Camp July 20-27. For this time our chief guest speakers will be Miss Elizabeth Goertz, Rev. and Mrs. J. R. Duerksen, and Rev. J. J. Esau. Help us pray that souls will be saved and Christians led to live a deeper spiritual life.

July 28-31 we are having a Bible Conference for adults. Rev. J. J. Nickel, Langham, Saskatchewan, will serve us. This is a new venture, and if it proves to be a success we will have a longer time for it next year. We hope to have many people from our nearby churches as well as guests from farther away. Our wish is that we may have a very enjoyable period of physical rest, spiritual refreshing, and Christian fellowship. We hope

MENNONITES THE WORLD OVER

By Cornelius Krahn

"We and the World Council of Churches" is the heading under which the chairman of the Algemeene Doopsgezinde Societeit of Holland makes some explantory statements.

Some weeks ago we reported in this column about the attitude of the French Mennonites toward the World Council of Churches. In brief, it was feared that cooperation of Protestant churches would finally lead to the dominance of the Anglican Church and a union with Rome. The article referred to above is an attempt to answer objections of a different nature. The Dutch Mennonites would not hesitate to cooperate with the World Council of Churches because of supposed leanings toward "Anglicanism" or "Catholicism," nor because of suspected' liberalism," but because they find a statement, as follows, objectionable: "The World Council stands upon the faith in our Lord Jesus Christ as God and Saviour." What is wrong with this statement? Probably most of the Dutch Mennonites would express their Christian faith in similar words, but at the same time, they object to any written doctrinal statement that all are expected to subscribe to uniformly. To explain this inherent fear adequately would require more than a paragraph in a column like this. We would have to delve into past centuries where we would find that Mennonites of Holland practiced rigid adherence to a certain way of expressing Christianity. This resulted in a multiplicity of divisions and subdivisions among the brotherhood from which the unwritten "dogma" of tolerance emerged and became the characteristic of the Doopsgezinde in opposition to the Menniste of previous generations.

Thus the Mennonites of Holland answered the invitation of the World Council of Churches stating that the Alegemeene Doopsegezinde Societeit will "join the World Council of Churches with the understanding that it can never accept any doctrinal formulations as binding."

This insistence of our Dutch brethren on complete freedom for the individual to express his personal faith regardless of general formulations of doctrinal statements can be understood only in light of the past and must be kept in mind if we are to get a proper understanding and appreciation of our Dutch brethren.

Mission Work Resumed. After World War I some German Christians with a warm heart for the Russian prisoners-of-war in Germany and the Slavic people in general started the missionary enterprise "Licht im Osten" in Wernigrode. Thousands of evangelical Christians throughout the Slavic countries were spiritually and physically sustained by this organization. Many Mennonites, especially from Russia, devoted their lives to this cause. Best known among them is Rev. Jakob Kroeker, who visited this country. "Licht im Osten" has been transferred from Wernigrode to South Germany and reorganized under the name "Missionsbund zur Ausbreitung des Evangeliums," (14a) Stuttgart-Muehlhausen, Meierberg 11, USA Zone, Germany. This organization supports the ministry among displaced persons through the distribution of Bibles, Christian literature and food packages. Rev. J. Kroeker is still advisor but not the director of this mission because of his age. Those who supported this cause before the war and received its publications can resume communications by using the above address.

our people will get better acquainted and that a greater feeling of belonging together will be fostered. Please pray especially for this attempt.

We do believe that this project has great possibilities for blessing. This fall we make our last payment. After that we hope to make a number of needed improvements from year to year. Many people come and go here who are entirely uninterested in the gospel. One of the chief aims of the promoters is to reach just such people. For this purpose we need a powerful public address system, so that we can send the services, and the gospel by records between services, out over the whole resort and onto the water, so that any people who drive in may hear the gospel at any time and place. They will not come in, so we must reach out to them. Luke 14. A fund has been started for this special purpose. Contributions welcomed.

There is much work connected with this project. Any voluntary workers from anywhere can do a good service if they help us any time in June or July, but especially during July.

Please pray that the Lord may be able to bring much glory to Himself through this project and that many souls may accept Christ as their personal Saviour.

Bloomington Mennonite Hospital and Nursing School

by Lena Maxwell, R.N., B.S., Director of Nurses

Bloomington Mennonite Hospital with its school of nursing has found its place in service to humanity: ministering to the sick, teaching student nurses, and assisting in disease prevention always with the spirit of the motto—"Not for ourselves - But others."

Early in the 1890's there came to be an appreciation of the need for a modern Protestant hospital in the cities of Bloomington and Normal. A group of physicians cast about for some organization to conduct such an activitiy should a hospital be started. They selected a Mennonite Deaconess Organization, whose headquarters were in Chicago. In March 1895 Rev. Sprunger, Superintendent of the Society of Light and Hope, and one of his deaconesses came as advisors and a year later the new, twenty-bed hospital was opened to the public.

There were a few Mennonite leaders in the conference who were ready to continue the work, but since it seemed the time was not yet ripe for the support of the church, this hospital was given over to the Methodist Episcopal Deaconess Society. It is now known as Brokaw Hospital.

Bloomington Mennonite Hospital

During the years 1897 -1917 the conviction seemed to grow, and particularly was the need for a hospital felt when foreign mission work was established by the conference in 1909. Already in the 1908 conference Reverend Andrew Vercler discussed the subject of the need for trained nurses.

The real agitation for a hospital began in 1918 when the matter was discussed at various religious gatherings. The church leaders believed that we ought not only to teach and preach but also do something for those who are in need physically. On the other hand they were also interested in the training of nurses so that they might be able to supply the foreign field with trained nurses. The men who were particularly interested in this project were Rev. Emanuel Troyer and Rev. Peter Schantz. At the 1917 conference a committee was appointed to investigate the possibilities of starting a hospital and training school. This committee consisted of Rev. Emanuel Troyer, Rev. Peter Schantz and Sam Stuckey.

The first definite step in organization was taken January 26, 1919, when Rev. Emanuel Troyer, Rev. Benjamin Rupp, Rev. Joseph King, Rev. Allen Miller and Rev. John Kinsinger gathered at the office of an attorney to arrange necessary papers for the incorporation of the Mennonite Sanitarium Association. The following day this document was taken to the court house where legal procedures were completed.

The purpose of the association was to conduct a sanitarium, a hospital and training school, not for profit but to help all people in sickness and distress and to further the highest and most progressive ideals of the Mennonite Church.

The Harber property at 1308 N. Main Street, Bloomington, Illinois. had been purchased and remodeling began at once. The first patient was admitted on May 1, 1919. As this building proved to be too small, in a short time, the present property at 807 N. Main St.

was purchased from Dr. George B. Kelso. On May 1, 1920, the association took full charge of the institution and the training school. After nine years the building was again too small, and a north wing was erected. This new addition changed the appearance of the hospital and provided the new entrance, lobby, administration offices, laboratory, school of nursing classrooms, dining rooms and accommodations for forty-five more patients. In 1941 the east wing of the hospital was added increasing the capacity to 126 beds.

Again as this is being written, we are in the same dilemma. The Lord has richly blessed us. More patients seek to enter our doors for the efficient nursing care given by young women of high Christian character and principles than we can accommodate. Our clean halls bespeak friendliness, kindliness and a warm welcome to those who are physically ill.

Troyer Memorial Nurses' Home was dedicated on May 12, 1946. The Home is a beautiful four-story brick building which will accommodate eighty-four students. The building was named in honor of Rev. Emanuel Troyer, "servant of God, leader in the church, friend of man," whose tireless effort was so largely responsible for its erection. The Home is connected with the Hospital by a pleasant, tile-walled tunnel.

Dr. E. P. Sloan became the first chief of the medical staff, and Rev. and Mrs. Benjamin Rupp were selected as first superintendent and matron of the hospital. The present superintendent and matron, Mr. and Mrs. N. O. Hoover, from Elkhart, Indiana, took charge in March, 1927.

The School of Nursing was established when the Hospital was purchased. The first class of fifteen members graduated in 1922. We now admit classes in January and August.

Today our teaching load is directed by: 1.) Three nurse instructors; 2.) Doctors who teach specific subjects such as eye, ear nose, throat, skin, tuberculosis, obstetrics, etc., 3.) The City Health Department which teaches Public Health; and 4.) Illinois State Normal University which offers the basic science courses.

The well-equipped library and classrooms are in Troyer Memorial Nurses' Home.

In June 1947 there were: Nurses in training, 59; Faculty, supervisors, Head Nurses, 20; General Duty graduates, 6; Dietitian 1; Laboratory and X-Ray Technicians 4. During 1946 the daily patient average was 114.6, and 1,006 babies were born in the Hospital.

Our School of Nursing has an arrangement whereby a student is granted a Bachelors degree from Bluffton College upon completion of the required three years at Mennonite Hospital School of Nursing and the prescribed courses of approximately two and one-half years at the college.

The spirit and ideals that moved the founders of our institution are being carried forward. It is an interesting thing to note that three direct decendants are employed here at the present time. Miss Erma Stuckey, R.N., Supervisor of Central Supply Department, is a second cousin of Mr. Sam Stuckey who was a member of the original hospital committee; Mr. Norman Vercler, technician in charge of the laboratory, is a grandson of Rev. Andrew Vercler who was one of the first to urge nurses' training; and Mr. Eldon Rupp, who is in charge of maintenance, is a son of the Hospital's first Superintendent and wife.

Philosophy of Hospital and School

by Esther Wenger, R. N. Supervisor, Obstetrical Department.

The main objectives of the Mennonite Hospital School of Nursing are: to teach the student the fundamentals of healthful living, to give her a comprehensive understanding of diseases and their treatment, and to prepare her to give efficient, intelligent and skillful nursing care.

The dominant point in the Nursing School's philosophy, as visioned by its farseeing founders, is "to instill into the student the Christian ideals of service, love of fellowmen, indomitable courage and persistent self-sacrifice that should motivate every nurse in her profession." It is the highest aim of the Nursing School to imbue these young women with the spirit of Christ and the earnest desire to heal those who are ill in body, mind and spirit.

Troyer Memorial Nurses' Home, dedicated May 12, 1946, houses eighty-five students.

And one feels that these young nurses have indeed caught the vision as the members of each graduating class sing Lois Miriam Fisher's "My Creed' as a part of the Commencement Exercises.

My Creed

To make the pathway smooth, where other feet must tread,
Pluck off the crown of thorns, lay roses in their stead;
To dry the falling tear, bind up the wounds that bleed,
To serve my fellowmen with joy . . . . this is my creed.

To sing of love and peace, lift up the ones who fall,
To trust that God is wise, and ruleth over all;
To do my best each day, be kind in word and deed,
Keep faith until life's end, and hope, . . . this is my creed.

The More Serious Side of the Student-Nurse's Life

by Willadene Hartzler, Class of 1947

"Preclinical student" had little meaning for us when we first entered Mennonite Hospital School of Nursing, but it wasn't long until we understood that for five months we would attend many classes and spend many hours studying, with only a few hours a week spent working in the hospital wards. Yes, being a preclinical student was much like attending any college or university. It was during these five months that we obtained our knowledge of the basic sciences, including chemistry, anatomy and physiology of the human body, and the study of micro-organisms. Added to this we learned how to live healthfully through our courses in personal and community hygiene. We had the privilege of attending Illinois State Normal University for these courses where we benefited from well-qualified, experienced professors which a nursing school of our size could not otherwise provide.

When we had successfully met all the requirements of a preclinical student the important day of capping arrived. Receiving our white caps signified that we were now ready to be freshman. Being unable to absorb all the necessary knowledge of the basic sciences in our first semester as preclinical students, we returned to the University for several more courses the second semester. Now we were feeling more like nurses since approximately one-half of our forty-eight-hour week was spent working in the hospital wards. Realizing that to do more work in the wards we needed new skills and knowledge, new courses were begun. Instruction in specific nursing procedures, study of diseases, and the action and use of medicines were now included in our curriculum. In the hospital wards we did those things which permitted us to use the new skills and knowledge we obtained in our classes. How proud we were when we were considered sufficiently skilled to carry out a particular procedure without close supervision. Yes, being a freshman certainly had its advantages.

Time rolls by swiftly and soon we have been at Mennonite Hospital for one year, and we become Juniors. Being a Junior does not mean that we have no more classes, but it does mean that we have finished at the University and that all our classes are now being taught by our nurse instructresses, our graduate staff nurses, and by the doctors. The subjects we now study are even more technical, including the study of the symptoms, cause and treatment of all kinds of diseases, and the study of all types of nursing as surgical nursing, medical nursing, psychiatric nursing, the nursing of children, obstetrical nursing and public health nursing.

During our Junior year we have an eight-hour day which includes our work in the hospital and our classes. Most of our time is spent in the hospital wards with seldom more than one or two hours a day spent in class. The courses are no longer given by semesters but by number of hours. One course may last a few weeks and another several months.

During our second year and the first part of our third year the members of the class are scattered to different departments of the hospital. You will find some in surgery, one or two in diet kitchen and others in the obstetrical department. Still others will have gone to the affiliated hospitals in Indianapolis and Peoria for training in pediatrics and psychiatric work.

Finally comes the long awaited day when we are given our black stripes to put across our caps. These little black bands announce to everyone that at last we are seniors. But not even seniors can stop studying for we still have much to learn. Our classes now pertain mainly to studying our profession, its aims, ideals, opportunities and current trends. We study specific problems of graduate nurses, and in general, we are trying to educate ourselves for entrance into our profession. More and more of our eight-hour day is spent working in the wards where we increase our skill in caring for the ill as well as increasing our first-hand knowledge of all illnesses. At the same time we come to realize more and that our patients not only need our skill in ministering to their physical needs but many need our emotional and spiritual help. Therefore as we approach the end of our period as student nurses, and near our graduation, we realize that we are only beginning our education as nurses. We still have much to do to keep abreast of current ideas and trends in nursing skills, and we have much more to learn in becoming the Christian personalities and characters which, in reflecting the spirit of Christ, will enable us to minister to the body, mind and spirit of all those who come into our care.

General Conf. Youth Retreat

"A United Mennonite Youth in Christ"

The All-General Conference Youth Retreat is scheduled for August 29-31 at Camp Mack, Milford, Indiana. It is to be held after the Conference at Berne, Indiana, thus making it possible for young people from all districts to attend for fellowship, discussion, and inspiration. It offers an unusual opportunity for the young people of the church to share and face their plans and problems.

A faculty of leaders on specific topics has been asked to participate. This faculty and their topics are as follows:

Bertha Fast .... "Voluntary Service"
Paul Shelly, ... "Methods and Materials for Young Peoples Work"
Robert Tully .... "Recreation"
Marvin Dirks .... "Missionary and Music"
Don Smucker .... "Mennonite Beliefs"

The cost for the three-day conference is $4.00 per person. Young people, those thirty and under, are urged to plan to include this conference in their plans after General Conference.

California Retreat August 4-10

The California Young People's Retreat will again be held at Lake Sequoia August 4-10, and the main theme will be "Abiding in Christ," John 15:4-7. The California retreat is breaking precedent and using the California ministers as leaders rather than guests. Rev. Harold Burkholder will bring the challenge at the campfire meetings, Rev. Ben Rahn and Rev. Harley King will teach the Bible classes, and Rev. John Bartel will bring the vesper messages. The Missionary Sudermans of Arizona will take care of the mission emphasis at the retreat, and Prof Ernie Lichti, who is one of the former retreaters and now professor of music at Freeman, will have charge of the music department.

Among the lay leaders, will be Alfred Heer of Paso Robles, retreat dean and chairman, Ruth Jantzen, Paso Robles, dean of women, and Vernon Neufeld of Shafter, dean of men. Paul Koehn of Winton will be recreation director, and Dorothy Hamm and Alfred Bergman, both of Paso Robles, will have charge of the mission and camp projects.

California will also hold it's first annual "Home Builder's" Retreat, for those who do not qualify as young people, September 5, 6, 7, at Lake Sequoia.—Alfred Heer, Chairman, California Retreat Committee.

On Being A Goody Goody or Genuine

by Mrs. Max Savage

By way of introduction, this is not going to be an attempt to treat the assigned topic, but just to present some thoughts. With all due respect to everyone, it is a subject we would all do well to think more about, but especially those of us who have been reared in Christian homes. It is so easy to fall back on a mixture of church creeds and doctrines, with a smug attitude, allowing them to become laws whereby to live in order that we might save ourselves.

Mark 7:6-8 Jesus talks about this kind of thing when he quotes from Isaiah, "This people honor me with their lips, yet their hearts are far away from me. But their worship of me is all in vain for the lessons they teach are but human precepts! You give up what God has commanded and hold fast to what men have handed down." Christianity is more than a religion. We have plenty of religion, maybe too much, but not near enough Christianity. We often forget when reading these scripture passages, in which Jesus rebukes the Pharisees, that they were a very religious people who were most sincere and zealous in their efforts and that that was the very reason why they found it hard to accept the teachings of Jesus.

It is possible then to be sincere and still face life with a piously self-centered attitude and thus block our growth and influence. Two mountain climbers, who upon having climbed the top of the mountain, found they had only one crust of bread between them; they were both very zealous to prove their altruism. So each offered the crust to the other, and both refused and both remained hungry. Stanley Jones say "the self centered are the self disrupted." This extreme concern with self then becomes a stumbling block and leads to:

1. A closed mind, that is, a refusal to accept new ideas, or to be influenced by others than one's own group.

2. Being very much concerned about character, so that there is compulsion about job and religion, which causes nervous tension instead of health and happiness for us and those we influence.

3. Doing good for duty or reward, either material, prestige, or in the life to come.

4. Negative criticism of the constructive efforts of others which thereby blocks the ability to cooperate. So we might make quite a list. In short, this great concern with self results in the goody-goody attitude.

There is a sermon by Phillips Brooks related to this topic—"The candle of The Lord." He speaks of the different types of people as candles—the candle which reflects the true light from God, and has cheering quality, the candles which find themselves helpless to shed enough light because they cannot feel the warmth even if held close, the candle which refuses to be held where the other flame can reach it, the candle which sheds the glare. "But there is still another way more subtle and sometimes more dangerous than these in which the spirit of man may fail in it's completest function as the candle of the Lord. The lamp may be lighted, and the fire by which it is lighted indeed be the fire of God. And yet it may not be God alone who shines forth. It is the candle putting its own color into the flame, which it has borrowed from God." . . . "This is the secret of all pious bigotry, of all narrow prejudice. Here is where narrow sectarianism comes from. The narrow Presbyterian, or Episcopalian, or (Mennonite) full of devoutness, what is he but a candle which is always giving the flame it's color."

"It seems perhaps as if in saying this I threw some slight upon that particular, separate element in every man's religion, upon which on the contrary I place the highest value. Every man who is a Christian must live a Christian life that is peculiarly his own. Only the true individuality of faith is marked by these characteristics which rescue it from bigotry. That it does not add something to the universal light that is God but only brings out some aspect. That it always cares more about the Universal Light than in the peculiar way it utters it. That it blends easily with other special utterances of the Universal Light in cordial sympathy and recognition of the value it finds in them." Stanley Jones says, "We see that we can be Christians only if we put the contents into the word Christian that Jesus put into it." His emphasis was always on attitudes, on facing life with realism, as a whole so that "the spirituality of Christians results in the redemption of the economic, the social, the political, the moral, and spiritual to the collective."

May we conclude then that genuineness results in a change within us, which causes us to respond to situations in the spirit of Jesus, or at least allows us to face ourselves with courage and admit our negativeness where it exists. Genuineness results in humility, not the kind that puts on a pious face and moralizes, but the attitude which is ever searching for more truth and a better way, still cognizant of dependence on the world around us and the Grace of God, that is, His forgiving of our past and the ability to help work that change within us. It is humility which helps us to find balance between self and others and between personal effort and dependence on God. The result is that we develop positive attitudes which direct our energies outside of ourselves. We need to have a deep conviction that all creation is good, including mankind. To be genuine we need to pray honestly with faith in God, as a creative God, His power, His justice and His love, "Like as a father." All of this allows for a stretching of personality and spontaneous and creative living.

M.C.C. Secretary Investigates Relief Needs in Java

Need for Relief Continues

AKRON, PA., July 18.—Orie O. Miller, Executive-secretary of the M.C.C., after investigating relief needs in Java on July 1 and 2, writes, "Java is the world's most thickly settled geographical area. Here also the world's youngest Republic is in the process of being born; here also is a group of 5,000 or more native Christian folk who have come to the light through Mennonite missionary efforts and whom we know are in great need of physical help. We are convinced more than ever that M.C.C. also belongs in this situation."

Europe Still in Serious Need of Relief

J. N. Byler, who surveyed the European relief scene a short time ago, recently told Mennonite churches in Colorado and California that serious needs still exist in central Germany, Europe and other areas, and that according to indications, those needs will continue at least through next winter.

Hearty Response to Goodwill Christmas Bundle Project

Many Christmas Bundles have already been received at M.C.C. headquarters. This is an early response. Present indications are that there will be a larger number of bundles this year than there were last year. This year's project differs from that of last year in a number of ways. Since the need in some countries is so much greater than in others, the M.C.C. suggests that donors do not designate what country their bundle is to go to but that instead they let the M.C.C. determine where they should be sent. M.C.C. workers on the field are informed about the needs of the children in the various areas, and they will distribute the bundles accordingly. In order that the bundles may reach the various countries by Christmas, it is necessary that all bundles be sent to M.C.C. headquarters by August 15. Address inquiries to Goodwill Christmas Bundles, M.C.C., Akron, Pa., or M.C.C., 223 King Street East, Kitchener, Ontario.

M.C.C. Sends Tons of Clothing, Shoes, Soap, and Food to Europe

The following shipments of clothing shoes, soap, and food were exported to Europe from June 15 to July 15:

To Austria, 25 tons of flour, 25 tons of canned meat and soup; to the Mennonite Child Feeding Program, French Zone of Germany, 20½ tons of canned fruits, vegetables, and meats, 2 tons soap, 1¾ tons of shoes, 9 tons clothing and bedding; to the Mennonite Child Feeding Program in the British Zone of Germany, 44¼ tons of flour, 24 tons of canned meats and fats, 2 tons of soap, 1 ton of shoes; to CRALOG, British Zone of Germany, 20 tons of flour; to Christenphlicht, American Zone of Germany, 20 tons canned meats and fats, 2 tons soap, 1 ton shoes and 3 tons clothing and bedding; to Italy, 2 tons of soap; to France, 1 ton of soap and 1 ton of shoes.

CANADIAN CHURCHES HOLD CONFERENCE

The Conference of the Mennonite Churches in Canada convened at Coaldale, Alberta, July 5-9. The sessions included: Minister's Conference, Saturday; Missionfest, Sunday; regular Conference, Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday. One hundred ministers attended the Minister's Conference, and over 1,000 attended the Missionfest and the regular sessions. Rev. D. J. Unruh of Newton, Kansas, and Miss Elizabeth Goertz, missionary from China, were welcome guests, who took part in the deliberations of the conference.

Matters discussed at conference included: home missions, relief at home and abroad, schools (including elementary schools), schools of higher education, Sunday schools, Bible schools, summer Bible schools, Bible college, old people's and invalid homes. Canadian Mennonite Board of Colonization, publication, young people's organizations, and ladies aid societies. Seven valuable papers were given and discussed. There were also reports and discussions on other matters. Much time was given to the young people for their organization, activities and reports. A full report will be published in the Year-book as formerly. The next conference is to convene in Manitoba with the Blumenort congregation as host.

The officers of the Conference were: Rev. J. J. Thiessen, Saskatoon, chairman; Rev. Jacob Gerbrandt, Rosthern, vice-chairman; Rev. John G. Rempel, Rosthern, secretary-treasurer; Rev. J. J. REV. JOHN F. SCHMIDT JOINS BETHEL COLLEGE STAFF

About a decade ago the Board of Directors of Bethel College set up the C. H. Wedel Mennonite Research Foundation and invited those interested in research and in the memory of C. H. Wedel to make contributions toward the fund in the hope that it would gradually be built up to an amount of $50,000. Although some contributions have come in for this purpose, the goal has not yet been reached and gifts for it are always gratefully received. The interest of this fund when completed is to be used for Mennonite research, an area in which C. H. Wedel, the First President of Bethel College, was the pioneer worker among American Mennonite scholars. For the present the interest should go back into the fund to help increase the same.

In 1944 Dr. Cornelius Krahn came to Bethel College to serve as Director of the C. H. Wedel Research Foundation. Besides Mennonite research Dr. Krahn is also in charge of the Bethel College Mennonite Historical Library and serves as Editor-in-chief of MENNONITE LIFE. The work has grown to such proportions that a full time assistant is needed. Rev. John F. Schmidt of Ellis, Kansas, has been secured to serve in this capacity. Rev. Schmidt, who orginally came from the Gnadenberg community, graduated from Bethel College in 1935 with the A. B. degree and from Hartford Theological Seminary in 1938 with the B.D. degree. During 1942 and 1943 Rev. Schmidt was Director of the C.P.S. camps at Marietta, Ohio, and Ft. Collins, Colorado. He has been minister in Congregational churches in Kansas and Colorado, and served the Buhler Mennonite Church from 1939-42. Rev. Schmidt will begin his new duties on August 1. By training, experience, and aptitude Mr. Schmidt is well qualified to make a worthwhile contribution in this neglected and yet so important field of Mennonite research. Bethel is happy to welcome another one of her own graduates back to serve on the college staff.

TO ALL GENERAL CONFERENCE DELEGATES AND GUESTS WHO SING

Saturday night, August 23, is music night. Every person who sings is invited to help in singing two great choruses: Handel's "Hallelujah Chorus" from The Messiah and Stainer's "For God So Loved The World" from The Crucifixion. Bring your copies, please, if you have them.

Choirs from nearby churches have been invited to contribute special numbers; some are preparing to do so, while others have disbanded for the summer months and cannot come in a body.

Individuals or small groups (balance of voices from specific churches is not necessary) from all churches of the General Conference are invited to come and take part. This offers a splendid opportunity to join in a wonderful praise service for all who love to sing. In addition to singing the above two choruses together, there may be time for a few familiar grand chorales.

The Business Committee has asked Professor Russell A. Lantz to take charge of this evening program and invites all church choir leaders and pastors or others interested to help make this an hour of fine spiritual fellowship and praise to God. In many churches the two choruses have been used often and so are familiar. Choirs or smaller groups or individuals will please refresh themselves on these and make every effort to join the mass chorus at Berne for a late afternoon rehearsal and the rendition on Saturday night, May 23.

with some of the leaders there. Rev. Regier reports a good interest in the new undertaking. The school plans to issue a bulletin in the future. The Regiers will leave Chicago for Winnipeg soon after August 1. Their school address will be, 103 Furby Avenue, Winnipeg, Manitoba.

—Gilbert Goering of Moundridge, Kansas, recently joined the Voluntary Service Unit at Gulfport, Mississippi, for a year of service.

—The Mennonite Biblical Seminary has sent out a "memorial card," which can be used by people who wish to give a memorial gift to the Seminary in place of the usual floral gift. It is suggested that the gift be sent to the Seminary through the minister or church treasurer and the card be given to the bereaved family. Additional cards may be had from the Seminary.

—Salem Mennonite Church, Dalton, Ohio: Miss Helen Moser and Delvin Kirchhofer were united in marriage July 12 at the Kidron Mennonite church in a simple and beautiful setting of flowers and candlelight. Both are former relief workers. They will be in charge of a mental rest home in Maryland, after some training at Akron, Pennsylvania. The Bluffton College group of our church was in complete charge of an ice cream social for Christian Endeavor and the Willing Workers Sunday School class July 15 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Gerber. Mr. and Mrs. William Geiger and Paul are returning to Honolulu, Hawaii, this week.

—Emmanuel Church, Pratum, Oregon: The weather has been very unusual this summer; it has been cloudy and rainy. No cherries were taken to the cannery from this community. At present hay is being put up. Missionary Desters were here July 8 and showed pictures of the mission work in India. Miss Sara Buller of Africa will be with us July 20 to show pictures of the work. The Oregon Young People's Retreat is scheduled for July 21-28.

—First Church, Caldwell, Idaho: Sixty-five members enjoyed the Sunday School picnic held at the Leonard Schmidt home on July 4. On June five new members were received into the church through baptism. Leo Laurense from Holland was with us on June 24. He told us of the Mennonites in Holland.

—First Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota: Sixty-five teen-agers from the three General Conference churches attended the four-day retreat at Stony Point Camp, which is an ideally-situated and equipped camp forty miles from here. The moonlight on the lake added to the inspiration of the worship, study, and recreation. The church has had recent letters from Katherine Derksen and Gladys Klassen. The latter is now in first-year language study at Ellen Gowan, India. Miss Derksen, a relief worker, is distributing food and clothing in Krefeld, Germany. Both letters urge us to keep-on-giving and keep-on-praying. Our new pastor, Rev. L. R. Amstutz, will begin his work on August 3. He and his family will be the first to live in our new parsonage, which is nearing completion.

—Zion Church, Souderton, Pa., Our vacation church school was brought to a close with an evening program and an exhibit of the various projects. Some outstanding features of our school were the art and music courses taught by Marjorie Fretz and Mrs. Graber, respectively. Both courses were taught in all classes from five-year-olds to high school students and were correlated with the Bible study. This was the second year that we followed the plan of having a teacher for each class and in addition special teachers for art and music courses. A new feature this year was a daily mimeographed newspaper, the "Zion Scroll,' edited by the older students and distributed to all vacation school pupils each day. Myrtle Wasser and Jean Alderfer, two of our instructors, served as sponsors of the paper.

—Those planning to attend the General Conference session should inform Mr. Clifton Gilliom, 605 Clark Street, Berne, Indiana, by what method of transportation they expect to arrive and how many will be in the party, indicating the number of men, women, and children and giving the ages of the children.

The Reader Says:

IT'S LACK OF KNOWLEDGE

Editor, The Mennonite

I want to say a word of appreciation for Miss Regier's letter in the July 8 Mennonite. The reason why we Mennonites react so violently against all symbolism is that we know very little about it, and our tradition has built up a resistance against anything associated with the Catholic Church. Yet, as pointed out in Miss Regier's letter, we have not been consistent in our avoiding of symbolism. In fact we carried the symbolism further than the Catholic Church in some areas; as, for example, our plain garb. We applied to the laity the symbol of separation formerly only used by clergy. We also took sacraments and made symbols of them, as in Holy Communion. Schwenckfeld and the Friends were more consistent in this, but we did not follow their example.

I can remember when Mennonites looked upon singing "Amen" at the close of a hymn as "pure Catholicism." It's part and parcel of our tendency to put people and things into a pigeon hole and put a label above it, sealing their doom (in our minds) forever.

I saw a cartoon recently. A man who looked a bit like a Senator was in a book shop. His back was turned on the shelves of books on history, politics, religion, and geography. Pointing to a panel of "Assorted Labels — 25c per dozen," he said, "Gimme some o' these sonny. I'm too busy for heavy readin'."

I wish we could get over our name-calling and categorizing and develop a more sympathetic understanding for the thoughts and modes of others. At least that we would be willing to take a little time and give a little effort to try to understand the other fellow's "doxy."

"Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!' It is like the precious ointment upon the head . . . As the dew of Hermon, and as the dew that descended upon the mountains of Zion: for there the Lord commanded the blessing, even life for evermore."
—Psalm 133

Ministers, Missionaries and Their Wives Attending the 1946 Minister's Retreat at Spirit Lake

Come Ye Apart . . . and Rest Awhile

Almost a year ago, ministers and missionaries and their families were wending their way to the first Minister's Retreat at Spirit Lake, Iowa. That experience proved to be of utmost value to those that were in attendance. Worshipping, eating, and playing together did much to bind us in unity. The one hundred and thirty-third Psalm took on new dimensions in the hearts of all who were present.

It was not without an awareness of the problems involved that this retreat was started—the matter of distance between our churches, the problem of finances. Many ministers with their limited allowances would find it difficult to attend unless the congregation offered to share part or all of the expenses. It was with a deep consciousness of the need for divine guidance that the arrangements were finally begun. Several resolutions at the 1945 General Conference sessions prepared the way. By further action of the Executive Committee of the General Conference this project was assigned to the Board of Education and a committee was appointed to make the arrangements. All through the planning of the program, the securing of the grounds, to the end of the retreat, one seemed to be conscious of the leading of the Holy Spirit and divine approval.

From the far North a minister gave this testimony, "Never have I enjoyed such simple ground of fellowship and brotherly love as with these brethren from near and far." Another from the West wrote, "I was impressed with the deep seated hunger of all ministers for genuine fellowship with one another. My wife and I will make every effort to attend the next Minister's Retreat."

These and other responses led the Board to arrange for another retreat this summer just prior to the General Conference sessions at Berne, Indiana. We trust that many will again avail themselves of this opportunity for inspiration, fellowship and relaxation. We would like to encourage the congregations to urge your pastor and his family to attend by giving them a word of encouragement—perhaps by sharing part of the expenses involved.

We trust that this retreat may in a small measure carry out the implications of our theme, "Strengthening our Ministry in Christ." Rev. Walter Gering will conduct our daily Bible studies from II Timothy. In order to enrich the value of this hour it might be well for all who plan to attend to study this epistle carefully and prayerfully before coming to the retreat. The split sessions for ministers and their wives should prove helpful in discussing our personal problems. The panel discussions on the "Future of Our Missions" should do much to inform us of the work on the fields as well as to challenge us to greater zeal in evangelizing the world. Various ministers have been asked to bring messages during the evening meetings. Plans are under way to organize a minister's chorus to assist in rendering special music during the conference sessions. The afternoons have again been set aside for recreation and relaxation.

Again, we would like to extend an invitation to all ministers and missionaries of the General Conference to attend this retreat to be held at Camp Shipshewana, Indiana, August 15 to 19. The total cost for the four and one-half day period, including board, room and registration will be $13.50. At the time of this writing well over a hundred registrations have come in. We hope the camp will be filled to its capacity.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

Present-day society is cursed not so much by ignorant as by intelligent persons with unchristian motives. Plain ignorance is bad enough but to know good and choose evil, to understand the right and do the wrong, to be aware of the truth and practice falsehood, is sinning against light. "He that knoweth good and doeth it not, to him it is sin." Christian education is education on Christian foundations under Christian auspices for Christian ends including Christian motives. A Christian school is one founded, maintained and conducted by Christian people in the service of Christ and His kingdom. It must acquaint its students with Christianity, its origin and characteristics, its documents and developments, its past and its imperial program to conquer the individual and the world. The primary method used to achieve this is the personal encounter with, acceptance of, and submission to Jesus Christ as Lord and Saviour. This may not necessarily call for more chapels and Bible courses, though these have their place, but it does require a purposeful, constructive and wholesome influence in every class room, in all extra-curricular activities, and especially in the personality of every teacher. Intelligent Christian motivation is the need of our day.—Ed. G. Kaufman, President of Bethel College and Chairman of the Board of Education of the General Conference.

REWARDS OR MILLSTONES

Young people in contact with the educational arm of the church often have experiences which give them a new vision, a new faith, and new purpose in life. This experience may come while in college or while attending a summer retreat. Such an experience often gives an entirely new direction to life. While still under the influence of the environment in which the experience occured, it is relatively easy to maintain the new purpose or goal. The test comes when that young person returns to his home community and the old associates who have not been inspired by new purposes.

We, at home, can help to impress this new vision upon such youths or we can help to extinguish the divine spark. Jesus told us that if we encourage youth we will be rewarded, if we offend them it were better that a millstone were hanged about our necks and we were drowned in the depths of the sea. We can offend and extinguish the new vision unintentionally. By some slighting remark about the permanence or genuineness of the new experience or vision, by remarks which cast doubt concerning the individual or institution through which the inspiration came, or by showing so little enthusiasm and interest in the Christian way of life and the work of the church that the young person has his new found enthusiasm chilled, we can be the means of offense.

On the other hand, we can give the new found vision a chance to develop through active participation in the work of the church. We can give the word of encouragement, confidence, and interest which will fan the new spark into a flame for God. Thus another life will become useful for God and perhaps another Livingston or Grenfell will be developed.

Do we merit a reward or a millstone in relations with youth?—Lloyd L. Ramseyer, President of Bluffton College and member of the Board of Education of the General Conference.

An English clergyman, returning from an extended trip among the Methodist missions of the South Seas, was the guest of a girls' school for one memorable night. He was profoundly impressed by the concert the students provided for him in the evening, by the art with which they had decorated their building, and by the scrupulous cleanliness with which the place was kept. But his greatest experience came in the morning as he was leaving to go aboard his ship. It was then that the girls lined up in two rows, one on either side of the walk, and with flowers crossed over his head, they sang as he went down to the gate, "What a wonderful change in my life has been wrought, Since Jesus came into my heart." And every girl of the more than 200 enrolled was the daughter or the granddaughter of a cannibal.— Roy L. Smith in the "Christian Advocate."

The Mennonites in China

by H. J. Brown

1. THE HOPEI MISSION FIELD: There are better reports from Ch'ang-yuan now, and the church work shall be continued, but reorganization is difficult on account of many uncertainties. Rev. Li Kuang Ming as bishop or superintendent is busily at work getting things in shape.

Tung Ming work in church and school continues and grows. In Kaifeng the refugees receive some relief. Some find work. The General Committee has appointed a pastor for incoming Christians, and has rented quarters for living and working. It looks like another church is springing up here in town. (Kaifeng) A Bible conference and retreat for our Christians, especially for workers and deacons from our free territory, are located nearby.

2. The M.C.C. is steadily extending its work in clinics, hospital, material relief and tractor work. We are happy to report spiritual work in many an indirect way.

3. THE CHINA MENNONITE MISSION SOCIETY is reorganizing the old field (Shantung-Honan) to be hereafter under the E. M. B. Conference. Brother H. C. Bartel, with the support of the M. B. and K. M. B. Conferences, is extending the new mission field in the southern Shensi-Kansu regions. Missionaries are coming back. Some choose the old field, some the new, as their place of service.

4. THE "OLD MENNONITES" have been looking for a mission field in China for some time. Their representatives went north, west and south. Everywhere there are opportunities connected with difficulties. The last word which has come to us is, that they have decided upon a region north of Chung-King, Szechuan.

Human Investment

by H. J. Brown

A bright Tung Ming boy, with tears in his eyes, stands before Mrs. Brown. For several years he has been attending the Hua Mei School at Kaichow. His parents and older brothers have only a little land. They have really been bringing sacrifices to allow him to come to school. The last time he was home, they could not see how they should be able to raise the money for him to come back to school. It was purely through his crying and pleading that they once more went to the limit of cutting short expenditures everywhere else in order to raise the money to send him back to school. Now it is time to make another payment for board and tuition. Here comes this letter, "Impossible! Come home!" He stands and wipes his tears away, but they come back even more freely and blurr his sight. "Oh missionary lady, have mercy on me. Don't let them send me home. I would like to finish school so that I can live and work for our Saviour Jesus Christ." Tung Ming is the Nazareth of the Bible. "What good can come out of Nazareth?" The soft spot in Mrs. Brown's heart is touched. She cannot refuse. Maybe she can do without an otherwise needed overcoat. This boy must go to school!

Several years have again gone by. The war has come upon us. The Browns have already been interned nine months on the Tamingfu station. The Japanese are threatening to send them home to America. Here comes a letter from Kaichow. Li Hain Chin beseeches Mrs. Brown, "Do not leave me thus, behind. Take me along to America. Put me into your trunk, a box, or anything, just so I can go along. Please do." That, of course, was the impossible, but the boy in his distress had in childlike faith asked the impossible.

Five years later the Browns have returned from America. They now live in Kaifeng, Honan. One day there is a knock at the door. The missionary sees a fine young man of twenty-two standing at the door. He introduces himself as Li. Later, during the conversation in the room, it becomes known that this is Li Hain Chin. Into what a fine young man he has developed. He still has his friendly and attractive nature, but he has grown in stature "and in favor with God and man." He wants to know all about the family, especially Roland who is only one year younger than he; Jessie, what about her? Of Linda he has heard, but memory is faint. Mrs. Brown produces the family picture of 1938. There they are, the whole family! On the other photo are Roland and Jessie of two years ago, when Jessie graduated as a nurse. Roland looks more like a man on that picture. Li grabs the 1938 family picture. This is the family he has for years learned to know and to love! There is an extra copy on hand, and he carefully tugs it away in his pocket. "All seems like in a dream!"

After finishing the Hua Mei High School he taught school to earn money, then again attended senior high school, studying part time and working part time to earn money. Again he has graduated, and now he fills a position as teacher in a government school. He still longs to go to America to finish college, so that he can come back and do more for his people. We and he are praying for this. God works marvelously.

by Cornelius Krahn

A Hundred Years of Mennonite Missions. The Dutch Mennonite Mission which has its fields in Java and Sumatra was founded one hundred years ago. The Mennonites of Russia, Germany and Switzerland joined in this enterprise. The devastating wars of the last generations made it impossible for our brethren in Russia and Germany to continue in their support of these endeavors. At present it is even questionable whether the Mennonites of Holland will be able to maintain their field of service. Nevertheless, they are not only looking back on the first century of bringing the gospel to the natives of a Dutch colony but are also making plans for the future.

Survivors of Dutch Mission Field Reach America. Recently the sisters Helene Schmitt and Martha Stauffer (daughters of missionary Johann Klassen) arrived in Reedley, California. Active in the Dutch Mennonite mission field on Java, the two missionaries Stauffer and Schmitt were interned at the outbreak of war and sent to British India. On its way the ship was torpedoed and the missionaries perished. The families of the missionaries were kept in China during the war and have now reached this country through the help of the American Mennonites.

Dutch Mennonite Representatives Visit American Mennonites. The Mennonite Central Committee has invited Dutch Mennonites to visit American Mennonite churches. Rev. T. O. Hylkema has arrived in this country and is now visiting congregations in Canada and the United States. After both world wars Rev. Hylkema has been active in helping the suffering Mennonites of Russia.

Among the others that are scheduled to come is Rev. N. van der Zijpp, pastor of the Mennonite congregation of Rotterdam and teacher of Mennonite history at the Theological Seminary of Amsterdam. Rev. v. d. Zijpp will be glad to preach and lecture in Mennonite churches. All the representatives will attend the Mennonite conference at Berne, Indiana.

Christian Education Emphasis Period

August 31 to September 28

Beginning with August 31, and throughout the month of September, the Board of Education is endeavoring to give special emphasis to the task of Christian Education both in the area of the local church school and the work of higher education in our colleges and seminary. The last Sunday in August has for sometime been designated as Christian Education Sunday. Consequently, August 31, will this year be known as such. Materials for use in observance of Christian Education Sunday will be mailed to all ministers and church leaders of the General Conference. The Board earnestly requests and hopes that the cause of Christian Higher Education will be presented in all of our churches on that Sunday or on a subsequent Sunday.

The Apostle Peter in his second epistle admonishes his fellow-believers in Christ to "Grow in Grace and Knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ." (II Peter 3:18) Paul instructed youthful Timothy to "Neglect not the gift that is within thee" (I Timothy 4:14). Christian Education implies GROWTH, DEVELOPMENT and NURTURE of the powers that God has given to us to their highest efficiency in the work of His Kingdom.

We need to become increasingly aware of the urgency and timelessness of educating our Mennonite youth in the convictions and ideals that are a part of our Mennonite Christian tradition. The words of Menno Simons are applicable to every generation, "If you love your children with a Godly love, teach, admonish and instruct them in God."

Christian Education is the urgent need of our day with the emphasis on the adjective rather than the noun. Someone has ably stated that "Secular education is only half an education with the more important half left out." "High intelligence mixed with low desire" is a dangerous combination. With all that science has brought to our attention in the way of knowledge and skills, it has not brought with it a correlating standard of conduct and responsibility. We believe that is the contribution of the Church and the Christian College, to bring to our young people the highest standards of scholarship in the arts and sciences, along with a knowledge of God through Jesus Christ.

It is imperative that we recover in our Mennonite circles a conviction of the importance of Christian Education in our day. "If we believe in our Church, believe it has a mission and future we must believe in our Church College."

In a day of unequalled challenge to the Christian forces of the world, our seminary, colleges and academies need the prayerful and enlightened support of every congregation. The pulpit and pew together can supply the prayers, the desirable students, and the financial support that will enable these institutions to meet the high expectations of the Church and the need of our day.

Why Attend a Christian Denominational School

by Erland Waltner

The above subject assigned to the writer is striking because of its combination of the adjectives "Christian" and "denominational." Some may feel that there is a fundamental inconsistency in this wording. They rather suspect that the more Christian a school is, the less denominational it will be, and that the more denominational it is, the less Christian it will be. Yet the fact remains that the great majority of Christian schools are denominational in character. Some are inter-denominational and a few are anti-denominational. Inter-denominational schools seek to send their students back to serve in the denominations out of which they have come, while anti-denominational schools seek to draw them out of their former denominational associations.

Believing in the fundamental validity of the faith of his own denomination, the writer here assumes, without trying to prove the point, that a school can be both Christian and denominational at the same time. That is, it can be thoroughly Christ-centered, Christ-exalting, and Christ-controlled, yet at the same time be entirely loyal to the principles of an evangelical Christian denomination. Attendance in such a school which is both Christian and denominational has certain distinct advantages over attendance in other schools.

Distinctive Principles

A student in such a school has the advantage of being able to study Christian truth in the light of the interpretation of the church group from which he comes. This is particularly significant in the study of the distinctive principles of his denomination. In other schools these principles may either be avoided entirely, or if they are considered, they are likely to be presented in a critical way which will tend to undermine the faith of the student in the principles of his own church. As a result some of these students simply leave the denomination because they no longer share its faith. Others remain in the denomination but are luke-warm toward its distinctive principles.

Life Friendships

A student in such a school also has the advantage of studying together with people who come from a background similar to his own and with whom he is likely to have dealings in the future. Especially is this true of those who are entering some form of Christian service. It is tremendously important for a minister or for a missionary, for example, to know personally the people with whom he is to be associated as a co-laborer. The value of the associations and friendships formed in a denominational school grows with every passing year in Christian service. These friendships are significant because they are of a much more permanent character than those made in other schools, because there is more opportunity for the renewal of these associations.

Contact with the Home Church

A more immediate advantage of attending a Christian denominational school is that the student is in much closer contact with his home church. In a small denomination the pastor of the home church is likely to visit at least one or more of his church schools once a year, enabling him to make personal contact with the students of his church attending there. He could not possibly visit all other schools which his young people may be attending. Also, church school choirs usually make a number of trips into the churches of their constituency during the year. This is a further opportunity for establishing a contact between the home, the church, and the school.

These contacts with the home church are very significant for the student. Without them he may become aloof in his attitude toward the home church. He may develop a critical attitude toward it and then begin to feel that he is no longer "at home" in it. Not infrequently the result is withdrawal. Some time ago a statement was published asserting that "ninety-four per cent of the young people who attend Adventist schools are saved to their church. Ninety-six per cent of the Adventist young people who attend other schools are lost to the church."

Loyalty to One's Own Group

Finally, a student in a Christian denominational school has an opportunity to contribute to the welfare of his own group. Only the most selfish student will think of his education only in terms of what he can "get." A Christian student also thinks in terms of what he can "give." By attending a school which is sponsored by his own groups, a student gives moral support to his group. He is expressing his confidence in it. He is indicating his willingness to work for its best interests. Though he may be keenly aware of its weaknesses and failings, yet he stands ready to do his part to advance the work of our Lord Jesus Christ as it is carried on through the medium of his own church group. Surely there is something to be said for loyalty to those of our own "household of faith," a loyalty which may be held without becoming aloof or exclusive.

Recognizing that there are also some unique values in attending interdenominational schools, or, in some cases, Christian schools of some other denominations, the above are some distinct advantages of attending a school which is both loyal to the Lord Jesus Christ and to the principles of one's own denomination.

The following insert is part of the material being released by the Board of Education for the observance of the Christian Educational Emphasis Period, August 31 to September 28.

Christian Colleges for Christian Youth

Meeting Christ At Scho

WHETHER YO

Teacher - -

The world is replete with confusion, which makes the empty inadequacy of man the more staggering. Ever since the youth of our day began to think, the world has been crashing about their ears. Modern man believes he can re-assemble this devastated world and his own benumbed thinking by scientific development, medical skill, and intellectual acumen. It is tragic to see these debauched ideas taught to young people. The ultimate realization that this is not the solution makes life taste like ashes in their mouths.

What then is the answer? It is easy to say glibly, "Christ is the answer," but to believe it, to know it, to live it, is far different. Christ is the answer to every question of knowledge. "In Christ are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge." Down through history, man has diligently searched for Truth; but in every case he has failed, unless he discovers, by the grace of God, that "Christ is the Truth." Above all, the young people today, just as youth of every generation, are eagerly searching for a purpose in living. They seek something to fill the yawning emptiness. Again, Christ is the only answer. "For it pleased the Father that in Him should all fulness dwell."

In a Christian college, we learn facts, certainly; but we learn to see and appraise those facts from the viewpoint of Christ and His Church. With that Rock foundation, the Christian college can send her students out to build. Particularly in the field of teaching is the opportunity great. We can know and accept Christ to fill the emptiness of our hearts and minds. We have the "one thing needful" to tie together our chaotic thinking and our purposeless living. Finally, we can know the deep peace which comes from a sure belief that "He shall reign forever and ever, and of His Kingdom there shall be no end."—D.K.

Farmer - -

One need not be a farmer to know that fields plante to corn produce corn; oat fields produce oats; and whea fields, wheat. However, because of his experience, farmer is more keenly aware that much work, knowledge, patience, courage, and hope are needed to wi against the natural crop enemies. In this I find spiritual analogy.

I would compare our various academic subjects chemistry, biology, mathematics, history, and economics, to the crops. With average steadfastness o purpose, we learn that which we study just as w reap that which we plant.

It is safe to say that a working knowledge of academic subjects can be obtained from any accredite college, whether secular or Christian, but the Christian college stresses a most important "by-product. Effort is expended to strengthen one's religious lif and to bring religion to souls who have not yet experienced it.

We dislike facing the great truth, that faith in Go is essential to the salvation of one's soul. In thi atomic age, however, men of all backgrounds are asking, "What does it profit a man to gain the whol world and lose his own soul?" If a spirit of indifferenc is fostered in college a weak soul may easily becom a lost soul.

We need at school age the surroundings of Christianity, so that our religion becomes a part of ou "working capital" and not apart from it. If we d not acquire a strong and capable Christian faith a school age, we may later experience that, "While was busy here and there, it (religion) got away."

Christianity has many enemies, as do the farmer crops, but the Christian school provides for its students the moral and spiritual sense that makes th great difference.—M.L.H.

Nurse - -

re you planning to become a nurse? Do you know omeone who is interested? May I urge you to con-der seriously the contribution a Christian college in make in this great profession.

Let us be assured, first of all, that scholastic reuirements for nursing can be met satisfactorily at our hurch colleges. Especially convenient and attractive the five-year combined nursing and college course.

It seems to me that the great advantage of Chris-an education is the fact that it helps to make one ore sensitive to the moral and spiritual needs of man-ind. A nurse, as she helps the doctor, is concerned rgely with physical care. Both doctors and nurses alize, however, that mental and spiritual vigor defitely further bodily recovery and health.

A nurse, there, who understands the soul of man nd is concerned with its welfare is far better qualified r her work than one who lacks this all-important piritual insight.

Above all else, the Christian college stresses aceptance of Christ as the personal Savior and dedica-on of all service to Him. When Christ holds this ace in a nurse's life, He becomes the motivation for l healing.

May I also recommend training at a Christian hosital, such as it was my privilege to have. Living hrist's teachings both privately and professionally re-eives an important added encouragement.

Paul says in the twelfth chapter of his letter to the omans: "I beseech you, therefore, brethren, by the ercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living crifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your asonable service."

As we dedicate our lives to Christ's service and use he talents He has given us, we will experience a deep tisfaction and true joy. —M.L.

Parent - -

Except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it; except the Lord keep the city the watchman waketh but in vain" (Psalm 127:1).

The normal human being at maturity wants a home. The experience of youth determines what type of home will be built. I am thankful the Lord spoke to me in my youth through Christian parents.

Trailer homes are hurriedly built, but temples require years of planning. If we use the wisdom of Solomon we will find the cedars of Lebanon and precious stones with which to erect our homes. The Lord must be the Architect and we His laborers.

I am thankful the Lord led me to a place where these stones are quarried, the Christian college, where my efforts were directed by Christian teachers. The chapel devotions, prayer and fellowship of Christian leaders, and the exhilarating effect of beautiful chorals all helped to quarry the stones and hew the timber for their place in the home.

What difference has this made? As a servant of the public I have opportunity to enter the homes of people of many walks of life and find that all have the same basic problems. In some homes Christ reigns. In others false gods are worshipped. When the parents of the latter type attempt to save their youth from the destructive forces of evil, as sleepy watchmen they usually wake in vain.

Early home training taught me to pray, the Christian college impressed me with the power of prayer, and my children have led me into a deeper life of prayer. As I was leaving for my office one morning, our little four-year-old delayed my going to hear her sing, "A Little Talk with Jesus." Hearing my footsteps when I returned home, she called me to her bedside. "Daddy," she said, "I saved one prayer for you to hear." With thanks and praise in my heart, I know that this is the gold that adorns the temple. F.T.S.

Parents:

YOU have given them a Christian home and have kept them in the Church. But the average high school is the scene of many cross-currents. Your children have rubbed shoulders with boys and girls from all types of homes. Your boy or girl may be more bewildered and at sea than you know. If in the next two to four years you can place them in surroundings that enforce and dignify all the fine things you have wanted your home to do for them, you will have given them an unparalleled advantage in facing life. You will be placing them in the hands of teachers who are kindred with you in mind and spirit, and who will often fulfill for you what you have wanted and tried to do in your home.

If it's farming he wants, let him come back to the farm from such an atmosphere. If he wants to be a doctor, give him with his pre-medical course the cultural vision of Christian faith. Whatever your boy or girl wants to do eventually, start him out in a church college!

(This is a continuation of the story in last week's issue.)

Training in Affiliated Hospitals

by Ruth Schertz, Class of 1947

The student nurses of the Bloomington Mennonite Hospital are sent to the Riley Hospital, Indiana University Medical Center in Indianapolis, for three months of pediatric training. Our work assignment is changed every two weeks which gives us experience in five or six different wards — medical; surgical; eye, ear, nose and throat; contagious diseases; infant medical and surgical; and milk laboratory. Some of us also get two weeks at Rotary Convalescent Home which is located on the campus near Riley Hospital.

Our psychiatric training is obtained at Peoria State Hospital in Peoria, Illinois, where we are sent for another three months of training. Here again we change work every two weeks so as to have as diversified experience as possible.

Along with our ward practice we have an outlined course of study in both pediatrics and psychiatry which is completed during the respective affiliation.

Capping Service

by Ruth Yordy and Emily Gerig,
Class of 1949

The capping exercise is one of the most impressive events in the life of a nurse. In the presence of an audience composed of parents and special friends, the nurse pledges herself to a life of service to suffering humanity. She is escorted to the platform by an older student nurse and presented to the Director of the School of Nursing who places the cap on the student's head. She then lights her Nightingale lamp from the large candle, thus signifying that she has been accepted as a fellow-member of this noble profession.

Each School of Nursing has a distinictive cap, and pride in individual achievement gradually loses itself in school pride which grows with the years. The cap not only enhances the nurse's youthful charm and enthusiasm, but since it signifies that the wearer has been accepted as a nurse, it is always worn with happy satisfaction and an increased desire to serve.

Religious Aspects

by Catherine Rhoads, Class of 1949

Each morning finds the students gathered together in the chapel of the Nurses' Home for fifteen minutes of devotion and worship before the day's work in the hospital begins. During this period each girl finds strength and inspiration in the hymns, prayers and fellowship for the many varied and sometimes trying tasks she meets each day. The leaders are taken alphabetically through the Seniors, Juniors, Freshmen and Preclinicals, each girl sharing her source of strength and help with the others. Occasionally we also have guests or visitors who take part in our services.

There are special Pre-Easter services for Holy Week which begin fifteen minutes earlier thus lengthening the service to thirty minutes. Each morning a different minister brings us an inspiring message. The climax of this week of services is the communion service held on Good Friday evening. The Sunrise service on Easter morning is held in the lobby of the hospital.

Capping, a Milestone in Every Nurse's Life

Mennonite minister. Included in this course is a brief resume of Mennonite history and the history of our school and hospital.

All these meetings, conducted by students and pastors, give a deeper meaning to our work, and they also give us a fuller understanding of what it means to be Christ-like in every day living. It brings to our minds anew each day those words of His in Matthew 10:8, "Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils: freely ye have received, freely give."

by Jean Yoder, Class of 1948

In the past year the trend at our school has been toward more extra-curricular activities, in order to provide the students with additional recreation and with opportunity for developing mutual interests.

The Nurses' Choir, under the direction of Mrs. W. G. Ball, has been active for several years. This year, however, it was reorganized, officers were elected and committees appointed. Now, as the "Glee Club," it is playing an important part in the activities of girls interested in music. Working on an Easter Cantata and music for graduation exercises has kept the Glee Club busy practicing this spring. New members for future concerts include music by Irving Berlin, Negro Spirituals and arrangements by Noble Cain.

For the journalists, artists and poets in our group, the Troyer News Club provides a place to display their talents. "The Troyer News" is published monthly by the students and gives a full account of hospital, nursing school, alumnae, class and club activities.

One of the newer activities is the recently organized Athletic Club. Members can earn points for activites such as hiking, tennis, swimming, golf, skating and others. Athletic letters will be awarded to girls earning the required number of points. These points can be earned as individual or group activities. Swimming is provided every Monday evening at the Y.W.C.A., with trained Red Cross instructors to help those who are experienced.

Glee Club, One Form of Recreation

Another new organization is the Social Committee. Each class, the Staff and the Alumnae are represented on this Committee, and the Committee members are responsible for planning the monthly all-school party.

Impressions of the Housemother

by Charlotte G. Turner, Housemother

"It takes a heap o'livin' in a house t'make it home," and we here at Troyer Memorial Nurses' Home feel that we have done "a heap o'livin' " since the first nurses moved into the partly completed Home in March and April 1945. The day begins with six-thirty chapel services for the nurses who go on duty at seven. From that time on the Home is a busy place. There are classes to attend; there are washings to be done in the sunny laundry; clothes to be pressed; or hair to be washed and dried under the real beauty-shop hair drier (the delight of us all!). And with the evening there comes some time for recreation — singing around the beautiful grand piano in the reception room, or games or reading in the recreation room. Or perhaps some girl has brought a box from home, and the fortunate friends are helping her cook a real meal in the kitchen. And there are few evenings when the housemother cannot detect the fragrance of popcorn on some one of the floors.

But we have also "lived" in having a part in much larger experiences. None of us can ever forget the impressive dedication service of the new Home, followed by open house for all friends of Mennonite Hospital when fifteen hundred friends inspected the Home. Nor the open house held for the faculty members of Illinois State Normal University, where our girls attend classes. Then we also remember with pleasure the several occasions on which our Home has been open to high school girls who are interested in nursing; the beautiful concert given by our Glee Club in our auditorium; the several impressive capping services when the members of our last class of "Probies" were accepted as nurses; and most recent of all, the beautiful reception honoring Mr. and Mrs. N. O. Hoover, who have completed twenty years of outstanding service here.

Then, too, our Home is a meeting place for various groups who serve our hospital needs. The doctors, the alumnae and the members of the Ladies' Auxiliary meet here once a month. And one of the busiest and happiest days through which we have lived since the opening of the Home was Hospital Day when representatives from every Mennonite organization in this district spent a busy and happy day with us.

"It takes a heap o'livin' in a house to make it home"! And we have done a "heap o'livin' " and it is proving a real home to all of us here. And it is with a heart full of gratitude that every girl here joins me in saying an earnest "thank you" to each Mennonite whose generosity has helped to make this beautiful Home possible.

Commencement Activities of the Class of 1947

by Wilma Marquis, Class of 1947

The Commencement activities of the Class of 1947 began with the beautiful and impressive baccalaureate service which was held at the Calvary Mennonite Church at Washington, Illinois. After the service an informal reception was held in the basement of the church for the graduates and their relatives and friends.

The Junior-Senior Banquet was a delightful event long to be remembered by everyone present. Since the surprise program of the evening was the dramatic presentation of the musical reading Carousel by Mr. Bradley-Griffin of Chicago and his assistants, the circus theme was cleverly carried out in decorations.

Another happy social event was the Alumnae Banquet at which the members of the graduating class had an opportunity to meet many of the former graduates of the Nursing School.

The breakfast given by the staff in the Nurses' Home was also an occasion long to be remembered The delicious food was eaten to the music of bright canaries whose cages had been arranged on a flower-banked stage where a tiny fountain played.

The commencement exercises were held in the Grace Methodist Church on Sunday afternoon, June 1. This impressive service was a fitting crown to the week's happy activities.

Alumnae Activities

by Myrna Slagell, R.N., Supervisor of Second Floor

The Mennonite Hospital Alumnae Association was organized in 1922 by the fifteen nurses who graduated that year. The organization has now grown to a membership of 272.

Recent statistics show that Mennonite graduates are located in practically every state in the Union and Hawaii, and we are very proud of our nurses who are doing missionary work in Africa, India, Ireland and Italy.

Of course, the Hospital and the Training School have always been the center of the alumnae's interest. We help finance special events, and are encouraging extra curricular activities for students such as choral club, swimming, tennis, and other wholesome sports. Sometime ago our organization started a Student Educational Loan Fund. This loan is available for some deserving student nurse who meets the requirements of the Training School and presents a need for financial assistance.

The alumnae have furnished a lovely corner room in the Hospital. This they also maintain. The Alumnae Association presents the Hospital with some practical gift each year at Christmas time.

When the dream of a new nurses' home became a reality our Association pledged $5,000 toward furnishing the rooms. This money was obtained by donations from members. At present we are approximately $300 from our goal.

The alumnae members have a loyalty to their hospital that can come only from a nursing school of fine ideals and standards. We are pleased that our Hospital and School of Nursing have advanced with medical science in service and in modern equipment, and we are proud of the structure itself which has grown to meet the growing needs of the community..

Challenge for the New Graduate

by Carol Diller, R.N., A. B., Clinical Instructor

And now as the busy three years of preparation draw to a close, we find many new opportunities and experiences beckoning us. They carry us into vast fields of contact with humankind and into adventures in patience and courage with persons who come from all walks of life, giving a deeper meaning to a nurse's life than can be found in any kind of work.

The opportunities for well trained, happy, Christian nurses, capable of guiding the masses to a better way of life are great. Opportunties are on every side—in the hospital, in public health nursing, missionary nursing or in homes of their own or those of friends and neighbors. No matter where she goes, the life of the real nurse with her spirit of service will be rich in giving and in receiving. She has not only become a specialist in her field but has learned to cooperate, to listen, to understand, and to be friend, teacher or guide, as the need may arise. Her life will be filled with human interest and happiness, even in retrospect.

Mountain Lake Y.P. Retreat

by Lola Mae Regier

Approximately sixty young people of Mountain Lake, Butterfield, and Delft enjoyed their first outdoor retreat at Stony Point Bible Camp, Lake Crystal, Minnesota, June 29 to July 3. Stony Point Camp is maintained by the Mission Covenant Church which permits use of the camp only to church organizations. The camp, which can accommodate 150 people, is neat, well-kept, and excellently equipped for recreational purposes. A large building houses the chapel, kitchen and dining space, and the girl's dormitory. Two smaller buildings are boy's dormitories, and six smaller cabins may be used as classrooms or as sleeping quarters. The buildings are situated along the shore of Loon Lake and surrounded by neat lawns and many beautiful trees. The lake offers opportunities for swimming and boating.

Retreat leaders were Rev. Henry Hege of Corn, Oklahoma, and Rev. Paul Tschetter and Mrs. M. M. Lehman of Butterfield. Willard Unruh of Mountain Lake directed the recreational program of the camp; and Miss Violet Voth, also of Mountain Lake, and Mr. Unruh served as music leaders. The retreat theme, "For Such a Time as This," (Esther 4:14), was carried through the daily classes and evening services.

To appreciate fully the activities of this retreat, one should spend a day with the retreaters at Stony Point. Reveille called retreaters from slumber at 7:00 each morning. By the time the "K. P." workers had finished washing the breakfast dishes, retreaters were already wending their way to the log cabin situated at the far edge of the grounds where morning devotions and classes were held. Rev. Tschetter taught the class in "Bible Study for Such a Time as This," basing his study on the book of James. Rev. Hege's class, "Christian Service for Such a Time as This," challenged retreaters to answer the need of the church for Christian workers. A singspiration and assembly period in the chapel completed a full morning for the campers. Following the noon rest period, boys and girls gathered for separate discussion groups led by Mrs. Lehman and Rev. Tschetter. The remainder of the afternoon found retreaters participating in sports and games such as kittenball, volleyball, swimming, basketball, badminton, horseshoe and croquet. Those less athletic minded could perhaps be found in the crafts shop where a variety of leatherwork and braiding projects were completed. Sounds from the chapel before the supper hour, indicated that choir and orchestra rehearsals were in progress. The 8:00 chapel bell called retreaters and visitors to the evening service led by Rev. Hege. The last activity of the day and perhaps the most impressive was the outdoor campfire service where in the quietness of beautiful evenings and the intimacy of a campfire circle, songs were sung, Christian experiences were exchanged, and retreaters dedicated themselves with new devotion to the service of Christ. The sound of the bugler's taps from Stony Point closed another busy day.

While this year's retreat is only a beginning, it is felt that the enthusiasm displayed by the group will result in a greater interest and a larger attendance for the next retreat. Officers elected for the coming year are: president, Alfred Loewen; vice-president, Adeline Quiring; secretary, Carol Lehman; treasurer, Wilbur Stoesz; registrar, Bruno Penner, and assistant registrar, Janice Quiring.

The American people, as a whole, do not know what it means to be Christian. One half of the people belong to no church; four-fifths of the people belong to no church school. The average man does not really know the love of God, Christ's Way for his life, the nature and function of the church, the Holy Bible. The average American is illiterate religiously.—The Methodist Board of Education.

Peter Dycks To Visit Churches

Peter and Elfrieda Dyck, veteran relief workers in Europe, arrived at Akron on July 23, en route to their home in Canada. Brother Dyck, of Laird, Saskatchewan, began his relief term in 1941 when he went to England to help in the operation of a children's home. Later it was possible for him to enter Holland to organize a relief program. As this work of food and clothing distribution was enlarged, a group of additional workers joined him. Among these was Sister Dyck, formerly Elfrieda Klassen, of Winnipeg, Manitoba.

While this work in Holland was progressing, a group of Mennonite refugees entered Holland and were given assistance by the Mennonite workers. As time went on, several hundred such refugees were given temporary homes in Holland. The problem of refugees also became more acute in Germany, and in 1946 Brother Dyck was able to enter Berlin for the purpose of helping a small group of Mennonite refugees who were then stranded in that city. Here these were provided with food, and others also were gathered in and cared for. Sister Dyck was again able to join him in this work, and with their background of relief technique and knowledge of the languages, they served very ably in caring for the refugees.

On February 1, 1947, this group of over a thousand Mennonite refugees was able to leave Berlin for Bremerhaven, and there a part of the group together with other refugees from Germany and Holland left aboard the S. S. Volendam for Paraguay. Brother and Sister Dyck accompanied this large group of 2,305 refugees on the ocean voyage, and upon arrival in South America also assisted in making arrangements for the further settlement of the people.

Brother Dyck has a number of films showing many aspects of refugee work—life in Berlin, the exodus from Berlin to Bremerhaven, embarking at Bremerhaven, life on board the Volendam, and the camp life in Buenos Aires and at Asuncion. An itinerary is being worked out which will enable Brother and Sister Dyck to visit many of the Mennonite communities in the United States and Canada, to relate their many varied experiences in relief and refugee work.

T. O. Hylkema of Holland Visits U.S.

Dutch Pastor to Visit Churches

Ds. T. O. Hylkema, Pastor of the Singel Doopsgesinde (Mennonite) church in Holland, arrived in this country on July 22 to begin a visit of over two months among the Mennonites in the United States and Canada. The Mennonite Central Committee has given assistance in contacting the various groups and in arranging his itinerary.

Ds. (Reverend) Hylkema has been instrumental in the development of the MCC projects in Holland. His assistance has been very helpful in contacting governmental and other agencies in the interests of MCC relief work. He brings with him an expression of appreciation for the help which the Mennonites of America have given the Dutch people in their time of need. His program here in America is to contact the churches and to give the people a report of the MCC relief work as received by the people of Holland. He will relate experiences with the Russian Mennonite refugees, and will share the experiences of the peace movements in which he has been active. He will further use this as an occasion to become better acquainted with the Mennonites of America, and help to interpret American Mennonite life to the Mennonites of Holland.

An itinerary has been planned which will enable Ds. Hylkema to visit churches in many of the Mennonite communities in the United States and Canada, as well as the church colleges, publishing houses, and other institutions.

CONFERENCE: In western Shensi, but mostly in southeastern Kansu, on the railroad running straight west from Kaifeng two days and two nights travel, lies the city of Paoki (Shensi) with 100,000 to 150,000 population and no extensive church work done so far. Here the people plead for a hospital as well as other mission work. About 150 miles further west lies Tienshui also on the Wei River. This is a wonderful city of 200,000 and maybe much more population. All Christian agencies welcome us and plead for a good Bible school and a Christian high school to prepare Chinese leaders for the great work, which is opening up much faster than the few weak Christian groups there can manage. "The harvest is great, but few are the laborers" they say. These two cities are connected by a war built railroad now in repair, also by a highway over the mountains in a round-about way. Two cities south Liksien and Siho are at our choice. The Lord has done it. He is here putting before us a wonderful opportunity. Shall we enter in?

Mennonites of Brazil To Attend Conference. Rev. David Koop of Curitiba and Rev. David Nikkel of Witmarsum Brazil, have accepted the invitation to attend the General Conference sessions at Berne, Indiana. They will represent the Mennonite churches of their communities. Congregations desiring their services should contact Rev. Walter Dyck, Mennonite General Conference Headquarters, Newton, Kansas.

Where Shall We Find It?

You may have a hundred questions, and find just the answer you need, in the MENNONITE COMMUNITY SOURCEBOOK. This booklet is the result of what a group of CPS men wanted to carry with them from more than four years of searching for the best materials and helps in various fields—Sunday school teaching, crafts, youth activities, good music, etc. This is a booklet which is helpful in many fields, and which is worth a great deal more than it costs.

Every Sunday School teacher and minister in Mennonite churches will be stimulated with the new possibilities suggested in this booklet! For example, how often there is need for books to give stories about favorite hymns. The sourcebook suggests ten good books for that purpose, with comments on each.

Youth activities for Sunday evening and during the week are the concern of many young and older folks. Here are suggestions for short courses organization, books on youth questions, how to start crafts, or one or two good books that will make "social" planning much easier.

Young married couples may be looking for guides in buying religious books for their children, or guides for training the children.

Many other answers may be found in the SOURCEBOOK. Perhaps you are looking for a suggestion for a book to buy as a gift. Browsing through the SOURCEBOOK will stimulate you to many practical suggestions and how and where to order them too. Or if you want to order magazines for the home, to whom do you write? Consult the SOURCEBOOK!

This booklet, prepared out of the experiences of Civilian Public Service educational directors, is available from the MCC, Akron, Pennsylvania, for fifty cents.

He had served as Sunday school teacher for about fifty years, several years as trustee, and also as our correspondent to the Bundesbote."—Anona Landes, Corr.

—First Church, Berne, Indiana: On Sunday morning, July 20, the new $25,000 organ was dedicated. Freeman Burkhalter, Minister of Music, made the announcement that the organ was fully paid for, and a special praise offering for missions was taken. This amounted to over $1,000. Mr. Ted Moller, President of the Moller Organ Company, which installed the organ, was present and made a few remarks. Mr. Beard, accomplished organist from Chicago, played at the service. In the afternoon, at an informal service, he gave practical demonstrations of the possibilities of the organ. In the evening he gave a concert which was interspersed by some beautiful selections by the choir, climaxed by the "Hallelujah Chorus." The church is grateful for this organ, and the prayer and purpose is that at all times it may be used to the praise and glory of God.—Martha Gilliom, Corr.

—First Church, McPherson, Kansas: The brick laying is quite well under way on our church building, and we plan to have the bricks all laid within the next three weeks. We had the pleasure of having Rev. Walter H. Dyck and Rev. B. H. Janzen as our guest speakers recently. Six members were taken into our congregation lately.—Mrs. Freeman Jantz, Corr.

—First Church, Sugarcreek, Ohio: Sunday morning, August 3, our congregation joins with the Dalton and Wadsworth churches in a fellowship picnic at the Orr Park in Orville, Ohio. Rev. Irvin Richert is to preach the morning sermon. The Dalton Church will furnish a quartet, and the Sugarcreek Choir will sing. Sunday evening, July 27, we held a special service in honor of Irvin and Shirley Richert who have done such a splendid service here this summer. Irvin gave us a most interesting account of his trip to Poland as a leader of a group taking over a load of horses. We will miss the Richerts when they leave next week. —Wiley McDowell, Corr.

—First Church, Wadsworth, Ohio: The Sugarcreek, Dalton and Wadsworth congregations will have a joint worship service on August 3 at Orr Park near Orrville. Irvin Richert will be the preacher of the morning. Mr. Richert is a student at the Mennonite Seminary in Chicago and has been assisting with the work at Sugarcreek for the summer. Following the service there will be a picnic dinner. Families are asked to bring basket dinners and table service.—Hattie Yoder, Corr.

—Hebron Church, Buhler Kansas: Miss Lois H. Lohrentz, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. A. M. Lohrentz, sailed June 23, on the S. S. Marine Tiger, a government sponsored ship for the exchange of students and teachers. The trip was made for study and the promotion of goodwill and understanding between nations. There are 800 students in this group of which twenty-eight are Mennonite. They docked at Plymouth, England, on July 3. They toured London, Stratford-on-Avon, Oxford, etc. in their short stay. Lois was especially impressed by the beauty of the English countryside, green hedges and flowers. Their next stop was Paris and then on to the University of Leyden in Amsterdam for several weeks study. On weekends they will go out to visit around in Holland and study conditions. Their boat will dock in New York by the first week in September. The funeral for Ella H. Regier was held in our church July 17. She died following a tonsillectomy. A large group attended the C. E. Picnic held at the Harvey County Park, Sunday evening July 13.—Mrs. Arthur Neufeldt, Corr.

—Immanuel Church, Los Angeles: Rev. and Mrs. Albert Jantzen and family were with us on July 13. A jeep and trailer equipment to be used by Rev. and Mrs. Aaron Jantzen in India, were dedicated to the Lord that same morning. Rev. and Mrs. Wesley Van Nattan and two sons, our recent missionaries, have left for Oklahoma where they are serving under the "Go Ye" Mission.

—Menno Mennonite, Lind, Washington: Having been without a pastor for over one year, we are thankful to God for answering our prayers in sending us Rev. Willard Wiebe to serve us. We are expecting him the latter part of September. We were happy to have Rev. E. J. Miller, our former pastor, and family with us July 27. Rev. Miller held a child's consecration service at that time. Our pulpit has been well supplied this summer with visiting ministers including, Rev. Miller, Rev. Herbert Dester, Rev. Suckau, Rev. Haushaw, Eldon Unruh, and Leo Laurense, an exchange student from Holland.—Mrs. Henry J. Franz, Corr.

—Salem Church, Freeman, South Dakota: Young people from this community are making plans to attend the Y. P. retreat at Lake Crystal Camp ground at Sioux City, Iowa. The retreat is to be held August 6-10. Attendance at this retreat will be a privilege for young people since a very worthwhile program has been planned with excellent speakers and teachers in attendance. Several brothers of the congregation have been appointed to solicit funds to help the immigrants in Paraguay to establish new homes. To date, cash gifts total $4,531.60, and loans $9.50.—Elma Waltner, Corr.

—Bethel Church Mountain Lake, Minnesota: Four sheep have been donated for relief. These will be canned in Lakefield this week. Our pastor, Rev. Waltner, left for the Oklahoma Young People's Retreat yesterday. Rev. John N. C. Hiebert will occupy our pulpit in Rev. Waltner's absence, August 3. The Wheaton Crusaders gave a program in our church Sunday evening. Norman Voth, one of our boys, is a member of this group.—Helen Penner, Corr.

CHURCHES SUPPORT NATIONAL MENTAL HEALTH FOUNDATION

According to a recent report the National Mental Health Foundation, 1520 Race Street, Philadelphia 2, is in very urgent need of voluntary contributions to help cover expenses. The Foundation, which depends upon voluntary contributions for its existence, has already very definitely helped to raise the standards of care and treatment given to mental patients. It has largely been responsible for the wave of interest in mental hospital conditions which has swept the country. It conducts a research program and provides valuable information to hospitals and to attendants serving in them and also promotes more enlightened preventative measures. The Foundation is an outgrowth of the work which C.P.S. men did in mental hospitals. Orie O. Miller Executive-secretary of the M.C.C., is a member of the Board of Directors. Several Mennonite churches in central Kansas are holding special offerings for the Foundation, one of which is the Hoffnungsau Church, Inman, Kansas, of which Rev. Albert Gaeddert is pastor. Rev. Gaeddert heartily favors supporting the Foundation for the work which it is doing.

Brethren Olin A. Krehbiel and Elmer W. Baumgartner Confer in the Meetinghouse of the First Mennonite Church Berne, Indiana

The words "confer" or "conference" come from the Latin conferre, which literally means "to bring together" or "to bear together." A conference is worthwhile only if there is a willingness to bring and bear together. The Proverbs add that "where no counsel is, the people fall: but in the multitude of counsellors there is safety." Prov. 11:14.

How selfishly and lonely many are plodding their own self-centered way. "Hungry and thristy, their souls fainted in them," (Ps. 107:5) until they began to long to go with the multitude "to the house of God" for mutual counsel and encouragement.

Within a few weeks many of us hope to be together to share past experiences, compare present views and convictions, and consider future plans. "Before our Father's throne we (need to) pour our ardent prayers; our fears, our hopes, our aims are one, our comforts and our cares." Whether two confer together personally, or two hundred get together in a local congregation, or two thousand move together in a conference — the same principle holds: "If we walk in the light, as He is in the light, we have fellowship one with another" I John 1:7.

Let us pray with others for the safety of a multitude of Christ-like counsellors who are ready "to bear together."—Walter H. Dyck, Secretary

EQUITABLE REMUNERATION

Periods of transition are always hard and difficult whether it be a change of language, a new method of operating a business, or simply an adjustment to the new circumstances which surround us. Any major period of transition usually carries with it some losses and inequitable practices no matter how hard we seek to guard against them. We have, for the last several years, gone through a period of transition from low or normal to higher prices, and though we have long awaited the turn toward lower price levels, that general trend is still not indicated. Through this period of transition, salaried church and conference workers have perhaps suffered the greater financial loss, and church and conference officers and boards have been confronted with the very difficult problem of being fair and just to the employee as well as to the church or conference. In arriving at an equitable remuneration, it is advisable that we make certain that such remuneration adequately cover the present day cost of living in order that we do not work an undue hardship upon our church and conference workers.—H. J. Andres, Chairman of the Board of Publication of the General Conference, a member of the Executive Committee of Conference, and Administrator of the Bethel Hospital, Newton, Kansas.

TOTAL EFFORT FOR RELIEF AND MISSIONS

"A live church cannot help but spend itself in a time such as this." So writes Rev. A. E. Kreider from our China mission and relief scene. "There is an urgency about missions. No time can be lost."

During the past several years of relief work as a church we have surprised ourselves in how large and useful a work the Lord can do if we consecrate several years of service—time, money, materials, and organizational talent. There is some desire to slip back to "normal" now that the work is over. But there is also the conviction that with the cause of missions so urgent and the need for continued relief —that rather than relax we should mobilize for a continued total effort of relief and missions. War relief work is at its peak now and is decreasing in certain areas while in others it as important as ever. Our mission program, retarded by war, is again beginning to bloom and should evidence great expansion in the next five years.

What must we do to mobilize for an expanded program of missions? We will need to have a large number of ministers and lay people come to grips with the need, grasp with a new fire the "good news" of salvation, and have a program that offers participation by large numbers in many ways. Should there be a special conference of lay members and ministers out of which grow new efforts—use of the radio, home community efforts of winning the unchurched, more use of short time volunteers, more integration of relief and missions? We must continue to break away for one, two, or three year periods and many for a life service. Ten percent or more of income-giving is the minimum for Christians. We are called for such a time as this!—Elmer Ediger, M.C.C worker in charge of the organization of mental rest homes and also in charge of the summer voluntary service program.

PROJECTS FOR LAYMEN

There seems to be a growing interest in the General Conference in organizing the laymen in the churches for carrying out worthwhile projects and for making them more effective witnesses of Christ in whatever profession or occupation they are. Such laymen's organizations can find many worthwhile projects. The following are some which might be considered: 1. Spreading the good news of non-resistance and the overcoming of evil with good. When atomic war threatens mankind with the destruction of tens

WE LOOK TO OUR CHURCH SCHOOLS

by E. W. Baumgartner

This topic immediately voices a concern by parents who are sending their children to institutions of higher learning, by our churches who look for leadership, by employers who are looking for employees with dependable character. In fact, all of modern society is concerned in the training of our young people.

To whom may we turn for the great task of an education which is Christian even though the subjects taught are mostly secular? Can we trust our state schools and universities? No. The state schools are only nominally concerned regarding an education for our young people which is Christian. The courses taught in state schools may be the same in name and character, but the motive in the teaching of these courses is to educate the mind and too often is an attempt to produce men and women who will be able to reason out in their own wisdom the answers to all questions which arise in the minds of all normal people regarding the universe, man's origin, his destiny, and purpose in life. This too often ends in rank rationalism, the end of which is defeat and fatalism.

The need for trained men and women in every profession, vocation, and calling, was never greater than today. The need is for Christian education in science, liberal arts, business, and above all else in the world of religion. For this kind of education we turn then to our church schools where we not only have a right to expect, but as a church have a right to demand that education be Christian. When we demand this kind of education we have the high responsibility to support, to pray for, and to show faithful interest in our church schools rather than throw stones from the outside in a spirit of "better-than-thou."

We look to our church schools keeping in mind that we desire that every phase of modern education must be Christian. It is in place to say here that if a young person coming from one of our homes enters one of our church schools without the saving knowledge of Christ as Saviour, we have a right to expect the faculty of the church school to lead that person to Christ. Better still, let parents feel responsible to God and child in sending to our church schools young people who have been led to Christ. For this the home and the church are also responsible. How often even Christian parents expect our church schools to bring about in a child that which has been so carelessly neglected in the home.

We look to our church schools because there the Word of God is honored and true education is considered to be final only when it is Christian. Religious education is more than moral education because religious education is motivated by a fundamental conviction respecting the structure of the universe itself and a fundamental faith in the character of a personal living God as Creator and Jesus Christ as Saviour, which is more than any mere statement of rules of living or laws of human accomplishments.

Then, too, religion stands for more than human endeavor or human aspiration. It is more than a name for devotion to ideals. We have not passed beyond the bounds of morality and into the life of religion until we have reached a faith that the structure of the universe itself is the expression of the will and purpose of the living God. It is the supreme function of true education so to reveal the universe to young people that they shall understand that beneath them and about them there is this loving purpose and power of God. That is the challenge to our church schools, so to reveal God and his purpose for man that what they learn in college does not conflict with the purpose of God.

There is another thing. We look to our church schools for an education which will find a living expression in Jesus Christ in whom we believe there dwelt the fullness of the Godhead bodily. It is the function of true education so to reveal Jesus Christ to our young people that He shall command their admiration and their devotion. The God we want our youth to know is the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ; and it is the function of true education to make effective in the lives of our young people that revelation of the character of God which is the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ. For such guidance we have a right to look to our church schools.

We look to our church schools for an education which reaches and rises above impulse, an education which directs to that voice which is from God's great tribunal, a voice which helps young folk to solve conflict between mere pleasure and duty. Christian education trains youth to be courageous. It teaches youth to dismiss fears calmly by facing them with Christ. It enables youth to see that the path of safety, no less than honor, lies in straightforward truthfulness and sincerity, that youth's real danger is in disloyalty to God. We expect this kind of learning from our church schools.

The highest manifestation of moral growth is the

The future of our country depends upon its earnest, thoughtful Christian young people. Our safety will not be found in the genius of some great man, but in the presence in all our communities of trained men, men of strength, men of wisdom, men who fear God more than man.

Christlike spirit. Education falls short of its true goal if the learner does not sit at the feet of the great Teacher. Religion is not emotion; it is an upward movement toward God. For this we, too, expect the church school to make her contribution.

Finally, young lives are to be selected lives. They are to be leaders in the fields of opportunity. The future of our country depends upon its earnest, thoughtful Christian young people. Our safety will not be found in the genius of some great man, but in the presence in all our communities of trained men, men of strength, men of wisdom, men who fear God more than man. We turn to our church schools based upon a deep desire—a spontaneous desire of the people of our Mennonite homes and churches that all our children should learn to know right and wrong as revealed in the Scriptures before they take their place as adult members of our churches and communities.

Gladys Klassen Reports on Trip to India

The many months of waiting for passage to India were finally ended on February 26, when we first heard of the S.S. City of Tokio.

We were dubious about a ship by that name — a freighter, carrying only five passengers, none of whom I knew. I would not be going with the Lubin Jantzens as was long planned. We were to disembark at Karachi. This would mean a longer and more difficult overland journey. The ship was scheduled to sail March 1, only four full days left. My father was ill, and the car was not in working condition. The snows were deep. Yet the Lord spoke assurance of His leading and gave strength to act upon His promises. "There hath not failed one word of His good promise."

After two nights and a day, with the help of many friends, I left home with all my things. After another day and a half I arrived in New York City where the Biblical Seminary was my haven. The sailing was postponed several times, giving adequate time for all my trunks to get on board, for final arrangements, and for a spiritual retreat with friends at the Seminary. They helped me get on board the evening before sailing.

On a beautiful day, March 6, at noon, three tugboats pulled us away from the loading pier in Brooklyn, and we sailed out of the New York harbor. I discovered the one with whom I was to share our little cabin to be a fellow Mennonite, a nurse from Ohio, Anna Lois Rohrer, sent by MCC to the American Mennonite mission field in the Central Provinces. Mr. and Mrs. Ray Rice from Lincoln were returning to the field of the Christian Church in the Central Provinces. Miss Winifred Gray, also a nurse, who left us at Karachi for the northern Punjab, was from Canada and belonged to the Church of England. With these I shared the experiences of our journey, which on the whole were very pleasant. We had no time to be lonely.

The ship had not carried passengers for seven years and no ladies before. It was not a luxury liner. The captain turned out to be an English gentleman of clean speech, friendly and congenial. We five had all our meals with him and shared his two small decks for our fresh air and limited exercise. He showed us many things of interest regarding the ship and told us of his experiences. It was an education in itself. There were twenty of the British staff and sixty-two Indian crewmen. We learned some British terminology as well as a few Hindi words.

Twelve days of sailing were necessary for crossing the gray Atlantic. A storm the first week-end at sea delayed us and also gave us our only experience of seasickness. The seven days across the blue Mediterranean were pleasant. We spent twenty-four hours altogether stopping at Port Said at the north end of Suez Canal, travelling through by night, and refueling in the harbor at the south end of the canal. We passengers could not leave the ship. We had beautiful sailing weather the ten days through the Gulf of Suez, Red Sea, around the tip of Arabia, through Gulf of Aden and the Arabian Sea to Karachi. Captain said that in six weeks the picture might be stormy. Several days we had a glassy sea. On the thirtieth day of sailing, April 5, we docked at Karachi and first set foot on Indian soil! What a thrill it was to get our first sights, sounds and smells of India!

Again we had another difficulty removed for which we praised God. The agent said that the passengers might stay on board to Bombay without extra charge. God had again done the "exceedingly abundantly above" our request.

On Easter day, as on other Sundays, unnecessary work on board ship ceased. We attended the Methodist Church for Easter services. The minister's theme was "That we may know Him and the power of His resurrection." What a wonderful introduction to our service in India! May that continue to be our prayer.

On Wednesday morning we sailed away from India. After two more days of enjoying the ocean we landed in Bombay, April 11.

To our joy Martha Burkhalter was there to meet me, and she helped Anna Lois and me reach Central Provinces. The Lord again answered prayer in our finding a place to stay in Bombay and in getting through customs the day we landed. We were a bit sad to say "Goodbye" to the ship, but by that time it was hot and stuffy in our cabin. After a day of rest and worship in Bombay we set out by train on Monday afternoon for Champa where we arrived at about 10:30 Tuesday evening, April 15.

How good it was to see all the missionaries who are stationed at Champa and to have arrived at my destination at last! Every bit of my baggage arrived with me. Again the Lord answered my prayers the "exceedingly abundantly above." I not only arrived in time to go along with the rest to language school, but I also had nearly two weeks on the plains to get acquainted with the missionaries and their work and to receive inspiration for language study. It was my privilege to see all our mission stations except Korba.

It was a real joy to attend the welcome services for the Lubin Jantzens the Sunday after the Champa Church welcomed me. They had arrived on Saturday night. On the following Tuesday we language students and four of the missionaries on vacation set out for the hills. Now we are settled at Ellangowan House. Six of us language students registered May 5, and now our first concern is to learn the medium through which we shall bring the message of salvation. My four shipmates are also here in Landour. Our hearts are filled with praise for the way our Good Shepherd has gone before and graciously led us all the way. I am grateful for your remembrance of me in prayer.

How a Congregation Can Encourage It's Pastor

by Andrew Shelly

"Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labour is not in vain in the Lord." I Cor. 15:58.

This challenge of St. Paul to the Christians at Corinth is the same one the faithful pastor seeks to give to his congregation. Realizing the supremacy of the Kingdom of God, the pastor desires to inspire his members to a full allegiance to that Kingdom. This involves a complete consecration. It suggests that whatever the status of the individual member he is first a Christian.

That this is a high task is apparent. If he depended upon his own strength, the pastor would shirk from so great an assignment. In viewing the entire work of the pastor, it would seem that a congregation can give encouragement in at least six ways.

First, faithfulness in prayer. It would indeed be difficult to overestimate the power of prayer. Jesus prayed and urged His followers to do likewise. Paul constantly reminds those to whom he wrote that he prayed for them, and urged them to pray for him and for each other. When the 120 were in the upper room "in one accord" things happened!

We think of praying for the pastor and also praying for the work of the Church and Kingdom in general. A short editorial is entitled: "Pray more — talk less." It is the story of a man who was a brilliant pastor, but not sound in doctrine. Three godly men covenanted together to meet regularly for prayer. A change occurred. One wonders what the result of prayer on the part of members could accomplish in empowering the minister for his task!

Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman referred to an invalid as the most valuable member of his congregation. The reason was her prayer life. In his judgment her prayers released great power in his great church. Encouraged is any pastor who is conscious of the fact that his officers, Sunday school teachers and other members are praying people.

Second, regularity in attendance. The faithful pastor realizes his responsibility in being the mouthpiece of God in the pulpit. While mere attendance at the worship services of the church is not all that matters, it is important. Public worship is not an optional choice of the followers of Christ; it is ordained of God. It is necessary for spiritual growth.

Members can make it the fixed rule of their lives to be at their places at the hour of worship. They should make it a point to be present a short time before the hour set in order to prepare their hearts for the worship.

Third, willingness to cooperate. This is one of the prime secrets of success for the church. To experience a hearty response of cooperation on the part of members is a real encouragement to a pastor. This does not mean that the pastor becomes a dictator, and members merely blindly follow. It means that the consecrated minds of the group seek to find the best ways to promote the Kingdom. Instead, helpful suggestions and criticism of members are indications of cooperation. Each member should realize that he is "saved to serve." Each member should be an enthusiastic booster of the work of the church.

Fourth, adequacy of support. No faithful pastor desires to become wealthy. A true shepherd of souls regards money as a means to an end. However, a pastor needs to be set free to use his time and energies in the service of Christ and the Church. He can thus give himself devotedly and completely to the work of the Kingdom.

Fifth, sincerity of consecration. The pastor is encouraged as he realizes that members are led closer to the Lord. He does not desire that they merely accept his admonitions, but rather his passion is that they will come to the Lord in the spirit of Paul: "What wilt thou have me to do?" He seeks to encourage members to present themselves" a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God." The highest purpose of the pastor is to inspire his members to be completely yielded to God so that the Holy Spirit can direct their lives.

Upon leaving a service one man said to another:

"Well, it is all over." The other replied: "No, it is just beginning." The point of the conversation is clear. We enter the auditorium to worship and we depart to serve!

Sixth, unity of spirit. Paul wrote to the Ephesians: "I, then, the prisoner for the Lord's sake, entreat you to live and act as becomes those who have received the call that you have received—with all lowliness of mind and unselfishness, and with patience, bearing with one another lovingly, and earnestly striving to maintain, in the uplifting bond of peace, the unity given by the Spirit." (Eph. 4:1-3. Weymouth).

The Church is the place where peace ought to prevail. This is important for the Church itself, for where there is unity there is strength—and the task of the Church is supremely important! It is also important as a testimony to the world. This testimony is enhanced if there is a spirit of loyal unity. This was one secret of the power of the early Christian Church.

In conclusion, the faithful pastor seeks to fulfill his responsibility as the leader of the Church. He is responsible to God for his stewardship. He and the congregation are "labourers together with God."

of millions of people in one night, then those who profess to have a way for dealing with evil ought to make it clear. 2. Promoting the improvement of standards in mental hospitals, the establishing of Mennonite mental hospitals, and the prevention of mental disease. 3. The prayerful support of church schools. In this day in which we know the secret of the atom, we need strong schools to graduate men and women who love God. 4. Relief activities. Men are dying in body and in soul because of want. If the above projects are urgent and vital, as we believe them to be, then laymen might well tackle them.—Reynold Weinbrenner, Editor

A Mother Prays:

I am very tired, Heavenly Father. I don't feel like saying very much. My back hurts. But the windows got washed today, and there is a neat pile of mended play-suits on the sewing machine. Thank you for helping me to get it done. I could not have done it without You.

Will You please forgive me for those times when I became impatient? Bobbie didn't want to settle down for his afternoon nap. It kind of "got" me. And then when John got mad at Betty's teasing—well I started to get hot inside, too. I'm sorry. Then too, I didn't let the Spirit of God lead me as I ought to have. Where I have grieved Him, forgive me. I suppose at times I did not trust Thee enough.

Keep us all, Bill, and the children, and me, for Thee. Amen.

Reader Response:

DIFFERENT OR LIKE OTHER MEN?

Editor, The Mennonite:

Is it arrogance maintaining that the Mennonite denomination in doctrine and polity resembles closest the Apostolic Church? Anyway in her origin. But in our mania to imitate the great denominations we let go one heritage after another. Even non-resistance and refusal of oath we are fast beginning to dismiss. In our eagerness "to be like them" many young and old are ashamed to adhere to non-resistance or refusal of oath.

When Jesus preached the sermon on the mount, the Church of Christ was still in the future. Nevertheless, it is binding for her the same as the rest of the word of God. Yet non-resistance is rather rooted in her structure and can not be separated from her. She is an organism of which every member is indwelled by the Holy Spirit. The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, etc. From the divine love "shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Spirit which is given unto us" non-resistance is a branch. By Him the believer "is conformed to the image of his Son" and made Christ minded. Jesus came to save not to destroy. Therefore a true Christian who is a member of the body of Christ never can participate in warfare. 1) He can not destroy other people's property who have done him no harm; 2) he can not wound, mutilate or kill his fellow men who in the same way are obliged to fight and defend their country, and only by pronunciation of their respective governments are declared enemies; 3) he has no right to send his fellowmen to hell by killing them in their unsaved state; 4) how can he, if his opponent happens to be also a member of the body of Christ mutilate or kill him? 5) indwelled by the Holy Spirit, thus being a temple of God, how can he commit any . . . . deeds expected of soldiers to be done? It is incompatible, irreconcilable with the church of Christ.

Though the Mennonites constitute but a small minority in the church of Christ, which as a whole rejects non-resistance, yet we should hold fast to it and not waver. We are on Biblical ground. "Let us earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered to the saints."

Question: Are we Mennonites consistently maintaining non-resistance while at the same time casting votes for executive officers, viz., sheriff or president, who is Chief Commander of the Army?

M.C.C. Serves Six Million Meals in Six Months

AKRON, PA., August 1—Eighteen MCC workers met at Krefield, Germany, the week-end of July 11-13 to review the first half year of MCC relief service in the British and French Zones of Germany. The Mennonite workers represented feeding programs at Kiel, Lubeck, Krefeld, Gronau, Ludwigshaven, Neustadt, Kaiserslautern, the Saar, and several smaller cities. It was revealed that approximately six million meals have been served in the MCC feeding programs in the British and French Zones during the first six months of 1947.

Attention at this conference was centered on the preparation of a pamphlet giving the principles and methods of administering relief feeding programs—particularly child feeding programs. The first draft of the pamphlet was studied and revised by the group. The booklet of thirty or forty pages is expected to be ready for distribution in September.

Every Family Had Two Hungry Guests

June was the "worst food month" of the year. It was also the month when the MCC program in Germany reached its highest peak. A total of 79,677 were fed daily in feeding programs for children, aged, and young people in a dozen cities of the British and French Zones of Germany.

Assuming that there are 40,000 Mennonite families in the U. S. and Canada, and with approximately 80,000 meals served by our MCC relief teams, each Mennonite family supported two guests. Yes, every Mennonite family in the U. S. and Canada had two hungry German guests at its table for a meal each day during the month of June! Of these, 54,000 were children and 16,000 were aged. The MCC program is now being reduced for the late summer months and is to be resumed again on a larger scale by the middle of October.

In addition to the MCC feeding programs, other programs are also MCC-supported in Germany. Relief supplies are shipped reguarly to the German Protestant relief agencies for general distribution and to German Mennonite agencies for caring for Mennonite need.—Robert Kreider, Berlin, Germany.

Work in South America

C. J. Rempel, appointed by the Peace Section to work among the Mennonites in Paraguay, Argentina, and Brazil, reports good progress in his mission. He has been able to gain the interest of the young people, in part through his musical talents. Wherever possible he has held discussions on the topic of nonresistance and has explained the importance of this doctrine in the Christian way of life. The leaders appreciate his work, and many of them have committed themselves to keep "this teaching of Jesus."

In preparation at the present time are several pieces of Mennonite peace literature to be printed in the German language. This will be made available to the German speaking Mennonites in South America and Europe as well as North America.

Draft Census in Progress

A final draft census is being conducted by the Peace Section to determine the total number of Mennonite men drafted during the recent war. The pastor of each Mennonite congregation has been asked to report the number of men drafted, and whether they were classified IV-E, 1-A-O, or 1-A. This information will be compiled and made available to each of the cooperating Mennonite groups.

A detailed census was taken in 1945 to secure information on why drafted men chose to enter CPS or the armed service. That census, however, was taken before the Selective Service System had ended, and thus the information was not complete. This final draft census, though not including an analysis of the reasons for the stand taken, will furnish accurate data on the number of Mennonite men in each of the draft classifications, for the entire World War II period.

Them Quotable Quotes

"I know that my mother, ..., likes the BUNDESBOTE very much. She says there is so much in it about the part of Germany she came from . . . ., etc. My father was a Mennonite and I share all his non-resisting ideas and two of my four sons entered prison rather than take part in the recent carnage. They were later released and sent to CPS camps where they worked without pay at fire-fighting, etc.

"I have received great satisfaction reading THE MENNONITE and even though I married a (non-Mennonite) and attend that church, I often use quotations and poems at the Ladies Aid Meetings.

"I am glad that we have peace groups as a sort of balance wheel in the United States because there are enough people, in churches and out, who can think of nothing but bloody revenge to settle affairs of the rulers of nations. They are all so easily influenced by propaganda and get the teachings of Christ all twisted around.

" May the Lord bless your work so that more people may be enlightened. It was through my efforts that a fine family joined the Mennonite church at ...., even though I have not been able to convince my husband so far. He is a .... by tradition, even though he sides with peacemakers."

Youth Team Begins Church Visitation

The Youth Team is an entirely new effort to be of service to local churches. The Youth Team consists of four young people under the leadership of Erna Fast who are visiting and serving Mennonite churches in Indiana and Illinois. At each church they do any of a great variety of things that need doing. The following letter presents a vivid picture of their experiences.

Nappanee, Indiana

Dear Bertha,

The weary, but happy five are reporting on our two weeks since we left Kansas, Nebraska, dear old Minnesota (and Vermont)! We've lived so "fully" these two weeks, it seems like a month has passed. The bunch of us (including the "Dictator") met at the Seminary on the fifth of July. In spite of all of the instructions from home (hang on to your purse, etc.) we arrived without complications. (Erna says to tell you she'll never forget the looks on our faces when we saw Chicago railroad stations and had a whiff of that million dollar smell, the stock yards!)

Our mornings at the Seminary were spent in preparation and planning for the next week. Erna emphasized preparing worship services, Bible story telling, recreation, and activities. A profitable morning was spent in getting acquainted with books and selecting material at the Presbyterian book store in The Loop. We realized our program must be flexible and that nothing definite could be settled until we reached each community.

Chicago! — the city of many nationalities — the foul air — the noise — the trollies — the soot —. We visited the Museum of Science and Industry, heard a concert in Grant Park and toured the city by night. Being from the Middlewest and Mennonite communities, we were amazed at the deplorable and crowded conditions of the city. In one particular section, we were instructed to close our windows to avoid misdirected tomatoes. In our room later, after seeing these gypsies, hoboes, and seemingly aimless people, we wondered, "What is their aim in life?" "Where are they going?" "What do they live for?" Another afternoon we spent wandering about in the many departments of Marshall Field's. Thursday evening, due to unknown reasons, we were pushed out on our own to fare forth on I.C. from 47th to the Wrigley Building to board the boat for a lake cruise. The Lakeshore Drive, with its many lights and constant stream of automobiles, seemed like the footlights of a very large stage. The city looked beautiful, especially the brightly lit Wrigley Building, on which millions of candle power of light are poured every night. The stars and the sky both became visible again — and oh for a breath of that fresh air! The remark was made at the Seminary that we saw more in one week than many of them had seen in a whole summer.

Saturday the five of us boarded the B&O for Nappanee. The ride was none too pleasant for the car was filled with dense tobacco smoke and the scenery was largely the industrial section along the shore of the lake. Rev. Enz and Elva Shrock, our hostess, were waiting at the depot. Rev. Enz played "the gallant role" and lugged what he thought a year's supply of baggage, but after we learned their program for the week, we used every bit of it. Saturday night we planned the Sunday morning worship with a group of young people from the church. The entire service was conducted by our group and their young people, with the theme "Youth Serves Christ Today." That same afternoon we returned to Chicago for the first Indiana-Illinois song festival. To us it was truly a thrill to join in the fellowship and singing. Monday morning we began our work with a group of fifty youngsters from all denominations here in Nappanee. By Wednesday the group had grown to eighty. Our activities included supervised recreation, story telling, group singing, and the group collected several boxes of toys for MCC relief. This Friday morning the older group sang for several shut-in relatives of some of the children. We were pleased with the results of this, for the older people were overjoyed, and the youngsters felt as though they had contributed to the happiness of someone.

Monday night a group gathered to clean the grounds around the church. Another afternoon we spent with the women of the church doing relief sewing. Tuesday night about twenty-seven young people were guests of the M. S. Pletcher's at their summer home at Lake Syracuse. The swimming, surf and boat riding were a real treat for us "Westerners." After a delicious meal we joined in a worship service by the side of the lake. It meant a lot to us to have some of their young people be a part of the service. Thursday night the Wilbur Naylor's entertained the Junior and Intermediate Sunday school classes at their cottage at the Lake. A beautiful sunset across the lake offered a perfect setting for the worship service which climaxed the evening. Our theme was "Remember Thy Creator in the Days of Thy Youth."

During this week we five have become a familiar sight riding with Rev. Enz in his sputtering '31 Chevrolet. A new standing joke among us is "I'm Elsie Epp from Henderson, I'm Erna Friesen also from Henderson, I'm Eloise Faust from Delft, Minnesota, I'm Erna Fast from Mountain Lake, Minnesota, and I'm Norma Jost from Hillsboro, Kansas." By which we're usually met with — "Oh, you're both from Nebraska! Did you know each other in Minnesota? Do they all grow tall in Kansas? Have you any water in Nebraska????"

We've come to a unanimous vote that we've been most fortunate to have a home all to ourselves. The Wilbur Naylor's have opened their home in town to our group and we've enjoyed it immensely. Another unanimous opinion is that all Nappanee women are excellent cooks, for we've had delicious food each place we've visited.

Above all, however, we feel we've been blessed in far more than material surroundings. Bertha, you know what our desires are — to be a witness for Christ, to be of service to the Church, and to present a challenge to the young people. As we go on to our next place, we depend on your prayers.

Race Barriers in the South

from the Gulfport, Mississippi, Service Unit

"Fourteen of our campers attended Sunday evening services at a Negro church. The appreciation and renewed faith in God and man, expressed by the Negroes to us because of this act, was a thrill. Six of our girls sang and the minister said from the pulpit—'This is the first time a white choir has sung in our Negro church since God said, "Let there be light," ' In his sermon he also mentioned the fact that there still were some people who believed in Christ enough to do what He commands.

"One of the colored boys came to camp with one of the workers from Bible School last Wednesday. It was Boys' Club afternoon. When the white boys came, Clarence went right along with them, and worked as hard as any, hoeing the garden. Then 3:30 came, and everyone hopped into his trunks and into the lake —everyone but Clarence; he sat on the diving platform and watched. One couldn't help but notice the wistful look in his eye. One of the white boys called out and asked Clarence why he didn't come in too. He murmured something about not having his bathing suit. The two things that especially impressed me were the fact that white boys were willing to accept Clarence as one of them after they got to know him; they didn't seem aware of any color line; and that just because Clarence is brown, and all the others are white— though Clarence is even a finer boy than many of them—he cannot enjoy the lake as other boys can. The injustice of it all struck home more forcibly than ever."

A Day at Camp Bernard

For some of us at Camp Bernard, the day begins at 5:30. That's the cooks, bless them who seem to be on the job all day long. The rest of us manage to make it to breakfast at 6:30, but even Slagell and Friesen don't always have time to put their shoes on.

One of the group is to conduct devotions this morning, so we gather in the social room or down by the lake after breakfast for a period of singing, meditating and prayer. We now feel physically and spiritually ready for the day.

For the next hour or so, the Bible school teachers and recreation workers hurry around finishing their plans for the day, and wish they had finished cutting out the angels and had learned how to make paper mache the night before instead of contributing to that round table discussion in the dorm until 11:30.

Bible school is really a thrill this week, because we're teaching colored children. Soon after 9:00 o'clock the day's session begins to the tone of "Fisheh's of Men" or "Runnin' Oveh." The children learn many things, not the least of them being to share with one another. Quoting Miss Dorothy—"Now listen, you all. Pass the crayons and don't grab the biggest ones for yourself!"

In the meantime, other children in the community are gathering at the various playgrounds. Some have never learned really to play together, or perhaps, have never had access to any play equipment, so they spend a happy morning playing, doing simple crafts, and learning to get along with one another.

In their visitation work this morning the Family Welfare workers discover a home badly in need of repair, cleaning, and general morale building. Ethel tells the group about it at lunch, and five or six people volunteer to drive out to the home this afternoon and do what they can to help this needy family.

Depending on what day of the week this is, there will be various activities on the camp grounds in the afternoon—boys club, girls club, sewing class, etc. The fellows are busy in the shop and office. But if we're lucky we can squeeze in an hour or two of swimming in the lake.

The last meal of the day is at 5:30, and we hope it ends with watermelon or pie a'la mode today. It's the last meal, that is, if you don't count the raids on the snack shelf in the refrigerator several times during the evening.

If this is Monday night we'll have a lecture, if Tuesday night, we'll divide up into groups and go out to sing for some families in the neighborhood. Wednesday night is prayer meeting and Thursday is chorus. Friesen will be busy almost every night showing films in various communities.

It's time for bed now. Lights begin to go out over the dorms, and one by one we settle down for a period of quiet devotions before the last good-nights. It's been a long and busy day, but a very satisfying one.

Tour of the City of Chihuahua

(The first M. C. C. Summer Service Unit to serve outside the borders of the U. S. and the first one to function in Mexico is at Chihuahua, Chihuahua State, Mexico. The unit is serving at a Christian Center under the direction of the Methodist church. Their work includes hospital work, serving in a nursery, maintenance, etc. The following article, taken from the unit paper, El Vecino (The Neighbor), describes the city of Chihuahua. Members of the General Conference in the unit are: Mr. and Mrs. Victor Buller of Heron Lake, Minnesota, and Clara Schellenberg of Hague, Saskatchewan.—Ed.)

Will you come with us to see the city of Chihuahua, the more than eighty-years-old capital of Chihuahua state, with a population of eighty to ninety thousand people?

As we drive through the main sections of the city we are impressed by the cleanliness of the wide paved streets and sidewalks, which are swept each morning by householders. Most of the buildings are one or two stories high, flat-roofed, built of adobe bricks covered with plaster and painted in pastel colors.

Of special interest are the educational buildings, the cathedral and the hospitals. In the Institute (state preparatory school) are murals illustrating 400 years of Mexican history. Nearby is the prison and place of execution of Sinalgo, father of Mexican independence.

The new governor's mansion will soon be completed. The city has the largest lead smelter in North America.

In the wealthier residential sections many houses are bulit in the Spanish style with large iron-barred windows. Crisp green lawns, weeping willows, the ever popular elm, or the tall, stately cypress which surround large houses, add coolness to the hot Chihuahua air.

Many houses are built close to the street, without lawns. The rooms or apartments are built along the margin of the lot, leaving open playground, lawn or patio inside the walls of the house.

Modern business, clean cafes, stores with large display windows have impressed us favorably. Now lets go to the market, which covers a city block. Here fruits and vegetables of all kinds are displayed in stalls or on tables. In appearance and odor the market is a decided contrast to the modern stores in the central location. In the balcony, clothes, shoes, pottery and curios are sold.

Although the streets of Chihuahua are full of cars, busses and trucks, here in the market area we realize how many burros and horses and wagons are still used.

We needn't look far to realize that the city also has problems of poverty. In the tenement districts a family usually occupies one barely furnished, poorly lighted and badly ventilated room opening onto a central patio. In many cases the mother is responsible for supporting the family. Often her earnings are less than ten dollars a month despite high prices of food and clothing. Generally the men do as they please and the women do as they are told.

The streets also bear witness to many problems. Occasionally we see some Tarahumara Indians. The woman wears a ragged dress of unbleached muslin. Her straight black hair hangs loose on her shoulders. She carries her baby in a shawl slung across her back. A young Indian boy, clad in shirt, loin cloth, and loose sandals, begs for a nickel. He explains that he doesn't like to work, he prefers to beg.

At another corner we find a blind man or a cripple singing or playing the accordian. Or it is a frail old woman dressed in black, a small heap of humanity crouched upon the curb, stretching out her hand for alms. There are no institutions to take care of these unfortunates, although the law prohibits begging.

Finally we hear clearly, yet softly, the chimes of the Methodist church pealing the melody of "Nearer My God to Thee." We turn to watch the sun setting behind the statue of liberty, behind the spires of the cathedral, shedding its last rays upon the beauty of the city, upon the laughter of happy children, upon the weary outstreched hand, and upon the cry of the hungry child locked up in a one-room house waiting for its mother to return from work.

Retreat Days at Rosthern

by the Rosthern Summer Service Unit

During our retreat days we saw 172 enthusiastic Saskatchewan young people gather together at the farm, giving evidence that they really meant to "Rise up and Build." This was their retreat theme.

The speakers for the retreat were the Missionary Duerksens from India, Rev. and Mrs. J. J. Esau from Wolf Point, Montana, Miss Elisabeth Goertz, missionary from China, as well as many local ministers.

The messages given by the missionaries give us a clearer understanding of the work and the great need in the mission fields abroad. Rev. J. J. Esau, the evangelist, based his messages on Romans 1:16. "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ; for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." Through his efforts and prayers of the retreat committee and fellow Christians many were brought to the knowledge of salvation through Christ. A very large number of young people dedicated their lives to Him at the out-doors commitment service on Tuesday evening.

We marveled at the wonderful cooperation the retreaters gave to those in charge, especially in the serving of meals and giving of voluntary numbers at the various meetings.

On Monday and Tuesday afternoon recreational periods were conducted. The most thrilling event on Monday afternoon was the softball game between the Canadian girls and the girls of our unit plus Lois Duerksen, the daughter of Missionary Duerksens. We must say the Canadian girls do know their softball because they defeated us by a score of 15 to 5. It was fun nevertheless.

A childrens' retreat was held on Wednesday and Thursday. About 125 children registered. Several of these girls came to the Invalid Home to sing, read Scripture and pray with the invalids. We were impressed by their ability to render this in German. Elva Ratzlaff had charge of the recreation during these days.

Five girls are going to teach daily vacation Bible school. Betty Preheim and Edith Claassen are going to Friedensfeld. Lois Jean Riesen to Lagham, Beverly Pahl to Prince Albert, and Ella Wiebe to Hague. They with the other D.V.B.S. workers were given instruction at the time of the childrens' retreat.

Ontario Youth Have Retreat

by Cornie Kaethler

The Ontario young people had their annual Retreat "Jugendtreffen," on the UMBS grounds at Leamington on June 21 and 22. UMBS stands for " United Mennonite Bible School." The weather was very favorable. The retreat program was divided in two parts. Saturday was given to sport and culture; Sunday was the spiritual part. A display of art and handicrafts was held in one of the class rooms. We were favored with a German literary program on Saturday night. This was sponsored by the local Young Peoples Organization. On Sunday we had three opportunities to hear Rev. Shelly of Kitchener. Everybody enjoyed his stay with us. Many had a long trip home and most likely were tired, but we certainly were blest.

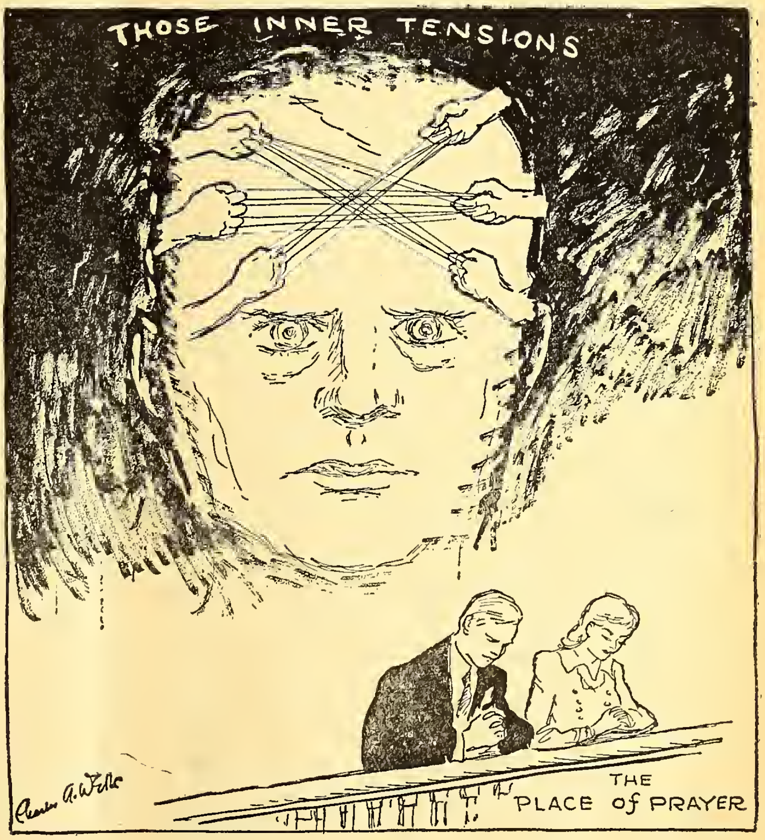
Prayer Can Bring Release

by Charles Wells

You often hear people say that life is getting to be too much for them. But life is always going to become too much for those who try to carry all the burden alone. God did not intend for man to bear the weight of life's problems without divine guidance and strength. So millions today are complaining of strain and tension, are seeking the assistance of medical science, are turning to the temporary relief of sedatives and alcohol or drugs when what they really need is to take God into their lives. For in prayer man can unload his burdens, find release from those inner tensions that feel like taut wires stretched within our brain and in our faces. Just remember God did not intend for you to carry all that load and anxiety alone. Find the place of payer, go there every day and you will find a lasting refreshing comfort no drug or prescription can give.



A Pastoral Visit to the Old Folks

by Ward Shelly

(The ministers of the Eastern District Conference have a rotating schedule whereby one of them spends one day each month in visiting the Old Folks Home at Frederick, Pa. On such occasions the pastor makes it a point to visit each individual in the home. In the following article Ward W. Shelly describes one such pastoral visit to the home.)

Several times a year it is my privilege to visit and fellowship with the guests and personnel of the Old Folks Home in Frederick, Pa. It is always a great joy to meet with these folks. Usually I arrive there in mid-forenoon and am able to visit a few rooms before the noon meal. At noon there is always an abundant supply of well cooked and seasoned food and Christian fellowship. Due to the serious shortage of help, the matron, Mrs. Babel, not only is overseer in the kitchen but also in many cases performs the duties of a nurse.

The conversations with the guests are always interesting. There is Mrs. Mary Hauck (mother of Mrs. A. S. Bechtel of Summerfield, Illinois), who is in her nineties and almost bedfast. She and her husband had charge of the Saucon (Pa.) Sunday school late in the last century. When I entered the room she was searching for a verse of scripture which she had heard on the radio. We soon showed her the verse in Psalm 121. One of the brother-guests had a few questions on prayer. "Should we pray, 'Forgive us our sins'?" was one of the questions. Others spoke to us about conversion, worldliness, and kindred subjects.

In one room there is a grand elderly couple. The wife's hearing, being very poor, she did not hear me enter the room. She was seated at a window with a gospel song book and was singing to her husband. Yes, said the husband, "We are just sitting here waiting to go HOME."

Another sister requested that I read to her the fourteenth chapter of St. John, "because there are so many promises in it." And those promises seemed more refreshing than ever as we read them. A few of the guests are quite nervous, and they especially welcome the consolation of the Word and prayer. One eighty-six year-old sister, who in early life was a nurse in a Zurich, Switzerland, hospital, never ceases to speak of her precious Lord.

Still another sister, though bedfast, enjoyed telling me a few incidents in early United States history. All of them love to tell of their early lives. To hear their experiences is both enjoyable and profitable. Many of them have the walls of their rooms and the tops of their bureaus filled with pictures of children and grandchildren. All this makes the place more like home. Many of the folks are busy sewing, quilting, crocheting, working on the lawn, in the kitchen, etc. The guests seem to enjoy thoroughly their stay in the Home, thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Babel and their helpers.

Religious services are held in the Home at least once every week. This strengthens the faith and spirituality of the guests and makes for a beautiful Christian atmosphere. Let us join in prayer for this Home. They have a few desperate needs. A new addition is being contemplated and may be started soon. But even before that is started we need a cook to relieve the matron. We also need a nurse or a deaconess for which there is already some money on hand.

Recipe for Home Brew

(Home brew made from this would have everything—except the writer's recommendation.—Roy H. Wasson)

Chase wild bull frogs for three miles and gather up the hops. To them add ten gallons of tan bark, a pint of shellack and 1 bar of home-made soap. Boil 36 hours then strain through an I. W. W. sock to keep it from working. Add 1 grasshopper to each pint to give it kick. Pour a little into the kitchen sink. If it takes the enamel off it is ready for bottling.

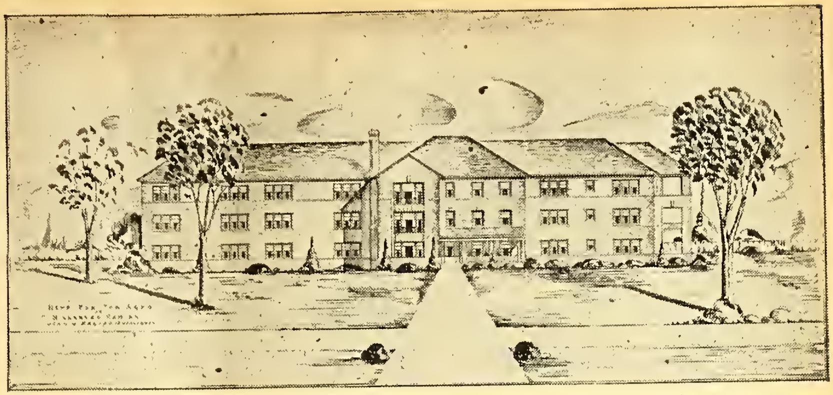
Dutch Pastor To Speak

Ds. T. O. Hylkema, Pastor of the Singel Church at Amsterdam, Holland, is now visiting Mennonite churches in the United States and Canada. He will address a mass meeting at Memorial Hall in North Newton, Kansas, on Sunday evening, August 17, at 7:30. This meeting is especially arranged for the large number of Mennonites living in the Newton area but whose individual churches Ds. Hylkema will not be able to visit.

Mr. Hylkema's trip is being arranged by the Mennonite Central Committee as a part of the exchange visits between Mennonite church leaders in Holland and America. Three other Dutch Mennonite leaders will visit American Mennonite churches later this summer. Ds. Hylkema has been active in the work of giving counsel and spiritual guidance to refugee Mennonites and in reviving interest in evangelism and non-resistance among the Mennonites in Holland.

On the evening of August 13, Mr. Hylkema will be at the Mennonite Brethren Church in Corn, Oklahoma; on Friday evening, August 15, at the First Mennonite Church, Hillsboro, Kansas, and on Sunday morning, August 17, at the First Mennonite Church, Pretty Prairie, Kansas.

Churches of Hillsboro, Kansas, To Build Home for the Aged



Churches of the Hillsboro, Kansas, community are raising funds for the construction of a fifty-room Home for the aged. The building, of which an artist's sketch is shown above, is to be of fire-proof construction and have three stories and an attic. The first floor is to contain office, reception, and assembly room, dining room, kitchen, food storage locker, laundry, and boiler room, and twelve single rooms. The second floor is to contain a sunroom, nurses' quarters, eighteen single rooms, and one double room. Six of the single rooms are to be extra large corner rooms, equipped with a full private bathroom. The two double rooms are to be connected with a full private bath. All the other single rooms (forty-two rooms) are to be provided with a private half-bath, equipped with a water closet and lavatory. The building also provides a large closet for each room, and two closets for the double rooms. Each floor has the necessary bathing facilities, linen storage rooms, utility and medical rooms. Each floor level is to have an open porch at the south end of the building. The building is also to be provided with a stairway and elevator from each floor and attic.

The building site has already been purchased. Some very good donations have already been received for the Home for the Aged, Inc. Personal solicitation of funds is now under way. Contributions may be made in various ways. Any person contributing $10,000 or any husband and wife jointly contributing the sum of $15,000 shall be regarded as a "Founder or Founders' of the Home. Such person or persons after reaching seventy shall be entitled to the rights and privileges of a "Life Member" without further expense to themselves. A Life Membership Plan provides, that any person, who otherwise meets the general qualifications for becoming a member of the home, may upon the payment of a certain sum of money into the association treasury, become a "Life Member." Special recognition is to be given to all those contributing $1,000 or more.

Those seeking to enter the home on a basis other than those already mentioned, will be asked for a minimum price of thirty-five dollars per month paid in advance. This price is subject to change.

Ownership and control of the Home will be by the corporation and its board of directors. The latter will be elected from representatives from the participating churches.

Jottings

—Deep Run, Pa. Our annual service at the Home for the Aged was held July 6. Death has again visited us and removed Russell W. Huber from our midst. About thirty-four of our group attended the various retreats at Menolan. Rev. J. Herbert Fretz was camp director at the Intermediate and high school groups. Rev. J. J. Plenert supplied the pulpit during his absence. Deacon Ely Fretz brought the morning message Sunday, August 2, while Rev. Fretz attended and taught at the Kitchener, Ontario, retreat. Accompanying him were Deacon Charles Wasser and family together with fifteen of our young people. Our Sunday School picnic this year was held at the Menolan retreat grounds.. Recently a special C. E. service was in charge of the East Swamp Society. A camp fire service is planned for our next meeting.—Mae Gross. Corr.

—Beatrice Church, Beatrice, Nebraska: August 3 the Bethel College Choir gave an inspiring concert of sacred music at one of the city-wide union services that are held each Sunday evening during the summer months. This was their first concert in their month-long tour. The Aaron N. Claassen family had the misfortune of having their large farm home burn to the ground. Most of the household furnishings, however, were saved. On August 8 the Sundri Bai mission society commemorated its twentieth anniversary with a banquet and program. Puran Banwar was the speaker. From here he went to South Dakota to be among the ones to welcome the Orlando Waltners upon their return from India. Twenty-nine Christmas Bundles were brought in by families of our church.—Mrs. Elbert Koontz, Corr.

—Immanuel Church, Delft, Minn.: On July 31 one of our members, Abraham B. Friesen, passed to his eternal reward. He reached the age of seventy-five years and eleven months. Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon, August 3. The Rev. H. Quiring of Mountain Lake and Rev. Victor Graber gave the messages. Mr. and Mr. and Mrs. Friesen enjoyed fifty-four years of married life together. August 3 in the evening we had a special service at which time some of the boys who had been in the service of our church told of some of their many experiences. We praise God that He returned them all safely.—Linda Wall, Corr.

—Rev. Karl Baehr has accepted a call to an executive position on the American Christian Friends Palestine Committee. The Baehrs plan to move from Chicago to New York the latter part of August. Rev. Baehr reports very high living costs in big cities like Chicago and New York, rents running over $100 a month and the grocery bill for a family of four also running a hundred dollars a month.

—Puram Banwar, formerly business manager of the Leper Home at Champa, India, and now a student at Bethel College, recently visited the Mennonite Community at Beatrice, Nebraska. From there he went to Marion, South Dakota, where he is now gaining first-hand experience of American farm life by staying and helping on the farm of Rev. Alfred Waltner, former member of the Foreign Mission Board. Brother Banwar was intimately associated in India with Missionary Orlando Waltner, Superintendent of the Leper Home at Champa, and son of the Rev. and Mrs. Alfred Waltner. From South Dakota, Mr. Banwar will go to the General Conference at Berne.

—Peter and Frieda Dyck, who had much to do with the movement of refugees from Germany to Paraguay will visit the Moundridge and Newton communities in Kansas, around September 21. Details are to follow later.

—Esther Lehrman of Aberdeen, Idaho, and Eleanor Weaver of Goshen, Indiana, left for Puerto Rico on July 23 and arrived there the next day. They will serve in the relief and rehabilitation unit there.

—Rev. and Mrs. Orlando Waltner and two children and Mrs. Ferd Isaac arrived in New York by plane on August 6 after leaving Bombay, India, on August 4.

—First Church, Hutchinson, Kansas: Fifty-one pairs of new shoes of excellent quality for $108.50 was an offer that looked very good to the Women's Missionary Society. As a result they sponsored a special offering which amounted to $125.15. The balance remaining after the purchase of the shoes for relief will be used for relief layette outfits.

—Zion Church, Souderton, Pa., Our pastor, Ellis Graber, and his wife are now on vacation. En route to their former home in South Dakota they attended sessions of the International Sunday School Convention at Des Moines, Iowa. Mrs. Graber has enrolled at the Christiansen Choral School for conductors and is now attending the sessions at Lake Forest, Illinois, which are being held from August 3-15.

—The Salem Church, Freeman, South Dakota, had already raised about $5,000 in cash and nearly $1,000 in loans for the Immigration Project by July 27.

—Immanuel Church, Delft, Minnesota: The theme for our annual youth rally was "Christian Ambassadors" taken from II Cor. 5:20. Our rally started Saturday evening with a campfire service at which time Rev. Erland Waltner gave us a very challenging message, stating that the time for us to be ambassadors was now. Our own pastor. Rev. Victor Graber, gave us a very inspiring message Sunday morning, on the world as an "Open Door" for the gospel. Will they be denied it? Sunday afternoon and evening we were greatly privileged to have Rev. J. J. Regier of Freeman, South Dakota, for our speaker. He delivered two heart-searching messages to the young people. He stated that in order to be a Christian ambassador of value we must be willing to give up all else and do the work that God has called us to do. We invited the young people from the Gospel Mennonite Church and the Alliance Missionary Church of Mountain Lake to share the blessings of these services with us.—Linda Wall, Corr.

—Topeka Church, Topeka, Indiana: This church was the scene of a wedding when Miss Kathryn Hooley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cletus Hooley of Topeka, and Norman Rosener, son of Mrs. Lila Rosener of Woodburn, Indiana, were united in marriage on July 21. The Rev. Jesse Smucker of Bluffton, Ohio, uncle of the bride, performed the ceremony. They will reside in Woodburn, where the groom owns a garage. Sunday evening, August 3, the Lakeside Baptist Church Men's Quartet of the Lakeside Baptist Church in Muskegon, Michigan, gave an all-musical program.—Opal King, Corr.

—First Bluffton, Ohio: The five churches of the community, St. Johns, Ebenezer, Grace, Lima and First Mennonite have purchased a tract of land, about ten acres lying between Elm and Riley Streets in Bluffton for the new Mennonite Memorial Home. The committee working on this project is as follows: Mrs. Viola Sommers, Elam Sutter, Gideon Schumaker, Clarence Schneck, Willard Moser, Ellis Steiner, Mrs. Ed. Amstutz, Rev. P. E. Whitmer, D. W. Bixler, and Elias Bixel. The five pastors also meet with this committee. During the month of August the church will be redecorated and rewired. A number of fluorescent lights are being installed. The approximate cost is $3,500.00.—Mrs. Laurence Burkhalter, Corr.

Conference Is Now in Session

by P. P. Wedel

The gavel has sounded. The General Conference of the Mennonite Church of North America is in session. It is its thirty-first session. Our conference president is at the desk to direct the conference. For weeks and months he has been preparing for it. Committees had to be appointed; much correspondence had to be done; many details had to be looked after; many fervent prayers went forth from his heart unto Christ Who is the head of the Church.

Just what emotions, desires and ambitions pervade his heart not many can imagine, unless they have gone through the same experience, or have faced similar duties and responsibilities.

Doubtless, the chairman is conscious of the fact that he is the servant of the conference. He will insist that order must prevail, but he faces this task as one who is serving the constituency and not as one who is lording over the delegates and guests. In humility he will endeavor to be impartial and fair to all and see in them his brethren and fellow laborers.

It is his desire that throughout the conference sessions there might be the spirit of unity in Christ. He will strive to so guide that throughout the sessions the spirit of love and good will and peace and respect for others will prevail.

It is his ambition that the cause of Jesus Christ might be prospered in and through this session of conference. He is deeply interested in every one of its enterprises and projects. He will do his best to so direct, that great progress for Christ may be made at this session.

Let us pray for him, cooperate with him, and show our appreciation to him for his efforts, so that Christ may be exalted.

(Editor's note: Rev. P. P. Wedel, Moundridge, Kansas, served as chairman of the General Conference for two terms. He has had extensive experience in other conference work. For many years he served as chairman of the Board of Foreign Missions.)

THE HOPE OF THE CHURCH

Recently, my friend and former pastor, Rev. J. F. Sawatzky, wrote and published a booklet with the title "The Hope of the Church." "The Hope of the Church" rightly calls attention to the significance of the Lord Jesus Christ's personal and imminent coming for His kingdom. This precious truth from the Word of God is little understood and consequently woefully neglected by the teaching ministry of the church.

The hope of the personal imminent return of the Lord Jesus Christ, if believed and taught by the church, will have a most salutory and sanctifying effect upon the church. Rev. John McNicol has summarized it as follows, "1. It will strengthen faith in the supreme and infallible authority of the Holy Scriptures. 2. It bears testimony to the presence of God in history. 3. It exalts the divine person and work of the incarnate son of God. 4. It takes due account of the fall of the human race. 5. It presents a sublime view of God's great purpose in His creation. 6. It provides the most inspiring motive for Christian life and service." To these I would like to add: It will preserve the Mennonite youth and church from what someone has called "Blatant intellectuality and 'spirituality' " which "have never appealed to traditional Mennonite simplicity." Such a hope and such a faith will "exhibit a genuineness of Christian character without display," because, like the faith of our fathers, it is rooted in the Word of God.

See and read, Titus 3:11-15, Revelation 22:20—D. J. Unruh, Vice-President of the Board of Foreign Missions, and Pastor of the First Mennonite Church, Newton, Kansas.

A SECURE FUTURE

Theodore Roosevelt once said, "I think there is one point the preachers have overlooked, namely, that life insurance is applied love. Christianity means love and life insurance is where you do something about it." This is rather a thought-provoking statement and, of course, applies not only to preachers but to any individual who has dependents. Not only is life insurance a greater factor in helping to care for one's family in the event of death, but it is a sane, safe, and sound way of preparing for future income. The pension plan which has been prepared for the ministers of the General Conference will solve just these problems. It will be a great source of satisfaction and a sense of security for our ministers to know that their future will be taken care of, once the Conference approves the pension plan.

An advertisement of the trust department of the United States National Bank, Portland, Oregon, made this statement under the caption of "Too Much of Everything Else": In admistering hundreds of estates, we have often found too much of almost everything — too much due to banks and brokers, too much unimproved real estate, too many insecure stocks, too many speculative stocks, too many heirs for the amount available for them but never too much life insurance. Throughout our wide and varied experience in the management of estate properities, life insurance has frequently stood as the last rampart between hope and despair." —August Epp, Chairman of the Ministers' Aid Committee of the General Conference, and life insurance salesman.

Twenty Per Cent Needs Counseling

Ten per cent of the U. S. population has serious emotional difficulties. So says Dr. Luther E. Woodward of the National Committee for Mental Hygiene, who further declared "that double that number would benefit from being able to discuss problems with good counselors." Dr. Woodward, who is an ordained Lutheran minister, told a regional meeting of the Lutheran Welfare Council that " 'counseling offers no ready-made solution for problems, but helps people to help themselves.' An Introduction to PURAN BANWAR
by P. A. Penner

Mrs. Penner and I arrived in Champa in October, 1901. This city of about 9,000 population lay in the Central Provinces of India, 418 miles from Calcutta on the way to Bombay. Champa and Janjgir were the first General Conference mission stations in India. Brother J. F. Kroeker opened Janjgir, and Mrs. Penner and I had the joy of beginning the work in Champa. At that time there was not a single Christian in the entire mission field. Neither did we have an Indian evangelist or Bible woman.

Realizing the need of native workers, I wrote to Rev. Theodore Hahn, Superintendent of the Gossner Mission in Bengal, and requested that he send us, if possible, a competent and consecrated preacher and, if possible, also a Bible woman. The German Gossner Mission was very friendly to the Mennonites. This friendship had begun with Dr. Hahn's visit to the United States and with his friendship with the late S. F. Sprunger of Berne, Indiana. Dr. Hahn kindly and graciously sent us a young couple with excellent recommendations.

The young man and his wife were Joseph and Trophena Banwar. That was in 1902. These two were the first Christians in our area. With them came their two children, Samuel and Caroline. Because Joseph and his wife came from Bengal Province where the Bengali language is spoken, their first work was to acquire the Hindi language. Having acquired the language and having become acquainted with conditions in the Central Provinces, they both began work in our mission. Both of them worked in it from then on until they died.

Seven children were born to them during the time that they served the Lord in our mission. The Banwar family was a spiritual family. Not only was family worship conducted regularly, but in their association with Christians and non-Christians alike it was evident that they knew and served the Lord with joy. The Banwar family was a hospitable family. Their house was open house to all. In later years when the number of Christians began to increase, their doors were open to all that needed a meal or shelter. Discipline was firm but kind. In a word, the Banwar family was a Christian home.

Joseph's preaching was good but not outstanding. But his faithfulness was worthy of note. Every Friday he walked ten miles to a bazaar if weather conditions permitted and other duties did not interfere. I followed him by bicycle, and together we would preach and sell the Word of God. After the afternoon's work, Joseph walked back to Champa, a distance of ten miles. Not once did he complain about such strenuous work.

Puran Banwar, wife and sons

Of the nine children in the family, Caroline is a doctor. Though she has her private practice she gives two hours every day to the work in the Champa Leper Home. Another daughter is a doctor and surgeon with fine recommendations. One or two are high school teachers. In fact, all the children are in lucrative positions. None are dependent upon mission funds.

Mr. Puran A. Banwar is one of the nine children. After finishing the General Conference schools, he went to the Old Mennonite high school. During the time he was in Champa, I had the joy of baptizing him. Puran has attended college in India for two and one-half years. After his college he returned to Champa and found in his present wife a loving helpmate.

This young lady was Lily King, who was Mrs. Penner's matron in the untainted girls' home. I remember their wedding day. Puran came to the church riding on the Zamindar's (native ruler) elephant. Boys and girls and a native band accompanied the elephant with singing and music. I had the joy of uniting Puran and Lily in marriage.

Preaching the Good News on an Indian Reservation

By Malcolm and Esther Wenger

A group of riders and others cluster at the top of a low rise near a camp circle of more than a hundred tents and listen to the Word of God. A man lies dying on a mat in a tiny one room house and hears again the way of life in his own tongue. Scattered groups of children approach the plain white church there to sing and hear stories of the Saviour. This and much more is the work of telling the Good News to the Cheyenne Indians at Busby, Montana.

Busby has a store, a cluster of Indian homes, the large well-equipped plant of the government boarding school, and the neat white buildings of the Mennonite Mission. Here one sees some Cheyenne men with long braids, and women wearing moccasins and carrying their babies on their backs with their blankets, but one also sees others dressed just like other western people. Cattle raising, a little farming, jobs with the government, and seasonal work provide a living for most. But the words of Chief Red Moon as he looked at a silver dollar long ago are still true, "On this money is the picture of a bird. Birds never stay in one's hands, they fly away." Though changes are in evidence, the old ways of doing and thinking are still strong.

To these people we seek to bring the Good News, and as always where the Evil One is challenged there are many adversaries. As night falls a sound of singing, the rattling of a gourd, and the unvarying beat of a drum is frequently heard from a tepee or tent. The Peyote eaters have gathered for their night long ceremony. Organized as the Native American Church this group claims the allegiance of the majority of Cheyenne men. "Healings" and a mixture of Christian elements make this group attractive to backslidden Christians. The old religious ritual, the sun dance, still attracts a majority of the tribe when it is held. Immorality, loose marriage ties, quarrels, drunkeness, trouble and sorrow are symptoms of a desperate heart sickness that only Christ can cure.

To meet this need and to obey the Master's command to witness, preach, make disciples, and teach, the missionaries at Busby carry on a variety of activities. The Word is proclaimed in Cheyenne and English in Sunday school and two Sunday services. Another group is reached by Sunday afternoon services at an outstation. Prayer meetings, sewing meetings and special weekday services are held. Classes are taught to help the Cheyennes to read their own language. Much time has been spent in learning the Cheyenne language for more effective witness. With the help of Christian young people from other churches the Summer Bible School reaches many children. The troubles and problems of the people are dealt with in their homes and as they come to the missionary for help. Bandaging a cut finger or treating a sore may give opportunity for a word of witness.

The presence of the Tongue River Boarding School at Busby makes it an important center for children's work. Each Friday in four classes children, whose parents have approved, receive Bible teaching from the missionaries. This past year it has been possible to reach the majority of the children from the school in Sunday evening and Tuesday evening meetings.

The faithful sowing of the seed here in the past has not been without a harvest. Many have acknowledged Christ as Lord and Saviour. Some have done it insincerely and later turned aside. Others, who have proved faithful, have still much to learn of following their Lord

WHAT IS CHRISTIAN EDUCATION?

by Lloyd L. Ramseyer

Some time ago in a committee meeting a man who has been teaching in a church school asked the question, "What is Christian Education?" It is a term which we use frequently and rather glibly, perhaps often without very much thought. Really, what does the term mean? Is it just a slogan which is used to gain support from unsuspecting church members? Is there anything significantly different going on in a school which makes the claim of being Christian than in an institution which makes no such pretentions? Is the Christian part of such an institution a sort of appendage, which is added to a program which is otherwise secular, or is the entire program of such a school different?

It is easy to see why a Bible school or a Seminary should be termed a Christian institution. In these schools the primary aim is to educate professional church workers. Practically the entire curriculum of such a school has sacred content, in the traditional sense of the term. But what about a liberal arts college, in which a large proportion of the time is given to the study of what we ordinarily consider secular subject matter? What do we mean by calling such an institution Christian?

(1) Such an institution is not purely a school for ministers and missionaries. It is, however, a school in which future full time Christian workers secure their undergraduate preparation in an atmosphere that helps them to keep their purpose firm, where others are challenged to lives of full time service, and where those who plan to enter the so-called secular vocations are taught that even these vocations should be considered as work for God, and that the church should receive an adequate share of their time and energy.

(2) Bible classes do not of necessity make a college Christian, nor even the requiring of Bible credit for graduation. However, while the secular school seems to assume that such subjects as science, history, and philosophy are of such great importance that students should not be considered educated without having been exposed to them, the Christian school assumes that the Bible is the greatest of books, and that all of its graduates should be acquainted with its teachings.

(3) Daily chapels and religious organizations in the program of extracurricular activities do not of necessity make a college Christian. However, a Christian school recognizes the importance of daily devotional periods in the life of every individual, and insists that spiritual food is as imprtant as physical food. It therefore gives opportunity for such spiritual nourishment, and does what it can to help students to get the benefits of chapel programs. It also believes that while students are gaining direct experiences through extra-curricular activities they should also be securing direct experiences in religious activities and Christian service.

(4) A Christian school is not one in which numerous laws and regulations force students to maintain an uninteresting, solemn, and Puritanical existence. However it is a school which pulsates with life and interest, where students have ample opportunity for wholesome enjoyment, and are stimulated to allow Christian standards to govern their conduct.

(5) A Christian school is one which expects and demands the highest in academic achievement. To expect less would be to encourage inadequate use of God-given talents. Faculty members of such an institution are educated to a high scholastic level. In addition these staff members are sincere Christians, as much interested in the spiritual welfare of students as in their academic achievements, but not substituting one for the other.

(6) A Christian liberal arts college is one in which all of the commonly recognized areas of learning are taught. The student, however, is led to find God in all of these areas, as the creator and ruler of the universe. He finds the hand of God in physics, chemistry, biology, history, literature, philosophy, and all other academic fields. Thus he finds that the more of truth he discovers, the more he understands and loves God, the originator of all truth.

(7) A Christian school does all of the good things that a secular school does, but it has an important "plus." That "plus" is God and His son Jesus Christ. God is discovered through the scriptures, through experiences, and through various other avenues in the search for truth. God is recognized as the greatest of all truths, and all else radiates from that truth as the center. Added to the student objectives for which other institutions strive is the objective that each student accept Christ as the center of his individual life, and seek to promote a similar interest in others.

This "plus," which makes Christ central, is what makes an educational institution Christian, and makes it possible for such an institution to provide a student with a Christian education. It is not something added to an otherwise secular education, but it is something which permeates every activity on the campus, and makes activities and studies, which might otherwise be secular, sacred because they are shown to be but a phase of the manifestation of God.

Exodus from Berlin

by Robert Kreider

(Peter and Frieda Dyck, who played such a large part in the movement of Mennonite refugees from Germany to Paraguay, are now visiting Mennonite communities in the United States and Canada, speaking and showing pictures of their work with the refugees. In the following article Robert Kreider gives an intimate glimpse of the historic days when Peter and Frieda Dyck helped a thousand refugees leave Berlin for a new homeland in Paraguay.)

There are moments in the history of a people which are never forgotten—moments when events stand poised still and then destiny opens the door.

January 30, 1947, will be one such day which lives for decades in the memory of one thousand Mennonite refugees. The thirtieth was the day when the refugees, after months of anxious waiting, left Berlin.

Berlin is a city of refuge and a city of fear. It is an Allied island in the sea of the Soviet Zone. To the shores of this island came the Mennonite refugees seeking safety and care. Here they had the protection of the American military. Here they had the loving care of MCC workers, Peter and Frieda Dyck. For the refugees, however, there always lurked in the background a feeling of anxiety. They were on a tiny island.

Peter Dyck will record some day the events of his closing weeks in Berlin. Those days were charged with suspense and drama. I write here only my impressions of the last hours . . . . the scenes at midnight at Lichterfelde--West railway station . . . the hushed excitement . . . . the rush of events . . . . I was only an observer, but I want to share with you glimpses of those few hours of high adventure.

During the preceding weeks Peter Dyck had worked with quiet intensity to arrange every detail for the movement of the thousand refugees by military-chartered train. Intricate planning was required in the preparations. Peter had the full cooperation and aid of the military. However, the whole plan to ship a thousand refugees out through the Russian Zone was fraught with danger. Sunday night — the twenty-sixth—was to be the night. All was in readiness.

Sunday morning we attended worship service of the refugee community. Peter preached. At noon we were to have dinner together with the Lehmans. Peter and Frieda had a meeting after the service. They were to join us later. We waited and waited. Finally, Frieda arrived—distress written all over her countenance. She reported the tragic news, "It's been called off." Without approval from the Russian authorities, the American Commanding General was reluctant to take the risk of sending this refugee train through the Russian Zone

(Robert Kreider, who is an M.C.C. relief worker now heading the publicity work for Cralog, a large relief organization in Germany, herewith gives an eyewitness account of the movement of Mennonite refugees from Berlin on January 30. Some of these refugees are now already in their new home in Paraguay and others on the way there.)

—"running the blockade." The work of months collapsed in a moment . . . . The Volendam would sail for Paraguay without the thousand from Berlin . . . . The MCC would lose $150,000 . . . . Peter and Frieda would have to carry on into their sixth year of relief work, remaining at the side of their refugee brethren, no ray of hope on the horizon for these stranded refugees in Berlin. It was Black Sunday.

Several days passed. Peter left for Bremerhaven to see off the Volendam, which would be carrying to Paraguay the partial shipload of 1,400. Those were sad days in Berlin.

Thursday evening I had been attending a birthday party for one of our staff members who lives over in the British Sector of Berlin. When I returned home, I learned that someone had been trying to phone me all evening. Soon the phone rang. It was Mrs. Lehman. Her anxious message was: "They're leaving! Hurry to Lichterfelde-West Station, unless it is already too late. Frieda wants to see you!" . . . . In a few minutes I was speeding through the streets to the railway station. It was a cold night. Snow lay on the ground.

I found the railway station of Lichterfelde-West bustling with activity. The train was still there! Stretched out for a third of a mile was a freight train. Huge ten-ton army trucks were streaming into the railway yard, discharging scores of persons, swinging around and returning for more loads. Trucks laden high with baggage were pulling alongside the freight cars. Squads of DP's from a nearby camp carried baggage, distributed straw to the cars, etc. Ambulances drove in and out of the railway yard. UNRRA trucks loaded with food provisions were moving alongside the train. Army officers were supervising the entire operation.

Soon I found Frieda Dyck. She was radiantly happy. At 6:30 that evening Lt. Col. Stinson had called her, asking whether she could have the thousand refugees ready to move at 8:00. The news was this: General Clay had gone directly to Marshal Sokolovsky, Commander in Chief of Soviet Occupation Forces in Germany, asking for the "impossible"—Russian approval for the one thousand former residents of Russia to migrate. Marshal Sokolovsky agreed. Then events moved with breath-taking speed. Clay's office phoned Bremerhaven "to hold the ship." The Transportation Section of the US Army promised to have a train on the tracks by 10:00. Word came from Bremerhaven that Peter was racing by auto to reach Berlin in time to join the transport.

It was midnight. I soon found my place in this exciting world. Frieda was supervising the establishment of the hospital. Two UNRRA ambulances were bringing in the invalid and hospital cases—about twenty-five in number. The compartments of a passenger car served as the hospital. Direct from the hospital was brought a mother who any hour was expected to give birth to a child.

The first task was to distribute flashlights to each of the freight cars in which the refugees were to ride. The flashlights were a part of Peter's careful advance planning. It was a long, long train: Thirty-five freight cars for the refugees, with more than thirty persons to a car; five freight cars to carry the baggage; one passenger coach for the hospital cases.

Each car had been provided with an army tent stove, a bale of straw to serve as a protective layer on the floor, one hundred pounds of coal pellets, several lengths of stove pipe, water cans. An UNRRA crew was on the scene distributing to each car a two-days supply of army field rations. Fresh bread was distributed and chocolate for the children.

The ten-ton trucks rolled alongside the freight cars, disgorging their refugee cargo. The trucks carried about sixty-five persons per load. Lt. Col. Stinson, who had command of the whole operation, was to be seen at the trucks helping to lower the persons to the ground. To one he would say, "Take it easy, grandma." To another "Jump, Junior." Col. Stinson had a great affection for these people. Both he and Major Thompson, who was also on the scene, were the great protectors of these people. As Major Thompson said, "I was the first to stick out my neck for the Mennonites. Colonel Stinson came along and continued to stick out his neck for the Mennonites."

After midnight the military guards marched onto the scene. There were twenty-five soldiers, all clad in arctic dress and all armed to the hilt. Then there were officers; a major, two Russian-speaking captains, a lieutenant or two. Judged by the military force, this was a "top-priority" transport. A guard was posted in almost every car.

Minutes passed. Soon the freight cars were filled with their refugees. The stoves had been set up. Smoke was pouring from the stove pipes as they extended out through the crack in the car door. It was a freezing cold night and one felt sorry for these thinly-clad refugees who would have to brave thirty-six hours of travel in a cold freight car.

The refugees were strangely quiet amidst the whirlwind of activity. The rush of events of those few hours left them bewildered, overwhelmed, dazed . . . . Was this the hour for which they had waited for years and years? What terrors, what fearful dangers lay ahead as the train crept through the Soviet Zone . . . As they turned their faces to the West, almost every family left behind them in Europe—in Siberia—a husband, a father, brothers, sisters. With the joy was mingled an infinite sadness. As the train stood on the verge of moving westward into the Soviet Zone, a thousand prayers were rising heavenward, seeking the protective presence of the Good Shepherd.

By two o'clock in the morning, the train was ready to roll. Peter had not yet arrived. I went to the phone to place a call to Helmsted, the check point 150 miles to the west on the Autobahn, to see whether Peter—who was travelling with Seigfried Janzen and Cornie Dyck—had yet checked through. Waiting for the call, I dialed Peter's office number in Berlin—and Peter answered the phone! Only a few minutes before the three had arrived in Berlin. They found the refugee camp deserted. They thought the transport had left. In ten minutes they were at Lichterfelde-West. In fifteen minutes the long train moved slowly out of the station and pointed toward homes in a new land.

The Growing Church and the New India

by John Thiessen

New India and the Growing Church: There are two kinds of mission work which excite the animosity of the more zealous of the Hindus. The first is evangelistic work in an area where there is only a small church centered round a mission compound. The second is medical and educational work in an area where there is only a small church centered around the mission compounds. In both cases the Christian appears as a foreigner. His motives are suspected. He appears as an appendage of a foreign missionary. The evangelistic program, if it succeeds at all, brings in converts one by one. And each conversion is attended by a tremendous tumult. Every conversion becomes the talk of the town, and frequently the cause of stern action on the part of the rulers of the people. The medical and educational program are suspected as bait for inducing people to become Christians.

But there is another kind of mission work which does not excite animosity, because it is work aiding a large, widely-spread Christian population to achieve greater and greater measure of the abundant life. Here the concern of the mission is seen to be the existing Christian community. Conversions when they take place —and they frequently do—are the conversions of some relative of the existing Christians. They are natural conversions. They take place without much if any direct or indirect intervention of the foreigner. The missionary appears as what he is, a foreign servant of the Indian Church, and if the Church in its normal life, attracts adherents, that is not something to be marvelled at, or opposed. (As Phuljhar).

Then too, in addition to the lack of animosity, there is much to be said to the effect that the soundest type of missionary activity is that which adds relatives to those already in the Church. Here the decision can be a purely religious decision. When people on the edge of a growing Christian movement become Christians they are not making a racial decision i.e., that they will join another caste. They are making a religious decision, that they while sticking to their people, their community will accept the Saviour. The social dislocation which is inevitable in the one by one process, is largely avoided where an existing Church grows outward, taking in its near neighbors and friends and relatives.

Finally extending an existing Church—not a central station Church, but a Church of people in situs — is the most effective use of mission resources. It conserves what has been gained and actually brings more people into life-giving relationship with Jesus Christ than is possible the other way.

THE DRINKER, NOT THE DRUNKARD

From the Buffalo (N. Y.) agency of the United States Fidelity and Guaranty Company, one of the oldest and most conservative insurance organizations of the nation, comes an extremely important bit of information relatives to the matter of highway accidents, which have shown a sharp increase during recent weeks and which may be expected to take a new upswing with the summer traffic.

"The drinking driver causes more accidents than the drunken driver," say these insurance men. "It has been established that within 40 minutes after imbibing three highballs the efficiency of the four vital driving factors are reduced in the following percentages: (1) concentration, 35.3 per cent; (2) co-ordination, 59 per cent; (3) muscular reaction, 17 per cent; (4) selective recation, 9.7 per cent."

In addition to these highly important statistics the report goes on to point out that 20 per cent of all fatal automobile accidents in 1945 were caused by drivers who had been drinking, and that somewhat in excess of 50 per cent of drinking drivers have a record of two or more accidents.

Elspeet, Host to an International Mennonite Retreat

by Ruth Hilty

One finds the Doopsgezinde summer retreat, Elspeet, nestled in heather and pines, far removed from the hustle of Amsterdam and Rotterdam. At the time of writing Elspeet was at the height of spring freshness. The walnut-brown barracks were clean and inviting, ready to welcome about 150 retreaters. For, over Ascension Day and the week-end Elspeet was to play host to an international gathering. The Dutch Mennonites and the Holland MCC unit had invited Mennonites from Switzerland, France, Germany, and Luxemburg, MCC relief workers from the various areas, Russian Mennonite refugees, and Waldensians to join them in their quiet place for worship, song, discussion, and play. It was not going to be an ostentatious World Congress, but in a very quiet way, was intended to begin building the bridges of Christian fellowship, understanding, and encouragement.

The invitation had personally been carried to the leaders in the various Mennonite and Waldensian communities, and everywhere this invitation was received with gratitude and expectation. Life among the Luxemburg Mennonites has been an impoverished one since the war, and a very late planting season dashed their hopes of sending a delegate. The MCC workers in Germany had hoped to bring the German Mennonite delegate, Dr. Dirk Cattapoel, out with them, but they came without him. His military permits had not arrived early enough to clear orders for him. But, the group brought his greetings and his speech to the conference. Bro. H. H. Janzen brought greetings from the Mennonites interned in Denmark. The Waldensian delegates wired that because of difficulty with visas they could not arrive in time to fill their place on the program. We look with hope to some future conference wherein we can come together, re-think our common and peculiar Christian vision as it fits into a disillusioned world. The young Alsatian Mennonite delegate would not be daunted. He decided that he would miss less teaching hours if he traveled by air.

Dutch Mennonites gathered from scattered provinces the evening before Ascension Day. The little, fire-red MCC truck brought six Swiss and two French Mennonite guests to this spot early in the evening. About the same time a chartered bus brought the choir group of twenty-four Russian Mennonite refugees from Roverstein.

Later that night the chapel lights were streaming from the chapel doors when the little red truck arrived on its second mission, laden with luggage, typewriter cases, a mimeographing machine, and all materials necessary to coordinate a retreat program planned in four languages. The work team was reluctant to unload—the chapel lights, the stars, and God's pine-scented green cathedral encouraged silent meditation. Suddenly the forest and chapel seemed to have become an acoustic shell, with the unison singing of the great confession hymn, "Grosser Gott Wir Loben Dich." In the stillness the closing benediction was pronounced on the retreaters, gathered for evening devotions and unknowingly upon us, and our hearts replied, "Our Lord and our Father, Thou art with us. Abide with us in these days. Bind us together as brothers in Christ, and use us all as Thy instruments."

The retreat sessions were beginning Ascension Day afternoon, following the morning special worship service. The hymn books were ready, all mimeographed in French, German, Nederlandse, and English. But, extracts of the speeches of the various sessions were not as yet all translated into the four languages, nor all stencil-cut and mimeographed. Some speeches were arriving with the arrival of the speakers from Germany, Denmark, and France. But, the extracts assuredly would be ready, in all four languages in time to coincide with each session, if it meant burning some midnight oil and some rush work between the various sessions.

The work committee was registering more enthusiasm than complaints for the work that such an international fellowship called forth. The program was planned on the assumption that we should recognize and appreciate the reality that French, German, English and Nederlandse are the medium of expression for our various Mennonite people; that we can bridge the language barriers, and that no amount of work should hinder us when we all stand in need of Christian fellowship. A part of the retreaters could understand little or no French, others no Nederlandse, or English. Happily many could understand three of the four languages, and a great majority could use German.

What can come from such a retreat for the future?

Brother C. F. Klassen recalled that eleven years ago, at the Mennonite World Congress, he had led a devotional period in the same chapel. He asked the searching question, "In these past eleven years what have we Mennonites done to help the world?" One needed only to gaze at a portion of the chapel, to the new pulpit and rostrum to remind oneself of the past months of desolation.

The war has jarred the self-contentment in many Mennonite communities. But half-hearted stewardship to Christ still paralyzes our Mennonite churches. Mennonite young people reject that Christian life that we portray. We easily lay the burdens of our neighbors, our church life, the heathen upon full-time Christian workers such as ministers and missionaries. We give some money, but too little interest, imagination, faith, and prayer.

We came together at Elspeet, almost fearful to admit that we lack something, yet wanting to learn what we lack; almost fearful to search ourselves, yet feeling a need for that which other fellow-believers have. In that spirit we gathered, and in that spirit we have arrived at a better understanding of our respective Swiss, French, German, Dutch, and American Mennonite areas, Mennonite endeavors and our Mennonite problems.

No great, no new truths were uttered by the Swiss, the French, the American, or by the Russian refugee group, or by the Dutch, on such themes as: "Living in the World, but Not of the World;" "Our Witness for Love and Peace;" and "Mennonite Young People Serving Christ in the Modern World." But, many challenges, which cannot lightly be rejected, were voiced.

Such questions, as the following, having required re-examination of our witness and lack of witness, our activity and inactivity as individuals and as church groups.

To safeguard and respect the inidividual's relationship to God, have we thwarted group vision and group action, (especially in Nederland)? Do we perhaps, (in Switzerland, France, and America) submerge the spiritual freedom of the individual by stressing group conformity and group activity? Why have we laid our individual tasks, to witness in word and deed, upon the shoulders of the ministers?

Where was the voice of our faith in the war—the voice of our martyrs, and the faith that can be found in many of our Russian Mennonites? Must expansion in mission efforts, in relief, and in church life wait until there is a greater faith among us? Or will faith come with launching an expanding program?

Can our youth become our church leaders tomorrow, with the responsibilities, or lack of responsibilies, that they are asked to shoulder today? How have American Mennonites begun such an active youth program? Is activitiy a fruit, therefore, absolutely, a necessity, for dedicated Christian young people? Why do some American young people find time to do voluntary services and Continental Mennonite young people maintain that they have no time? Where actually must we begin and how? Should only surrendered Christians have the privilege of serving in voluntary service, in relief, or in missions, or might young people discover Christ in the act of serving?

We know that we have not done enough, regardless of the magnitude of a relief program, whom we have just given emergency material aid. Social and political difficulties are involved in men's spiritual difficulties. But, where should we stop entangling ourselves with these difficulties?

How can we resolve the two opposing methods of bringing peace to mankind, even among Mennonite peoples?

The conclusions of the various discussion groups reiterated that our solutions begin with each of us, with a complete surrender and dedication to Christ as the Master of our daily lives. Then our outlook is toward others not toward ourselves. Then we are recipients of the gifts of the Spirit—the courage, the enthusiasm, the time, and the wisdom to follow wherever and however that Spirit calls. In such a spirit of dedication we gathered around the Communion table on Sunday morning.

The schedule of the day proved to be "up at 7:00, to bed at 11:00!" Yet, the retreaters bemoaned the fact that the forty-five minute discussion periods were always too short; one grand afternoon for international games and songs, for hearing Swiss yodeling, etc. was not enough. And seemingly the saying, "Mennonites love to sing" still holds true! The international choir group campaigned for an additional hour of rehearsals, and won! Three church chorales sounded exceedingly well polished under the direction of a Swiss delegate. There must be more time at next year's International Retreat.

This venture in international Christian fellowship has all the prospects of continuing annually, or semiannually. However, it will not thrive on enthusiasm alone, but on the fruits of the Spirit of Christ.

From the Diaries of Summer Volunteers

(Each week members of the M.C.C. Voluntary Service Units submit a report of their observations and experiences to the M.C.C. office. The following are excerpts from these 'logs' giving intimate viewpoints, reactions and experiences of the volunteers. Editor)

CLEVELAND, OHIO STATE HOSPITAL

"We had a new experience this Sunday when we took a group of patients to the Catholic Mass in the forenoon, and to the Protestant church service in the afternoon. After the Protestant service we sat outside with them, and felt a new thrill at the enjoyment that they showed in being outdoors. For a long time, maybe since last summer, there have not been enough attendants to take any but a privileged few to church and to the lawn for fresh air. We have been able to take out quite a few of the less privileged patients, and they have behaved themselves very nicely and been very appreciative."

* * * *

"In spite of the fact that many patients in this hospital have ground privileges and many are taken out to programs, there are still those who have no diversion from one week to the next. Interested persons could center their attention on these (especially those wards that are not so inviting) and pay friendly visits at intervals, send cards to them, provide games, parties, or programs, etc. I am sure that there would be rewards of radiant faces and heart-felt thanks in addition to an inward feeling of some satisfaction of having done something 'for the least of these'."

* * * *

"I am beginning to realize more and more how each patient depends on the attendant for every decision and how important it is for the attendant to help them master every situation. In grade or high school the teachers who were firm and strict demanded a standard which gave us, when we reached it, a sense of security and accomplishment. In the same way patients feel a certain security in being guided by a person who is stable and unwavering in decisions."

SKILLMAN STATE VILLAGE, NEW JERSEY A HOME FOR EPILEPTICS

"To be able to give oneself to those who have received so little of life is worthwhile. Somehow in spite of mental handicaps the patients are quick to perceive a vital out-going love.

"Many of the patients are quite religious. They, possibly more than those of us not institutionalized, become depressed. To us comes an opportunity to point to Christ, not as an escape mechanism but as the Way. I am concerned that we have a vital radiant Christ to present. Yesterday was a dreary day, so I gathered the patients into the "Day Room" and we had a "Hymn Sing." Of course, the music was of indefinite quality, but those women stopped quarreling and forgot their troubles in the land of song, and they talked about it for the rest of the day."

"Each patient has to be treated differently as each has a different personality. We can develop their personalities a little more by showing them some kindness and love. Sometimes one thinks that it is not worthwhile, but they are human and are one of us and we can be thankful that we are not in their place."

* * * *

"It is most distressing and discouraging to see men, of otherwise healthy looking bodies, who are afflicted with this baffling disease called epilepsy and also have feeble minds. One almost loses confidence in his belief that the work is worthwhile, when he realizes that absolutely nothing can be done for the feeble minded and very little can be done for epileptics. Our spirits are uplifted when we think of these words, however, 'In as much as you have done it unto the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto Me.' New courage comes from these great words and one can again go about his work feeling that he truly is in the service of his Master."

* * * *

"When patients of all types live so closely together they become extremely irritable. Irritation toward them does not help; Neither does reasoning. Patients are accustomed to being shouted at when they make a nuisance of themselves or cause distrubance. I am praying that I may exercise patience and quiet consideration with them, for they are ill., not purposely disagreeable.'

PUEBLO COLORADO STATE HOSPITAL

"This week has been my first introduction to a mental hospital ward. It has been an experience never to be forgotten because I have seen how the mind of the individual forces a person to act when it is poorly constructed or deteriorated. To see patients sitting around a room or court, not interested in anything, not even in themselves or others, is a sorrowful sight. This can be interesting work. I like the work when I can feel that patients all enjoy the work we are trying to do."

* * * *

"I was very much pleased this week to see new patients, ones who seldom do anything but sit. participate in some of our outdoor games. This certainly gives one a satisfaction of doing some good towards the improvement of the patient's mental condition. To me the experience of camping out together as a unit is something which will never be forgotten, both for the fun and for the fellowship."

AKRON, PA., M. C. C. OFFICE

The Summer Service Unit at Akron has various tasks—three of the members are engaged in office work (typing and filing) and one in the very important and appreciated work of preparing wholesome meals. Two others in a venture—a recreation center for girls and boys of the town. They have enjoyed textile painting, leather work, a trip to a nearby museum, a study of stained class windows, a pet show, volley ball, baseball and stories—a total of happy times. The senior pupils have assisted nobly.

* * * *

Living with the MCC family and in this Christian atmosphere has been one of the most enriching experiences of my life. Everyone here has put God first, others second and self last, seemingly. These few weeks have certainly been a blessing to my spiritual life.

* * * *

One of the highlights of this nine week's Summer Service at Akron was the return of Peter and Freda Dyck. I'm so grateful that God directed my way to Akron because hearing them give their account of moving refugees from Europe to Paraguay was wonderful. It was a direct leading of God. It has made me feel the presence of God and His omnipotence more keenly.

* * * *

As to my work I can say that I really like it. There is nothing spectacular about it to make a thrilling story, but I do enjoy commercial work and that partly accounts for liking the work. I believe another reason is that a Christian atmosphere prevails. I have worked at places before where that was not present—cordiality and all that was abundant, but it was just a little different.

During 1946, 105,000 people died in Berlin and 23,000 were born. Vital statistics for 1947 promise to reveal the same trend. The immediate cause is, of course, the present disruption due to the war, the severe winter, the absence of the men now in P. O. W. camps. A longer range reason is due to the losses of young people in two world wars. (WP)

Spiritual Life Conference

AKRON, PA., August 1—Mennonite from Luxembourg, Germany, Switzerland, Holland, Canada, and the United States and delegates from the Waldensian Church of Italy will attend an international spiritual life conference to be held at Basel, Switzerland, August 16 and 17. The conference will be held in three languages—English, French, and German.

Representatives from the United States and Canada who will speak at this conference are: H. S. Bender, John Wichert, H. H. Janzen, H. A. Fast, and Siegfried Janzen. Subjects for discussion include: "Survey of Mennonite Churches in Europe and America," "What is the Church of Jesus Christ?" "The Gospel, the Power of God," "Saved to Service," "The Harvest is Plenteous: Our Mennonite World Missionary Work," "Nonresistance among the Mennonites of North America," and "Jesus Christ, the Great Challenge for our Youth."

Paraguayan Rebellion Affects Mennonite Colonies

After a stalemate of several months, fighting has been resumed in Paraguay. According to M.C.C. workers the fighting now centers around Asuncion. Although the Mennonite colonies in the Chaco have not been seriously molested, the Fernheim colony has had to give up all of their white flour. Bread is now baked from Kaffir flour mixed with sweet potatoes. Though the colonists have enough meat, manticoes, and sweet potatoes, other food supplies are very scarce in Fernheim. Normal travel to the Chaco is not possible at present.

Investigates Effects of Dutch-Indonesian War

William Yoder has gone into the interior of Java to determine the effect of the present war on the M.C.C. relief program. In the meanwhile shipments of material aid are being prepared and workers are being made ready for the work.

and gaining victory over sin. As yet there are few families where both parents are Christians. More women than men are active church members. At present there is a lack of native leadership in the Church at Busby. All the meetings are conducted by the missionaries. And yet we praise God for evidence of Christian growth in the lives of some individuals. A new fellowship is emerging among the young people. For the first time there are enough unmarried Christian young people to organize a Young People's Group.

Knowing that we are "laborers together with God," we who labor here find much joy in sharing the Good News with the Cheyenne Indians.

Home for six years. After our retirement he worked with Rev. Orlando Waltner in the same position for about seven more years. Puran and his wife are the proud parents of two boys. Mrs. Banwar and the boys remain in Champa, while Mr. Banwar is now in Newton with the intention of completing his college education. He thinks that this will take one and one-half or two-years.

Because we consider Puran our boy, he has a standing invitation to our home for curry and rice. He makes use of this invitation, and it always does us good to see him "do away" with the special dish prepared by Mrs. Penner.

Mr. Banwar has had numerous opportunities to speak, and he is much pleased with the reception that he has received. We pray for him God's richest blessings and pray that after the completion of his studies, he will return to India and give his love and strength to his own people. He loves our mission and our missionaries and speaks in high terms of them. Pray for him and his preparation. Because we know Puran so intimately we think much of him. By way of side remark I might mention that Mrs. Penner was present at his birth. A word of cheer to him from those that love our mission would, I believe, cheer him.

—Bethel College Church: The fiftieth anniversary of the church is to be celebrated on October 26 with an all-day program with music and special speakers. A program committee, headed by C. E. Krehbiel, is working on the plans. Paul Shelly, head of the Bible Department of Bluffton College, gave the morning message on August 3, and D. C. Wedel served on August 10 during our pastor's vacation. Several members of our church are participating in the Newton Community chorus of more than 100 voices which will give its second sacred concert of the summer on August 24. This chorus will also present the evening program at the annual gift and fellowship day of the Bethel Deaconess Home and Hospital on September 12.

—Salem Church, Dalton, Ohio: About 350 attended the Sugar Creek, Wadsworth, Salem worship service and picnic dinner at Orr Park, Orrville, Ohio, August 3. The Women's Missionary Society is preparing eight overseas Christmas bundles. The ladies of the society cleaned the church recently. The topic of the last missionary meeting was "Jonah." The Willing Workers Sunday School class held a picnic and vesper service, August 10, The class expects to hoe their project of sugar cane again this week. The September social is to consist of stripping the cane and having a wiener roast. This class is in charge of next Sunday evening's service at church. There will be a play, a worship period, and a variety of music.—Mrs. Ivan Badertshcher, Corr.

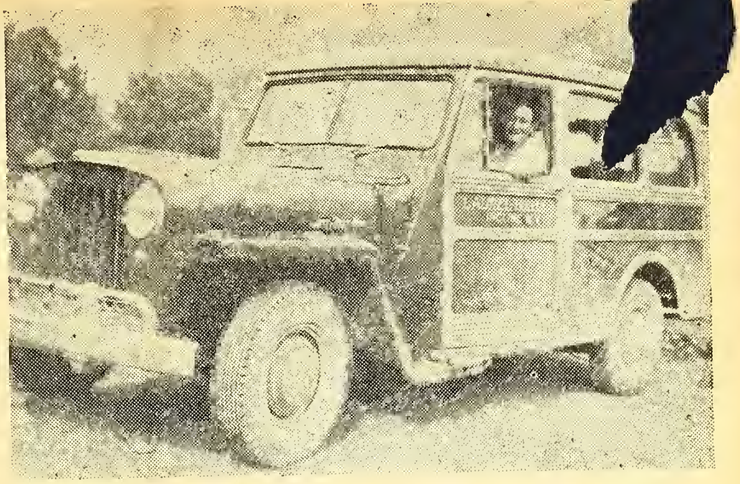
Eden S.S., Schwenksville, Pa., Buys Station Wagon for Elsie Pfister

The Eden Mennonite Sunday School, Schwenksville, Pa., Norman Bergey, Superintendent, has presented a new Willis Station Wagon to Miss Elsie Pfister of Laurel House, Incline, Kentucky.

Miss Pfister writes that the Wagon performs well, is economical in operation, comfortable, and able to negotiate the irregular mountain roads. The Wagon is particularly handy for transporting supplies to the children's and adults' camps. Recently four women, who attended such a conference, said, when it was time to go home, "I don't believe Heaven can be much better."

A new chapter in home missions was opened when the Wagon was delivered to the field by Rev. and Mrs. Freeman H. Swartz. Foreign mission work has called forth many large gifts, but this is one of the outstanding contributions to home missions by one of our Sunday schools. Who will follow the example which has been set?

The Board of Home Missions is deeply grateful for this very substantial evidence of interest in home missions. It is our prayer that many precious souls might be won to Christ because of this gift.



Miss Elsie Pfister in her "Gospel Wagon"

The background scene above is very typical of the country in which Miss Pfister works—swift flowing mountain streams, wooded banks, and mountains.—Gratefully yours in Christ, A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary of the Home Mission Board, Quakertown, Pa.

—Alexanderwohl Church, Goessel, Kansas: Our pastor, Rev. P. A. Wedel, Mrs. Wedel, Lois, Ruth and her husband, Orlando Schmidt, are vacationing in Idaho. They are making the acquaintance of their small grandson and nephew, Dale, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilmer Friesen, as well as visiting their many friends of Aberdeen, their former home. Incidentally, they are escaping much Kansas heat with daily temperatures of 100 and over. In the absence of Rev. Wedel on August 3, Rev. Homer Sperling gave the regular morning sermon. On August 8, our church was filled to capacity when approximately 1,200 persons attended the funeral of Mrs. Jacob J. Flaming, who met a tragic and untimely death early Wednesday morning. While helping her husband with the chores on their farm, she was gored to death in a few minutes time by an enraged bull.—Mrs. R. D. Voth, Corr.

—Bethel Church, Hydro, Oklahoma: The Oklahoma Retreat was held at the Hydro City Park, with an attendance of 114, including leaders. Meals were served at the new dining hall. Rev. Erland Waltner and Rev. Paul Kuhlman were the main speakers. Special singing by various groups added much to the evening services. On July 23, Mrs. J. E. Entz of Newton, Kansas, met the Mission Society in interest of mission work.—Wilfred Ewy, Corr.

—First Church, Nappanee, Indiana: Rev. Jacob Enz began his fourth year of service here with the beginning of July. At our annual business meeting last January the congregation invited him to continue his work here for another three years. Dr. J. E. Hartzler spoke at the first union service, held at the Community Park on July 6. Several weeks ago thirty-five members made the hundred-mile trip to Chicago to attend the song festival at the Seminary. Eighty boys and girls attended the youth activities at the Community Park every morning during the week of July 13. The youth team, which led the activities, was sponsored by the Ministerial Association. Jacob D. Goering, a student at the Seminary, was our guest minister for two Sundays, while our pastor went to New York to visit and to bring his wife and son home. Mrs. Enz spent two months in New York with her parents. She had the misfortune of breaking her ankle and therefore couldn't come home.—Mrs. Loyal Corwin, Corr.

—Eden Church, Moundridge, Kansas: A year of activities for the Ladies Aid and Mission Society sums up as follows: Food taken to the Newton Relief Center, 1,728 cans of chicken, beef, pork, sausage, and soup; 1,657 cans of commerically canned fruits, vegetables, baby foods, and syrup; 8 gallons and 161 no. 2½ cans of lard. Thirty gallons of soap grease. A total of 1,078½ pounds of old and new clothing and shoes. In addition two packages of relief clothing were sent to Germany, and fifty dollars worth of relief sewing was ordered and made up. A total of $250 was sent for food for relief and $142.76 for relief packages. Six comforters (donations to the society) were tied and seven quilts were sewed. One hundred thirteen aprons and 100 pounds of candy were sent to the Arizona mission station. A dozen and one-half stuffed toys and three baby blankets were sent to the Busby, Montana, Station. Convalescent and sympathy cards were sent, and Christmas cards were sent to missionaries and to older members of the church. The society served the meals at the Harvest —First Church, Beatrice, Nebraska: We recently enjoyed two choir concerts. The Fellowship Choir, under the direction of Miss Anna Wiebe, gave a concert on August 1, and the Bethel College A Cappella Choir sang on August 3. The women's societies have packed 275 pounds of clothing for relief and twenty-eight "good-will Christmas Bundles.'

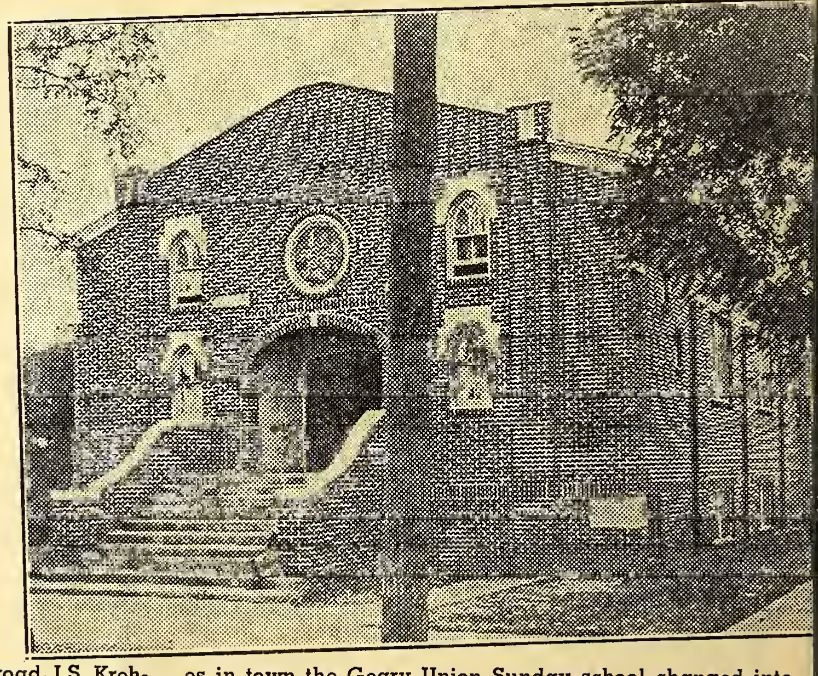
—Dr. A. Warkentin's condition is referred to in a letter of August 8 by Rev. John T. Neufeld, Business Manager of the Mennonite Seminary. Mr. Neufeld states that Dr. Warkentin was again operated on recently. The ailment is cancer. He is being given a serum, which it is hoped will stop the growth. "He is still in the hospital, and his condition changes. Some days he is quite able to talk, while upon other days he is very low. I assume that the present operation will relieve the extra pain, but as to the future we really cannot say what that may bring."

—Rev. Ronald von Riesen, Executive-Secretary of the Board of Education, returned home on August 10 from his trip to the Central Conference session, at which he spoke.

—Rev. Walter H. Dyck, Executive-Secretary of the General Conference, and family left Newton on August 7 for the Central Conference, where Rev. Dyck was to speak. From there they planned to go to Chicago, next to the Ministers' and Missionaries' Retreat, and then the General Conference.

—Bethesda Church, Henderson, Nebraska: Our Sunday school sent 236 Goodwill Christmas Bundles to Akron. A collection gave others an opportunity to give. Rev. Clyde Dirks of Portland, Oregon, brought the morning message, August 17. Mr. William Bartel also of Portland, sang, "Open the Gates of the Temple." At present Rev. Dirks is conducting evangelistic meetings here in Henderson. The opening program of the seventy-third anniversary of the coming of our fathers to America in 1874 is to take place in this church on August 17.—Mrs. Ruben Friesen, Corr.

First Church, Geary, Oklahoma, Commemorates Fiftieth Anniversary



The First Mennonite Church, Geary, Oklahoma, commemorated its fiftieth anniversary on August 3 with an afternoon service. Rev. Henry Hege, President of the Western District Conference, and intimately connected with First Church, Geary, in bygone years, was the guest speaker, while Mr. O. P. Ruth presented a history of the church. The Geary church was organized five years after the Cheyenne and Arapahoe Indian reservation was thrown open to settlement. Practically all of the first members came from the Halstead, Kansas, Mennonite Church. Rev. J. S. Krehbiel, a son of Christian Krehbiel of Halstead, served this pioneer group as minister. The original membership of the church included twenty-two white people and three Indians. The Geary church soon assumed a community influence. When Geary sprang up as a boom town along a new railroad, J.S. Krehbiel was asked to teach a Sunday school in town. So the country Sunday school joined the "union" Sunday school in town, meeting in buildings under construction, with planks across nail kegs and beer barrels for benches. In July 1898, the country church was loaded on four wagons, pulled by sixteen horses, and moved into town, where it served as the house of worship until the present brick building went up in 1929. As other denominations built churches in town the Geary Union Sunday school changed into the Mennonite Sunday school. In time the church acquired a parsonage. Now this has been sold and plans are under way to build a new one. The following ministers have served the church since the death of Rev. J. S. Krehbiel in 1916: Rev. Henry Riesen, Rev. H. D. Penner, Rev. P. E. Franz, Rev. H. N. Harder, and Rev. Abe H. Peters, the present pastor.

GROUP MISSIONS

Several yarns of different colors may weave a beautiful pattern. A number of different experiences may lead to some new and interesting adventures. We shall give several observations that could well lead to a new understanding.

1. A missionary returning from Africa said that she had lived in a bungalow by herself for eight months. This is heroic and unselfish service, but one questions the wisdom of such a method of mission work.

2. While making a study of women's part in mission work, the more general observation, that there are more women than men in mission work, was statistically confirmed.

3. The apparent success of voluntary service groups have led us to believe that such group mission work would also be possible for longer periods of mission service.

We do not want to minimize that great work that has been done by single women missionaries or even by groups of two women workers working in one field, but it seems psychologically wrong to place either one or two girls in one place by themselves for any extended period of time. One person is too lonely, two people get on each other's nerves too much. But groups of six and ten would be a possibility that could develop into great work.

I believe that such group mission work would be possible in home mission work. Further discussion on this subject by foreign missionaries and others would be of interest. —John T. Neufeld, Pastor Mennonite Bible Mission, Chicago, and Business Manager of the Mennonite Biblical Seminary.

THE FRIEND AND THE ROAD

"Be sure to find the friend before you find the road," advised my Arab guide on my recent visit in Palestine. He said this was familiar counsel among shepherds and nomads of the East.

For a stranger traveling in Arab lands it is good advice. If you know neither the road, nor the people, nor the customs of the land, a friend is your first requisite. Once you have him, such matters as finding the road, food and lodging will be taken care of quite easily.

Our time could well be labeled "the perplexity of nations." Statesmen grapple with issues they seemingly don't know how to settle. They are sincere in their efforts to bring order out of chaos and peace to a war-torn world. Yet too many conferences end in deadlock.

This is true not only of nations. We also experience many unsolvable perplexities in our home, community and church life.

Could not the reason for this be that we seek the road first and the Friend later? Or our own road, disregarding the Friend altogether? If things are in a state of deadlock, if you don't know which way to turn, go first of all to the Friend of Friends. With Him you will find the way—and peace and victory, too. —Menno Schrag, Editor of the Mennonite Weekly Review.

The Sunday School Curriculum

by Paul R. Shelly

In Deuteronomy 6:7 we read: "Thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children . . ." The Hebrews realized that they had a responsibility to pass on their heritage to their children. One can never force people to accept the Christian religion, but we always have the responsibility of clarifying the Christian faith we would have people accept and follow.

I. OUR NEED

The challenge given in Deuteronomy still holds for us. As one looks at our Sunday schools one is aware of the fact that we do not have an over-all curriculum. We have not determined clearly the content of what we hope to teach our children. This is true in our individual Sunday schools. We use materials from many different publishing houses without sufficient thought whether they cover all the material they should cover or whether they take the approach that is in sympathy with the Christian faith as it has been interpreted by our group. This is also true of our conference as a whole. So even though an individual church may have a balanced curriculum in its Sunday school, it may be entirely different from that in other churches.

II. THE CURRICULUM COMMITTEE

At the 1945 General Conference session, held at North Newton, Kansas, the Board of Education appointed a sub-committee to work on this problem. The committee originally consisted of Rev. H. N. Harder, Aberdeen, Idaho; Miss Erna Fast, New York; and Rev. Paul R. Shelly, Bluffton, Ohio. Mrs. E. J. Miller, Chicago, Illinois, has since been appointed in the place of Miss Erna Fast, who resigned when her duties took her outside of our conference circles. Rev. Ronald von Riesen is also a voting member of the committee by virtue of his office as Executive-Secretary of the Board of Education. Rev. Erland Waltner is also a member of the committee, representing the Board of Education. The committee held its initial meeting at Freeman, South Dakota, in August, 1946. It met again in North Newton, Kansas, in connection with the Council of Boards in February, 1947. Its last meeting was in Aberdeen, Idaho, June 10—13, 1947.

III. THE TASK

The task of the committee is a twofold one. The first is to work out an overall curriculum for the Sunday school that will present our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ and the total Christian gospel in accordance with our own particular heritage. The second part of our task is to work out an overall curriculum for all the organizations of the church that there will be a minimum of overlapping and that the total needs will be cared for in all the age groups we serve.

IV. WHAT HAS BEEN ACCOMPLISHED

This article will deal with the first of these aims alone, the overall Sunday school curriculum. One can see as he looks at this task that it is a long-range one. Other denominations have had curriculum committees for many years and have been working on this task and have by no means completed it for their own groups. However, our committee has made progress, and some of the specific areas we have covered will be mentioned here:

1. The committee has carefully examined the quarterlies that we are now publishing in an attempt to make these the best possible. A number of concrete suggestions were worked out for the Senior-Adult Quarterly in order to make it even more effective than it has been in the past. One of the suggestions made at the meeting in Aberdeen, Idaho, was to publish a separate edition of this quarterly for young people with a separate writer for the discussion section. The other sections of the quarterly would be the same as in the Senior-Adult Quarterly.

2. Beginning with the current quarter we will have our own edition of the Old Mennonite Intermediate Quarterly in the uniform series. Rev. Arnold Regier is editing this material. This quarterly will still be the same as the Old Mennonite quarterly for the most part, but we will have the privilege of keeping out some of the things that are of particular interest to the Old Mennonites and to add a few emphases of our own.

3. For those who use the uniform series in the Primary department the committee recommends the Old Mennonite material. This material is prepared by one who is capable in the field of primary children and is well-adapted for this age group.

4. One of the major problems of our Sunday schools has been that of teacher's quarterlies. The committee has made a separate study of some of the teacher's quarterlies. A separate report will be made of this later. A preliminary statement can, however, be given here. The committee feels that no one teacher's quarterly solves all our needs. The New Century Leader, published by the David C. Cook Company, and the Old Mennonite teacher's quarterly are used by a number of Sunday schools. The New Century Leader has many practical applications and suggestions for teachers of various age groups. These are helpful! It is somewhat weak on the Biblical phase of the material. It is also definitely weak in its interpretation of lessons that deal with specific Mennonite principles. The Old Mennonite teacher's quarterly is strong on its Biblical interpretation and on specific Mennonite principles. It is somewhat weak in practical applications. The committee suggests that teachers in our Sunday schools be given both of these sources, so that they will have a well-rounded approach to the lesson.

5. The committee is looking ahead to a graded curriculum. It has made a preliminary study of the possibilities of utilizing some of the work already done by Mrs. E. J. Miller on the Junior quarterlies as a nucleus for a graded series for Juniors. It is felt that by 1951 this series could be ready with only one or two quarters having to be written in addition to those that will be prepared by that time.

6. The committee has studied the offerings of many of the groups that are producing graded materials. It has arranged a suggested graded curriculum for Nursery, Beginner, Primary, and Intermediate groups for 1948. This curriculum will fit into the pattern of the Uniform series with no overlapping so that our own materials can be used for the Junior, Young People's, and Adult groups. This suggested curriculum was given at the General Conference at Berne, Indiana, and will also be sent to the churches.

7. The committee met with the curriculum committee of the Old Mennonite Church just prior to the General Conference in the hope that we may be able to work cooperatively in the area of graded materials, particularly in the Primary group.

V. YOUR PART

There are four responses that individuals and churches can make to the work of the Curriculum Committtee in the area of the Sunday school curriculum. The first is patience. This is a slow process. We are anxious to make progress, but yet we want to be certain of the road we should take and thus do not want to move too rapidly. The second is one of cooperation. The more the churches use the materials provided by our conference the more we will be able to produce. We do not want blind cooperation. Certainly, all of our suggestions will not be practical immediately for all groups. We also welcome suggestions that you may have for improving our whole program. Third, we will need your financial support. The more materials we produce the more money we will need. In the beginning stages we need money for planning, for writers, for printing, and for other purposes. This too is a missionary venture, and we need your financial assistance. Fourth, we need your prayers for we feel that this is one of the most significant ventures of our conference. We want you to keep our work constantly before the throne of grace.

Among Chinese Students

by Marie J. Regier

I asked the girls in one of my English classes to write a composition on "Student Strikes" which at the moment was a vital subject. Both university and middle school students in Shanghai, Nanking, Peking and Tientsin were marching down the streets in processions, writing and pasting slogans on walls, streets and gates to the effect that the government should feed the hungry and stop the civil war, though one thoughtful student remarked that one side alone could not stop the civil war, protests ought to be sent to both sides. Those students who did not take part in these more prominent activities, nevertheless, expressed their disapproval of government action by absence from classes.

The students in our own particular school had been persuaded by the principal not to take part unless they brought a statement from their parents granting them permission to do so.

That their sympathies were fully with the strikers, however, was obvious from their compositions. All expressed more or less the idea which one girl clothed in an idiomatic phrase she had memorized obviously from one of her English lessons, "The government is very bad, it is even rotten to the core." The best student in the class wrote, "But the government has accused the students of being coaxed and utilized by the Communists against the government. That is not true. Students, especially college students are not so easy to be deceived. Our government should not make excuses to cover its faults."

All students took the situation seriously. Some of them made speeches to the people on the street and got into fights with the soldiers. Being unarmed, they got the worst of the deal and a number were wounded. Among them a young Christian.

It was interesting to see the attitude which the Christian students took towards the strike. Most of the universities and middle schools, even non-Christian ones, have smaller or larger groups called "The Christian Fellowship."

In one university the group got together and discussed the attitude they should take to the strike. They all felt that as Christians they should take part since that was the only method at their disposal to express their disapproval of what the government was doing. But they decided to enter as individuals, not as the Fellowship.

It was about some students of this same fellowship that an American Y.M.C.A. secretary spoke to us. He leads a religious discussion group with them once a week. During these tense days, he also went down. But when he arrived there he saw that a mass meeting was going on. He took for granted that the discussion group would disband for the evening. So he stood on the outer fringe of the meeting and listened to what was going on. Before the meeting was hardly over the students of of the discussion group spied him, "We've been looking for you everywhere," they said. They still wanted their discussion. It was now eight-thirty and they kept him until ten-thirty discussing prayer and its relation to the present situation.

"It is this sort of thing," the Y.M.C.A. man said,

Helen E. Nickel Describes Work of Past Quarter

One week of July gone serves as a reminder that quarterly reports are due. The past three months brought changes of residence and work and seem to have gone too quickly to allow one to accomplish much. My Mauhadih address is very temporary. Early in September I expect to be back in Jagdeeshpur.

Easter came early in April and was preceded by a week of witness, when many in the church and schools took part in going to nearby villages. We were encouraged by the attentive response. Every evening the jeep and trailer full of women and girls joined by Miss Schmidt and me, and the blessed message of life in and through Christ blessed our own souls too. There would be almost unlimited opportunity to carry on this type of evangelism throughout a large part of the year, but as yet we are not doing it aggressively.

The heat set in early and in earnest this year so that during the four days of Samelan (district church convention), we sweltered at the station. I do not know what the reason for it was, but many less women came to attend than we had expected. Consequently, the plans of Mrs. Ratzlaff and myself to offer them help in the Oriya language through local Indian women leaders fell short of what we had anticipated. It does demand a great deal of prayer and attention to know how best to give these new and often illiterate women spiritual help on a level where they can understand and accept it. Throughout the churches of India the Christian home is receiving much attention. We too, are trying to set its values and responsibilities before our people to urge them to make the applications where they live. Five standards have been set for this year: prayer before meals, Christian engagement and marriage services, the right use of money, clean bodies and clean clothes, and progress toward removing illiteracy.

At once after Samelan we hurried to Champa by way of Mauhadih to welcome the Lubin Jantzen family. Also Gladys Klassen. They were in the same large party with us going to Landour via the riot-troubled city of Calcutta. It was a happy journey and fairly comfortable. I saw just one incident of great chasing and shouting in the Howrah railroad station that made me aware that in parts of the city the unrest is great. Ellangowan is proving to be a great boon and blessing in Laudour. Worry about a place to board or live used to keep us from going there. Now for years to come it seems Ellangowan will be more than filled with our own missionaries, mostly language students. The stay there was refreshing and helpful in every way. There was fine fellowship, renewed friendship with old friends and acquaintance with some new ones and wonderful English church services and Bible study classes. I enjoyed keeping house together with Eva Pauls and Mrs. Isaac. We surely will miss Mrs. Isaac when she leaves for good.

During spare time in the hills, and even before I went, I had been making plans to conduct a simple normal training class during the rains. We are desperately in need of rural Primary school teachers. In fact, we have a special need in the Jagdeeshpur area for teachers who will be willing and able to open simple short-term schools in many places where the church is small and new and the adults illiterate and the children entirely without school privileges. At that station the congestion is great, so I found no living space for students nor a class-room, but here in Mauhadih are a number of buildings which have been unoccupied since the great flood of 1937. If this were a large school we could not have considered it because flood hazard is present every rainy season. However, there are only twelve in the class, so we ventured to try it. Thus far the rains are much lighter than normal, the heat and humidity greater than ever (it would be hard for Rev. Kreider to verify this), but we are trusting God to send rain and protect us all throughout the season.

The students have taken up their studies with a fine attitude and we pray that nothing will hinder them in going out to far districts from September through March to conduct three-months schools in at least eight or ten entirely new villages. May God grant that according to His will.

It is a privilege to me personally to live a short time with Mrs. Isaac and a longer one in the same bungalow with the Wengers. The greatest joy of the entire quarter came from welcoming the new missionaries into our midst. A contrast from my first term in India when NOT ONE SINGLE NEW MISSIONARY was sent, with these past three months when five have been added to our number and two sweet little children. Thank you and keep up the reenforcements if it is possible.

I have had no major health problems but have been troubled off and on with spells of malaria fever, which have given me a new sympathy for those who continually have to fight it. It cuts across one's steady routine, can bring discouragement, and sap one's energy. In India thousands suffer from it chronically, and we need not be surprised at the resulting lethargy. Greetings in the name of our Saviour.—Helen E. Nickel, Mauhadih, via Champa, C.P., India, July 7, 1947.

"You must be able to look at rough timbers ... and see THE FINISHED PRODUCT."

"Are you a mechanic-ing?"

"No, I'm a carpentering." And I was. We needed desks and had one way of getting them and were taking that way. In spare hours boards were shaped, glued and assembled. The front porch, our only work-shop, was in sight of all callers. Comments on the part of different people set us thinking. Some saw only a pile of lumber, some—a couple of queer folks who worked hard to smooth off lumber when using it rough would be "just-as-good," and some saw a couple of pieces of furniture in the making such as they also would like to possess.

Why a paragraph like that? Because living and working in this community is very similar. There is much rough material here in hearts and lives which, if placed under the Master Workman's hands, could be shaped and polished for His use.

As we seek to teach and show them what Christ really wants to be to them, there are those who don't even recognize what we are seeking to do. We try to give them the Word as a tool whereby their lives can be made anew, after His likeness. Others regard us as ones who foolishly work hard at an unnecessary task—trying to encourage a desire for a more polished life in Christ when they are satisfied with just a profession. But we praise Him that there are some who know He wants them to have His best and their desire to be better for Him.

In spite of "warped boards," "poor glue" and faulty workmanship on our part as we seek to help folks here become a working unit for God, we believe there will yet be a testimony in this place to God's glory. To be sure, some "drawers" will fail to work smoothly at times, but we trust they will all have "bottoms" in them, at least, so that what Christ puts into a life will be retained and soon be put to work for Him.

Perhaps, you are the one God could and would use to bear disappointments and heartaches here for Him in gathering and pastoring a flock, and thus meet a need among some of these mountain people. The ministry needs men, but men of God sent by Him to give their time to the people. It may have to be in the face of many difficulties. Or maybe God would have you fulfill Luke 10:2 and see Him answering in sending the ones He has chosen to come.

But a vision is necessary. You must be able to look at rough timbers and see the finished product, made so by the grace and workmanship of God Himself.

And pray that the day will soon come when His own here will not only be His but His to use as He sees fit.

—Elsie Pfister, Laurel House, Incline, Kentucky.

Glad To Serve but Lonesome

(In the following article Rev. and Mrs. Frank P. Dyck tell a little about the home mission work which they are doing as they serve in the Hoffnungsau Church, Cuauhtemoc, Chihuahua, Mexico.)

We were greatly blessed through the servants of God who traveled through here in the interest of the Creel mission field. Rev. Daniel J. Unruh of Newton, Kansas spoke June 22 in our church here in Cuauhtemoc, and Rev. David Schultz of Manitoba and other members continued. We were sorry that their stay in our midst was so limited. I thank God for men who preach personal salvation and who preach the unvarnished truth as the Bible declares it.

Our meetings are well attended in general as we sow the seed. We trust and pray that much fruit may abound for eternity. The first Sunday of every month we have set aside for special offerings for the refugees overseas. Every Sunday night we gather for Bible study out of I John, the epistle of fellowship.

Last week we invited all German-speaking children (We are unable to speak Spanish) for daily vacation Bible school. We were very much surprised and delighted to find thirty-two children for the first gathering on July 21. Next day the number of children increased to forty and they stayed with us all through the week. We had our classes all day. My wife and I conducted these. Friday night July 25, we had our closing program. We were glad to hear the parents express their appreciation. But above all, we would like to see the seed sprout and bring fruit for eternity. Many of the children never do attend any Sunday school. They belong to other groups. We trust that this may be a means of winning them to come to Sunday school.

We are thankful that the Lord has permitted us to serve in this part of His vineyard for the past eight months. We covet your prayers on our behalf as this is a very lonely field. We get visiting speakers very seldom. So let us keep looking up, as I believe that His coming is very near.

(Note: We are thankful for this short but meaty report from our worker in Mexico. We trust interested friends of home missions will write letters to these workers. God bless you!—A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary, Quakertown, Pa.)

"that gives us courage to go on. Also the fact that there seems to be no feeling of resentment towards those who have inflicted suffering on them. They seem to take for granted that if they are going to stand up for what they think is right, they must be prepared to suffer."

The Christian message is making its appeal to students, to some in a more modern dress, to others in a more conservative garb. Thoughtful students are appealed to through discussion groups; some of the more emotional adolescent youth finds its appeal in the more evangelistic type of meeting—so called.

We have witnessed a very unique thing happening in the Girls' Middle School here at the Presbyterian Mission. Over a period of weeks last winter, a Yenching student with religiously a rather conservative background held meetings every Saturday night to which students from both the boys' and girls' schools came. Just before the close of school, Mr. Chang was again invited to come. For three days he held meetings twice a day. Just how he managed that together with his classes, for he was a senior graduating last June, I don't know—but he did. He seems very serious and sincere and truly spiritual. He is very dramatic in his presentations and rather emotional but not overly so. When at the end he asked students to express their desire to become Christians by raising their hands, he did not urge them unduly—he didn't need to. The hands of some eighty students went up, and before all had expressed their desire in writing the number had risen to about ninety.

Of course the students had had some background. There was a religious service once a week which all students were required to attend; a number had joined Bible classes, so that the messages were not completely new to them. Certainly prayer had something to do with the results. But the meetings did bring matters to a climax.

Yes, there are many hopeful signs of students searching and finding in Christ's gospel the answer to life's problems.

But there are also large numbers who are not interested and one sees evidence of the type of student who is on the way to perpetuate exactly the type of society and government he is now striking against.

One girl came to the principal of our school with a special request. She had finished middle school and wished to attend a midwifery school. But this school would admit only students with two years of college. Wouldn't the principal give her a certificate stating that she had finished two years of college. Fortunately the principal wouldn't!

Just the other day I was introduced to a student who was planning to go to America. He had only finished the first year of college, or not even that. Yet, he said that he was going to get a diploma.

"But how?" I asked.

"Oh, I know a man who makes his living making false diplomas. I can buy one from him."

It was just as simple as that!

"I want to reach my objective," he continued, "If I wanted to wait until the government was ready I would have to wait until my hair is white. In comparison to the government's actions mine are quite honest. Do you mean to say that it's all right for the government to be dishonest, but I shouldn't be?"

He seemed to have no sense of fundamental honesty—it was merely a case of getting even with the government.

Then there is also a discouraging factor even among the Christian students, a factor which we find among Christians all over the world, and during all ages, namely that there are some who are followers of Paul, and some of Cephas and some of Appolos. There is a lack of Christian unity. Those who have much zeal have a tendency to a "holier than thou" attitude. Those with an open mind are inclined to lack warmth and real devotion.

In conclusion then, there is enough good in the situation to make us hopeful and truly grateful, but there are enough dangers to keep us ever watchful and to urge us on to greater efforts, rather towards greater dependence upon our Lord and Master, who after all is the real ruler of the universe, no matter what men may do. I know of no other conviction that is as satisfying as this.

Mennonite Refugees in Austria

Arthur Voth has given interesting reports of his work among the Mennonite refugees from Russia who are now located in Austria. It is thought that there may be about 400 such refugees scattered throughout Austria in refugee camps, on farms, in private homes, etc. The condition of these people is similar to that of refugees in other parts of Europe—many separated from friends and family, needy of food and clothing, no source of income, longing to go to a land of freedom and safety.

"One of the most rewarding trips was my visit to the home of the Loewen family, a mother with four children, ages four to eleven. She did not know of any other Mennonites in Austria, and like the prophet felt that 'I, even I only, am left'. Due to the hasty flight from Poland she had become separated from her mother and sisters; ever since that time she had put forth every possible effort to get in touch with them. She had heard that they were in the British Zone and through the D. P. Offices and the Red Cross had tried to contact them, but had been unsuccessful. She knew they had relatives in Canada, but since she had no addresses in the British Zone along, I looked through it. What inexpressible joy came into this home when they learned that the mother and two sisters were also in Austria. When I left, Frau Loewen said that she could still not realize it was true." (Arthur Voth)

Harold Ratzlaff Reports From India

(Excerpts from a letter by Harold Ratzlaff sent to the Secretary. He is very happy over the fact that his home church decided to support them on the field. The Board is also very grateful to the New Hopedale Church at Meno, as well as other churches that are supporting a missionary or a couple on the field.)

Dear Rev. Nyce:

In The Mennonite which came recently in which the minutes of the annual session of the mission board were given, we read a statement to the effect that my home church, the New Hopedale Church, Meno, Oklahoma, had undertaken to fully support us as missionaries in India.

This is a matter which is indeed gratifying to me, in fact it is as if in answer to prayer. When we left for India I had a secret wish that the Mennonite—that is General Conference Mennonite—churches in Oklahoma would get together and undertake to provide our salary. But now it has turned out even better than I had dared to pray. Instead of all the Oklahoma churches doing it together, my own home church is doing it alone. I must admit that is more than I had faith to expect when we left for India. I am indeed happy about it and am deeply grateful to God and to the church for it.

We are just about at the end of our annual vacation which we are spending up here in Kashmir. We are here together with the Waltners. However, we are compelled to stay a few days longer because of measles.

Bobby Waltner got them a few days ago and is now well enough to travel, but it looks as if our little girl will get them soon so we may have to extend our stay —will see.

Our stay here has been restful and relaxing. However, we did miss the fellowship of other missionaries such as we have in Landour and even other hill stations. But the beauty of God's nature here is superb and we have enjoyed it to the full, and I am sure its inspiration will ever stay with us. Kashmir is beautifull and there is no gainsaying it. But now we are glad to return to our work in His field at Jagdeeshpur. Our evangelistic workers, together with all our fellow Christians there, are awaiting us, and we will be happy to return to them again. Even our little daughter Mary Ann is homesick for Jagdeeshpur and is very happy with the prospect of going back after having talked about it for the last two weeks already.

June 5, A. M.

Our little girl is now definitely broken out with the measles, and the doctor says that we must not travel until the fifteenth, so we will have to wait obediently until the sixteenth since the fifteenth is Sunday. So it goes. Now I must write to Mr. Thiessen and adjust the program in the district with his help which is going to be difficult I know.

Our mission here needs all the prayers that can possibly be mustered up these days. There are a number of very problematical situations which face us. For one thing our neighboring missions are pressing us to consent to making our Bible school a union school in which they want to participate on equal terms. We are very hesitant to agree to that, but the difficulty will be that if we do not agree to it being a union school, then they will set up their own school, and our school will become a very small institution with students from our field only. So it is a real problem, and without God's guidance we will not be able to decide it. Then another matter is that of finding enough people to teach our new missionaries the language.

We are very thankful indeed for all of the new recruits, but it makes the language teacher problem acute. This too, we will be able to solve only with God's help and guidance. Then in spite of all our new recruits, we are still very short on district evangelistic workers—people whom we can send out into the district for direct evangelization of the non-Christians. We need more of them and the sooner the better. So I hope the Board is doing all it can to keep these urgent matters before our church people as we need the united and fervent prayers of all of them so that in all these things God's will may be found and carried out to His name's honour and glory.

Missionary Work is Not Dull

Many demands are made upon the time of a missionary. Many people in the course of a day come to the door of the mission bungalow. Each one has a problem or a request. Missionaries find full use for every talent they may possess. Missionaries not only preach and teach, but there are times when they must prescribe for the care of the sick; they have to help settle quarrels; they are called upon to help in finding wives for young men desiring to marry; they have to be mechanics to keep cars in repair; they have to supervise the building of houses and they must attend to the repair of mission properties. This list could be extended. Every talent they possess can be employed in one way or another. Their days are not dull with routine except such office work as each missionary must do, as the keeping of records and accounts. They fulfill the injuction given by Paul, "to be all things to all men."—Rev. A. E. Kreider after visit to India mission field.

Eventually co-ops may make unnecessary the web of intricate laws that have been passed to control monopolies. The co-ops in Sweden have proven that this can be done. —Colliers.

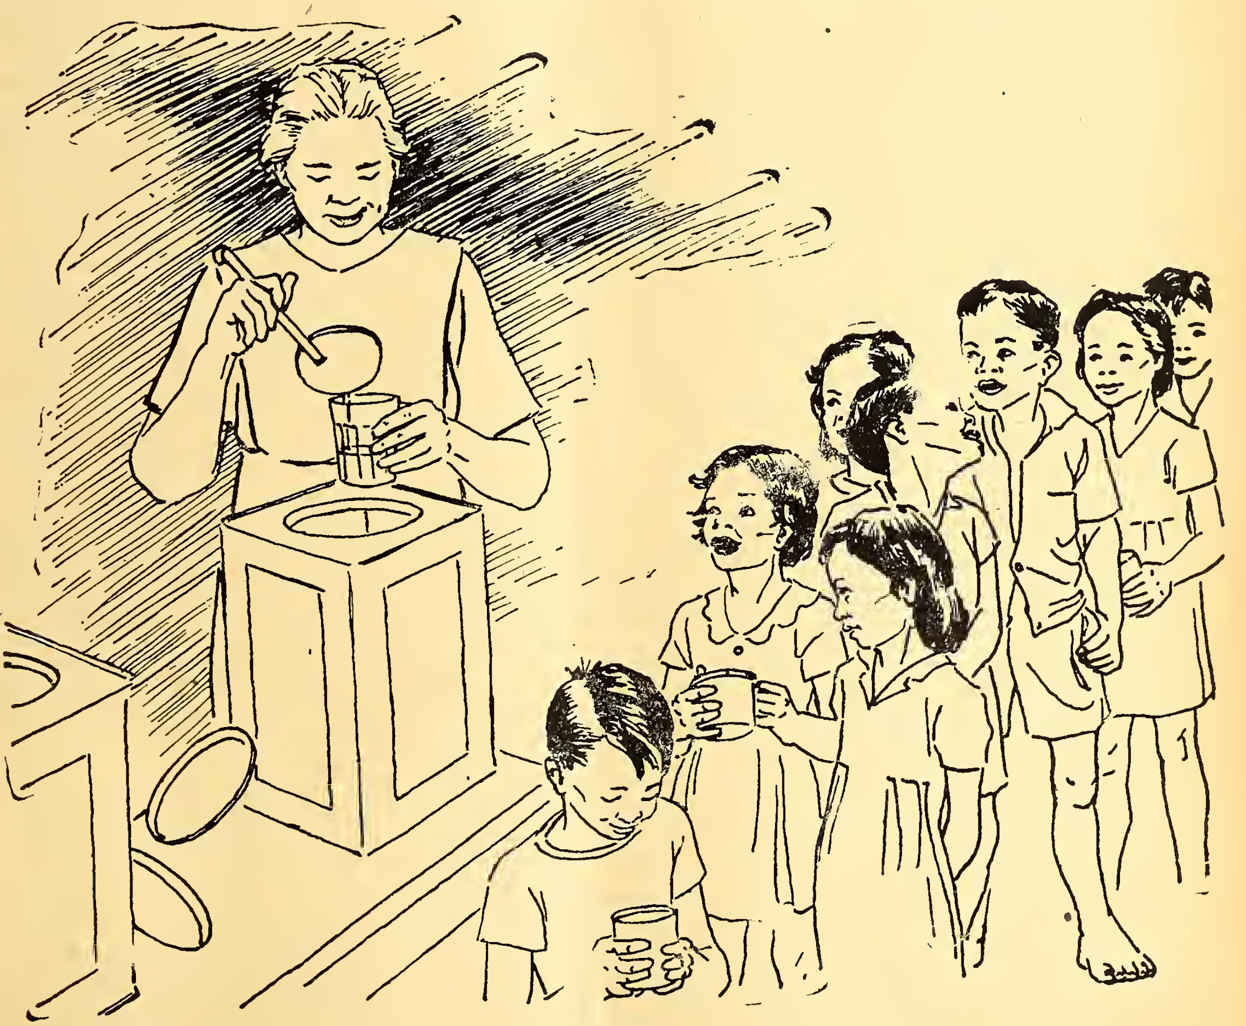
Milk Distribution in the Philippines

We had in our warehouse five tons of powdered milk, and in this war-impoverished city of Bangued there are hundreds of under-nourished children. The people are poor, and this poverty revealed itself greatly in the children, poverty written in the rags they wore, in the oldness of their faces, and in the thinness of their bodies. Could we give these children milk?

It was finally decided that David Hoover would take charge of this project and Miriam Weaver and Ivan Moon would work with him. How many of these children could we efficiently serve? What was the best method? Many of these children had never tasted cow's milk in any form. We knew that some would not like it. It might be necessary to teach them. From our past experience with the Filipino people we knew it would be difficult to arrange a definite time or place to meet them. These people have not learned our modern way of living by the clock. Many of them would come very early or very late.

It seemed that the only practical method was to take milk to the schools. There we would be able to



A relief worker distributing milk to Filipino children give to the children of the first and second grades. But we needed much more information. David Hoover approached Mrs. Pablo Bringas with our questions. She is the wife of Rev. Bringas, local Protestant minister. She has a very active interest in all we are trying to do and she is a teacher in the elementary schools. "Mrs. Bringas, do you think it will be practical for us to give milk to the school children?"

"Oh yes, Mr. Hoover, but you must first know about the unusual arrangement we have for our classes since the war. The bombing has destroyed one of our two elementary school buildings. We have been able to make temporary reconstruction of several classrooms in this building, but because of the great shortage of classroom space we must have one set of children attending school in the morning and another group in the afternoon."

David then met Mr. Juan Pizarro, the principal of the elementary schools. Conferences were held with the teachers of the two schools. In these conferences we laid the foundations for our project. To these teachers we introduced the churches and the relief agency that had sent us to serve in their war-stricken province. We explained our proposed project: to give a glass of milk every school day to every pupil in the first two grades. We explained the spirit that motivated our service: we were serving in obedience to the spirit and teachings of Jesus Christ. We sought information, "How many children are there in these classes?" A total of almost 600 children in these classes in the two schools. "When would be the best hour to visit the schools so that there would be the least interruption of classes?" It was decided that we should visit the east school at 8:00, the west school at 9:00; in the afternoon the east school at 4:00, the west school at 4:30. We asked the teachers for their cooperation, that each pupil should bring his own glass or cup and that they be carefully instructed that the cups and glasses be clean. We urged that the pupils be also taught the great value of milk.

There remained one more step to the laying of the foundation for our project. Mr. Pizarro suggested, "We should talk with Mr. Santiago Dumlao, the school superintendent. It will be good to first gain his permission." And that was easily done. Mr. Dumlao said many kind and complimentary things about our entire relief program. Concerning the milk project he asked two questions: "Is this skimmed milk or whole milk?" "It is powdered whole milk." "In what kind of containers does it come?"

"Sealed in five pound cans." "That is good. Powdered milk was distributed in Abra Province upon one other occasion, but it was made from skimmed milk and was shipped in barrels." We later learned from another source that some of the children receiving the powdered milk had suffered with diarrhea and the school officials believed it was caused by the barrels. Upon learning this we were very thankful that our own people back home had planned with greater care that this service that we strive to give in the name of Christ would not shame His cause.

Having found the most practical method we began the work. This phase of our milk program lasted only three weeks—the last three weeks of the school term. We gave one glass of milk each day to about 590 children, preparing twenty-five gallons of milk daily. As we look back upon those three weeks we must thank God for the rich experience it has been.

The teachers have made our work very pleasant through their patience and cooperation. They had quite a task in continually reminding the children to bring their cups and glasses from home each day properly cleaned. Because the children were only to attend school for half of each day there was always a crowd of children playing upon the school grounds. These children always followed us from classroom to classroom and filled the doorways to watch us giving the milk. Because we had so many spectators it was not practical for us to have the school children come out of doors to receive their milk. Upon the other hand, as we gave the milk in the classrooms the smaller children occasionally spilled milk on the floor. This was one of the many situations that demanded the teacher's patience.

The children were very appreciative. They tried very earnestly to be courteous and to express properly their thankfulness. It was difficult for them, because English is the language used in the schools, throughout the Philippines, while in the homes the children are taught Ilocano, the local dialect. These little children in the first and second grades were just learning their first English words. The teachers would coach them that they might use the proper words, "Thank you, sir." It was always amusing to watch some little girl walk the length of the line, reminding her classmates what they should say. As each received his milk there would be a faithful repetition "Thank you, Sir, Thank you, Sir." Or one would probably add a few words "Thank you very much, sir." Then suddenly some little boy would make a mistake. With a bright smile of self-confidence he would say in ringing tones, "You are welcome, sir," or "Good-morning, sir."

It was amazing to see the variety of containers the children brought. These containers were another indication of the extreme poverty in some of the families. Most were fortunate enough to be able to find in their homes the requested cup or glass but some brought cans with the tops cut out and the edges carefully smoothed, some brought bottles made practical by cutting them off below the necks and a few brought coconut shells.

After the first several days the children began to develop their own ideas concerning the use of their milk. A few believed the milk was not sweet enough and would bring sugar in their glasses. Some who received their milk in the early part of the day would bring bread. For some of the poorest this bread and milk was their only breakfast. We saw some of the children leave their classes to take the milk to their near-by homes. We learned that they were giving it to their younger brothers or sisters. This act of sharing the little that they were receiving is but one of the many things that is teaching us to love these people.

In the short time we have worked in the schools we have been able to become acquainted with over six hundred friendly and appreciative people, all grateful for the small thing we have done. They try to magnify our short service. The school principal, the school nurse, and several of the teachers have said that they have noticed improvement in the children, that they appear healthier. It is true that undernourished children respond quickly to an improved diet, but in this case we could not see a noticeable change. Nevertheless, it is a great gift to know that we have won six hundred new friends. — David R. Hoover, Miriam Weaver and Ivan Moon.

Events Happen to Come Thus

by P. W. and Mathilde Penner

The most active season for district work are the months November to March after the monsoon has cleared away. The cool breeze from the north furnishes the comforts necessary, mostly without rain. From April until the first half of June the heat often causes the thermometer to register 117 and even higher. The nights during the last few weeks fail to cool off. These months we sleep mainly under the starry heavens. The moon, with the beautiful constellation, gives ample occasion to observe in quietness God's indescribable handiwork.

This year it was our turn to remain down on the plains. It was thought the activities could be reduced considerably. However, it worked out differently, not robbing the joy of life at all, but increasing our happiness in having close fellowship, especially with the growing generation. Other months they are generally absent, studying in the various institutions away from the mission station. Here are some of the enjoyable features we shared, making a person feel some twenty summers younger.

The heat had not risen to its zenith when the young people planned their retreat to be held for four days on the Champa mission station. Their committees resembled a busy beehive. The preparations went on with feverish activities, no one shirking the allotted obligations. Two wonderful shade trees, with the erected awnings, offered a comfortable shelter all day long. The necessary speakers were appointed and summoned. Their topics were Bible readings and talks that held before us the different lines of development to a truly Christian fruitful life. An impressive communion service occupied Sunday forenoon. The whole enterprise gave ample reason to look for a more useful working staff in the making.

Another worthwhile event was found in Mothers' Day celebrations. The church was attractively decorated, the mothers with appropriate badges occupied the most conspicuous place. Now the younger individuals by their very suitable addresses did a Christian honor to their mothers. True Christian ideals found pure expression and were rooted in Biblical ground. "Honor thy father and thy mother!"

Next in line fell the much neglected observance of Ascension Day when our Lord re-entered His heavenly abode on our behalf taking His place on the right hand of God as High Priest with the name above all names. Really a day worthwhile to be specially honoured. The church was well filled late in the afternoon in spite of the intense heat.

Of course, only ten days later Pentecost attracted our attention. Very fittingly had this day been marked as a general day of prayer of India because Pentecost is the outcome of ardent prayer in former days. The congregations gathered willingly. It was stressed that then for the first time the believers were filled with the Holy Spirit, and how often is this event repeated in the subsequent chapters of Acts. Those groups were highly blessed with this wholesome experience. What about this event nowadays! The preceding day the thermometer registered 117 in the coolest place outside. A furnace-like wind blew all day. This was not the only day that was followed by a hot wind blowing nearly all night.

Pentecost had barely passed when plans were on foot to observe the Family Week with classes to sit each day in proper divisions so that all families could be served with appropriate lessons, hinging on the great significance of a Christian home. Have not the outstanding men and women since the early church days originated from such Christian homes? These observations will be crowned on June 8, called Family Sunday, with a meeting held under a huge shade tree with all families seated in their respective groups.

In spite of the depressing heat accompanied by exceedingly hot winds, these enterprises stimulate life for further unabated activities. May God bountifully grant such!

THE PRICE OF PRIVILEGE

by C. C. Regier

How does the average American react when he hears or reads of our national wealth? What sort of emotions does it arouse in him when he reads that "this country has 32 per cent of the railroads, 58 per cent of the telephones and telegraph facilities, 36 per cent of its developed water power, 76 per cent of the automobiles, 33 per cent of the radio broadcasting stations and 44 per cent of the radio receiving sets.

"Our standard of living is so much higher than in foreign countries that we consume one-half of the world's coffee; one-half of its rubber; one-half of its sugar; three-fourths of its silk; one-third of its coal and two-thirds of its petroleum"? (Figures obsolete)

Does such reading give him a feeling of pride and comfort and well-being? It probably does. If he would take a broader and longer view it might well fill him with alarm. Has he ever considered that privileges have their price that we cannot get something for nothing—not even peace?

Throughout human history there have been many revolts against privilege, and there have been many more occasions for revolts. It is not misery, injustice, and oppression as such that call out rebellions. Hard conditions may be so common, and of such long standing, that "the memory of man runneth not to the contrary." In such cases they are regarded as acts of God, and people do not rebel against God. When, however, there is discontent—the belief that conditions are man-made and unnecessary—revolts may result. The French and Russian revolutions are classical examples of this. In both countries the privileges of the nobles and the clergy dated back for centuries. These privileged orders had great wealth, but paid little in the form of taxes. Their other privileges need not be mentioned here, although they were numerous and important. In both countries the successful revolts came only after long periods of education and agitation among the common people. In France the nobles and the clergy lost their privileges, in Russia the privileged classes were "liquidated." After the upheavals of the last war there are few areas left in the world where there is no discontent.

In the past the discontented masses have vented, or have tried to vent, their spleen on their exploiting rulers or classes. That is to say, the unrest was confined within national boundaries. In the future, as the idea of "One World" takes root, we may expect international discontent. Formerly the people held their own privileged classes responsible for their poverty and misery. Henceforth, the poorer nations of the earth may come to feel that a few nations, and particularly the United States, have more than their share of the world's goods.

The craving for a measure of equality is strong in the human heart. It will do little good to contend that we have come by our wealth legitimately. What privileged group has not put up that argument in the past? The fact is that we are by far the richest country in the world. If we mismanage our economic system, on which the whole world is dependent, there would be an additional incentive for "ganging up" on us.

We must find a way of convincing other peoples that it is to their interest that we should be rich and prosperous. Some people already know that it is good for them to trade with us, but our tariff laws make trading hard. We are doing relief and reconstruction and police work on a large scale, and many people benefit therefrom. Various plans for future aid have been announced by such men as Harold Stassen, Henry Wallace, General Marshall, and President Truman. But all these plans are supposed to be temporary. Shall we assume that the price for our privileges will have been discharged in full in five or ten years from now? My feeling is that we must work out a permanent policy of helping needy people on a large scale, from year to year—until their standard of living is much higher than it is now. We must stop talking about "playing Santa Claus" and consider our aid as an insurance policy for peace and prosperity. Much of our aid should, without a doubt, come in the form of services. We have scientific and technical knowledge to increase the agricultural production in most countries, and to improve economic activities in all fields. This knowledge should be applied without stint and in many parts of the world. In a sense our government will have to become a great missionary organization whose aim will be not the propagandizing of any theology but the raising of living standards. People must be made to feel that their welfare is bound up with our prosperity. It may cost us many billions of dollars, but in the long run it should be worth trillions. And it would help to counteract communism.

In the immediate past we have tried to carry our proportionate share of the economic burdens of the United Nations. Is that fair? We do not apply that principle among ourselves. We believe in progressive taxation. Let those who can afford it pay more than their proportionate share. The man who has an annual income of three or four thousand dollars pays two or three per cent in the form of an income tax. He whose income amounts to a million dollars pays an income tax of 60 or 70 per cent. As nations go we belong to the million-dollar class.

It is not the intention of this article to present a detailed plan, but merely to present a point of view. The whole situation is "packt with danger to the universe."

The effectiveness of our contribution will depend in a large measure upon the spirit in which we serve. Not only God "loveth a cheerful giver."

The M.C.C. Indian Program

By Martin H. Schrag

This is the first in a series of five articles on the MCC program in India. It is hoped that through this medium a better understanding of the work will be given. Different aspects of the program will be presented by different members of the unit, thus giving a picture of the program as it is coming into being, ever conscious that the work is being done "In the Name of Christ."

Martin H. Schrag is a member of the unit. He spent the days of his childhood in Moundridge, Kansas and attended Bethel College. Previous to his relief work, he spent some time in C. P. S.

Romantic—alluring have been descriptive words often applied to the ancient culture of India by adventurers and casual tourists as they caught glimpses of its extreme contrasts and as they discerned the unique pattern of Indian life. To many, such illusory concepts have disappeared in the light of the responsive, alert Christian conscience, and in their place has come a profound realization of the basic needs of India's teeming millions. Missionaries fully understand the Indian complacency of soul, and acknowledge the economic and social plight found in this subcontinent.

Mennonite concern for the soul of India embraces fifty years of effort and toil. During the half century, five Mennonite and Brethren in Christ missions came into existence and today are bringing Christ to India. Throughout the years, the missions have maintained a Providence-given sensitivity to the physical needs of the people. Such alertness resulted in a quick response to the Bengal famine of 1943. Upon the suggestion of the Mennonite Central Committee, the missions combined their efforts in an organization entitled the Mennonite Relief Committee of India and cooperatively fed the hungry and clothed the naked. However, wartime conditions and travel difficulties seriously depleted the mission staffs and as a result they requested the MCC to send personnel to continue the work. First fruits of such efforts came with the loaning to MCC of F. J. Isaac, Mennonite missionary returning to India. He supervised the program until immediate relief needs were diminishing.

Because of the strategic position of Calcutta, (door for China, Java, and the Burma war front) and because of the rehabilitation needs left in the wake of famine, the MCC decided to continue its India program. Four workers were sent, two of whom later entered China. The new workers organized a program including house-building, medical aid, and the establishment of an industrial school.

As the above projects were nearing completion, the need of supplementary help at the various Mennonite missions was suggested. At this time, the missions were understaffed due to wartime restrictions, and in need of specialized, skilled workers. The ability of the MCC to place workers presented an opportunity. It was also felt that rather than have the MCC set up an independent program aimed toward permanent uplift, a better long-range contribution could be made by working with and for institutions dedicated to the spreading of the gospel such as the Mennonite missions. Such thinking crystalized in a meeting of the Mennonite Relief Committee of India (M.R.C.I.), July, 1945, and a resolution was passed favoring such a program. The M.R.C.I. instructed the director of the MCC program to visit the different missions and ascertain the supplementary assistance desired by them.

The program envisioned the sending of about a dozen workers possessing skills needed in the mission programs. As requests for such help were presented to the MCC, the MCC attempted to locate workers who could fill the needs. MCC-loaned personnel was to be under mission supervision during its term of mission service. Today, a twofold program has developed in India, namely, (1) mission supplementing and (2) emergency operations necessitated by abnormal conditions.

Seven of the ten workers now in India are on loan to missions and are performing tasks as enabled by their skills. The length of service ranges from a few months to the full three-year term. Of the seven, four are giving their attention to medical needs ever present in India. The challenge of the work is seen as the workers supervise hospitals, attend dispensaries, train nurses and perform minor operations. Another big need in India is that of education. Upon a mission request, one of the unit members is teaching in a high school for missionary children. The task assigned to another member of the MCC unit is that of assistant secretary-treasurer of a mission. The seventh worker is finding a new experience in supervising the development of a model dairy herd. The workers are filling a real need and as more dedicated and interested young people volunteer to fill other needs, they will be given opportunities to serve.

During the past year, MCC personnel has been used in two emergency situations. Two of the unit members spent a month in East Bengal working in an area devastated by flood. With hundreds hungry and homeless, the work centered around operating milk canteens, distributing clothing and inoculating against disease.

The second emergency was created by the communal disturbances again occuring in East Bengal. Two MCC workers were loaned to the Indian Red Cross. Investigation showed dire need. Thousands of Hindus had been driven from their homes and were pouring into the larger villages. Immediate action was required, resulting in the organizing of refugee camps, the giving of medical aid and the distributing of food and clothing. After some time, the government took over the providing of essentials and voluntary agencies aided in the repatriation of villagers. With Hindu Moslum tension continuing and further outbreaks of violence a possibility, the Hindus were unwilling to return to their villages. This suggested a program embodying the aim of repatriation.

In the ancient land of India, one sees a multitude of needs on every hand. The need of Christianity is obvious and the MCC program is dedicated to the task of reinforcing the presentation of the Gospel. With India on the threshold of national independence, she is also on the way to independent thought. Therefore, things presented by foreigners will not necessarily be viewed as undesirable but choices will be made on the basis of truth and need. Thus, in the future, Christianity will be seen, not as a part of foreign domination, but rather, on its own merits as exemplified.

A Letter from Germany

KREFELD, GERMANY
April 30, 1947

To the Mennonite Central Committee:
Dear children in Canada,

My five-year-old girl, Veronica, asked me to write to you, for she can't yet write. She said to me, "Let us thank those unknown children from oversea, that they sent us such a delicious food. Can you imagine, children from oversea, that some of those who had their meal in the same place like me, had never seen raisins and did even not dare to touch them? I had tasted some before, when my grandmother has given me some last Christmas. They were hard and old like stone for they had been hidden for a very long time in our pantry. But do you know what we all like even more? The big white rolls! They are as white as snow and when I come home, I share it with my little two-year-old cousin, who finds them delicious, too. My mother told me, I have got already fat since I take your food. And what a fun that is each morning! Two children from the neighbourhood call for me at about 10:00. We think, it's our school, where we go to and on the way to the restaurant we laugh and make noise with the spoon on the dish we take with us. And all the children, we met there, what funny names we hear! Imagine, one is called Ellinor like my favorite dolly. There are very nice aunties who give us the soups and help the younger ones with eating. And when my mother comes home from her work in the afternoon I tell her, what food we had in the morning and what a fun we had. I hope someone will show you this letter you see, we are very grateful about your gifts.

Yours, truly,
Veronica

P. S. I had to write these lines, because it was the feeling of my heart to express in my poor English words a little the gratitude I have for all the good you do for our children.

Yours truly,
Mechthild Feuerhake.

Think on these Things

With one-half of the money which universal military training would cost it would be possible to do all these things:

(1) The United States could employ ten full-time school and public health doctors, and many full-time school and public health nurses in every county in the country.

(2) Three million children under eighteen who are at the present time not privileged to go to school could receive free education, and every child in the country could be kept in school until eighteen years of age.

(3) We could pay the full maintenance and tuition at any college or technical school for one year of the 1,000,000 boys who would be conscripted under this May bill.

(4) Each county in the United States could be provided with a full staff of recreation and juvenile guidance workers. This would do wonders toward getting at the roots of juvenile delinquency.

Questions on Universal Military Training

The trouble is that the proponents of universal military training fail to answer the serious objections made against their plans. What they propose for American youth is to expose them to some conceivable valuable technical training, here and there, and at the same time, subject young men to the most useless, and the most vicious, phases of military life. The travel, the chance to meet all kinds of people, are not involved very much in the military training program. The barrack life, the boredom, the pursuit of technical ideas which will be outlawed by time with incredible speed—these are the parts of military life that are most objectable, and it is precisely on these that the army must place the greatest emphasis. And worse—the questions of morals cannot be blinked; there is at least a risk which a different and saner form of training could avoid.

And there is no technical training, no scientific approach, that cannot be better made through the halls of learning in any of our good schools, colleges and universities, directed by civilians. The crux of the matter is the indoctrination, which the army has to have, in the acceptance of war as a method and in focussing on it. Norman Angell well said, years ago, that "conscription, to be effective must be a conscription of minds as well as bodies.'

Many people seem to think, in all sincerity, that military training does not inculcate warlike ideas. Then, one asks at once, why has every dictator from Napoleon to Hitler based his totalitarian system on peacetime conscription, and why does every modern totalitarian state put such emphasis on force and the training of youth in use?—Devere Allen in Worldover Press.

Great Need for Mending Materials in Germany

Robert S. Kreider, Mennonite representative in Germany, writes: "There is an acute shortage of thread, needles and thimbles. In fact they are non-existant. Much of the worn out clothing of adults could be remade and remodelled for the children. Also they could be patched and sewn together whereas this is impossible now as they do not have the wherewithal. I feel certain that in the British Zone we could well dispose of any amount of sewing thread and needles that our communities would be willing to send. Then also, there is a very great need for knitting yarn and knitting needles. I have heard through frequent quiries that very often a pair of stockings could be made to last twice as long if they had enough yarn to knit new feet on them. I am certain that the mothers would be overjoyed in doing this type of work. This need for sewing and mending and knitting supplies is a top priority need."

In response to this presentation of need, as well as similar urgent calls from other relief fields, a special appeal is being made for mending kits and shoe repairing kits. The mending kits are to include such items as needles, thread, yarn, knitting needles, and patches, while the shoe repair kits are to contain shoe soles, heels, nails, etc.

These kits are quite inexpensive to prepare, but will be of invaluable help to those who have no other facilities to repair clothing and shoes. It is hoped that a good response will be forthcoming from our people to supply this great need. There is no deadline for the termination of this announcement, but in order that the materials might be most useful for repairing winter clothing, the kits should be sent in by the latter part of October.

A descriptive folder is being prepared and mailed to each congregation giving lists of the items to include in each of these two types of kits, and where to send them. If any additional copies of these folders are needed, or if other information is desired, write to Material Aid Section, Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pennsylvania.

Refugee Problem under Discussion.

The MCC Executive Committee is holding a meeting at Basel, Switzerland, on a date during the week of August 11—15. The occasion for this meeting in Switzerland is the fact that four of the five members of the Executive Committee are now in that area on various missions relating to relief work.

One of the problems to be under consideration at this meeting is the situation confronting the Mennonite refugees in South America. The Paraguayan rebellion has made it necessary to alter the original plans for the settlement of these immigrants in or adjacent to present colonies.

—Bethel Church, Fortuna, Missouri: The young people's C. E. held its annual retreat August 6—10. On Sunday, the last retreat day, the all-day service was held in our church. Rev. Harry Albrecht of Hanston, Kansas, brought the morning message, and Rev. John Boehr brought the evening message and also led the inspirational song service after dinner. Nine young people from the Summerfield, Illinois, Church attended the retreat. Rev. H. J. Dyck, wife and daughter from Elbing, Kansas, and also Rev. Joe E. Aeschbacher and wife from Wisner, Nebraska, worshipped with us on August 3. Frank L. Wenger of Aberdeen, Idaho, gave a talk to our Sunday school when he and his wife visited here. Several young people, who vacationed on the lake south of Versailles, came to our morning worship services.—Corr.

—Bethel Church, Langdon, North Dakota: Our young people presented a program in the Methodist Church at Hannah, North Dakota, at the request of Rev. Cannon, pastor of the church. It was centered around "Consecration." Lunch was given in appreciation to the group at the parsonage of Rev. Cannon. A small offering was given to Rev. Hoffman who brought the message.—Mrs. LeRoy Schanz, Corr.

—Bethel Church, Waka, Texas: Our small group packed thirteen "Christmas Bundles for Overseas." The money for this purpose was raised by free will offering and part of it was taken from the Sunday school treasury. Instead of regular church services Sunday evening, the group gathered on the lawn at the Herman Wiebe home for an evening of singing, devotional service, and fellowship. Refreshments of ice cream, cake and cookies were served after the service. Fifty people were present. Work on remodeling the church was begun this week.—Mrs. Herman Wiebe, Corr.

—The Evangelism Committee has made available to all mission workers working under the auspices of the General Conference any tracts they may need to carry out their work. The Evangelism Committee is also willing to mail sample packets free of charge to ministers and others interested. This project is supported by funds from the Home Mission Board.

—The retreat held by the Defenseless Mennonite Church on the campus of Taylor University, Upland, Indiana, included, in addition to Bible study, courses in "Psychology of Religion," "Sociology," and "Church History."

—Dr. J. H. Langenwalter, who was ill recently, writes in regard to the General Conference, "This is the second General Conference I am missing in forty-five years."

—Walter Adrian, Bethel College graduate of 1947, will leave this fall for Vienna, Austria, where he will do relief work for the Mennonite Central Committee. He will work in cooperation with Bert Smucker, who is already working there. Mr. Adrian plans to do relief work for two years.

—Rev. and Mrs. LaVerne Rutschman, missionaries to Colombia, plan to fly from the United States to Colombia, South America, shortly after the General Conference. They may leave from Miami, Florida.

—Alberta Community Church, Portland, Oregon: The annual young people's retreat was held at Trout Creek Camp, near Troutdale, Oregon, from July 21—28. The theme was taken from Acts 1:8 "Ye shall be witnesses." Those who were able to attend reported an enjoyable and profitable time. Rev. Clyde Dirks and William S. Bartel left by plane for Henderson, Nebraska, on August 5 to conduct an evangelistic campaign for ten days in a union service of all of the Mennonite churches of the city of Henderson. Rev. Dirks plans to attend the Minister's Retreat and the General Conference at Berne, Indiana. Rev. Lloyd Fosmark is occupying the pulpit in the absence of Rev. Dirks.—Mrs. Homer Welty, Corr.

"Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Christ Jesus"

AS WE SEE IT:

---J. M. Regier ---Verney Unruh

WHEN IS A MINISTER SUCCESSFUL?

Should you put the above question to a dozen different laymen, you might get that many different answers. Do people always know what ministers are for? Here are a few thoughts to be considered in answering the above question: 1. Preach, so God will become greater and Jesus more appealing to the people. 2. Preach, so man will see his duties and responsibilities more clearly. 3. Visit the old and the sick, comforting and encouraging them. 4. Cause people to live the Christian life more fully. 5. Create in people a greater interest and zeal for the work of the church, at home and abroad. It is very encouraging for a minister to know that God has done great things through very imperfect human instruments. Through Isaiah God says about his word: "It shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please." Paul writes, "He gave some, apostles; some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers; for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ." Eph. 4:11—12. The longer a person continues in the ministry, the less likely will he express himself as satisfied with his accomplishments, and the more fully will he trust God that all faithful and consecrated service will bear eternal fruit.—J. M. Regier, Pastor of the Johannestal Church, Hillsboro, Kansas, Chairman of the Home Mission Board of the General Conference, and one of the editors of the German Sunday school quarterly.

WORSHIP MUST CONVICT AND CLEANSE

As we face the trend toward more symbolism and ritual in our worship services we must ask two basic questions. First, is the church a fellowship of believers or is it an institution? It is not either/or, but primarily it is a fellowship of believers. Extreme ritual tends to destroy this concept. Rather than the warm spirit of fellowship there is a cold, formal atmosphere created which leaves one empty. The opposite extreme, however, where there is no thought in planning the service, and where the church tends to become a competitor with commercialized entertainment, is equally contrary to worship "in spirit and in truth."

The other question is, is worship religious or aesthetic? This may sound like a foolish question, yet we often think of a worship service something like this: "I like to go to a beautiful church where it is quiet and where the sweet music from the organ soothes me. A beautiful service which does not disturb a person is real worship."

Any service which is planned in terms of the beautiful and the soothing effect it has upon the worshipper misses the true function of worship. In worship man should meet God face to face. When the experience takes place a man will not be soothed. In the words of Isaiah he will cry out, "Woe is me! for I am undone; because I am a man of unclean lips."

But if the service leaves a man with this great feeling of guilt it also fails. Isaiah not only saw himself as a sinner, but he also experienced a cleansing from his sin. The worship service then must bring the worshipper face to face with God but also face to face with the Christ who alone can cleanse him.—Verney Unruh. Vice-President of the Young People's Union of the General Conference, and Mennonite Seminary student.

General Conference Convened in Fine Spirit

General Conference delegates sweated and fanned at the recent thirty-first session of the General Conference, held at Berne, Indiana, August 20-27. In California style the people of Berne declared the weather "unusual," and told visitors that this August was a record heat month in weather history. But towards the end of the session the humidity and heat subsided, and the sessions ended with the benediction of beautiful, cool weather.

While delegates and visitors left their coats off and even opened their neckties, the Conference opened and went on in a fine spirit of Christian cordiality and cooperation. True there were some differences of opinion, but the general feeling seemed to be at the end that there had been no rift.

Rev. J. N. Smucker, Conference President, carried through the sessions a remarkable spirit of fairness and efficiency. By means of the conference sermon he put before those attending the high goal of "Looking unto Jesus." With this keynote the conference moved forward in wholesome manner. Rev. Walter H. Dyck, Conference Secretary helped expedite the work of the conference with printed reports from all boards and committees, etc., and with official printed ballots. That the business committee had planned well was evident in the arrangement of the program and in the dispatch with which the business was carried out.

No little credit for the enjoyment and success of the conference is due the First Mennonite Church of Berne, of which Rev. Olin Krehbiel is pastor. The Berne people, with very generous hospitality, furnished over 1,000 visitors with food and lodging. In this time of high prices visitors were pleasantly surprised to discover that they could have a hearty breakfast for twenty-five to thirty-five cents and a hearty noon or evening meal for fifty to seventy-five cents. Lodging was provided as sons and daughters of Berne people slept on cots, couches and so on while visitors were given their beds. The homes of Berne were hospitable.

A wide representation of Mennonite groups and bodies was a unique feature of the conference. Present were brethren from Holland and from South America. Also present was one, who is a product of our India mission field, Mr. Puran Banwar. General Conference leaders, just returned from Europe, gave one the impression of a strong and intimate tie with the Mennonites of Europe. Noteworthy was also the representation and participation of the Canadian churches, while at the same time the Central Conference churches swung into the work of the General Conference. The welcome given to forty-two churches from South America, Canada, and the United States as new members of the conference bespoke the growing representation of the General Conference. Plans for a Mennonite world conference, which will possibly be held at Newton, Kansas, in 1948, increased one's impression of growing ties with various Mennonite bodies. The Women's Missionary Association reported to the conference for the first time. A large number of young people were present for the young people's sessions. The laymen of the conference joined in a new laymen's organization. Further inspiration came from the large number of missionaries, relief workers, and educators present. A note of sadness, however, existed because of the absence of some of the older leaders of the conference, some of whom are seriously ill.

A conference highlight for many was Peter Dyck's report on the migration of the Russian refugees and his moving pictures of the same.

General Conference membership now stands at 230 churches and about 45,200 members. The churches of the Marion and Freeman, South Dakota, communities have invited the next conference to convene there.

(Watch next week's Mennonite for further reports on the conference.)

Rev. J. N. Smucker

Elected to the Church Unity Committee were Rev. Andrew Shelly of Kitchener, Ontario, and Rev. Harry Yoder of Bluffton, Ohio. The member elected to the Business Committee is Rev. H. N. Harder of Aberdeen, Idaho. Elected to the Foreign Mission Board were: Rev. Sam J. Goering, North Newton, Kansas; Dr. S. F. Pannabecker, Chicago, Illinois; and Rev. J. J. Thiessen, Saskatoon, Saskatchewan. The Home Mission Board election resulted in the election of: Rev. G. G. Epp, Rosthern, Saskatchewan; Rev. J. J. Plenert, Lansdale, Pa., and Rev. William B. Weaver, Danvers, Illinois. Elected as trustees were Jacob R. Fretz, Lansdale, Pa.; Dr. A. M. Lohrentz, McPherson, Kansas; and John W. Unruh, Newton, Kansas.

Mrs. A. M. Lohrentz, McPherson, Kansas, was re-elected President of the Women's Missionary Association. Elma Esau, Whitewater, Kansas, was elected as a second vice-president, and Miss Elva Schrock of Nappanee, Indiana, and Miss Alma Sprunger, Berne, Indiana, were elected to the Literature Committee.

TOTAL OF 230 CHURCHES NOW BELONG TO GENERAL CONFERENCE

Berne, Indiana, August 25 — According to a report made today by Rev. Walter H. Dyck, Secretary and Statistician of the General Conference, the General Conference is now composed of 230 congregations. Of these 197, or 85 per cent, are represented at the present conference session. These represent a total of 1,473 votes and a total membership of about 45,200. A total of 538 conference delegates had registered by the morning of August 25.

Our Mission Work in the Southern Mountains

by A. J. Neuenschwander

(Note: From various quarters people have been asking how we got started in the Southern Mountain Work. This is an effort to give some light on the matter.)

Work in Kentucky

Thirteen or fourteen years ago two young women from Grace Mennonite Church, Lansdale, Pa. felt the call of the Lord to do mountain mission work. The girls Miss Margaret Slotter and Miss Elsie Pfister, first received their support in the main from the Grace Sunday School, however, other friends soon began to send them occasional gifts for the work. Their main task has been child evangelism all these years. They approached this work from three angles: first, they worked in the public schools teaching Bible stories and memory verses in a systematic way. Thus many children were reached with the gospel of Christ. Second, the camp work. Children's Camps are similar to our Junior retreats. Attendance at camp is encouraged by permitting children, who memorized a certain number of verses, to attend free while others are encouraged to come but are kindly asked to pay part, at least, of their board and lodging. Third, the regular Sunday School work. In the main, children attend Sunday School, but adults are also invited to come to learn to know Christ as represented in scripture.

Testament and Bible distribution work is also a noteworthy phase of the work. The sacred scripture is not given to adults at the first visit or contact, but if and when there is an indication of interest and hunger for the Word and there seems to be a readiness to respond to the call of Christ, then they gladly give a Bible or a Testament to such seeking souls so that they might be made "wise unto salvation."

The above work, coupled with general and regular visitation work to find new prospects, to give the invitation and to help families that are in need, keeps the workers busy all the time.

For about ten years the girls worked in an association known as Scripture Memory Mountain Mission, without any organized support from any organization. Mountain mission work is very difficult under any condition, but much more so when carried on by an individual here and another one there without any relationship and fellowship. It is also advantageous to belong to some organization in order to learn by conference and fellowship with similar workers and in order to standardize the work in a measure. Camp work would be almost impossible unless there were some kind of fellowship and organization. The Scripture Memory Mountain Mission, systematizes and organizes the work even though they have no budget with which to carry on the work. Individual members of the organization must find their own source of support.

It was in February, 1945, at the annual board meeting that it was decided to accept these two General Conference workers as laborers under our Board. Since then monthly remuneration has been sent to them.

Work in Paint Rock, North Carolina

Early in 1943 contacts were made with Miss Elsa E. Grantland, Paint Rock, North Carolina, through the First Mennonite Church, Chicago, in which congregation Miss Grantland had been a member for many years. The first regular monthly support was sent to Miss Grantland in September, 1943. Her work was similar to that carried on in Kentucky although there was no organization with which to work. Growth in the field is slow. One season a goodly number may attend Sunday school regularly, but at another time some community disturbance might reduce the number very definitely.

Early in 1946 the request came from Paint Rock, asking for an ordained worker and his family to put the work on a more permanent basis. Rev. and Mrs. Andrew Holliman, Cordell, Oklahoma, felt the call of the Lord to this field. It took months to complete all arrangements but on July 17, 1947, they and their three girls arrived on the field. In the meantime a chapel had been purchased. Renovations are now under way to make the building useful as a chapel and as a worker's home.

Mennonite Fellowship

It is the plan that, in the future, a fellowship among Mennonites in the southern mountains be developed. First efforts in this direction have already been made. If a circle were drawn with a radius of about fifty-five miles, on a map, the fields of six General Conference Mennonites would be included.

Scripture Mountain Mission work needs much prayer. Will you be a regular daily intercessor for this type of work for the Lord?

Faithfully yours for many souls for Christ,—A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary, Quakertown, Pa.

Recent Trends in Religious Education

by D. C. Wedel

There are two major philosophies about teaching. One is called material-centered teaching which assumes that if we give the child a sufficient number of right ideas, they are sure to find expression in his conduct and character. We know, however, from observation that this is not necessarily true. A child can perhaps recite 200 to 500 Bible verses learned during one week, but it still may not affect his behavior or character too much. This discovery has led to a different trend in religious education. The emphasis now is placed upon the experience of the child. Only what the child can use immediately is considered fruitful learning. The question now becomes, not how many Bible verses does the child know, or does he know the catechism, but how has it changed the individual. Something must happen in the experience of the learner. This teaching takes its starting point from immediate or potential interests, from some realized need or a felt difficulty or problem of the pupil. The needs of the pupil are the important factor in this approach to religious education.

With this change in approach, the procedure in Christian education has changed also. The attempt is not made to change the character of the pupil by filling his mind with knowledge but by setting ideals and purposes before him and going through experiences which allow the pupil to practice what the teacher wants him to become. The Bible is a guide to action and an aid in right living. But knowing it alone does not assure good conduct. The teacher now is a guide. He helps the pupil find knowledge and experiences which will aid him in his growth. The pupil now also seeks to discover truth and new values, instead of only listening and trying to remember what he has been told. Necessary work is given because there is use for it now or in the near future, selected to fit the understanding of the pupil. A particular study is continued until it has been completed even though that may mean skipping a particular lesson assigned for a specific date. Methods used include telling, reading, writing, memorizing, reporting, constructing, sharing, evaluating, discussing, interviewing, and any other method which will help the pupil to learn. Lesson materials are organized in such a way that a particular experience is brought to completion rather than having a new lesson perhaps unrelated for every Sunday.

Perhaps this approach is not as new as we have thought. Jesus the great teacher, always used it. Whenever he saw a need, he taught to meet that need. To Nicodemus he spoke about the new birth, to Peter about faith and stability. Jesus did not hesitate to say, "One thing thou lackest," and then went on to teach in such a way that He dealt with that particular need.

Our one great concern in all Christian teaching is to bring the pupil to that place where his life, purpose, and will is lost in the will of God through Jesus Christ.

Preparation for the Christian Ministry

by A. Warkentin

A congregation grows with the growth of her leaders. God's method in history has been to lift the standard of the masses through individuals. Judges and prophets were called by God to shape the life of His chosen people. Naturally endowed and well trained for their specific task, they again and again saved the nation out of darkest night to the dawn of a new day.

The work of the Lord requires the best talent and the best possible preparation. That does not mean that education is the prime prerequisite for successful service, but it means that education is included in the method of God to prepare His servants.

To make a nation out of the twelve tribes and to establish them in the God-chosen country, the Lord called a giant character, Moses, and trained him "in all the wisdom of the Egyptians."

To lead Israel peacefully through the most remarkable revolution from theocracy to monarchy, He placed Samuel at the top of the people, a man with such superior qualifications that the Scriptures say "none of his words fell to the ground" (I Sam. 3:19). They must have fallen into the hearts of the hearers. Samuel may rightly be called the father of religious education and the president of the school of prophets at Najoth near Ramah (I Sam. 9:11-27).

When the gospel of Christ and His salvation was to be carried to Jews and Gentiles, God called a university trained man, Paul, to be His messenger.

But is it not written that the disciples of Christ were "unlearned and ignorant men" (Acts 4:13)? Christ never spoke of them in such terms. The greatest of all teachers never had to apologize because of their training. He never was ashamed of them because of their stupidity and ignorance. He was not afraid to send them out as His representatives to spread the good news and to prepare the way for His coming. He knew that they would express themselves in terms which would honor Him. They were prepared and qualified to speak and act for the greatest of all masters.

The Pharisees and Scribes thought of the disciples as being "unlearned and ignorant," perhaps because they had not attended their universities in Jerusalem. But the disciples must have had a good education, because they write a very good Greek in the Gospels and Epistles.

And if we look into our own Mennonite history, we find the same method applied. Conrad Grebel, Felix Mantz, Balthasar Hubmeyer, Hans Denk, Ludwig Haetzer and others had university education. George Blaurock and Menno Simons had good monastic training.

The standards in our churches have radically changed during the last two generations. In some congregations all young people have now graduated from high school, many have attended or finished college, and a goodly number have university education. This was quite different two generations back. What then happened to be a rare exception has become a common practice today.

But the higher standards of our church members requires also a better preparation of our ministers. Four things I would like to call essential in the preparation of a minister. We shall call them the four C's.

1. A minister must be converted and know the Lord Jesus Christ from personal experience. The scripture record shows that there were no two conversions exactly alike. The new birth, as the natural birth, differs in each individual case even though there are some common characteristics. But a minister must have accepted Christ as his saviour and must know a personal relationship to Him.

2. He must be called, called by God into his particular field of service, whether as evangelist, as pastor, or as teacher. The apostle Paul found remarkable strength in the fact that he had been called to be the missionary to the Gentiles. There is power in the knowledge of our calling.

3. He must be capable, well prepared, well educated, well trained, standing above the standards of his congregation, with a broad mind and a warm, understanding heart. We are most grateful to God for our Seminary where young consecrated men and women can grow in knowledge and in the Spirit of Christ.

4. He must be consecrated. It is a different thing to receive forgiveness of sins, to be reconciled with God than to consecrate heart and body to Christ. There is a difference in accepting Christ as a Saviour and submitting to Him as a Lord. Only in the measure an individual is consecrated to God can he do the will of God.

All these things belong together in the preparation of a minister of God. We must not dare to underestimate any one of them. By working together to give our ministers the very best Bible-centered education and by helping them to grow spiritually we do God's work toward the salvation of others and toward the upbuilding of His church.

Missionary Brown Writes about Supporting Native Workers

(Since a number of people have written the Secretary of the Foreign Mission Board about supporting native workers in China, the Secretary wrote Miss Kuyf early in the year. Brother Brown replies as follows:)

Dear Rev. Howard G. Nyce,

"Greetings in Christ! Miss Kuyf sent your letter of April 3 to me for a reply to you. You evidently by this time have my former letters and know that we met with the Chinese General Committee. As far as Ch'ang Yuan Hsien and Tung Ming Hsien, we are reorganized for work in these two counties, both in the cities themselves and in the country. Living is very high and we cannot undertake nearly as much as we would like to. It will take too much money. The four superintendents will require each, U.S. $70 per month or so to keep them and their families going. Some of the other helpers will require U.S. $50 to U. S. $60 per month. It can vary because all are to be paid in wheat. This gives you an idea. Besides these superintendents, we have evangelists, Bible women, teachers and gatemen. We have not all of the names as yet, but work begins with July 1. From that day, for two weeks, we are to partake in a series of revival meetings here in the Free Methodist Compound, closing by having a two-day meeting with our own group. We are praying for special blessings.

By the above you see that anyone caring to support a worker must be prepared to spend about ten times as much for him and the work as formerly. However, may it cost what it will, we must bring the Word of Life to these people.

We are well and happy to be here. We have great hopes for the work of the Lord here in China. Pray with us for a mighty spiritual blessing! Yours in Christ, H. J. Brown, Kaifeng, Honan, China, June 5, 1947.

A NEW HYMN -- with a story!

Out of a routine inquiry by the author of this hymn, presented to the General ference churches herewith, comes this beautiful hymn, especially dedicated to Mennonites of America by one of the refugee victims of the tragic war just ed. The immediate occasion of this song is the gratitude for some General ference German publications sent to Mr. Krehbiel from your Conference Publication Office. The deeper significance of this song is that out of the fullness of his heart, out of appreciation for what Mennonites have done for the war victims in Europe, this poet speaks, and in his appreciation dedicates this song in brotherly love to the Mennonites of America. Don't fail to read the accompanying story. We believe many, especially choir leaders and those interested in music, will wish to tear out this center sheet and save it permanently for future use.

"Where Thou Goest"

Music is the universal language. This song was born out of the sufferings of war and expresses, amidst the devastation and ruin and loneliness which war brings, the soul's desire for spiritual fellowship. The composer, a member of the Mennonite church in Germany, has found that his brethren across the water are concerned about the spiritual and physical suffering of his own people. His gratitude expressed itself in the music of this song which he has dedicated to the Mennonites of America.

Text of Song

The text of the song is the German of the familiar words of Ruth to Naomi,

"Whither thou goest, I will go;
And where thou lodgest, I will lodge;
Thy people shall be my people,
And thy God my God.
Where thou diest, will I die,
And there will I be buried."
Ruth 1:16, 17.

These words, though well known, have seldom been given a musical setting. Brother Krehbiel, who has had a long experience as a teacher of music, has now given us a setting which carries well the meaning and sentiment of the words.

A Word from the Author

"The package containing copies of DER CHRISTLICHER BUNDESBOTE. . . . carried the notation in pencil, 'non-commercial papers,' at which I had to smile. No, in that package were no commercial papers, thought I, and yet they deal with man's most important duty, and I unpacked the package eagerly. While I was prepared for the coming of this paper, I was overwhelmed at receiving these papers, in the German language, from far-away Newton and my heart was deeply stirred when I read the little passage in the mast-head--Menno Simons' motto, I Corrinthians 3:11: 'Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Jesus Christ.' . . . . How proud you can be of your CHRISTLICHER BUNDESBOTE which binds all of you in far-away America together in unity of spirit admonishing you all continually, 'that your faith should not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God' (I Corinthians 2:5). This power of God. . . . .must surely have blessed your hands when you prepared this package for me. . . . .In appreciation for your sending me this batch of papers I enclose herewith my yesterday's composition in acknowledgement of the unusual love-activity of the Mennonites in America.

"In hearty brotherly greetings . . . . .Heinrich Krehbiel"

The first score with its repeat mark, its strong melodic line and solid then an easy modulation into the key of G major.

A passage in the fourth score is to be sung pianissimo but "in tempo," with distinct accent. The dynamics throughout are carefully marked and the director who is faithful to the spirit of the composer will not ignore them.

rallel downward motion of all the parts in the closing measures may be en to criticism from the standpoint of good harmony, but the composer, who is t a novice in musical matter, doubltless considered them appropriate and legitimate carry the solemn meaning of the words. The song is too complex for ordinary ngregational use. It is marked for solo quartet and choir. Under skilful direction d adequate rehearsal, the difficulties of the music can be easily mastered and e result will be an inspiring message of undying fellowship between the Christians the old and new world.

A Spiritual Message

The physical things we share with others often carry with them a spiritual message, like the cup of cold water given in the name of Christ. But there is the sharing also of that which is more than bread. Literature, art, music, faith, ideals, and above all, our religious convictions, are of such. Most of the good things in life we have received from others, like the children of Israel inherited the wells, houses, vineyards, and fruitful fields which were the results of the labors of others. It was through no merit of our own that we were spared the awful devastation and destruction of war and it was not the fault of our brethren in Europe that they were visited with the sufferings which war brought upon them and their households. As we look into the unknown future, our deepest desire, like that of Ruth, is to share with the household of faith all that God has in store of bane or blessing.

College Choirs Prepare Premiere Rendition

When the unusual copy reached the Publication Office, we immediately wondered how it could most effectively be brought before our people. It was suggested that photostatic copies be prepared and distributed among the Bethel College and the Bluffton College a cappella choirs for practice during the summer months in order to prepare a premiere rendition of this beautiful song when the Conference assembled in Berne in August.

This was done, and the Regier Loan and Abstract Company here in Newton, when they realized the unusual situation, asked to be allowed to contribute the large photostatic printing job which would be involved. Considering how difficult it would have been, on short notice, to get printer's plates prepared, from which copies could be made for the choirs, this offer was most readily accepted.

From the Foreword

This selection of hymns from THE MENNONITE HYMNARY is made for use in conferences, conventions, retreats, and other religious gatherings where a small, inexpensive book will serve the purpose of the meeting and at the same time save the wear and tear as well as the inconvenience that results from the use of the regular hymnbook on such occasions.

Hymns are provided here to meet the needs of a large variety of gatherings. The leader will find appropriate songs for the praise service, or the service of quiet devotion and prayer, as well as such special occasions as the service of consecration, ordination, installation, memorial, the Lord's Supper, or a service of farewell. A few special songs for children and youth are included, although it should be remembered that most hymns may appropriately be used by all but the youngest age-groups. A number of the selections are well adapted for use with special chorus choirs. The brief subject index will assist the song leader in the choice of hymns.

Students of hymnology will find the selections surprisingly representative of the various types of hymnic material from different periods of church history.

A number of hymns in the back of the book have been printed without music, not only to save space, but to remind us that hymns are sacred poems and not merely words between staves of music. To see familiar hymns set up as poetry may help us to sing them anew "with the spirit and the understanding." The best singing, of course, is always done where both words and music have been memorized.

It remains to be added that what we have here is only a selection of hymns, necessarily partial and incomplete. Only the complete volume of the MENNONITE HYMNARY is adequate or appropriate for the church pew and the home.

Is Help Still Needed in Germany?

By Cornelius J. Dyck

In many letters from home the above question arises again and again, not, I am sure, because our people are weary of giving, but because they feel if the need is not great here, there are many, many equally important uses to which their money might be put at home. All that is logical. Our supporters have a right to know what the situation is here.

I do not profess to be an authority on Germany since I have spent only seven months in this work here; but I can freely say that it does not take seven months—no, it takes one week's tour with open hearts, minds, and eyes to be fully convinced that there is great need here yet. In fact, it does not seem to have grown smaller, and one can predict now already that the year 1947-48 will be practically as bad as the past year. You may ask why all this is. "If that is the case, what is happening to our supplies? Can they not remedy this?"

People Are Homeless

There are 63,000,000 people in Germany. Over half of these have lost homes, possessions, and everything else they value—often their loved ones, often their health. In Schleswig-Holstein alone, there were before the war 1,000,000 inhabitants; now there are 2,300,00, of these 1,300,000 being refugees. Yet, in Kiel, for example, 79 per cent of the houses have been destroyed. You may rightly ask, "Where do they all live?" When these houses were destroyed, their possessions went with them. You may rightly ask, "What do they wear?" When these cities were destroyed, their shops, their livelihood went with them. You may rightly ask, "What do they live from?" I might answer, "Many of them do not live; they merely exist. I do not call it living to crawl into a dark cellar every evening, to lie on a damp mattress or straw, or to lie in a wooden barn and have the frost thaw on the roof and drop down on one continually. I do not call it living to stand for hours in the bread line and then often get only half your meager ration of corn bread. I have eaten occasionally with German families because they insisted. Believe me, many of our people at home would shrink in horror from eating many meals like that in succession. Often it is only turnips, or cabbage cooked in water. I recall the time two weeks ago when I visited one old man in a refugee camp in Lubeck. He was seventy years old and had been an average farmer in Danzig. Now he sat there, thin, haggard, dependent. He claimed that even his pigs at home had been better off than he was now. They got clean straw once a week; he was to sleep on the same straw for three months. They got skim milk; he got water and turnips and corn bread."

Children Suffer

Especially pathetic is the plight of thousands of little children. In the little village of Elmshorn in Schleswig-Holstein, for example, every school child has now been found to have open T. B. Similar incidents can be reported in many, many towns. Why? Because the children do not receive the right foods; they have not the vitamins; they have no clean clothing; they have no bedding; they have no shoes. Infant mortality is especially high in all areas—so high that sometimes doctors hesitate to tell it to me. Why? Because the mothers are undernourished; because they have not the strength to care for a newborn child. One local pastor friend of mine remarked to me not so long ago that the old people in his congregation are dying like flies. Why? Because they do not have food; they do not have fuel, bedding, or clothing. Nobody cares for them. They have outlived their usefulness.

You may take me at my word when I say that I am not taking snatches out of the utter recesses of despair. No, I am painting you a picture of what I see through my office window while writing this letter. It must be seen to be believed, but the misery does not end there.

Despair

Because of all this, many seem to have lost the challenge which every person should see in his life. Their one foundation has crumbled and nothing is there to take its place. During the month of January there were 200 suicides in Berlin. The people have lost hope; they have given way to nihilism and despair. Only too often I hear from my callers that if God were a God of love, He would not let them suffer so. It is in cases like this that I especially love to help, just to show them that God still cares for them.

That is the picture. How it can be remedied, I do not know. Certainly the decisions of the governments can do much. We cannot alter those decisions, but we can do one thing and that is help. You may ask, "But is the population not working and are they not getting back on their feet so that they can support themselves?" Those who fare the best are the farmers. There are strict regulations governing their output, but nevertheless they are usually well fed. But this does not effect the town—during the summer months it may, but the need everywhere is so great. What harvesting will be realized this year will, in all probability, be almost entirely used for their daily requirements of the undernourished population.

Then, too, areas like the Ruhr have been strictly industrial. Industry has now been cut; so their livelihood is gone. Transportation is very difficult since approximately half the railroad tracks have been removed. Traffic is paying a heavy toll since tires, fuel, oil, and trucks are at a premium, and since many bridges have been washed away by the excessive floods. Roads, not having been repaired, are in very poor condition.

Germany is emerged from its severest winter in twenty-five years. People planted their gardens very late. Much of the fall seeding has frozen or been washed away by the floods. Harvesting will be very late this year and most likely there will be none for the average farmer. If one thinks of the fact that all the refugees from the east are now trying to live on the scant supplies which the few farmers here, handicapped by lack of equipment and seed, are able to produce, it is not hard to see why there would be need. It will continue as long as these refugees must remain here. They consume the supplies as fast as they grow; they just cannot build up a reserve. Then, too, there are many, many crippled men, widows and orphans who are a constant drain on the productive capacity of the able.

We Can Help

Some of the things which may remedy the situation, I might say, are to give back to the refugees the land they have lost in the east, give work to the millions who have been thrown out of industry, give materials to build houses, give transportation, farm equipment, etc. But we cannot do that. We can, however, give of our material blessings and through this give them the spiritual support which helps them over many difficulties. I have often marveled at the quantity of supplies our folks at home have contributed. But I have also wondered just what would happen if suddenly these supplies were cut off. It is my hope and prayer that our people at home may retain the vision which they have caught, that they might continue to give to those who have not so that many more might reply as a minister wrote to me the other day, "It has been proved again that 'Wenn die Not am Groesten, ist Gottes Hilfe am naechsten.' Make Up Your Mind

If we were writing to girls alone we would be tempted to say: "It is more important to make up your mind than to make up your face." But we're also thinking about boys and about a different kind of makeup.

Do you ever have awkward moments when you are halfway across the street and you turn back suddenly because you remember you were to meet Mary, only to twist around again because it was tomorrow rather than today that Mary would be downtown. A careful driver just missed bumping you and you couldn't acuse him of being asleep. If you must debate with yourself, don't do it at busy crossings.

But there are worse casulties when you have two boy friends (or girl friends) on the string and you can't decide which one to let go. You make and break dates and waver from one to the other and finally they both drop you. It pays to make up your mind.

Of course there are serious decisions to be made now and as you grow older. And you will want to look at both sides of a question, to weigh values, to discover dangers, in order that you may choose the best. But our troubles in making up our minds come not so much from looking squarely at all sides. They come rather because we are hesitant to take the responsibility of making a choice and abiding by it. We like to be neutral, not so much because we can't decide, but rather because we don't want to shoulder the load of being responsible for our choices.

If you agree to work with your church's youth program for the next year, you can add your ideas and help plan the best activities your group has ever enjoyed. But you can't do it and miss three Sunday nights out of four. And you'll have to give up your seat on the back row. Making up your mind to accept a job and carry it through means sacrifice and work. But it's the only way by which you can make your contribution. And, as a veteran camp leader used to remark, "We grow by accepting responsibilities that are greater than we are."

There were a number of men who wanted to follow Jesus but they couldn't start until they attended to some other matters. To them and to others He spoke against trying to follow Him without counting the cost. He wants disciples who have counted the cost and have still made up their minds to follow Him. Have you made that decision in your heart?

Restoring Communal Harmony in East Bengal

By William H. Yoder

William H. Yoder is a member of the MCC India Unit and is presenting the second in the series of articles on the MCC India Program. Since his arrival in India in November, he has been giving his time and efforts to the alleviating of suffering caused by communal disturbances. This work has given him a good understanding of the communal problem and has served as an opportunity to present our Mennonite peace testimony in action. Mr. Yoder hails from Columbiana, Ohio, is a graduate of Goshen College and has a number of years of C.P.S. experience.

In the recent communal disturbances which took an appallingly large number of lives and left many thousands without homes and substance in India, we found an opportunity to be of service. The organization on the field which seemed to be doing the most effective work and which embodied the most capable personnel was the Indian Red Cross, so we decided to throw in our efforts with them.

As a result of the disturbances and the attending violence—murder, abduction, forced conversion, forced marriage, burning, and looting—many thousands of the people fled from the interior—from homes devastated and areas clouded by fear—to the railway and marketing centers where they felt security in being more closely connected with the outside world. The small town of Faridganj, with a normal population not exceeding 600, was flooded with 6,000 refugees; Chandpur, with a normal population of 4,000, was overrun by 20,000 refugees. In these centers and many others, refugee camps were set up and we attempted to affect some organization.

The immediate problem was to select those that needed medical attention and, if there were any cases of communicable diseases, to isolate them from the rest of the group. Several died of cholera; but we managed to isolate them in time so that the disease did not spread and we had no epidemics. Sanitation in these congested camps presented a very serious problem. With the help of the refugees, bore hole latrines were constructed and the camps were serviced each day with bleaching powder. Additional rations were given to those who aided in the work. With the help of our interpreters, we attempted to educate the villagers along sanitary lines. We were finally forced to announce that if anyone failed to comply with our requests in these matters, their rations for that day would be cut. This proved quite effective.

In feeding centers, powdered milk, rice, dahl, and atta were rationed out to the people. Expectant and nursing mothers and infants under five years of age were given preference in the milk distribution. To the infants, we also distributed baby foods supplied by the American Red Cross. The shelter problem was taken care of by arranging with the railway company to use some side-tracked coaches and by making arrangements for the refugees to secure bamboo and betel nut trees from the surrounding jungle to build themselves temporary protection from the sporadic rains and cold night winds. Sewing classes were organized by our native women volunteers among the refugee women and large numbers of children's clothing were made and distributed to the needy.

The largest and most basic problem that we were confronted with, was how to get the people to return to their respective homes. No one seemed to have the answer. It was of utmost importance that they got back immediately and harvest their paddy crops or the crops would be lost and the consequences would be famine and starvation. And yet, we could not send or encourage anyone to return if there was danger that he or his household might be murdered or otherwise molested. Not only would we be responsible for the man's life, but the news of such an occurrence would spread to the most remote corners of the province and tend to propagate the fear and distrust that already existed. The army and police could give temporary protection, but their's would be a guardian service and no attempt would be made to get at the root of the problem. After considering the problem from many angles, we decided that the only effective way of repatriating these people would be for Americans or Europeans to return with them to their villages and live in their midst attempting to bring about a better understanding. This would help to insure their safety and, at the same time, we would be able to give them advice regarding the problems they would face in re-establishing themselves and present their needs and problems to the proper government officials for them. Along with this, we hoped to work in a village improvement program.

We selected a remote Union Board with an area of 20 square miles and a population of 19,000 for our work. After many conferences and meetings with the Moslum leaders and people of this area, we felt assured of their cooperation and the repatriation work began. It was a huge task to locate all of the refugees from this area who had fled to many and distant places. With the help of volunteers they were located and registered. The refugees were naturally filled with fear and distrust and this had to be overcome before we could except them to return. After much reassuring and explanation, we began to move the villagers to their homes. The British army loaned us trucks to transport people, goods, and food supplies; jeeps to carry our staff; and tents to house those whose homes had been burned until they should be able to rebuild. Each family was given a fortnight's supply of rice, dahl, and atta and a graduated rationing system was set up to tide them over until they should harvest their crops.

We attempted to introduce improvements into the union by our example and by our conversations with the villagers. Voluntary work crews were organized among the inhabitants and latrines were constructed, courtyards and ponds cleaned, and tube wells introduced. In doing these things, and with the help of lantern slides, we attempted to explain to them something of the germ theory of disease, the importance of keeping down flies and mosquitoes and how to do it, and the danger of drinking impure milk and water. Weekly peace meetings were held often attended by several thousand people of both communities. In all of our projects, we had Moslum and Hindu working side by side. The emphasis of our work was placed upon the reestablishment of the bonds of trust and understanding between the two communities. All other work was in addition and incidental to this. We did not intend to tie ourselves up to a long range program. Our aim was to establish peace and understanding between the communities as quickly as possible and then remove ourselves and allow the people to carry on under those local leaders who may have caught some of the philosophy we preached during our stay.

As I am writing this article, outside of my tent there is much ado. Hindus and Moslums—working noisily side by side—are taking down our tents, packing our supplies, and loading the trucks to go to the steamer. Young, broadminded leaders of both communities have taken their places. The families are reestablished, living peacefully and cooperatively side by side and, we feel, understanding and appreciating each other more deeply than before. After three months it is time for us to leave.

Feeding Hungry Childern

I cherish for our tireless supporters at home the privilege of watching one child feeding. You would see the little tots skipping gaily down the street, swinging a tiny bucket or their father's old Wehrmacht mess kit or just an empty tin can. These are the containers in which they will receive their hot soup. Even in the wintertime the little ones are lightly clad. Many have only wooden sandals. Some have no stockings. Few children have overcoats. One little girl clumsily wears shoes which are four inches too long for her. Children's shoes are miserable—torn, cracked, beyond repair. (Look at people's shoes for an index of the poverty of a people.) The child stands in line, waiting his turn to receive his portion. A teacher checks off a square on his little blue Mennonite feeding card. The little lad holds out his can to the volunteer worker. She ladles two servings of hot cereal into his can. From another volunteer he receives one brotchen. Then with infinite care and concentration, the child carries his precious food to a table where he sits down and eats his meal. As they eat, there is scarcely a sound, only intense preoccupation with that best meal of the day—a bowl of hot cereal.

One watches the little children eat and one sees that it is good. Jesus, we know, would have us feed the hungry little children.—Robert Kreider.

In comparison with some countries, American students are apathetic in their interest and activity in the political life of the nation. Last Spring an Egyptian paper ran a headline, "School Out, so Cairo Politics Takes Holiday." Egyptian students have no representation in parliament, but through demonstrations and riots are a powerful voice in the life of the country. Because of their demonstrations, last year one prime minister was forced to resign, and the signing of an undesirable treaty with Britain was stopped.

A Gallup poll made a survey of the church-going activity of church people. The findings of the poll revealed that eight out of ten people who belong to a church get there as often as once a year, middle-aged people attend better than those who are younger and older, and college people have a better church attendance record than those who stopped with high school. The Des Moines Register and Tribune was also making a survey. The purpose of this survey was to discover why people go to church at all. Most Iowans responded they desired to find out what the Bible means to them, college graduates were more interested in the application of religion to everyday life. Sixty-seven per cent of those polled joined the church because "relatives and friends were members."

Mennonite Refugees in Europe Face Hardships

Acute needs continue among millions of refugees who are located in various parts of Europe. Among these are about 8,000 Mennonites.

Approximately 1,500 of the Mennonites who formerly lived in East Prussia are now in refugee camps in Denmark. In their lives can be seen the influence of over three years of refugee camp experience. In addition to the restriction and need in these camps, there is also the anxiety of possible forced repatriation to their former homeland, which is now under Russian occupation.

In Germany, there are several camps, among them Gronau and Backnang, in which Mennonite refugees are being cared for. The conditions in these camps is very crowded, because there is such a serious lack of available shelter. In some places there are as many as forty people living in one room, with a few curtains affording the only privacy. Here they live, not for a few days, but for months. Obviously normal family life is impossible. Under these sad conditions there is an inevitable deterioration of physical, mental and spiritual life. Many others of the 8,000 Mennonite refugees who are not in camps but scattered throughout Germany and Austria, have equally inadequate housing, and lack food and clothing.

Those who are working and planning for the welfare of these people feel that a way must be found soon for bringing them to a more satisfactory environment. A limited number may qualify to enter Canada. When the conflict in Paraguay ends, the door may be open for further movement to that country.

Need for Soap and Fats.

"Soap is urgently required. Only may we ask you not to use any kind of fat for soap that could serve to feed people. Whatever fat can be spared for human nutrition we would ask you to use for that purpose, because of the immense lack of fat. Any fat, however that cannot be used for nutritional purposes and is used for making soap will be of great aid; for many diseases, especially skin diseases, cannot be properly treated because of the lack of soap." (By Pastor Diehl, of the British Zone of Germany.)

This is one of many reports that reach us, which indicate that the need for fats and soap in Europe continues. Our people are urged to save waste grease and fats, for making of soap for relief. Write for the "Grease for Peace" folder (MCC, Akron, Pennsylvania) for instructions on where to send contributions.

Relief Workers Recently Returning

Henry and Beatrice Buller returned on August 18 from service in France and the French Zone of Germany; Mary Miller and Ella Schmidt have returned from service in France.

Orie O. Miller, returned on August 20 from a three-month commissioner trip in the interests of the MCC relief program in the Far East, Ethiopia and Europe.

Mexico

The Mexico Voluntary Service program for one-year volunteers is taking definite shape. According to present plans the MCC will furnish a core of workers to help open and operate temporarily a small general hospital located in Cuauhtemoc in the State of Chihuahua. The hospital, begun many years ago, was never quite completed nor opened due largely to loss of confidence by the people and excessive spending. The hospital will fill a very great need of the Mexican people and the Mennonite colonists who live nearby.

Workers needed include nurses, and other men and women hospital workers, experienced school teachers, and a business manager. In addition to this there will be opportunity for others. Since the work will involve both Spanish and low-German speaking people, some ability to speak either will be very helpful, however not a requirement. We would be interested in knowing of several individuals with carpentry ability who would want to assist under a special arrangement for a several-months winter term to complete the interior of the hospital.

Gulfport

The unit at Gulfport, Mississippi, continues to work in the area of individual and family welfare, as well as community projects. There are several smaller communities two colored and one white, in which there is a genuine need of help, and the people are particularly open to our helping them. It is the conviction of the workers that future work of a smaller unit should be concentrated in these areas.

Mental Hospital Service

Those interested in a period of service in a Mental Hospital unit this winter should write to Voluntary Services, MCC, Akron, Pennsylvania. Workers in these units receive regular attendant wages, but contribute a small amount toward Voluntary Services.

Relief Worker Departures and Arrivals

Waldo and Rachael Hiebert returned on August 11 after having served for over two years in Paraguay. Their particular assignment had been to work in the school in the Mennonite Colony. They gave a challenging report on the work being done there, and on the further opportunities of service.

Review of Recent Work in France

During the past three months the distribution of clothing and tools has been completed and approximately 150 tons of relief foods were distributed to various organizations, leaving a small amount for the operation of the MCC projects and the various special distributions which might arise.

The two children's homes, Weiler and Lavercantiere, passed through periods of readjustment. Both homes are directed by MCC American personnel on a private institutional basis recognized by the French government.

Jottings

—Eden Church, Moundridge, Kansas: Orlando Goering was ordained as minister of the gospel at our morning services Aug. 10. Dr. Ed. G. Kaufman, president of Bethel College, delivered the address and Rev. Walter Gering, our pastor, performed the ordination rites. Rev. Goering is a graduate of Bethel College and Garrett Biblical Seminary. He will soon take up responsibilities as head of the Bible Dept. of Freeman Jr. College.

—Ebenezer Mennonite Church, Bluffton, Ohio: August 17 seemed to be an unexpected homecoming day for us. Vacations and the meeting of the General Conference brought many of our former members and friends now in the ministry and Christian work home for the week and among them were Howard Amstutz and family, Rev. Harley King and family, John Neuenschwander, Catherine Niswander, Barbara Bucher, Myron Hilty and family, and Mrs. Clara Chamberlain. Catherine Niswander gave a children's message during the morning service and Mrs. Chamberlain told of her work with the American Sunday School Union in Arizona and California in the evening service. Others took part in C.E. and Sunday School.—Andrea Landes, Corr.

—Salem Mennonite Church, Dalton, Ohio: Rev. and Mrs. A. S. Rosenberger are at the retreat for ministers and their wives at Shipshewana, Indiana. Rev. Harold Gerber brought the gospel message Sunday, August 17. The Willing Worker's Sunday School Class presented "Greater Than Any Man," a play for the Christian church, August 17. The responsive audience also enjoyed the instrumental ensemble directed by Victor Gerber, the worship service, and other music. —Mrs. Ivan Bodertscher, Corr.

—Oklahoma Bible Academy, Meno, Oklahoma: Registration at O. B. A. will be on September 8, with the classes beginning on the 9th, and the opening exercises Sunday evening the 14th, at 8:00. We trust that young people will avail themselves of the opportunity to study the word of God in our new Bible school which will open at the same time.

—Bethel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minn.: Sunday morning, August 17, we had the privilege of having Ds. van der Zijpp in our church. On Monday night, he spoke in the First Mennonite Church on the subjects "Mennonite Relief in Europe," and "Conditions in Holland during the War." The church at Rotterdam, of which Ds. van der Zijpp is the pastor, is one of the largest Mennonite churches in Holland. It has about twelve hundred members. At least one hundred died of starvation. Holland, as well as other European contries, has experienced untold suffering, but he said, also great blessings and that God does not forsake his own. One result of the war, says Ds. van der Zijpp, is the contact with the Mennonites of Canada and the U. S. The good will between the two continents has been strengthened. The Mennonites of Holland and the Mennonites of America are different, but they have one hope and one aim. There are eighteen ordained women ministers in Holland. Women are also members of the Board of Deacons. All Mennonite churches in Holland belong to one Conference, a goal for which American Mennonites ought to strive, thinks Ds. van der Zijpp. They have one church paper with twenty-five thousand subscribers. From this vicinity, about a dozen people left for Berne to attend the General Conference. Mrs. F. J. Isaac, missionary from India, arrived here August 18, after an airplane trip from Bombay with the Orlando Waltner family. Her physical condition was such that she was taken to Bethel Hospital the next day where she is slowly recovering her strength. It is uncertain when she will be able to leave the hospital. —Helen Penner, Corr.

—About 200 attended the second annual retreat held for ministers and missionaries and their wives at Camp Mack, Shipshewana, Indiana, August 15—19. This was a capacity attendance. Rev. Ronald von Riesen, who helped make arrangements for the retreat, reports a very enthusiastic spirit for it.

—Dr. T. O. Hylkema, one of the five pastors of the large Singel Mennonite Church in Amsterdam, Holland, spoke to an audience in Memorial Hall, North Newton, Kansas, on the evening of September 17. He talked on three points: 1. M.C.C. relief work in Holland; 2. Work with the Russian Mennonite refugees; 3. Mennonite church life in Holland. Dr. Hylkema stated that the M.C.C. had given aid to 1,100,000 Dutch people out of a total of 4,000,000 destitute, the total population being 8,000,000. He pointed out that the Mennonites of America had come as "one body" and had given relief "plus." He then declared that the aid extended to the Russian Mennonites would not have been possible had the Dutch government not been so favorably impressed by the work of the M.C.C. In speaking of the Mennonite Church in Holland, he revealed that there is a growing interest in non-resistance, there now being ninety-four who take the C.O. position. Half of the ministers are taking the non-resistant position. Dr. Hylkema also read a statement of greeting from the Mennonite peace organization in Holland.

". . . in the United States criminals force us to spend each year more than forty-three times as much on them as we spend on all forms of education, both private and public. We spend for their detention, arrest, conviction and punishment nearly thirty times as much money as the combined budgets of all church and religious organizations in this country."—Bulletin, Zion Church, Souderton, Pa.

Some Contributions Other Denominations Can Make to Mennonites

by Ed. G. Kaufman

(The following address was given by Dr. Ed. G. Kaufman on the opening night of General Conference. It was of vital interest to many. It is here shared with all readers who may want to know what Mennonites can learn from other denominations.)

There are some things that as Mennonites we do not want to learn from other denominations. On the other hand, there are some lessons that other denominations can learn from Mennonites. This is the subject that Doctor Pannabecker is to discuss. I am briefly to point out some contributions that other denominations can make to Mennonites. In discussing this subject we shall briefly consider some of the denominations in groups.

I. The Roman Catholics. We have many objections to the Catholics, but there are also some things we can learn from them. We briefly mention five:

1. The habit of worship that the Roman Catholics inculcate into their people is something that we might well follow. Catholics go to church to worship not merely to hear a sermon, much less to be entertained. Anyone going into a Catholic church, whether on Sunday or during a week day, will feel the very atmosphere of worship all about him.

2. The Catholic church stands for authority and the members have the habit of obedience, although this can be carried too far, and as Protestants we do not recognize the infallibility of the Pope; but we must admit that the Catholic church, through its authority, exerts a good moral influence upon many people. We do not agree with all the teachings of the Catholic church but, for instance, their opposition to divorce and other evils is a help.

3. The Catholic church encourages people to trust the unseen. As Americans we are too much inclined to believe only in those things which can be seen and touched and what money can buy. Catholic symbolism is a constant reminder that the great realities cannot be seen or heard or touched or bought with dollars, which, however, can be deeply appreciated by the human heart.

4. The Catholic church throughout its history has taken a lead in the establishment of hospitals and charities. As Mennonites we have just made a beginning with hospitals, relief work, missions, education, and other endeavors calling for sacrificial service and contributions on the part of our membership.

5. The recent Catholic emphasis on rural life we could also well emulate. We are a rural people but the Catholics are doing much more in an organized way to build up their rural churches than any Protestant group.

So, from the Catholics we can learn about worship, obedience, trusting the unseen, sacrificial service, and rural life.

II. The Protestant Episcopal and Lutheran Churches.

1. The Protestant Episcopal church can make a contribution to us by its dignified and beautiful form of worship service. Our churches are not always churchly. There is danger of over-emphasizing beauty for the sake of beauty; on the other hand, it can also be an aid to worship and an expression of the aspiration and yearning of the human heart for fellowship with the unseen.

2. The Episcopal church has kept a vital connection with the good, the inspiring, and the beautiful of the past. It traces its connections back to the Apostles and its Book Of Common Prayers contains ancient forms of worship which have been developed through the centuries. A frontier and pioneer people like the Mennonites, although we have a history, need a new awakening to the great values of the past and our historic connection therewith. We would lose fewer of our young people if we could awaken within them a sense of belonging to an important historic religious stream in history.

3. The steadying and conservative force of the Lutheran church is something needed by some of our Mennonite groups who always look for change and sensational excitement in their religious life.

4. Salvation through faith in Christ is central in all Lutheran thinking and should be in Mennonite thinking. although we do not want to lose sight of the fact that such salvation must also issue in a worthy life of good works.

5. One of the glories of the Lutheran church is that it has been careful to instruct its people and especially its children in Luther's Smaller Catechism. It believes that its members should have the clearest possible conception of what their interpretation is. Lutheran pastors consider catechetical instruction of equal importance with the sermon. It is recognized that nothing has done more to maintain the inner unity of the Lutheran church throughout the centuries than this catechetical instruction. General Conference

Mennonites have practiced catechetical instruction but of late in certain areas it is being neglected and not considered important by some of our ministers.

So, from the Episcopalians and the Lutherans we can learn about beautiful and dignified ritual, the place of historic continuity, that the core of the Gospel is salvation through faith in Christ, and the importance of catechetical instruction.

III. The Presbyterian and Reformed Churches. The Presbyterian and Reformed churches have also served as a conservative influence in American life. They are also grounded in the past.

1. The strength and depth of conviction of many men and women who have lived and died by the Westminster Confession is noteworthy. It does make a difference what people believe and it is important that people know what they believe and why.

2. American life, including Mennonite communities, need the Presbyterian emhasis on the enormity of sin. The Presbyterian church has never underestimated the awfulness of wrongdoing. It has never taught that sinners would automatically grow into saints. Man is lost in sin beyond all possibility of redemption except through the power and grace of God. This emphasis makes for a high level of morality.

3. The Presbyterian church has long been distinguished for painstaking scholarship wherein the study of the Bible has been exalted. Out of this has grown the insistence that ministers shall be fully qualified by education and training. For over a hundred years the Presbyterian church has insisted that candidates for her ministry shall be college trained and now for many decades, that they shall also be seminary trained.

4. The Presbyterian church has never stressed emotion in religion, but rather the slower and perhaps the surer process of Christian nurture with children and young people through instruction. In good Presbyterian homes the Word of God is held in high honor.

So, from the Presbyterians we learn about strength of conviction, the enormity of sin, the importance of a trained ministry and instruction with controlled emotions.

IV. With the Methodists, Congregationalists and Baptists we are coming closer to historic Mennonite thought, forms and church organization.

A. The Methodists. The Methodists have been most successful in meeting the needs of frontier and pioneer life and, therefore, have been a large factor in shaping the ideals of the great Middle West of America.

1. Methodism has been characterized throughout its history by great zeal. That has been true of Wesley on down to the present time. This accounts for a type of preaching characterized by warmth and reality. General Conference Mennonites could profit by Methodist zeal.

2. The Methodists have contributed a sane emphasis upon emotion in religion. They consider religion to be primarily a matter of emotion but have always been careful to harness these emotions to some form of practical effort and so have taken the forefront in the battle against alcohol and other o our social evils. This emphasis on emotion has led t a type of evangelism that has widely been adopted General Conference Mennonites could well put mor emphasis on a balanced cultivation of emotion an warm but sane evangelism.

3. Methodists have emphasized the value o organization. To some the Methodist church ma seem over-organized, others consider their organiza tion even better than that of the Roman Catholi for the purpose of a church. Certainly here is some thing the ultra-democratic General Conference Men nonites can and must learn if they would make thei contribution to the present and future.

4. The tolerant spirit of the Methodist churc is another point that could be stressed. Methodis is not a doctrinal church but puts its stress upon a inner experience and the life of the spirit withou trying to force everybody into the same modes o thought.

Methodist enthusiasm and zeal, their use of th emotional element in human nature, their practica and efficient organization, their tolerant spirit couple with their vision of the world as their parish, accoun for their large and rapid growth. Some of thes qualities we General Conference Mennonites reall need.

B. The Congregational Church.

1. It was the Congregational church that introduced pure democracy to America and it is fron their practice of the democratic form of churc government that they got their name.

2. Perhaps the greatest contribution of the Congregationalists has come through their emphasis o education. They have founded more colleges, in proportion to their numbers, than any other church i America—a total of fifty-six. They have always bee a teaching church and have produced a long and nobl list of educators and great preachers.

3. The Congregationalists have been pioneer in many new undertakings. They were the first t send missionaries to the American Indians, they formed the first American foreign-missionary society, the were the first to try to do something along religiou

Significant Resolutions We Endorsed at Conference

by Walter H. Dyck, Conference Secretary

Of the almost one hundred resolutions presented for consideration during the thirty-first session of General Conference, we feel that twenty-five deserve the status of "significant live resolutions."

1. Twenty New Churches were welcomed by unanimous vote (Yes: 1,266 votes; No: none) into our enlarging General Conference fellowship. Nine are located in the United States; seven in Canada; three in Brazil; and one in Paraguay. The names and locations of these twenty congregations follow: (1) First Mennonite, McPherson, Kansas; (2) Bethel Mission, Winnipeg, Manitoba; (3) Mennonite Country Church, Monroe, Washington; (4) Meadow Mennonite, Colby, Kansas; (5) West New Hopedale, Ringwood, Oklahoma; (6) Bethel Mennonite, Lancaster, Pennsylvania; (7) Mount Olivet, Huron, South Dakota; (8) Bell Mennonite, Fredonia, Kansas; (9) Second Mennonite, Springs, Pennsylvania; (10) Stirling Avenue, Kitchener, Ontario; (11) First Mennonite, Caldwell, Idaho; (12) Bethany, Watrous, Saskatchewan; (13) Scarboro, Calgary, Alberta; (14) Glenlea, Glenlea, Manitoba; (15) Arnaud, Arnaud, Manitoba; (16) Springstein, Springstein, Manitoba; (17) Die Mennoniten Gemeinde, Curityba, Brazil; (18) Die Mennoniten Kirchen Gemeinde, Witmarsum, Brazil; (19) Die Freie Evangelische Mennoniten Gemeinde, Witmarsum, Brazil; (20) Die Fernheim Mennoniten Gemeinde, Fernheim, Gran Chaco, Paraguay.

2. A Revision of the Constitution has been assigned to the Coordination Committee. This revision is to be presented to the Executive Committee for review and publication in time to be considered for adoption in 1950.

3. At the discretion of the Executive Committee, ½ per cent of the total funds coming into the Central Treasury may be set aside for potential maintenance and improvements of the Krehbiel Memorial Building. One thousand has already been set aside in our General Conference Treasury for this purpose. As soon as prices warrant and materials become available, plans should be made for some improvements at headquarters. Special gifts would make it unnecessary to make any deductions from the total funds coming into the Central Treasury.

4. After considering the advisability of opening mission work in Puerto Rico, the Foreign Mission Board was authorized to study the field further and procede at their discretion.

5. Homes for furloughed missionaries are to be established at locations favorable to the needs of the missionaries. Storage space is also to be provided. These homes may be established with the aid of interested District Conferences and in consultation with them.

6. With the influx of European Mennonite refugees into South America(the majority adhering to the General Conference fellowship), several suitable couples are to be secured for a period of at least two years to assist in shepherding these brethren in the faith.

7. The Conference endorsed a recommendation of the Home Mission Board that our Southern Mountain Mission be enlarged.

8. The Conference recognized the proposed Canadian Mennonite Bible College as a General Conference institution and pledged "that we do all we can to help our Canadian brethren in this undertaking."

9. Confidence was expressed in the work which the Emergency Relief Board had done in the past. The E. R. B. was encouraged to continue "as the needs may arise." The Mennonite Central Committee, through which most of our relief work is done, was encouraged in maintaining its evangelical witness "in the name of Christ" in all its work.

10. Freewill gifts and loans were pledged to the Mutual Aid Board in its important work. This board is also to continue serving as "clearing house for members wanting jobs or having job openings, for those having farms to rent or sell, or those wanting to rent or buy, or those having or wanting business opportunities of various types."

11. The Retirement Income Plan, as presented by the Pension Committee, was approved as the Pension Plan of the General Conference and our ministers, and others eligible, were invited to join. A Pension (Standing) Committee of six members is to be appointed by the Executive Committee. This committee is being authorized to set up rules and regulations for the administration of the Pension Plan, subject to the approval of the Executive Committee.

12. Efforts are being made to call the Fourth Mennonite World Conference to meet in America in 1948. The M.C.C. is being asked to take responsibility in calling and planning the program in cooperation with European representatives. Their attention is being called to an offer to provide hospitality for this conference in the Newton community. If the M.C.C. should feel unable to call this conference, the Executive Committee of Conference is authorized to take the necessary steps to arrange for said conference in cooperation with other Mennonite groups.

13. With an anticipated average annual budget for the Board of Publications for 1947-1950 of $58,348.71 ($46,398.00 in direct costs plus $11,959.71 in indirect costs) it was also recommended that due to tremendously increased cost of publication, that the churches make special quarterly contributions especially designated for publications.

14. As a result of a bequest by Mrs. Pritchard of Germantown, Pennsylvania, there is available a sum in excess of $6000 toward the erection of a permanent record room or vault as a memorial to Dirk Keyser who served as pastor of the Germantown Church early in the 1700's. The congregation was anxious to learn whether General Conference, through its Historical Committee, would be interested in working out a plan for the completion of the record storage space, also for the support of a permanent maintenance fund for the historic shrine.

This matter was referred, by resolution of Conference, to the Historical Committee with the request that a feasible plan be worked out and submitted to the Executive Committee of Conference.

15. The Laymen's Organization applied to the General Conference for recognition, and was accepted as an auxiliary of the Conference.

16. Significantly, the report of the Mennonite Biblical Seminary and the Mennonite Bible School was adopted by a unique resolution—unique in that it was the only resolution passed at this conference beginning with the words. "RESOLVED, that with gratitude to God we accept the whole report . . . . "

17. In view of the fact that General Conference and Central Conference are now affiliated, it was resolved that the Seminary Board consist of nine members to be elected by General Conference for nine year terms, provided that the present members of Central Conference shall complete their present terms of three and six years, resp.; further, provided that the Seminary Board may continue to accord the privilege of official representation on the Board to other Mennonite groups as provided in Resolution 52 of the 1941 session of Conference, or other arrangements that may be worked out at that time with Conference approval.

18. An Active Stewardship Educational Campaign is to be undertaken in the next three years, emphasizing the Biblical basis of stewardship and the overall needs of our Conference. (Assigned to the Doctrine and Conduct Committee)

19. Among other significant resolutions submitted by the Doctrine and Conduct Committee, one urges "that a serious study be made of the evangelical witness to human beings under the spell of the Communistic ideology" in order to "discover what barriers in our own life limit our power of witness to Communists 'in the name of Christ', the type of Literature which could be used in evangelistic outreach, the lessons of the past thirty years in relation to Communist movements . . . . ."

20. Another Doctrine and Conduct resolution views "with alarm the breakdown of church discipline in the local congregation" and hence urges "our churches to re-study the basis of New Testament Church discipline and seek to speak the truth in love according to Matthew 18:15-17."

21. Still another emphasizes that "It is our conviction that the Mennonite Church has been strongest when it was most loyal to Jesus Christ as the Lord of the Scriptures. We, therefore, urge our churches, schools, and publications to keep the Holy Scriptures ever before us as a supremely trustworthy authority in matters of faith and practice and as God's Word to His children."

22. At the request of the Executive Committee, the Conference reaffirmed its position on eternal judgment. The adopted statement follows in full:

"We consider the testimony of the Scriptures, in such passages as Matthew 25:46, Luke 16:26, John 5:29, and others as clear regarding the eternal lot c those who do not accept the offer of God's redeemin grace through Jesus Christ.

"There is also an unbroken line of testimony fror the Scriptures reflected in our Mennonite confession: The Ris Confession of 1747, for example, states, concerning the eternal lot of the unrepentant, ' . . . . w have every reason to assume that that condition wi be one of utter perdition from God, from all gooc all comfort, all salvation—both as to soul and bod without any hope of escape or relief in all eternity The Souderton statement of 1941 declares that 'w believe . . . . . in a future state determined by divin judgment.' These statements unite to teach that ther is eternal salvation of the righteous and eternal punishment of the wicked.

"We therefore reaffirm our belief in eternal judgment as the clear teaching of the Scriptures and of ou Conference, and pray that precious souls may se that 'now is the accepted time . . . . now is the da of salvation.' (2 Cor. 6:2)"

23. In answer to a request for statement on th question of remarriage of broken family circles, th Conference is assuring our Russian Mennonite refugee that "we sympathize deeply with them in the tragi suffering and heartbreak that has come to so man homes through a government policy of forcibly carrying away the husband and father into slave labor o military service and leaving behind the family wit the dreadful prospect that they may never hear fron him again. We also sympathize with them in the depressing sense of loneliness and uncertainty that burdens the soul when years pass and not the slightes word comes as to whether the husband or wife is stil alive. We also sympathize with them when, after year of such soul suffering and struggle, when the dreac fear that they will never again see their loved one has almost become certainty, there comes the opportunity for another marriage and a sharing of life' burdens and joys and they must now decide whethe as a Christian it is permissible for them to marr again under these circumstances. Our deepest sympathies reach out to them.

"But the question of remarriage under these circumstances cannot be decided merely on the basis o human sympathy or of mere human reasoning. It mus be decided on the basis of Scripture and supremel the teachings of Jesus. Jesus' emphasis on the sanctity of the marriage relationship and of the home anc on the sacred and eternal worth of the child in the home is so strong and clear that it does not appea to be in harmony with His teaching and of the wil of God that such persons remarry unless, and unti they are assured beyond a reasonable doubt that the other partner is dead. . . . . We want to assure such persons that we are binding it as a burden upon ou soul to pray for them earnestly and persistently tha our God who can do far beyond what we hope o think may so over-rule in the affairs of men and o such Mennonite families that there may be strength and joy to bear whatever the will of God may finc wise and that if it be according to His will, tha family circles be re-united to the glory of His name We also pledge ourselves to stand faithfully by the ide of such broken family groups who bear their ross of suffering, in a spirit of active help, love and nderstanding."

24. Reiterating our strong opposition to any proram of universal military training, the Conference Secretary was asked to send the following resolution o the President of the United States:

"We, the General Conference of the Mennonite Church of North America, now in session this 27th lay of August, 1947, at Berne, Indiana, again wish to xpress to the government of the United States our leepest respect and gratitude for recognizing our tand on war.

"We further wish to convey to the government of he United States that we are deeply conscious that 'REMOVING THE CAUSES OF WAR' as far as possible at this time is most important — even though it might mean sacrificing economic, social and racial advantages, as individuals and groups.

"We shall most gladly give our help and support to a constructive Christian policy that seeks to remove causes that foster war."

25. With the adoption of a carefully worded set of resolutions of appreciation and thankfulness, that last action taken before adjournment, was the acceptance of the invitation of the Freeman-Marion, South Dakota, community to serve as hosts to the thirty-second session of the Conference. Realizing the vastness of such an undertaking this offer of hospitality was accepted "quickly and with thanks."

lines for the Negro after the Civil War. They led the way in the translation of the Scriptures into foreign languages for missionary work, and today they are pioneering in the social applications of the Christian Gospel.

C. The Baptists. The Baptist denomination has been characterized more as a movement rather than a denomination for they, too, are ultra-democratic and congregational in their church government.

1. As a first contribution of the Baptists we would mention their intense loyalty to personal conviction.

2. A second contribution is to be found in the simplicity of their creed. Their creed is the Bible and they have consistently refused to adopt a man-made statement of their belief.

3. A third contribution is a strong insistence upon the separation of church and state. In our time this point needs to be re-emphasized.

4. A fourth contribution is the emphasis on the freedom of conscience, although from the Mennonite point of view they probably have not gone far enough in this respect, still it is encouraging to know that other denominations also consider this point important.

V. The Friends and the Dunkards. Naturally, as Mennonites, we find ourselves closer to the Friends and the Dunkards than to any of the other denominations.

1. Throughout their history the Friends have borne witness to the inner light which "lighteth every man that cometh into the world," and have emphasized the superiority of the spirit as over against ritual and form.

2. They have contributed to their worship through silence, there can be too much talking in the church service.

3. The Quaker emphasis on mysticism is needed among us. In these days we are inclined to look for scientific explanations and fail to remember that the great realities are after all mysteries and beyond human understanding.

4. Their social passion, expressing itself in various ways such as the anti-salvery crusade, prison reform, relief work, opposition to war, and promotion of peace. It has been stated that pacifism to the Quaker is not an act but rather his very character, he thinks peace, it is his life.

To the Dunkards we are even more closely related than to the Quakers. There are many things we can learn from them; although they are a younger church than we are they are larger, better organized, have fewer branches, and are more united. They emphasize their Ana-baptist heritage, are of German rural background, are warmly evangelistic, and believers in the Gospel of peace.

VI. In conclusion may we remind ourselves again that although there are some things in other denominations we do not care to adopt, still our General Conference can learn from them. Perhaps some of the more important of these items are:

1. The great effort of Christian Protestantism today to get together and present a united front. This need for unity was at the core of the thinking of the founding fathers of the General Conference. There is still much room for improvement in this area. Not only in our own conference circles is there need for greater unity, but also in our relationship to other branches of the Mennonite church. We need to strive for tolerant cooperation with Christians everywhere in the building of Christ's Kingdom.

2. There are evidences of a new spirit and new type of evangelism. As Christians we must transmit and pass on the light, the faith, and the good news of the Gospel that we have. If Christ means anything to us we need to express it with zeal and concern for others that they too might come to know and accept Him whom we worship as our Lord and Saviour.

3. As we need a crusading evangelistic missionary spirit, a warm and intelligent Christian enthusiasm, so also our catechetical and other means of instruction of our young people, or academies, colleges, and our seminary, all need much more hearty support to give us the trained leadership we must have if we would fulfill our God-given mission as a church of Christ.

4. As a General Conference we have much to learn on integration and organization so that we might work as a unit and be more effective. Other churches are active in this area. Organization is recognized today as an absolute essential in any kind of undertaking whether it be business, war, or the work of the Christian church. We note with gratitude that we have a Coordinating Committee working on this problem.

5. There is a new social conscience abroad, especially on the matter of war and peace. World War II with its atomic bomb and other scientific accompaniments, with its ideological conflicts between totalitarianism and democracy, with its struggle between atheistic secularism and Christian personalism, should awaken Christians of all denominations to the need of a greater devotion on the part of the individual to our Lord and Saviour, more cooperation between the various denominations, greater sacrifice for His Kingdom on the part of young and old, so that the anti-Christian challenges of our age so rampant and threatening to all phases of Christian individual and group life might be met. The emphasis on Christian peace must become more inclusive, active and aggressive. The cause of peace in the individual heart and in the world at large is closely related to the cause of Christ and His Kingdom in the individual heart and human society. May our General Conference take its position and play its part in that great enterprise to the salvation of many and to the everlasting glory of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ.

W.M.A. Reports Directly to Conference for the First Time

by Mrs. W. C. Voth

For the first time in the history of General Conerence time was given the Women's Missionary Asociation by the General Conference Business Comnittee to report directly to the Conference. The last ialf hour of the Friday morning session was given to ntroduction by the chairman, and reports by the seretary, treasurer, and committee chairman.

At the Friday afternoon business meeting, held in he spacious auditorium, the reports were reviewed and recommendations accepted. Before the meeting Mrs. Lohrentz, representing the W.M.A spoke at the joint meeting.

Results of the election were as follows: Mrs. A. M. Lohrentz, President; Miss Elma Esau, Second Vice-president, Miss Elma Sprunger and Miss Elva Schrock, members on the Literature Committee. The latter to complete the three years of the term of Mrs. Erland Waltner who had resigned.

An impressive memorial service was conducted by Mrs. W. C. Andreas, Vice-president of W.M.A.

Saturday afternoon the meeting was continued at the Reformed Church. A paper on "Mission Study" by Mrs. Willard Claassen and the remaining reports were followed by talks on highlights of experiences in relief work by Miss Elma Esau and Mr. and Mrs. Peter Dyck.

Especially impressed was the writer with Brother Dyck's words regarding qualifications of a relief worker. First among these qualifications was "a deep concern" for the need of others. Placed last, he pointed out, in the list of qualifications in the M.C.C handbook is this: "education sufficient for the assignment."

The Friday evening Missionary Program sponsored by the Women's Missionary Association, featured music by the Junior Mission Band and mother and daughter chorus of the Berne church, a geographic survey of our fields, and a panel discussion conducted by representatives from each of the major General Conference mission fields; Montana (U.S. Indian) represented by Mrs. Malcolm Wenger; India by Puran Banwar; China by Miss Elisabeth Goertz; Congo by Miss Aganetha Friesen; Colombia by Rev. La Verne Rutschman; Kentucky (home missions) by Miss Elsie Pfister. Mrs. S. T. Moyer of India was chairman of this discussion.

At the Women's Advisory Council on Monday afternoon a report of the visitation program was given, and recommendations growing out of it were adopted.

Mrs. H. J. Andres was again asked to serve in the capacity of editor of the Missionary News and Notes.

Laymen Meet at Conference and Organize

The laymen met on August 22 and 25 during the recent General Conference session with the following action as a result:

A motion was adopted to create an interim committee to outline a men's organization including preparation of a proposed constitution, having as its purpose:

(a) to stimulate greater participation in the program of the church and furnish fellowship among men.
(b) to serve as a clearing house for district and local congregation men's associations.
(c) to furnish an opportunity of witnessing through ministering.
(d) to serve as counsellors for our youth.
(e) to serve as a channel of expression of Mutual Aid.

It was recommended that men's organizations be formed in the local congregation and district conference for similar purposes.

Among the projects suggested for local congregations and district conferences were:

(a) An annual Laymen's Sunday with laymen in charge of all services.
(b) Bibles for the American Bible Society.
(c) Visit and encourage struggling congregations.
(d) Establishing mission outposts by lay people.
(e) Assistance to young people in establishing themselves in a vocation.
(f) Assist in program of material relief.

The Interim Committee was instructed to apply to General Conference at once as an auxillary organization. (It made such application and was accepted.)

Elected to serve on the interim committee and charged with the carrying out of the above were: Walter H. Temple, Chairman, 1124 N. 18th Street, Allentown, Pa.; John E. Fretz, Secretary, 404 Tennis Avenue, North Hills, Pa.; and Dr. J. S. Schultz, Bluffton College, Bluffton, Ohio.

IN MEMORIAM

Mrs. Frieda Voth Flaming, adopted daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Voth, was born January 19, 1909, at Hillsboro, Kansas, and departed this life August 6, 1947. In 1926 she was baptized by Elder P. H. Unruh and received into the fellowship of the Alexanderwohl Church. In 1929 she was united in holy matrimony to Jacob J. Flaming. For over seventeen years they shared life's joys and sorrows. This union was blessed with one daughter, Viola. She leaves to mourn her early death her deeply sorrowing husband and daughter, her foster parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Voth, one brother Ernest and family, her mother-in-law, Mrs. J. A. Flaming, four sisters-in-law, Mrs. Dave F. Voth, Mrs. Rudolf Hiebert, Mrs. C. H. Janzen, Mrs. Edwin Epp and their families, and four brothers-in-law, Sam, Frank, Abe, Solomon and their families.

Conference News and Notes

—The offering held at the Women's Missionary Association program on Friday night totalled $780.50. One-half of this is to be allotted for foreign missions, one-fourth for home missions, and one-fourth for relief, especially the transportation of refugees.

—The total contributions by General Conference churches in the past three years amounted to somewhat over four and one-half million dollars, according to a statement by Walter H. Dyck, Conference statistician.

—Elma Esau, former relief worker who had much to do with clothing distribution in Holland and Denmark, reported that there was great need for large clothing, shoes, and warm woolen clothing.

—The Mennonite people of North America contributed $3,369,000 for the work of the Mennonite Central Committee during the year, December 1, 1945, to November 30, 1946. About $1,000,000 of this was in cash and about $2,300,000 in goods.

—The love offering held at the conference for Dr. A. Warkentin amounted to over $300.

—N. Paul Stucky, who presented to the conference the need and opportunity for doing mission work in Puerto Rico, pointed out that such mission work would be welcomed by present mission workers in Puerto Rico and that there is a great field for work in this land of whose population only 4 to 5 per cent are Christians. Mr. Stucky, who is much interested in short-wave radio and operates such a set himself, stated that the M.C.C. unit in Puerto Rico is now going on the air once a week.

—Three Dutch brethren attended the General Conference sessions. They were Dr. N. van der Zijpp, who is professor in the Mennonite Seminary in Amsterdam, Mr. Herman Craandijk, who is the secretary of the Dutch Mennonite Conference, and T. O. Hylkema, a pastor in the Singel Mennonite Church, Amsterdam. Brother Hylkema has already visited Mennonite communities, while the other two brethren are scheduled to visit various Mennonite communities in the near future. A unique fact about the Mennonites in Holland is that instead of being split up into many branches like the American Mennonites, they are all united in one body.

—Mrs. Ferd Isaac, who recently returned from India, was reported at the conference to be seriously ill in the Mountain Lake, Minnesota, hospital.

EXCELLENT MUSIC AT CONFERENCE

Very refreshing were the musical interludes at General Conference. Numbers during the business sessions were frequent and excellent. Of special note were the larger programs such as that by a union of various choirs, under the direction of Russell Lantz, on Saturday evening, August 23, the presentation of "The Creation" by the Mennonite Choral Society, under the direction of Freeman Burkhalter, on Sunday evening, and the numbers by the Bethel College A Cappella Choir, under the direction of Walter H. Hohmann, during the last days of the conference.

SUNDAY MORNING ORDINATION SERVICE

The Berne church was crowded Sunday morning when Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burkhalter were ordained as missionaries to India and Mrs. La Verne Rutschman as missionary to Colombia, South America. Rev. Howard G. Nyce, Secretary of the Foreign Mission Board, gave the ordination sermon. The infant child of the Burkhalters was also consecrated during this service. A unique feature of the offering held that morning was the use of waste baskets to receive the platefuls of money. The offering for missions totalled over $1,000.

NATIVE OF INDIA BRINGS GREETINGS

"Now you see a product of your work," were the words of Puran Banwar as he appeared before General Conference delegates and visitors. Mr. Banwar, who brought greetings from the Mennonite Christians of India, is the first convert from the India mission field to bring such greetings to the General Conference. Mr. Banwar pointed out that never before has the relationship between the churches in India and those in America been as intimate as now. Mr. Banwar, formerly business manager in the Champa Leper Home and very active in church activities, is completing his college education at Bethel College.

"A DAY OF OPPORTUNITY" FOR MISSIONS

"This is a day of opportunity" was a keynote in the survey of foreign mission work given by Rev. A. E. Kreider, chairman of the Foreign Mission Board, who recently returned from a world tour of mission fields and relief centers. In India this opportunity is made possible by the religious freedom pledged by the new government of Hindustan and by the 400,000,000 plus population. Villages are so thick in India that in the General Conference mission area alone there are over 2,900 of them. There are Christians in 206 of these. During the past year evangelism was carried on in 550 of them. The churches in our mission area are learning to be self-supporting, however schools for the children of these Christians are sorely needed.

There is opportunity in China, for its youth are open to Christian mission work, but the Chinese civil situation is chaotic, and its people are never far removed from starvation. In staking out a new mission field in China the Board has to deal with the fact that all of China has been alloted to mission boards. However, although there are 8,000 Christian churches in China, some areas are covered very thinly, so that in the area considered by the Foreign Mission Board there is one city of 200,000 population with only three churches. Negotiations with other mission boards must be completed before a new field can be established.

Rev. Kreider, in a fervent plea for mission work, ended with a call for ten new mission workers every year.

Y.P.U. General Assembly Adopts Plans for Three Year Program

An outstanding meeting of the Young Peoples Union General Assembly was held two afternoons during the General Conference held at Berne, Indiana, August 20 to 27. On Friday and Monday afternoons, August 22 and 25 over 150 young people from churches over the U.S. and Canada met to discuss the past record and activity of the Young Peoples organization and to plot a course for its work the next three years.

At conference the comment was heard on several occasions concerning the number of young people that were present. Indeed the Conference did not consist only of older leadership, but had a healthy representation of those who are young and are the potential leadership of tomorrow. For the ongoing life of the church, this was indeed a very wholesome thing. Of even greater significance was the opportunity young people had of becoming acquainted with each other and of getting a feel of the scope of the church and its work.

This year a full days time plus an evening's program was given over to the young people for their business and their presentation of their work to the Conference. The healthy interest the Conference displayed in youth by this gesture is deeply appreciated. It is hoped the future relationship may be both wholesome and mutually profitable. There are great things in store for Mennonite youth.

The following material presents to the youth, the decisions their General Assembly adopted as a program for the Young People's Union for the coming three years. This will serve as a guide for the Executive Committee in their future planning and work.

Resolutions Submitted to Y.P.U. General Assembly by Y.P.U. Council

A. Projects

1. The Y.P.U. Executive Committee and Y.P.U. Council urges the endorsement of the following major projects which have been previously approved by the Y.P.U. Council and solicits the full support of the General Conference young people:

(a.) We believe it a worthy project to bring students from our mission and relief fields to our schools through the Missionary Education Fund.

(b.) We appreciate the provisions that have been made for a General Conference Voluntary Service program through the cooperative efforts of our conference boards, executive committee, and the Y. P. U. We urge local and district leaders to prayerfully and heartily promote the program in their own groups through such means as personal accounts of workers, literature, and programs.

(c.) We suggest that we feel our responsibility in giving our wholehearted financial support to the mission project of building a church at Lame Deer, Mont.

(d.) We want to express our appreciation to Esko Loewen, Editor of the "Mennonite Youth" section in THE MENNONITE for the fine work which he has been doing in that capacity. We move to continue this section in THE MENNONITE with the editor to be appointed by the executive committee and paid out of Y.P.U. funds until the next meeting of the General Assembly or until other arrangements are made for a youth paper.

2. We request support and participation in the Second General Conference Young People's Retreat which is to be held immediately after the conference, August 29 to 31, at Camp Mack.

3. For better unity and better understanding between the various branches of the Mennonite church and for enlarged opportunities, we favor and encourage participation in and prayerful support of the M.C.C. Voluntary Service Projects.

B. Organization

4. The Executive Committee shall make major project plans for the coming conference term and after submitting them to the Y.P.U. Council and considering them together shall present them to the General Assembly in session for further discussion, revision and adoption.

5. In connection with our projects which we adopted for a year's period, we suggest as a fiscal year, July 1 to June 30.

6. We recommend that the president or some officer of each district visit each church in his respective district sometime during the year in order that the young people might become familiar with the larger youth program of the church.

7. We urge that the value of youth participation in the activities of the local church be given serious consideration and that each church make provision for its young people to have some activities of their own. In smaller churches we suggest the possibility of having some combined activities with other churches which will also aid a sense of Christian unity.

C. Larger Problems and Convictions

8. To present the work of our church at large and stimulate a more disciplined prayer life among our people we feel that the motion of the last Y.P.U. General Assembly should be carried out (Resolution No. 4, passed June 2, 1945 to make up and distribute prayer calendars to the Conference youth.) We believe it can make for a greater consciousnes of unity in Christ among our youth. With the resolution, it was urged that the distribution of the prayer calendar be undergirded with personal commitment and consecration to Christ.

9. In view of increasing need and opportunity for world-wide Christian fellowship and activity, we suggest our Y.P.U. Executive Committee make appropriate contacts with Mennonite and related youth organizations in various parts of the world. We suggest contacting the youth in Holland, France, Germany, Switzerland, Paraguay, Brazil our foreign mission fields, the Waldensian youth of Italy and any others the Executive Committee may deem appropriate. To all we extend love and hope that increasingly, we may be one through Jesus Christ our Lord and Saviour.

10. There is the possibility of a World Mennonite Congress in the year 1948. We suggest our Y. P. U. executive committee express our hope that provision be made for a discussion of the Mennonite youth movements in the various countries. As a minimum representation we suggest that foreign Mennonite youth who are in the country where the conference is held be invited to attend.

11. Though World War II is a thing of the past, world conditions are still tense and the outlook is not bright. Our testimony of love and peace and our opposition to war is a much needed contribution which we as Mennonite young people can make in our day. Only 27 per cent of the General Conference young men who served the country during the war served in the C. P. S. program while 18 per cent went into the armed services as 1AO and 55 per cent into regular military service. It is recommended that our groups study this problem through carefully in the light of Christian teaching before the pressures of another war are upon us and think of how we can more positively express our stand against war and military service. The Y.P.U. Executive Committee is urged to work closely with the Peace Committee on this question. It was urged in this matter that there also be deep personal commitment which is essential to any action the Y.P.U. takes. We encourage our ministers to preach and teach the peace principle.

12. In view of the alarming increase in divorces in our Mennonite churches we suggest that each local society have at least one program discussing the Biblical teachings on this subject. If possible, this should be part of larger discussions on courtship, marriage, and the home.

13. As consecrated Christian youth we should as individuals and as local groups consider prayerfully the call for ministers of the gospel for our home churches and abroad. We encourage special meetings to present the opportunities of Christian service and the workers needed. It is urged a survey of the need be made and presented to young people.

Resolutions Submitted by Individuals and from the Floor

14. In view of the fact that this is to be a young people's organization, we recommend continued steps toward leadership being in the hands of young people. As leadership becomes younger we believe it would be well to have a young people's subcommittee of the General Conference Board of Education who would study the direction and development of the Y.P.U. as an organization. The districts are encouraged to also elect officers who are under thirty.

15. We suggest to our Executive Committee that they consider the possibility of sponsoring in connection with our mission boards our missionaries or field.

16. Our General Conference has an Evangelism committee under the Home Missions Board. We give our whole hearted supported in particular to the three projects it sponsors, namely: (1) distribution of posters to our churches, (2) a week of witnessing during passion week, (3) the distribution of tracts.

17. The struggle against conscription continues even though Selective Service is temporarily a thing of the past. We recommend our executive committee to write letters to the chairmen of both the House and Senate Military Affairs Committee and to the President stating our opposition as a peace church to military conscription of any type or form.

Flood Relief

By Mary Elizabeth Amstutz

(Mary Elizabeth Amstutz has written the third in the series of articles on the MCC program in India. Her first assignment in India was working in the flooded area. In the article she presents her experiences and and the challenges she found in such work. Her home is in Pandora, Ohio. Following her graduation from Bluffton, she received her M. A. from Ohio State University.)

During the latter part of July, East Bengal, especially the region in the vicinity of Chittagong, suffered severely from a devastating flood. Rivers swollen by unusually heavy monsoon rains spilled over their banks causing severe crop damage, thus leaving in the wake of the rushing waters destruction and desolation. The people in the area are engaged chiefly in two occupations, namely, rice growing and fishing. The flood therefore inflicted harships, first by destroying a means of livelihood, second, by destruction of property including homes and small stores of food and other supplies, and third, by the danger of epidemics.

The Friends Service Unit had volunteers already functioning in this area, and so two of the MCC workers were loaned to them for a short period to aid in this disaster. The work which was being done was that of establishing and maintaining food and milk canteens, and of administering inoculations for typhoid and cholera.

Indian doctors and nurses were busy with inoculations too, but it was necessary to use all available assistance to accomplish so huge a task. The trips to the villages were usually led by someone who knew the section well—sometimes the nurses or doctors. After people in a community realized what was going on, they did not resent the treatment, but rather welcomed it, knowing that help was being given. As a result of these innoculations, typhoid and cholera did not become epidemic.

The Red Cross supplied the powdered milk and the government supplied the funds to be used in establishing the food canteens. The plan briefly was to go to a village, select a committee of six, three Moslems and three Hindus, and they in turn selected the children under twelve who were to be given milk and food. No objections were voiced in having Moslums and Hindus cooperate. There was enough milk so that three hundred children in each village could receive a large serving daily, but enough rice and vegetables to feed only the neediest one hundred. Each child also received his daily portion of vitamin tablets. Thirty-one milk canteens were set up, each supplying three hundred children daily, and eleven food canteens, each feeding one hundred children.

The committee selected the most appropriate time for feeding the children and frequently visits were made to see that each canteen was functioning properly. It was an interesting, yet very pathetic sight, to see the children come from all directions at feeding time with their containers for milk and their little basins and bowls for food. They would seat themselves in a large circle and wait patiently their turn for food and then with their little hands, would quickly clean up the patters. Moslum children and Hindu children usually ate separately, although in one village they were eating together.

The work covered a widespread area, which necessitated moving about considerably and going from village to village either by foot or boat. Living quarters for the unit varied from bamboo huts to shelter in one of the local high schools.

What amount of relief was accomplished by this effort is difficult to estimate, but much gratitude was expressed by the parents of the children who were fed. Some suffering was alleviated, many hearts made happy and some seeds for the Kingdom sown by service "In the Name of Christ."

The Northern Baptist Convention has recently inaugurated what they call a remain-on-the-farm program. Its purpose is to assist local churches to locate Christian families on suitable farms.

One out of every four fatal accidents in 1945 involved a driver or pedestrian who had been drinking. One million persons were injured and 28,600 were killed. Losses due to accidents totaled $1,450,000,000. Alchoholism had much to do with these losses.

Rural areas in the United States showed a greater increase in juvenile delinquency in 1946 than the cities. The increase was 14.1 per cent, while the overall national increase was 7.4 per cent.

Food conditions on the continent of Europe are expected to be even worse than now in the spring of next year and will not be much better by the spring of 1949. The crop expectations are much below normal and there is no carry-over from last year. Consequently grain that would be used for seed will be used for food, thereby reducing plantings next spring.

A hearing in June was held regarding the $1,229,000 former "frozen fund" which accumulated from the labors of C. P. S. men doing dairy farm and other similar services. At the hearing, Betty Jacob of the National Service Board pointed out the financial contributions made by C.P.S. to the government: "During the period of Civilian Public Service administration, from June, 1941, to March, 1947, 8,237-866 man-days were contributed by these men to work of national importance. Computed on the basis of an army private's original pay of $50 a month, this figure represents a contribution of $13,729,775 to the United States Government. In addition to this invisible financial gift, the religious agencies carried almost the total cost of maintenance and administration of of camps from 1941 to 1947. This figure amounts to approximately $8,000,000. Added together, this represents a saving of at at least $13,729,775."—Washington Letter Church memberships are growing but not fast enough to keep up with the population increase, a study made by the Twentieth Century Fund reveals. From 1926 to 1941-42 the Catholics made a gain of 23.3 per cent and the Protestants of 24 per cent.

It believes that human rights and freedoms must be respected if there is to be a world of system, of order, of justice and progress."

Want Message of Unity and Peace

Some of our India missionaries report having heard a very interesting lecture by Madame Vijaya Lakshmi Pundit, sister of Jawanarlal Nehru, and herself a very prominent Indian political leader, and a representative to the U. N. O. At the close of her lecture, Madame Pundit consented to answer questions from the floor. A young Indian Christian asked, "What do you consider to be the best contribution that the Christian Community can make at this time of violence?" After a pause, she answered in effect that those Christians who have not had a part in the violence and killing are the ones who have earned the right to preach the message of unity and peace. To those, she says, "Go right on giving your message of unity and peace."

Here is our challenge. We must follow up our non-resistant stand with Christian missions and evangelism. The two are inseparable.—N. Laurence Burkhalter.

The co-ops offer one approach which can help us meet our basis postwar needs: to build full employment by expanding purchasing power.—The Chicago Sun.

Some Immigrants Move into Paraguayan Chaco

Akron, Pa., August 29.—A cablegram which C. A. DeFehr sent from Asuncion, Paraguay, on August 26 states that sixty of the immigrants who have been stranded in the city since the rebellion, have now proceeded for the colony of Fernheim. Although further details are not yet available, it is apparent from this information that the conflict has subsided sufficiently that such a movement is now again possible.

European Refugee Work

C. F. Klassen, who is engaged in contacting governmental and international offices in Europe in the interests of Mennonite refugee migration was confined for a few days to a hospital in Frankfort due to an infected foot, but has now again recovered.

Marie Brunk, having served for three years in relief and refugee work in Holland, has returned to the United States for a short furlough after which she will return to Europe for a new assignment in the work of helping Mennonite refugees. She, with other MCC workers will be located near Stuttgart, in the American Zone of Germany.

Foreign Students Enter Mennonite Colleges

Three students from Holland and two from France have recently stopped at Akron en route to the Mennonite colleges which they plan to attend during the coming term. Those from Holland are: Tineke Spuijam, attending Goshen College; Janke van Wijland, attending Bethel College; Margrita Freie, attending Bluffton College. Gertrude Gassman, former helper in the MCC relief work in France, will attend Goshen College; Augustin Coma, son of a Spanish teacher employed in an MCC children's colony in France, will attend Hesston College.

These students have come to this country under the auspices of the Council of Mennonite and Affiliated Colleges. The Mennonite Aid Section assists in arranging for certain accommodations for the students upon their arrival in this country.

Report from Hungary

"The estimates for the coming winter are generally dismal. Supplies of food are shorter than were at first expected. It looks as though there will be room for all the food that will be available. Other relief agencies are also reporting that they are concerned about the situation, especially in regard to the children."—Howard Blosser

Clothing Center Personnel

Margaret Martin, of Ephrata, Pennsylvania, has assumed the work of supervising the packing of relief clothing, shoes, etc., at the MCC Clothing Center, Ephrata, Pa.

The Ephrata Center is the largest of the MCC clothing centers. During the first seven months of this year over seventy tons of clothes were processed at this Center.

To Meet with Sewing Circle Groups

Viola Wenger and Elma Esau have been appointed to meet with Sewing Circle groups in several Mennonite communities during the month of September, in order to give information on relief clothing needs.

Sister Wenger, of the MCC Material Aid staff, will contact groups in Michigan, Eastern Canada, Minnesota, Iowa and Illinois; while Sister Esau, formerly a relief worker in Europe and now of Whitewater, Kansas, will include Missouri, Nebraska, the Dakotas, Kansas, Colorado and Oklahoma in her itinerary. It is hoped that these contacts will prove helpful to these sewing circle groups who desire to help in the relief effort.

VOLUNTARY SERVICES

Personnel for Mexico Unit

The first one year volunteers to be appointed for the Mexico Voluntary Service Unit include Melvin Funk, Hillsboro, Kansas, Director; Frances Beckenbach, Canfield, Ohio, Matron; Mr. and Mrs. Randall Heinrichs, Winnipeg, Manitoba; and Clara Schellenberg, Saskatoon, Saskatchewan. Others will be appointed later. Those interested in more information about this unit should write to Voluntary Services, MCC, Akron, Pennsylvania.

In Memoriam

Harvey D. Hunsberger, son of Enos F. and Mary (nee Loux) Hunsberger, was born October 8, 1873, near Plumsteadville, Pa., on the farm on which he lived and died. In 1895 he married Annie F. Myers. He was baptized by Bishop Henry B. Rosenberger and received into the Deep Run New Mennonite Congregation in 1913 by the right hand of fellowship. A trustee of the church for many years, his special care was the cemetery. At various times he held public office in township and county. He fell asleep, July 15, 1947. His widow and five children remain. Rev. J. H. Fretz preached on Rev. 14:13 at the funeral.

Russell W. Huber, son of Wilson and Kate (nee Wismer) Huber was born May 13, 1895, in Plumstead Township, Bucks County, Pa. In 1915 he was baptized by Elder Allen M. Fretz and received into the Deep Run New Mennonite Congregation. In 1928 he was joined in marriage to L. Wilhelmina Righter. For twenty-three years he operated a baker route in the community in which he spent his entire life. He quietly fell asleep on July 26, 1947. In addition to his widow and father, he is survived by two children, Catherine E. and Russell W., and three brothers, Horace W., Norman W., and H. Earl Huber.

Mrs. Anna Jantzen Voth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Franz Jantzen, was born near Hillsboro, Kansas, on September 5, 1886, and passed away on June 28, 1947, at Escondido, California. She was baptized in her early teens and received as a member of the First Mennonite Church, Hillsboro, Kansas. In later years her church membership was transferred to the Immanuel Mennonite Church, Los Angeles, California. In 1913 she was united in marriage to Heinrich D. "God be merciful unto us, and bless us
And cause his face to shine upon us;
That thy way may be known upon the earth
Thy salvation among all nations."
Psalms 67:1,2

The Canadian Mennonite Bible College plans to open its doors on September 26 of this year. It is a new venture for Christ. We believe that God has great things in store for this new school which was so graciously received into the fold of the General Conference at its recent session at Berne, Indiana. Its administrators and teachers covet the prayers of all friends for the day of its opening.

The beginning of this new Conference undertaking reflects a deep gratitude of God's people for His love and mercy. It is an expression of thanksgiving and praise. Such people are eager to carry on an active mission program. The opening of a church school is the actual undertaking of such an endeavour. The history of the General Conference always shows the correlation between the growth in mission interests and its schools. So too, is this new institution a manifestation of a growing mission interest among our Canadian brethren.

Youth is filled with the spirit of venture. When one becomes older one becomes more cautious and does not care to launch out into new fields as readily as in earlier years. The Canadian Mennonite Bible College is such a new venture which should be a real challenge for our young people.

The starting of a new school is not always easy. Many questions arise in the minds of administration which need careful and prayerful consideration. Prospective students also would like to know more about the arrangements and the principles of the new school. All are concerned that a Christian spirit shall prevail in its halls and that a deepening of the spiritual experiences be wrought in its initial endeavor.

The Canadian Mennonite Bible College calls upon the young people of Canada and for our Conference to meet this challenge. It will be a cooperative endeavour between students and teachers. Though a new school may have some privations we appeal to the venturesome spirit of youth to rise up and help in the undertaking. Let us praise God for giving us an opportunity for Christian service in our new Conference school.

BETHEL COLLEGE NEWS

August 31 marked the beginning of school activities with the annual Faculty-Staff Retreat at Camp Fellowship, Goddard, Kansas. Freshman registration, conferences and tests were given on September 2. Registration continued throughout the week with all classes beginning on Friday, September 5. An enrollment of 450 students is anticipated for the current school year. During the summer months a number of housing projects were under construction to provide accommodations for the increased number of students. Several buildings were purchased from the War Assests Administration and moved to the northeast corner of the college campus near the Pines. Elm Cottage has been moved to its new location west of the Thierstein Home. The A Cappella Choir returned on August 31 from a 4,000 mile eastern tour which took them through Canada, approximately twelve states and to Washington, D. C. where the choir presented a television broadcast over Station WNBW.

Bethel Hospital Gift and Fellowship Day To Be Held September 12

The twentieth annual Bethel Deaconess hospital and Bethel Home for Aged Gift and Fellowship Day will be held on Friday, September 12, on the lawn of The Home for Aged.

The afternoon program will begin at four o'clock, and Dr. Ralph C. Kauffman, of Bethel College, will be the guest speaker at the program.

The evening program will feature the Newton Community Chorus under the direction of Mr. Lester Weatherwax of Wichita, in a program of both sacred and secular music. The two programs which this chorus has given during this summer have proved very popular with Newton residents, and a very enjoyable evening of good music is promised to all who attend this concert. The Reverend Paul Eugene Ehly, pastor of the First Christian church of Newton, will be the guest speaker during the intermission of the concert; Mr. Al Nordstrom, president of the chamber of commerce, will preside as chairman of the program which begins at eight o'clock.

The members of the ladies auxiliaries are planning for the usual bazaar and food sales, card sales, and a light lunch which will be served in the basement of The Home for Aged between 5 and 7 o'clock.

A cordial invitation is extended to all friends of these institutions to attend any or all of these activities.

PETER DYCKS TO SPEAK AND SHOW PICTURES AT MEMORIAL HALL ON EVENING OF SEPTEMBER 21

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Dyck, who took care of over a thousand Mennonite refugees in the American sector of Berlin and later accompanied them and others on the "Volendam" to Buenos Aires are to appear in Memorial Hall, North Newton, Kansas, on the evening of September 21. The moving pictures which the Dycks will show were shown at the General Conference and proved to be outstanding in interest and technical quality. Peter Dyck's account of the transportation of the refugees was one of the highlights of the General Conference. On the morning of September 21 the Dycks will visit the Eden Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas. In the afternoon they will appear at the Lone Tree Mennonite Church near Moundridge. Mr. Dyck was elected as a member of the Emergency Relief Board of the General Conference at the recent sessions.

Dear Friends in Communities Visited by Our Choir in August:

To thank all of the persons who helped to make our a cappella choir tour a series of mountain-top experiences would not be possible. In the communities which we visited many friends were busy arranging for meals and lodging and making plans for our programs of sacred music. Although the weather was not pleasant most of the time, the fine hospitality helped to make our whole trip a blessed experience.

Gratefully yours,
The Mennonite A Cappella Choir of Bethel College

Omega Alpha, the national medical honorary society. Only from six to eight of the topmost ranking students are accorded this honor each year. The Riches plan to establish their residence at Goessel.

—First Mennonite, Caldwell Idaho: About two weeks ago. Rev. and Mrs. Albert Jantzen and family were here. We all enjoyed their messages and also the pictures they showed of the mission fields in China. Our pastor Menno Kliewer, and family returned from their vacation trip back to their old home.—Mrs. Leonard Schmidt, Corr.

—Bethel Church, Fortuna, Missouri: The Bethel College Choir sang here on August 31. Rev. Clyde H. Dirks, a former pastor, also brought a message the same morning. Both messages were much appreciated. That night Rev. Dirks related some experiences on his mission work at Portland, Oregon. After this the two films. "The New Birth," and "The Man Who Forgot God" were shown. Consecration services were held recently for two infants, Rev. Albrecht's son and deacon Paul Hilty's daughter. Our oldest member, Mrs. Anna Welty, who is ninety-three, is in a hospital in California, Missouri, with a broken hip. Earl Loganbill and his bride visited his parents recently. Earl is attending Bethel College, and his wife is secretary to the Dean. The twin sons of Joe Lehmans left Sunday for Bethel College where they will be freshmen. Other young people from our church will be leaving soon for various schools.—Mrs. Joe Lehman, Corr.

—Bethel Church, Hydro, Oklahoma: On August 31 Dr. and Mrs. D. D. Eitzen and sons of Los Angeles, California, where Dr. Eitzen is a professor in the School of Religion of the University of Southern California, were in our midst. Dr. A. Warkentin Has Gone Home

(On September 2 we received from Dr. S. F. Pannabecker the following word about the passing of Dr. A. Warkentin, President of the Mennonite Biblical Seminary and Mennonite Bible School:)

"He (Dr. Warkentin) had several visitors on Thursday and Friday following the General Conference and was able to talk with all of them. Saturday morning a few of us were in to see him and he seemed to be in good condition. He talked a good deal and was mentally active. Mrs. Warkentin spent most of the day with him but in view of his being fairly well returned home to attend a few household duties.

"The end came suddenly and somewhat unexpectedly at 6:10 P. M. Shortly before passing away he had told the nurse that this was his best day and earlier he had spoken of the very restful night he had spent. He evidently passed peacefully and without suffering.

"We rejoice to know that he was ready and has gone to the home about which he spoke so much the last few weeks. His memory will be a blessing to all of us."

(The funeral was held in Chicago on the afternoon of September 2. A memorial service was held in the First Mennonite Church, Newton, Kansas, on the evening of September 3.)

"If . . . Ye Truly Seek Me"

The spirit of adventurous quest has possessed men of all nations and all ages. The quest varies from age to age and from time to time. But the ceaseless striving, the desire to know and see and feel what man has not known before has not been quenched. There are many areas which still await the searchings of men; "seek and ye shall find" is still true if we meet the conditions of real Christlike seeking.

All worthy quests demand thorough and genuine preparation. No journey is complete without those factors which help make it enjoyable. Little worthiness is attached to any effort without a real love for it, no matter what the cost in preparation may be or what dangers may be attached.

Some climb mountains. Others seek heights in other ways. But all heights of real service have held for men a view of splendor which, in a sense, has become the beauty which the disciples saw in the transfigured Christ as they beheld his splendor on the mountain heights. They have achieved that which before has not been; light has come to them. It is as though the heights were still inhabited by the Christ even as he is portrayed in our day by the Christ of the Andes standing guard over the peace wrought by Argentina and Chile a number of years ago.

The desire to find the unfound is not fulfilled without ceaseless and painstaking labor. Mountains are ever before those who would climb, and climb we must if we would count our progress for the day. Yet climbing is not all initial preparation; it is not all labor. There are moments when the greatest progress is made by stopping to regain our poise and vision. It is these times which afford the opportunity to renew visual contact with the goal and the interim during which we map the strategy for the next forward and upward movement. Many lives have suffered irreparable damage and others have been lost in the critical struggles which have prefaced what appeared to be the quick final success. Eyes have wandered from the goal and turned to the self glory which appeared within reach; they have failed to detect the "faulty ice" which hindered them from "standing on the peak" and there beholding the splendors of final achievement under God.

We need to climb together. There are many of us on the trail seeking those mountain top experiences which blend life into beautiful symphony. We need to share our common paths, each making available to the other those niches which we have by the grace of God been able to carve into the steep and rugged slope. To make the path easier and more passable to the many who come after us, to make God's blessings flow through our lives to many others, yes, to make known to all the glorious gospel of redemption and discipleship in love of Jesus Christ; these are the common tasks of Christians who would climb mountains together. We are lashed together by the strong cord of common redemption and common concern.

Three Climbers on the Way to the Matterhorn

We must rise to nobler heights in our day. Barbara Spofford Morgan in her book, Skeptic's Search for God, has stated, "The sentiment of human dignity does not come from looking at ourselves; it comes from looking at God." We can stay on the mountains after our climbs if we will look at God. Jeremiah has so effectively stated the truth of hope in our striving when he says of God, "If with all your hearts ye truly seek me, ye shall ever surely find me." A weary world cries for Christian adventures, those who will stop short of nothing save the mountain peaks of fellowship with the most high God.—Loris Habegger

A LITTLE MATTER

There are many means and methods in daily use that can be either constructive or destructive, depending upon who uses them and to what end. Harnessed and controlled the forces of nature are man's best friends. They can also become his worst enemies. The same holds true concerning technical inventions such as automotive power, radio, telephone, and the printing press. Let us consider the latter for a brief moment.

The press can be a great informative, instructive, and constructive agent. It can also be a deadly weapon of the devil and his host. It depends on who is controlling it and for what purpose. The Christian churches today make full use of the printing press as a means toward spreading and establishing the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

Our General Conference is also fully aware of the significance of Christian periodicals and publications and provides its constituency with information about the areas of its activities at home and abroad and the scope of work which it conducts. Its publications are based on the Scripture and have as a background Christianity as a whole, facing the problems of our age squarely. Great progress has been made in this direction, especially during the last decades. What else can we do to make full use of our periodicals to make Christ's message real in our day?

The other day a nurse who is a sincere Christian and has a number of close relatives in the ministry and on mission fields said, "I'll have to get a hold of the last years of The Mennonite to read up on what happened and what is going on in our Conference." Indifference? Certainly not. Away from home, under the strain of the daily tasks she has simply not gotten around to subscribing to The Mennonite. Besides she could read it at home during week ends and vacations.

No doubt, you and I know of many individuals who because of work, study, or marriage are not living in a Mennonite community,. and are thus in danger of losing contact with their spiritual background. Our publications are ready to be the vital connecting link. Such individuals are more in need of the inspiration, vision, and the feeling of being a member of one spiritual family than the ninety-nine at home. Of course, they could subscribe for themselves. But it is easy to establish habits of doing things and also of omitting things. At first they miss the papers that they were accustomed to at home. But somehow they just don't get around to ordering them. They may figure that after all they will soon be at home again and catch up with all these things. Or they will subscribe to the paper after they have permanently established themselves. Reasoning thus, a habit of getting along without something, which was formerly an essential part, results. New channels of information and inspiration are established and the obligation to serve the church of the fathers is neglected.

What about it? You and I have many friends in such a situation. Have we inspired them to continue the spiritual fellowship with the Conference and share in its activities by keeping its papers in their homes? Have we sent our own copies to our relatives and friends, or sent in a subscription for them? Thus we could help them maintain the old channels of information, inspiration and service.

Thus far we have been speaking about the home front. Only a word about the foreign field. Thousands of our brethren in Europe have been up-rooted and transplanted to foreign environments—spiritually, economically, and geographically. It is one thing to help them establish new homes, but equally essential to give them spiritual food and fellowship through the channels of our publications. This is indeed a very urgent missionary enterprise which needs our prayers and whole-hearted financial support. May God grant us vision and willingness to enter this field, ripe for harvest, without hesitation.—Cornelius Krahn, Professor of Church History, Bethel College; Director, Mennonite Historical Library, North Newton, Kansas; Editor, Mennonite Life, and Associate Editor of Der Bote und Der Christlicher Bundesbote.

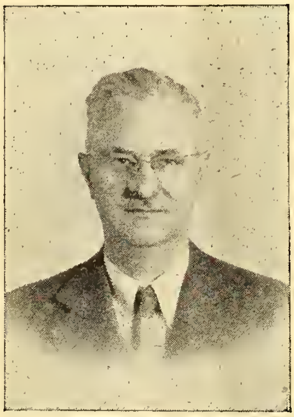
1885 --- Dr. A. Warkentin --- 1947

by Cornelius Krahn

We pause at the end of the life of a man who has distinguished himself in three countries. A. Warkentin was born in Russia where he taught school for a number of years; he received his theological training in Germany where he again taught and was active in relief work administered to the Mennonites in Russia; most of his work, however, was done among the Mennonites of America. His gentle spirit and his genuine concern for those with whom he came in contact won him many friends. Let us briefly trace the background and life of him who will be remembered as an outstanding teacher, minister and friend.



A. Warkentin was born August 24, 1885, at Ladekopp, Molotschna, in the Ukraine. He received his elementary and secondary training in some of the best schools that the Mennonites of the Molotschna had produced. From 1904 to 1912 he taught in the school of Alexanderwohl. A. Warkentin loved to teach and it must have been here that he developed that skill.

The year 1912 was a significant one in his life. He married Elizabeth Unger and with her left home and country to receive a theological training abroad. The young couple could hardly have realized that they would never return to see their loved ones and their home again. From 1912 to 1915 Warkentin attended the Theological Seminary of the Baptists in Hamburg, Germany. This training added another avenue of service to his activities. In Russia Warkentin had joined the Lichtfelde Evangelische Mennonitengemeinde. In 1920 he was ordained minister and elder by the Conference of the South German Mennonites with whom he had been associating since he finished his study in Hamburg. At that time Germany was at war with Russia. Thus the Warkentin's could not return to their home country.

From 1916 to 1920, even though he was in an enemy country, he was fortunate in finding employment in the Realschule at Wilhelmsdorf, Wuerttemberg. At the end of this period, relief work was started among the suffering Mennonites of Russia. Deutsche Mennonitenhilfe was organized, and Warkentin became its secretary. His knowledge of the Russian situation, his tact, and training enabled him to perform a very significant task. In this wise he was also brought in contact with the American Mennonites. Instead of returning to Russia he decided to establish a home in America. In 1923 the Warkentin's—they had four children—came to Kansas. After a temporary stay in Hillsboro, they moved to Newton where, with brief interruptions, they lived for twenty years.

The new beginning was not easy. Warkentin had received his training and experience as a teacher and minister in countries that differed in many ways. He had to learn a new language in order to teach and preach. Many other adjustments had to be made. When one considers that he was nearly forty, one marvels at how quickly and graciously he adjusted himself to an entirely new environment, winning the affection of students and other people with whom he associated. In later days he enjoyed relating some incidents from those days when he encountered the difficulties common to making an adjustment like this.

In 1923 Warkentin was called to teach Bible and German at Bethel College. This position he held till 1943 when he suffered a stroke which ended his activities in connection with the College. During his teaching he continued his study, receiving his M.A. from the University of Kansas and his Ph.D. from the University of Chicago. (1935). The year he started to teach at Bethel College he also accepted the call of assistant pastor of the First Mennonite Church of Newton, serving in this capacity until his illness in 1943 when he had to give up all his activities for a while. It was remarkable that by the next year he was resuming some activities and that in 1945 he was called upon by the Conference to organize the newly founded Mennonite Biblical Seminary and Mennonite Bible School and to become its first president. Even during his last days of pain and weakness his thoughts were with this work.

Even though teaching and preaching constituted Warkentin's outstanding activities there are many other avenues in which he made unique contributions. For five years he was editor-in-chief of the Sunday School Quarterly of the General Conference. In both the United States and Canada he was greatly loved and appreciated as Bible and conference lecturer. His experience, background, and personality enabled him to render distinguished service as vice-president of the Emergency Relief Board of the General Conference (1935-1940) and as member of the Mennonite Central Committee (1933-1940). That his activities on these committees were discontinued at the outbreak of the war is very likely related to the fact that the man of three countries never became a citizen of the country that he served most. It was not that he did not sincerely desire citizenship, but it was denied him because he could not promise to "bear arms in times of war." No one can bar him now from citizenship of the kingdom of his Lord whither he has been called.

During the twenty years that he was connected with Bethel College Warkentin built up the Bethel College Historical Library which he made one of the best Mennonite collections of the country. Today it consists of more than 4,000 volumes, almost a complete collection of all Mennonite periodicals and many thousands of documents and pictures. Warkentin had a warm evangelical faith which was not hanging in air, but closely related to the beliefs, principles, and tradition of the Mennonite church. This love for the Mennonite heritage based on a warm Biblical faith prompted him to collect this wealth of material. It is true, he did not produce many books on this subject, but he paved the way for others, and the Bethel College Historical Library will remain his monument. A valuable contribution is his "Who's Who Among the Mennonites," the second edition of which appeared in 1943. "The Harmony of the Kings" testifies to his knowledge of the Old Testament which he taught so inspiringly. His scholarliness is demonstrated in his study "Die Gestalt des Teufels in der deutschen Literatur." (A few copies of the two latter books are still available at the Bethel College Historical Library, North Newton, Kansas).

A. Warkentin was a teacher, minister and friend, but above all he was a teacher, a born teacher. In this field he made his greatest contribution. Many times he could have accepted full time work as a minister, but he chose to teach. Even though he has been called out of our midst, his blessed memory will live in the hearts and minds of his students and the halls of Bethel College.

To those who visited him during his last days of severe suffering he said, "As thy days so shall thy strength be." He was called home August 30.

To Be With Him in Glory

by John T. Neufeld

"Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness and all these things shall be added unto you."

It was our privilege to walk with him for a brief period and to see that the verse was his motto for life. We walked with him until he was called home. We have been left to carry on some of the work that he left behind.

Dr. Abraham Warkentin, late President of the Mennonite Biblical Seminary, passed away at the Wesley Memorial Hospital on Saturday evening, August 30. He served his church and in a special way the Mennonite Biblical Seminary and Bible School faithfully to the very end. During the last year he suffered very much. Frequently his pain was so severe that he could not sit for very long but would walk around for some time and then go back to his work again. On July 15 he was operated at the Wesley Memorial Hospital. Since the operation he was getting weaker gradually, and he was conscious of the coming end. He made all preparations for his passing, but his greatest concern was the Seminary. Even after we came back from the General Conference, he was very much interested in the Conference and what attitudes and actions they had taken in regard to the Seminary.

Dr. Warkentin was laid out in the big living room of the Seminary Home in which he during his last year often gathered the seminary family for fellowship and prayer. He loved this room, and to all of us who had opportunity to meet with him for prayer here, this room will have a sacred memory. Funeral services were held on Tuesday, September 2. A short service was held in the Seminary Home at which time Rev. J. E. Entz of Newton, Kansas, spoke. Rev. Entz and Dr. Warkentin were co-workers at the First Mennonite Church of Newton, Kansas, for many years. Rev. Entz spoke on the verse, "Father, I desire that they also whom thou hast given me be with me where I am, that they may behold my glory, which thou hast given me: for thou lovedst me before the foundation of the world." John 17:24. Rev. Erland Waltner and Rev. J. N. Smucker and the Seminary octet also took part in this service.

The services were then continued at the Kenwood New Church. This church is located near the Seminary Home, and the Seminary has its offices and library in

In Memory of Dr. A. Warkentin

Forgive that we should think to drape thy noble soul
With empty words of praise;
'Twas not thy quest.
Forgive that we should send our mortal stilted phrase of eulogy
To break thy rest;
Thou art with God.

So let him be, thus gently blest at length in worthy service' end.
Come, friend, and let us cease to speak
For who can tell the beauty of the rose
That fell upon the sands,
Or bring to after-life the mighty pine
That lies recumbent on the mountain side
Where once it struggled with the storm?

But let us kneel in quiet prayer
And feel the benediction of his life
In solemn air of musical refrain
Within the common song of sun and wind and rain.
Come, let us whisper with unworthy lip our thanks to God
For one who loved with life itself
And strained beneath his parting breath to give;
Then let us rise
And live.

this building. Dr. S. F. Pannabecker, Dean of the Seminary, was in charge of the service. He was assisted by Dr. Rufus Bowman, President of Bethany Biblical Seminary, Rev. A. S. Rosenberger, President of the Seminary Board and Dr. Ed. G. Kaufman, President of Bethel College. Dr. Bowman referred to the chapel talks of Dr. Warkentin. He said that they usually were expositions of some scripture passage. A mixed octet led by Rev. Marvin Dirks furnished music here and also at the cemetery. A large number of friends gathered to pay their last respect to Dr. Warkentin. His body was laid to rest at the Fairmount Cemetery southwest of Chicago. A number of Mennonite people have been buried in this cemetery, including the late Rev. and Mrs. A. F. Wiens.

The service at the cemetery was in charge of the writer, Pastor of the Mennonite Bible Mission. The committal service was changed to include the verse, "I am the resurrection, and the life: he that believeth on me shall never die." This last statement expresses our firm belief in regard to Dr. Warkentin. People with this living faith never die. We just lay their bodies to rest.

Mrs. Warkentin will continue to live in her apartment in the Seminary. Quite a few Memorial Gifts were received by the Seminary. We believe the Seminary itself is a memorial to Dr. Warkentin. It remains for those of us who are here and all of the Mennonites of our great Conference to make this memorial a permanent institution.

MY IMPRESSIONS OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE:

Rev. Ben Esch, Pastor Calvary Mennonite Church, Washington, Illinois, and member of the Seminary and Bible School Board:

As this was our first participation in a session of General Conference, I sought with deep interest the reaction of our delegates. It was good to learn from their reports that they were as favorably impressed as I was. In reviewing our experiences the following factors are outstanding.

The entertainment by the Berne Church will not soon be forgotten. The efficient manner in which they took care of the large gathering was impressive.

The spiritual atmosphere that prevailed throughout all activities gave all Central Conference representatives that good feeling of being "at home" and among old friends.

We had to marvel at the way matters of business were handled so expertly and interestingly, and that reports by standing and special committees indicated great amounts of work and careful study having been done along the line of their assignments. The far-reaching program of General Conference startles one and at the same time brings a thrill at the thought of sharing in so great a work.

In reappraisal after returning home, we joined in mentioning the fine spirit of unity which was so predominant. And thus, as we gave our report to the home church, there came to all of us a large measure of joyous gratitude that we have been led to affiliate with this larger group into which we seem to fit so comfortably.

Walter H. Temple, Allentown, Pa., member of the Emergency Relief Board, and chairman of the newly organized laymen's organization of the General Conference:

"Looking Unto Jesus," the text of the Conference Sermon, was the keynote of the conference and sums up the attitude of the delegates in planning for the future. The spirit of fellowship and co-operation, which was evident, inspired many people as did the inspirational and devotional programs.

The deepest impression I received was during the Conference Communion Service as rows of participants rose to partake of the elements and sat after being served. From the rear, it struck me as a billowing wave spreading from the Source, carrying strength and wisdom for the believers.

The local committee on arrangements earned the praise and appreciation of the delegates, as did the people of Berne, for the fine spirit which was shown.

Hugh Hostetler, North Newton, Kansas; at present a student at Union Theological Seminary, New York:

One of the remarks frequently heard at the conference was, "My! What a lot of young people this time!" This article is written by one in that category who had never before attended a General Conference.

Several unfavorable impressions were left upon me. One was the realization that among our delegates the prefix "Reverend" seems to be a necessary qualification for membership to most boards and offices. We—laymen, ministers, missionaries, young people, women's associations alike—are essentially theocratic in our thinking when it comes to spiritual things. A layman running against a minister or missionary has two strikes against him from the start, irrespective of his possibly greater capacities and spirituality. The non-clergy organized themselves this session. May their greatest goal be the discovering and pushing of "non-reverends" to the fore in "full-time Christian work"—whatever their occupation may be!

The lack of interest, or behalf in the importance of the peace committee was another big disappointment. We have done little creative, original work and thinking of our own in this area, and there seems to be little demand for it. We became very enthusiastic about foreign missions, and devoted time repeatedly to them and their personnel. But the address that lifted us above the pieties of "Biblical non-resistance" in our peace thinking was delivered by a man not in our Conference at all, but in a supposedly more conservative sister denomination! I am referring of course to the address by Dr. Carl Kreider, Dean of Goshen College. Let's make no mistake about this thing: If we lose our interest and concern for becoming "peace-makers" we thereby forfeit our right to exist as a separate denomination.

As individuals and as congregations we often differ no more theologically or in matters of doctrine from other denominations or sects, leaving the name "Mennonite," ethnic and cutural backgrounds, and the peace principle as our distinguishing factors. Let us place the report much higher up on the agenda in the matter of time; let us be sure to tie in our relief and voluntary service work to the activities of the committee; and let us develop and encourage real research and leadership in this area.

The precedent set by having a Committee on Doctrine and Conduct dig into doctrinal beliefs and asking the Conference to accept them as being our beliefs is a dangerous one. The ugly spectors of misunderstanding and intolerance are too close. Both those to the left and those to the right are likely to fall away if we attempt to legislate goodness and correct doctrinal belief. Discuss those matters? Definitely! But legislation is not the answer to our doctrinal and theological differences, nor will it bridge our personal difficulties.

On the blue side of the ledger were several things of interest. A "Mennonite ecumenical movement" seems to be emerging—definitely a thing to be encouraged. May the day come when our interest in this direction extends beyond the name "Mennonite"!

The music heard throughout the conference was on the whole on a very high level both in performance and type. The musical climax for most was the presentation of Haydn's "The Creation" by the host church.

The reports of increased membership and the high per capita financial contributions, the reports of relief work, the orderly tone of the meeting, the cosmopolitan atmosphere due to European and South American representations, were other good memories. And last, but definitely not least, the hospitality and friendliness of our hosts and hostesses of the Berne community were highlights. I heard only praise for the efficient way in which they did their part—and more—for this meeting.

Farewell to Bethel of Lancaster

by Don E. Smucker

(Rev. Donovan Smucker, formerly pastor of the Bethel Mennonite Church, Lancaster, Pa., is now Professor of Biblical Theology at the Mennonite Seminary, Chicago. The following is a message of farewell to the Bethel Church.)

What is the secret of the missionary's joy? Surely one of the greatest factors is the relationship to new congregations. This brings a kind of primitive apostolic fervor which is a unique experience of the soul. Like the excitement of a precious baby coming to this earth, the formation of a new church is a stirring event.

I thank God that I have had this type of experience in Lancaster, Pennsylvania. Before my coming for the first time in March of 1945 other Christian brothers had caught the vision. Upon my arrival the sentiment mounted for regular weekly meetings, for the organization of a Sunday School and, of course, a church itself. As a commuter from Princeton, New Jersey, I did not have unlimited time for these developing church matters. Yet the time was "ripe" for decisive action. And when the Reformed Theological Seminary permitted us to use their beautiful (but somewhat too ornate!) sanctuary the time had really come.

For thirteen months thereafter I had the apostolic joy of assisting in the formation of the church. One by one the basic steps were taken: Sunday School, a church constitution, charter members, election of officials and ordination of deacons, a youth group, affiliation with the Eastern District and General Conference and, above all, a prayer meeting and Bible study. The latter development is one of the best I have ever known. All of the families come as families; children and adults participate in the Bible study; the attendance is close to about 90 per cent of the membership. This is the real center of power for Bethel!

During this period of time I discovered what I had already known from previous Christian work: that we have the Gospel treasure in earthen vessels. The best of Christians develop misunderstandings and cross-purposes. Yet these experiences are given to us by Almighty God for our testing and chastening: for the emphasis of the stupendous fact that the Christian Apostle must walk by grace and faith and not by human self-sufficiency.

What a joy it was to preach the Gospel to Bethel! I still believe that preaching is the foremost privilege of the New Testament Christian. Proclaiming the Living Word of God to folks who are starved for the riches of grace rather than the husks of the law. How I pray that the foundation of Bethel is sound Biblical rock, yea, even the Lordship of Christ Himself. How I pray that a vision of a Pentecostal church has been left there for future years.

So, farewell Bethel. You have a great ministry. To the thousands of Mennonites in that county you may hold forth a church conservative in theology but progressive in methods; serious and stern of conviction but saturated in the tender love of the Prince of Peace; appreciative of other evangelical denominations but loyal to the abiding principles of the Mennonite church; evangelistic to the unsaved yet mutually helpful to those already in the household of faith; aware of the perils of modern youth but much more aware of the wonderful happiness awaiting intelligent Christian young people in a vital, balanced program of faith and works. Yes, Bethel, your ministry is one of the most challenging in the Mennonite church today. Many eyes are upon you; many prayers follow you; much love goes out to you. Your first regular pastor is in Chicago training other young ministers to share the joy of founding and nurturing churches of Jesus Christ. What I have seen and learned at Bethel of Lancaster will always be a part of the vision I shall seek to give these young preachers. May Bethel like the churches of Revelation, always "hear what the Spirit saith to the churches."

The "Under Fours" in Our Sunday Schools

by Dorothy A. Krehbiel

In the last years a great deal of stress has been laid on the Sunday School Nursery Class for two and three-year-old children, and a number of very good books and pamphlets have been written on this subject.

Why the special emphasis on the under-four-year-olds? For a long time this has been a neglected field of teaching and training in many of our Sunday schools, and very few churches had a well equipped nursery room and trained teachers for this age group. It is true that some churches have nursery rooms where children are entertained while the parents attend services, but this is not what we mean by a nursery class.

More and more Christian educators have come to realize that here is an opportunity that has been neglected and overlooked and that something should be done about it, for a child is never too young to begin to learn about the love of the Heavenly Father. These are the formative years of a child's life and it is said that he develops faster in the first five years than at any other period of his life. He is developing physical and mental faculties very rapidly and the foundation of his character is being laid. How important that in these impressionable years the spiritual foundation stones upon which the Christian life may be erected are carefully laid by the parents and his nursery class teacher. Here is an opportunity to help set life patterns of worship, reverence and piety.

Many of the impressions received at this tender age will be lasting often influencing the later life. A dark, dingy, unattractive basement room and the wrong teacher will have a detrimental influence on a sensitive little child and will color his religious conceptions. It is indeed important that the right environment, a sunny attractive room that silently speaks of light, life, love and joy, the right type of furniture, little benches, tables and chairs, are made available.

The best trained teachers should be procured for this class. Too often this little group is not considered important by the church when it is contrasted with the more direct soul-saving labor of teachers of older children, but it is just as important that these little ones get the right introduction to Christian training. Not just any teacher will do, for not every teacher can teach little children or has their interest at heart.

A good nursery class teacher must really love children and devoutly love her Lord, for little children sense these things and it gives them a feeling of security which is vital to this age group. Children need to be loved to grow and develop, and thus led to the knowledge of Christ's love for them.

It takes tender patience to listen to little tots and to understand their actions and reactions, giving their comments and questions careful consideration and leading them from these expressions to the lessons you desire to teach them.

One must be able to speak so simply and clearly to little two and three-year-olds that they can understand and grasp the religious truth and Bible stories. Often it may be necessary to repeat well told Bible stories over and over again for several Sundays. Children of this age love repetition as is witnessed by their love for nursery rhymes that they want to hear again and again in the home.

Perhaps, in this class more than in older groups the teacher must have ingenuity, and spend much time in preparing the lesson material, for she needs many visual aids in teaching. Little children need to see, to feel and to do things to learn. Blessed is the teacher to whom God has given this ability, who is willing to develop her talent, and will give time and effort in making the Bible stories live for her children.

A great deal more can be said concerning methods, activities, programs and other things of importance concerning the nursery class, but, as mentioned before, there are various good books on the market to help teachers who are interested in this work. The most important factor is the teacher herself, her depth of consecration, her spiritual insight, her ability to adapt herself to the problems and conditions of the local church, her willingness to give of her time and self. The books picture ideal conditions which are seldom found, but for which the teachers must constantly strive and work.

It is well to keep in mind the words of Jesus, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the Kingdom of God." I have often pondered over the word SUFFER in this connection and have come to see that there is a sense in which it is true.

Teachers have to SUFFER many hours of study and preparation to be able to make the lesson so interesting and vital that they will hold the attention and interest of wiggley little pupils. It means more than a few minutes of glancing over the lesson late on Saturday night to be a good teacher. To lead the children to Jesus means also to suffer in prayer on their behalf, as Christopher Dock did.

Parents have to SUFFER to bring the children, for MRS. DOROTHY O. KREHBIEL of Berne, Indiana, who is very much interested in Sunday school work with younger children, herewith presents some of her hearts concerns.

it is often easier to remain at home than getting up early to dress and get the children ready on a Sunday morning. It takes patience to take them and start them in this new experience of a nursery class. Sometimes they will go eagerly, and then at other times they will cry and want father or mother to stay with them. It means that parents will often hear little of the sermon because the little one is restless, but Jesus says, "Suffer little children to come."

Adults have to SUFFER a little inconvenience, if children are to come to the services for there will be more noise, more shuffling, more confusion, more walking up and down the aisles during the services and more distractions.

Preachers have to SUFFER in the preparations of their sermons in that they have to meet the needs of the young as well as the old, and be able to preach regardless of the crying of children and the distraction of the older ones trying to see whose child is being taken out of the sanctuary.

Church boards will have to SUFFER in the planning of well equipped class rooms, redecorating old ones and building new ones. To make a change from the "way we have always done it" to a new and more efficient way is often very painful to some.

Church members will have to SUFFER (to some it will be excruciating pain to have to dig down deep in the pocket) to pay the cost of these rooms and equipment for the benefit of the children.

But Jesus said, "Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me." I'm sure this also includes the "under-four-year-olds."

Time Flies Fast for Missionary Elenore Schmidt

(The following report by Elenore Schmidt to the members of the Foreign Mission Board was sent to the Secretary of the Board. Miss Schmidt wrote from Ebenezer Villa, Ootacamund, Nilgiri Hills, South India, May 26, 1947.)

The beauties of Ootacamund have thrilled and refreshed me. The fellowship of friends and the mountain top experiences have been like showers of blessing. But vacation days cannot last forever, and now I am eager to get back to Jagdeeshpur.

As I look back in retrospect over the last months, I find it hard to believe that time has flown so fast. The last time I wrote to you I was planning to go back to Champa to take up the work in the hospital there. Since then I have been sent back to Jagdeeshpur to take full charge of the hospital. In the meantime Jagdeeshpur has become my home, for the missionaries stationed there and the people of Jagdeeshpur have made me one of them.

When I took over the work in February, I did so with many doubts and fears. I imagine all new missionaries have this experience as they take their first post of responsibility. As I look back, the problems do not take such mountainous proportions as they did when I looked at them those first few days and weeks. I thank God that He does not expect us to take more than one day at a time. I also thank Him for the faithfulness of our two Indian doctors. Their Christian influence in the community, and their work at the hospital has been a source of joy and assurance.

The Week of Witness — that is, the week before Easter — was a time of joy and blessing. Quite a number of teams went out to the surrounding villages, and many of them came back with reports of good attendance and respectful and eager attention. I went out with a group of young girls and women.

Miss Nickel and I were in charge of this group. Each night so many came that we had to turn some away as there was not enough room in the jeep and trailer. It was beautiful to hear them singing as they went. We used songs a great deal in the presentation of the wonderful message—the passion, death and triumph of our Lord. One night we lost our way, and so we did not get to the village to which we had intended to go. As we were searching for the right way, we came to a tiny village. At first we thought that we would not stay, for it was getting late, and the village showed no signs of life. Just as we were going to leave several men came, and when they found out why we had come, they begged us to give them what we had brought. As we went into the narrow streets, folks came out from all over. Soon there was quite a group to which we could witness. They brought out rugs for our comfort, and as we began to sing and tell them of the wonderful love of Christ, we found in these people a respect and an eagerness that we found in no other village. We came back to this village the following night and found this same hospitality and eagerness. Surely God led us to this little village.

I have been helping with the Junior Church. Miss Nickel and I, with the fine help of two high school boys, started this service in March. There had been a Junior Church some time ago, but for some time, now, the children had been going to the regular church service. Since there is such a large group of children in Jagdeeshpur because of the School, it seemed right to start this church for the children once more. It is a pleasure to work with the children. They are cooperative, and enjoy taking their part in the service. The attendance has been very good, but we know there are still many in the different parts of Jagdeeshpur who do not come. We will not be satisfied until these too will come.

"We Shall Never Know"

(The following statement is presented showing what has been done during the summer at Camp Barnard, Gulfport, Mississippi. The Service Unit at Gulfport is continuing to operate the year around. One of the Summer Service Unit members gave up her well-paying teaching position in order to continue with the Service Unit throughout the year. Other volunteers with a like spirit are welcome at Camp Barnard as they are in Puerto Rico. By writing the M.C.C., Akron, Penn., for information and reading the following article any person interested can more adequately consider this worthy work. Ed.)

Our Summer Unit Period, which while it hasn't been perfect, has however been enjoyable and challenging far beyond the expectations of many of us. The experience of learning to know each other, of overcoming petty difficulties, and together "Serving in the Name of Christ," has certainly been an enriching one. It has been very unifying, and has been a means of giving us a very deep appreciation for one another during the course of two months of Christian banter, work, and worship. So that now as we come to the close of our period we feel a strange, but unmistakable, tugging at our hearts as we think of going our individual ways.

It is then very natural for us, as individuals, to think back over our period of service and try to evaluate in our own minds as to "Just how much has my being here contributed to the affectiveness of our summer's activities." . . . . Perhaps the first, most logical and blessed deducation we can make is that "We shall never know." This is very true when we place our feeble but sincere efforts into the Master's hand, trusting Him to give the increase. However, it is possible to uncover and examine some more tangible results, for instance, let us consider the Mt. Calvery area where the colored people attended Bible School for the first time in their lives. Their report was that after the first week of DVBS their Sunday school attendance and interest increased at least 50 per cent . . . On the playground, as well as in Bible School, little impoverished colored children discovered for the first time that there actually are some white people who love them, even though they are "niggers" . . . . . Many children were taught the Christian way of playing together . . . . There were those who made the blessed decision to allow Jesus to come into their hearts and rule their lives . . . . . Next year, some groups whom we helped will undoubtedly sponsor their own playgrounds and Bible Schools . . . . Many sincere Christian friendships have been permanently established with native people . . . . The experiences gained this summer can be very valuable applications for next year . . . . And let us not overlook the personal spiritual growth which undoubtedly resulted within every member of our unit.

Nearly all of the Summer Unit might have chosen to spend the summer in a vacation of personal leisure, enjoying the temporary pleasures of the world but praise the Lord, they chose rather to serve unselfishly in the Master's name. Without reservation all of us can feel with deep satisfaction that "It has been very worthwhile."

What has been the result of thirty children having been about their Father's Business? Oh! blessed thought, the possibilities are so vast and unsearchable that "We shall never know."

We Begin Our Studies

Comes September and again millions of children and young people re-enter the nation's public schools, colleges and universities. Books, pencils and paper are brought down from the shelves and the great fascinating quest for knowledge begins. They say the quest is a never-ending one—that the more you know, the more you know you don't know, so the more you want to find out about what you don't know. Or something like that!

There was a time when scientists felt that they knew much more about the world than they are ready to admit today. They once thought the world was operated quite mechanically by a set of laws. But, men like Einstein, the discovery of the atom and the basic nature of matter which is not inert but is energy, changed all those notions until today scientists see the natural world as very dynamic, changeable creative, and not static, mechanical, dead. So, men of great knowledge have been very humble about what they know. They compare their knowledge to the stone tossed in a quiet pool. A wave develops from the point where the stone was tossed and grows larger and larger ever expanding.

So with knowledge! It, too, starts at a small point and ever expands becoming larger and larger. But, as it becomes larger its contact with the outside becomes larger. It becomes ever more aware of the unknown. It knows it knows less than when the circle was smaller and the contact with the unknown was likewise small. It is said men of great knowledge are humble. They can be no other for they keenly feel their inadequacy and cannot honestly be arrogant.

There was a time when education was almost deified and worshipped. It was thought that mass public education would cure all ills. Poverty, disease, war, intolerance, unbelief, all evils of man would be removed once everyone was properly educated. With the most enlightened and educated nations of the world within thirty years entering into two of the most tyrranical, cruel, cunning wars of all history and in which the greatest and the best trained minds matched wits to more effectively destroy each other, the myth that education is a cure-all has been quite effectively quashed.

However, some reactions have been so severe that education has been looked upon almost as basically evil. That is false reasoning, too. It is neither a cure-all or an evil. It can be a curse and it can be a blessing and a boon.

Our attitude to education must not be blind reaction and negativism, nor can it be blind sentimentalism. We must see it for what it is. It is another tool which man can use either as a great blessing or as a great curse. On that, man must decide.

Those of us who are Christian feel that in the absolute standards of Jesus we have a way of judging such things as education for their real worth and value. We are convinced that we can know the proper value and use of education. Thus it becomes of tremendous significance that the Christian be thoroughly informed concerning his faith and these standards. His faith is not one of cold knowledge but of spirit and the very essence of life.

As we resume our studies this year, let us do so with wholesome Christian realism, evaluating, honestly choosing and with an open mind weighing the facts of each case. The world needs men who are positive, who are educated, who are Christian, and who can lead—and they are needed desparately.

Where Hunger is "Natural"

On Thursday the last food we had was a loaf of bread. Our four children each received five slices for the day. My husband went to work with four slices of dry bread, and I worked until eight at night on three slices. In the evening when I came home it was icy. I slipped and fell, hitting my head and had a concussion. During the night I had high fever and dreamed terrible dreams. I saw my children dying of starvation. I saw endless quantities of bread and potatoes, and when I reached after them they slipped away. I saw my husband dying of tuberculosis. I heard our five-year-old daughter weeping from hunger.

In the morning the children stood anxiously around my bed, but said no word about hunger or bread. My husband had told them that there was nothing more and that they should not worry me. And so they acted as if hunger was the most understandable and natural thing in the world. My husband went to work without eating. The children busied themselves alone. I slept, unconscious of hunger.

At noon the bell rang and there was a card saying that up until two o'clock a package could be claimed. We shouted and wept, all of us. Our twelve-year-old boy got possessed of himself first. "I will go at once to Father with the card," he said. Now we have again bread and potatoes. The children laugh again. Gerhard can again be a happy teacher to his youths and I a happy mother to my children.

Indian Dairying

by Menno Diener

(Menno Diener is a member of the MCC India Unit and herewith presents the fourth in the series of articles. At present, Mr. Diener is on loan to the General Conference Mennonite Mission. He is an agricultural specialist and during his three-year term will develop and supervise a model dairy herd. At the present time Mr. Diener is spending his efforts on the construction of a dairy barn. In addition to the dairy program. Mr. Diener is also developing a poultry project for the mission. He spent his childhood days in Wellman, Iowa and some of his C.P.S. time in Relief Training Units.)

India, which has plenty of everything in its season, seems to have a year-long season on a few things and one of them is cattle. They can be found anywhere except in the jungles that man does not inhabit. The smallest village has its herd which is taken out each day to pasture, and large cities like Calcutta have their resident herds that graze the parks and lawns.

There are a number of things that tend to keep the herds in poor condition. The chief of these is the practice of using the largest and best males as oxen for draft animals and the scrubs are left to be the sires of the herd. Possibly second to this is lack of good feed and pasture, especially in the hot weather. Other drawbacks are such things as poor housing, Rinderpest, a disease of the blood that spreads rapidly and kills quickly, cattle ticks, and hoof disease. Though I remember that the missionaries on furlough spoke of the smallness of the cattle, it still surprises me to see an animal smaller than a yearling calf giving milk.

All these faults can, in part, be blamed on the system of caring for the cattle. Each village has a rout (herdsman) who takes the cattle out each morning to find what pasture he can during the day and bring them back for the evening milking. (An interesting sidelight could be inserted here. The Hindi language has no word for twilight, so the Bible translators have called it the "cow-dust time of day" and the Indian mind sees the setting sun through a cloud of dust raised by the herd coming home for the night.) It is also the duty of this herdsman to do the milking and with this there are several very strange superstitions. One is, that it is impossible to get any milk from the cow unless the calf has its share first which usually leaves little or none. Again, if the calf dies, the milk is no longer good and the cow must be dried up. Also, it is a grave injustice to the cow to take more than six seers (twelve pounds) from her in a day. I know a missionary who said that he had several good cows abused and starved until they came within those prescribed limits. Besides the Hindu aversion for killing anything, the superstition is

American Politics as Non-Americans See It

"OIL TESNION GROWS. Want to see the American foreign policy as non-Americans see it? Well, in the last few weeks it has become known and reported in some news circles that the British have shipped 500 fighting planes to Turkey; that the U. S. army has been building airfields in Sicily and Crete and in Athens and Araxes on the Greek mainland and at other points around the eastern Mediterranean (besides the American army airfields known to have been built among American oil holdings in Arabia). HOW WOULD WE BE BEHAVING IF THE RUSSIANS WERE DOING THE SAME IN MEXICO, CUBA AND VENEZUELA? And we say the Russians are suspicious!

"Near East oil was part of the American loot from World War I. . . . In World War II we were not after just a share of the treasure—we went after exclusive domination of the Near East oil with Britain as an assistant in the exploitation of these areas. Oil company agents as officers in navy uniforms, army officers who in civilian life were oil corporation executives . . . roamed about at will through the Near East, presumably on 'government business,' and set the stage for the biggest oil grab in history . . . . While American and British politicians were uttering their pious platitudes about the Atlantic Charter . . . they were taking millions of defense dollars . . . to pay secret bribes to the old feudal tyrants of Arabia in order that they would continue to play the American oil game. . . . Secret and semisecret diplomatic conferences were held in Egypt and in the waters of the eastern Mediterranean. . . . The deal finally got so raw that the French squawked and separate quiet settlements had to be made with the French. . . . The Russians began to bring hidden pressure (and some not so hidden) on Greece and Turkey . . . . and the American people were suddenly stunned by the 'new Truman Doctrine.' These are some of the developments that brought on the Near East crisis, developments which many in the rest of the world know about but which have not been told to the American people.

"We are not saying that this is all bad, but we are saying, by all that is true in history, that it is power politics of the most flagrant warbreeding sort."—From Between The Lines, June 9, 1947.

thoroughly ingrained in these "cowboys" that if one kills a cattle tick, a thousand others will take its place. So these parasites thrive without molestation and the poor cattle become poorer.

To change all this is going to take a long time and it will be a hard job, but it is not impossible. Already, something is being done about it. The government of the past has been interested in the welfare of the poor people and there is hope that the new government will be even more willing. There are experiment stations and agriculture colleges in all parts of India which are very glad to give out help and information to those who are willing to take it. But as it was in America, it will be many years before the farmers will be willing to concede that the college agriculturalist also knows a few things about farming. As this nation practices better all-around methods of living, her civilization will grow. India has a future!

One of the big problems of the German churches is to supply their communicants with Bibles. They are unable to get wood pulp and consequently can not make their own paper. The American Bible Society has undertaken to meet some of this need. They have succeeded in sending more than a million and a half Bibles or parts of Bibles into Germany and sending nearly two million Bibles or parts of Bibles to prisoners of war. In addition they have been able to get some paper into Germany so that they could print their own Bibles. —Gospel Messenger

During 1946, 105,000 people died in Berlin and 23,000 were born. Vital statistics for 1947 promise to show the same trend. The battle of Berlin, the surrender and the beginning of the occupation, the severe winter and the absence of three to four million men in P.O.W. camps are the immediate causes for the decline in population. A longer-term cause is the abnormal preponderance of old people because of the losses of young people in two world wars. (WP)

Occupation authorities have given permission to revive the Oberammergau Passion Play which in years past was internationally famous as a vivid portrayal of the life and death of Jesus. To revive the play has its problems, however. First of all many of the players died during the war. Then, a large number of the players were members of the Nazi party which makes them ineligible. It is interesting to note that the man who played the role of Jesus was a staunch Nazi while the man who played Judas remained consistently anti-Nazi throughout Hitler's regime.

Madras in India is known to have the most rigid caste rules in all India. The breakdown of the caste system in India has moved more rapidly in all other parts of India. However, the Madras Legistature has passed laws to assure the harijas or depressed classes, more equitable treatment. They are to have equal access to hotels, restaurants, public conveyances, etc. In many ways the American race feeling can be compared to Indian caste. It is of significance to note that in America where Christian truth which knows not bond nor freed, Greek nor Jew, has been declared for hundreds of years, has in past years tended toward more racial strife while "heathen" India has become less caste conscious. This situation makes missionary work more difficult.

Protestants in Indonesia have been appealing to the mother church in Holland for aid. Only nine ministers remain in the vast Dutch Indies, one single missionary being left in the huge island of Sumatra. At least fifteen workers are asked to come from Holland at once if the bare minimum of work is to be maintained.

The demand for Bibles and Protestant literature is greater now than ever before in Argentina, it is reported. The reason, apparently, is the activity of the present government which has been clerical and ultra-nationalist.

One-third of the counties in Illinois have voted a dry option prohibiting liquor traffic within their boundaries. The counties in the western part of Virginia are reported to be voting dry in local option tests, also.

Peru was once the most unwilling of South American countries to grant religious liberty. Under a new liberal government, all restrictions on Protestants in the practice and preaching of their faith has been removed. Brazil, likewise granting "full religious liberty" has had some difficulty in small communities such as the town of Pilar where mobs destroyed two Protestant churches.

To Write History of Mennonite C.P.S.

AKRON, PA., September 5—Dr. Melvin Gingerich, formerly of North Newton, Kansas, is doing research work in the MCC Archives at Akron, Pa., for the purpose of writing a history of Mennonite Civilian Public Service, having been appointed for this task by the Mennonite Central Committee in its 1945 annual meeting. Certain partial reports have been published at various times in the past, but none so far has presented a complete account of the CPS experience of the Mennonite Church. Dr. Gingerich is compiling information from CPS camp publications, official correspondence, evaluation questionnaries, and other sources. This book is to be published in 1948.

Many Christmas Bundles Received

Over 12,000 Christmas Bundles have been sent in this year for shipment to needy children overseas. The packing of these overseas gifts is in progress now. A number of volunteer groups from the surrounding communities have been assisting in this work. These bundles will be allocated to the various countries according to the needs which prevail. It is planned that these bundles will be distributed to the children at Christmas time.

A small number of toys for Relief are still being received. This project was designed as a small plus-service to accompany the feeding and clothing of the unfortunate children who have been victims of the war. Since the response to this project has been satisfactory to supply the present needs, we recommend that no more such toys be sent in for relief purposes. We would rather urge that children, young people

Mennonite Relief Organization in Germany

During recent months the German Mennonites have organized to help needy Mennonite families and other needy people in their communities. The French Zone has been divided into twelve areas with a representative in charge of each area. Through this organization they will be responsible for supplying the needs, with food which the Mennonite Central Committee places at their disposal. Their work includes investigation and meeting of needs for people who have written to America, and other places for help. The British and American Zones have also been organized in ways similar to this. It is felt that this will be a very satisfactory way to render a complete and efficient service in meeting the needs of our people in that country.

Rutchman's Leave for Colombia

La Verne and Harriet Rutschman are the newest General Conference missionaries to go to Colombia, South America. Shortly before leaving the United States they wrote the following farewell message:

"For God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ." (II Cor. 4:6)

And with this conviction, yet aware that we are only earthen vessels—the power is of God—we set our faces toward Colombia. We plan to leave Miami September 5 for Medellín where several months will be spent in language school. We thank God for your prayerful interest.

good as these things may be, they do not have the specific value that vaccinations for children have.

We Mennonites, in our witness for love, should especially remember the innocent children, to protect them from disease which may kill them or damage their bodies for life. The vaccinations should be started by five months, firstly, because of the need of early protection, and secondly, because of psychological advantages; that is, the fear from a stick under the skin does not register with a child to any extent when less than one year old.—John R. Schmidt, M. D., formerly doctor to the Mennonites in Paraguay under the M.C.C. and now General Practitioner at Freeman, South Dakota.

REPORT ON CENTRAL CONFERENCE SESSION

by Robert W. Hartzler, Secretary

The forty-ninth annual session of the Central Conference of Mennonites was held at the Normal Community High School, Normal, Illinois, August 8-11. Seven hundred forty-nine persons were registered as having attended the various sessions.

The conference heard reports of various officers, boards and committees, transacted routine business, and adjourned with the definite impression that the work of preaching the gospel of Jesus Christ and the nurturing of Christian growth was moving forward in the communities of our conference. Conference membership, conference contributions to all causes, and conference unity stood at new highs.

Inspirational highlights of the four-day gathering included a program by the Bethel College choir, an address by Dr. P. C. Hiebert, and a closing message by Dr. J. E. Hartzler.

The conference elected officers for the coming years as follows: president, Rev. Harry Yoder; vice-president, Rev. Wm. B. Weaver; secretary, Rev. Robert W. Hartzler; treasurer, O. J. Sommer; and field secretary, Rev. R. L. Hartzler.

BOARD OF PUBLICATION ANNOUNCES NEW RATES

During the sessions of the General Conference at Berne, Indiana, August 21 to 27 the Board of Publication reviewed its total publication program.

Encouraged from every side to undertake the publication of some very attractive new manuscripts which have come from the hands of some of our most capable Mennonite writers, the Board included such projects in its budgets for the Conference period, 1947-1950.

Among these are two books which are almost ready to begin printing: Rev. Lester Hostetler has just prepared a manuscript on the story behind the songs in our Mennonite Hymnary. Over a period of some fifteen or twenty years he has collected information on practically every song that appears in the Mennonite Hymnary—interesting bits of authentic information concerning the author or the composer, which every lover of music will want to have in his own personal library as well as in the church and Sunday school libraries.

Dr. S. F. Pannabecker of the Mennonite Biblical Seminary at Chicago, has prepared a splendid history of the General Conference, which is now being gotten ready in popular style for publication among our people.

In revising the rates of the various publications only modest increases were made, but in the hope that such increases will help to cover the constantly rising costs of printing:

THE MENNONITE, individual subscriptions, domestic, $2.00 per year. Foreign subscriptions, $2.50 per year. 100 per cent subscriptions, $2.00 per year less 10%.

DER BOTE: individual subscriptions $2.00 per year. Foreign subscriptions, $2.50 per year. 100% subscriptions $2.00 per year less 10%.

JUNIOR MESSENGER: individual subscriptions $1.00 per year. Bulk subscriptions, club of more than one copy to the same address, 90c per year.

SUNDAY SCHOOL QUARTERIES were not changed for the time being, no change in price being contemplated until January 1, 1948.

The Board of Publications is extremely grateful for the hearty support which the Conference gave to it's Publications program, is mindful of it's great responsibility to our people, and covets your prayers in all it's various projects.

DR. H. CRAANDIJK TELLS OF DUTCH CONFERENCE

North Newton, Kansas, September 9.—Dr. Herman Craandijk, lawyer, and Secretary of the Algemeene Doopsgezinde Societeit, which is the "General Conference" of the Dutch Mennonites, told about the activities of this organization in an informal address here today.

The Algemeene Doopsgezinde Societeit is an association of the 140 Doopsgezinde (Mennonite) churches in Holland. As such it includes all of the 60,000 Mennonites in that country. Originating in the Amsterdam area around 1811 for the twofold purpose of supporting a seminary and giving financial support to weak churches, the association developed until the recent world war drove all of the churches into active participation in it. In this process it joined in the purposes of the Gemeentedagbeweging, which had sponsored Bible conferences and youth meetings at Elspeet and Schoorl for the revitalization of church life, and also accepted the work of other institutions and boards.

Faced with much new work because of the many activities delegated to it, the Societeit in 1945 asked its chairman to devote his full time to his office. Dr. W. Golterman is now serving in this capacity, while Dr. H. Craandijk serves as secretary of the Societeit. The headquarters of the association are in Amsterdam where a second secretary also devotes full time to the work.

The Societeit now carries on a work of coordination, promotion, and spiritual guidance. Ten years ago the churches were using an assortment of hymn books; now they are united in the use of one conference hymnary. Before the war there were a number of church papers. Now these have all been united into one weekly, which has news supplements for various different areas. This paper with a circulation of 30,000 is sent into every Mennonite home. The churches make themselves responsible for the bill. Although not far as liturgical as many of the American Mennonite churches, the Dutch Mennonite churches are undergoing a development and coordination of their liturgy. The church year is being given an increased emphasis, and catechetical instruction is being promoted. The Societeit also continues the work of the committee, which looks after the welfare of those who have moved to communities where there is no Mennonite congregation. A major task of the Societeit at present is that of caring for the Russian Mennonite refugees in Holland.

The Mennonite Seminary at the University of Amsterdam continues to be one of the major concerns of the Societeit. As students graduate from the Seminary, the Societeit helps to place them in the churches.

There are about 100 seminary trained pastors serving the Mennonite churches in Holland and about ten who have not had seminary. They are not called "pastor" or "minister," but rather "Domine." An increasing number of them are speaking out for nonresistance.

Mr. Craandijk made plain that the increasing cooperation being given to the Algemeene Doopsgezinde Societeit by the various churches is a radical change from the days when each church gloried lavishly in its own autonomy.

Dr. Craandijk is now visiting Mennonite communities in the United States. Upon his arrival from Holland Dr. Craandijk attended the General Conference at Berne, Indiana. To this body he brought official greetings from the Algemeene Doopsgezinde Societeit of Holland. Last year his daughter, Lisbeth, was a student at Bethel College.

Mennonite Student Tour through Europe

by Lloyd L. Ramseyer

The tour through Europe this summer by American Mennonite students was a pioneering venture. Nothing of the sort had ever been attempted by our schools before. In this field, as in some others, Mennonites proved to be among the leaders. The tour is now history and the time for evaluation has come. The Council of Mennonite and Affiliated Colleges is gathering data from the group leaders, group members, relief workers, and European Mennonite leaders as to the success of the venture. The following is an evaluation as seen by one of the leaders.

It is felt that the experiment was very successful, in fact far above anything for which we had dared hope. The young people were fine Christian individuals who cooperated well; played, studied, and worshiped together in harmony; and were alert and eager to learn from their experiences.

The success of an enterprise should be judged by the

The above picture shows the group which took the Mennonite student tour through Europe this past summer. The following list gives the home address and the college under whose auspices the trip was made. All Mennonite colleges were represented, plus two Brethren in Christ schools, plus the Mennonite Bible School. Not all those in the tour were actually students, for some were alumni of a few years ago. Miss Messner is a faculty member of Hesston College. Dr. L. L. Ramseyer, President of Bluffton College, was the leader of the tour. Those on the picture left to right are: STANDING, Burt Russel, Portland, Oregon, Mennonite Bible School; Mrs. Burt Russell (same as foregoing); Grace French, Wheeler Michigan, Messiah Bible College; Lois Gunden (leader) Goshen, Indiana, Goshen College; Daniel Miller, Akron, Pa., Goshen College; O'ray Graber, Marion, South Dakota, Freeman Junior College; Faire Stucky, Hutchinson, Kansas, Bethel College; Mabel Brunk Goshen, Indiana, Goshen College; Mary K. Nafziger, Hopedale, Illinois, Goshen College; Irvin F. Wall Falls City, Oregon, Tabor College; Warren Sherman, Upland, California, Beulah College; KNEELING, Marion Messner, Strasburg, Pa., Hesston College; Melva Goering, Moundridge, Kanaas, Bethel College; Mrs. Maynard Shelly, Hopedale, Illinois, Bluffton College; Helen Tieszen, Marion, South Dakota, Freeman College; Lois H. Lohrentz, McPherson, Kansas, Bethel College; Maynard Shelly, Hopedale, Illinois, Bluffton College; Margie M. Wiebe, Aberdeen, Idaho, Bethel College; Elmer Sawatzky, Hillsboro, Kansas, Tabor College; Lloyd L. Ramseyer (leader), Bluffton, Ohio, Bluffton College; SEATED, Helen Good, Brentwood, Maryland, Eastern Mennonite; Esther Bohn, Pandora, Ohio, Bluffton College; Betty Jane Regier, Newton, Kansas, Bethel College; Marilyn Preheim, Freeman, South Dakota, Bethel College; Ronald Rich, Washington, Illinois, Bluffton College; Dorothy Myers, Greencastle, Pa., Messiah Bible College; Alice Liechty, Albany, Oregon, Goshen College; Elaine Sommers, Kokomo, Indiana, Goshen College; Mrs. Elmer Sawatzky, Hillsboro, Kansas, Tabor College.

degree to which objectives were attained. These objectives were of several types. Each will be discussed briefly.

CULTURAL: In each country an effort was made to visit the important historical and cultural centers. In Germany this was impossible, but within limits of time it was done in England, France, Belgium, The Netherlands, and Switzerland. There is little doubt that each member of the group is now better informed and more keenly interested in these cultural aspects of European civilization. History, art, and literature with European implications will henceforth be more meaningful. Another aspect of culture is the way of life of the ordinary citizen. It was our purpose to gain a sympathetic rather than a critical knowledge of European life. Time limited the possibilities. Students were continuously cautioned not to arrive at conclusions too hastily. We feel that they came away impressed by the common qualities which they found in men everywhere and with a deep sympathy for the many perplexing problems which European civilization must face.

MENNONITE HISTORY AND CULTURE: The beginnings of Mennonitism were studied, through lectures and study and by visiting places important in our history. Witmarsum, birthplace of Menno Simons, was visited, as well as the nearby village of Pingum, where he held a charge while still a Catholic. In Antwerp we visited dungeons in which Mennonites had been imprisoned and tortured for their faith, and the hymn "Faith of Our Fathers" took on new significance as we wondered whether our faith would stand the tests which theirs endured. In Switzerland we saw the church in which Conrad Grebel debated with Zwingli and the river in which Felix Manz died a martyr to his faith. We visited Mennonites in The Netherlands, Alsace, Switzerland, and Germany, and in all but Germany lived with them in their homes.

KNOWLEDGE OF RELIEF ACTIVITIES AND NEEDS: MCC relief centers and activities were always of great interest to the group. Reconstruction units, children's homes, and feeding centers were visited. The group was especially impressed with needs in Germany. The expression was frequently made, "We have seen pictures of conditions here, we have read about it, we have heard speakers tell about it, but one cannot get the real feeling of the great need which exists without seeing it." We were impressed by the type of Christian young people sent out by the MCC for this work, and with the concern which they have for the spiritual as well as the physical needs of the people.

EFFECTS OF WAR: We were impressed by the foolishnes of war as a way of settling differences. We saw evidences of the vast cost of preparedness in the way of bunkers, tank traps, and discarded war equipment. We saw the destruction of homes and factories. We saw peoples demoralized, with little but unpleasant memories behind them and little hope in front of them. We met some fine people who had been our enemies and whom, had we been in the army, it would have been our duty to destroy. These things and others made war seem to us an absurd activity for civilized people, and inconsistent for those who claim to be followers of the Prince of Peace.

CHRISTIAN FAITH: We were impressed by the bond of fellowship which binds all believers together, no matter of what race or nationality. It was emphasized that we all meet as one beneath the cross of Christ. We were impressed, too, by the need for a deep and vital faith, a warm faith which stirs to great activity and motivates sacrifice. When Christianity becomes purely or chiefly humanitarian or intellectual it ceases to be vital. We were impressed, too, by the need for an active program of Christian education for youth if that faith is to remain active and vital.

The experiences of the summer should be of lasting benefit to those in the group. It is our prayer that our example may have been of such a character as to bring honor to His name.

German People Face Grim Winter

AKRON, PA., September 12.—In a letter dated August 27, Atlee Beechy writes, "During my recent trip through Germany I made it a point to ask a number of people about the current harvest. The general answer was that the harvest was from poor to fair only. This limited harvest is due to some measure to dry weather we have been having and also to the fact that adequate fertilizer was not available. The pinch will probably come next winter and spring with a great shortage of flour and potatoes. In addition, most of the folks that I have talked to stated that they feared next winter would be even worse than any winter they have had.

"The economic life of the people in Germany and Austria is of course related to the larger problem of the nature and degree of the economic recovery permitted by the occupying military powers. This, as you are well aware, is currently being discussed by the governments, but at this late date even with favorable consideration it would be late and there would be little that could be expected in terms of assistance for this coming winter. The prospects therefore, are pretty grim and a high percentage of the German people are very despondent and discouraged.

"I am very sure that we can use effectively and to a good advantage in the meeting of real human

by J. N. Smucker

(The following is a synopsis of the sermon given by the President, Rev. J. N. Smucker, at the recent session of the General Conference. The sermon was based on Heb. 12:1, 2.)

THE NEED OF A UNIFYING POWER

Coming from many different communities and with varied opinions, we need to focus toward one common goal, that we may be welded into one Christian fellowship and move forward together. Such a unifying power is expressed in Hebrews 12:1,2, "Wherefore, seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith."

Looking unto Jesus, — let Him be that unifying power that we may be found in the unity of the faith. There will be difficulties and problems,—"We see not yet all things put under Him, but we see Jesus." He is the one solution and the one power we all need. "Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world."

LOOKING UNTO JESUS, — SURROUNDED BY MANY WITNESSES

Men of God, who have borne faithful witness unto Him, are now our invisible witnesses, watching to see how faithful we will be.

Our forefathers, who braved persecution and death for His cause, are also our silent witnesses to see if we will be true to Him.

Our own churches are looking to us and expecting some guidance in these difficult times. Multitudes yet unborn may also be thought of as witnesses, and in the future may be influenced to the extent that we here have been "looking unto Jesus."

Surrounded by so great a cloud of witnesses, we are standing on holy ground, and need to keep "looking unto Jesus" that we do not fail in this high hour of opportunity.

LOOKING UNTO JESUS, WE MUST LAY ASIDE EVERY WEIGHT AND SIN

Whatever weights that may hinder us must be laid aside, our own personal prejudices, desire for personal recognition, unnecessary criticisms,—whatever hinders us in the service of our Master, should be laid aside. Looking unto Jesus, these weights become evident, and with His help must quickly be discarded.

But there is also sin that drags us down. The sin of unbelief; of selfishness, of lack of love. Sin shuts out our view of Christ. May we be pure in heart that we may see God. His forgiveness can make us whole that we may be found faithfully "looking unto Jesus."

LOOKING UNTO JESUS, AND BEING SURE OF THE RIGHT COURSE

There is a course staked out for us by God Himself. He has a definite path for us to pursue. He has a work for us to accomplish. By looking unto Jesus constantly He will keep us on the right path. We cannot take a wrong path and hope to come to the right end. He Himself is the Way, and we must never lose sight of Him.

LOOKING UNTO JESUS, WE CAN MOVE AHEAD WITH PATIENCE

Conscious of surrounding witnesses; having laid aside all weights and sin; having made sure we are on the right path, let us now run with patience the race set before us. We must move ahead, patiently and persistently. When Israel hesitated to advance, God called to Moses, "Tell the people that they go forward." How great is the need of the Gospel of Christ in the world! We must not grow weary in well-doing, even though there are many adversaries. Looking unto Jesus, and with the light of His countenance and His strength to sustain us, we must advance, "with patience."

LOOKING UNTO JESUS: IN HIM ONLY CAN ANYTHING WORTHY BE ACCOMPLISHED

He must be the author and finisher of all our work; the pioneer and perfecter of our faith; the "A" and "Z" of all that we do here. Looking unto Jesus, the divine Son of God who made atonement on the Cross for the sins of the world, we must accept His love and forgiveness, His wisdom and power and guidance. In all our work and plans we must keep "looking unto Jesus" and have Him take this Conference into His hands and bless it to His holy use. Looking unto Jesus, we move forward in Him.

Dedicate Colombian Mission Work

by Mary Becker

On Ascension Day, May 15, the new work of the General Conference Mennonite Mission in Colombia was formally dedicated to the Lord in a special service of thanksgiving and dedication. In the morning a special Ascension Day service was held with the Reverend T. Bancroft Reifsnyder, Presbyterian missionary from Bogota, bringing the message. The afternoon service had been planned as a special dedication service, and the Reverend Gustavo A. Villa L., national pastor of the Presbyterian church in Girardot, preached the sermon.

Letters of invitation had been sent to the evangelical groups close enough that they could come and go in one day. It rejoiced our hearts to know beforehand of the great interest that was manifested by the national evangelicals of Girardot and Bogota and that many were planning to come. The group from Girardot arrived shortly after 9:00 A. M., having come up on the earliest train. There were twenty-seven of them; and as they came up the long driveway, they sang one chorus after the other. This, together with the beautiful picture they made—the girls in their vari-colored dresses and a number of them carrying huge bouquets of white lilies which they brought for the occasion, to say nothing of the smiling faces—set the key-note for the day. Two carloads from the English congregation in Bogota arrived later in the morning. And the only note of sadness during the day was that the many (approximately seventy from the Spanish congregation in Bogota, who had so enthusiastically gotten up very early to catch the 7:00 A. M. train out of the city, were delayed five and one-half hours because of a derailment on the track. Although we were happy that between fifty and sixty of them still came after all the services were over and only half an hour before they again had to leave to catch the last train back to Bogota, we regretted this incident very much. Since, however, a child of God believes that "All things work together for good" we trust that a purpose of the Lord was fulfilled in this also.

Both of the services were rich in blessing. The dedication was impressive and meaningful as the work was consecrated to the Lord, whose it is, and the workers rededicated themselves to the task of working for the extension of His Kingdom in Colombia. It is their prayer that they may be used of the Lord to lead all the children they now have and those they will receive into the home in the future to the Lord Jesus Christ and make of them strong pillars in His Church, as well as to bring many others to the saving knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ.

My Impressions of the Conference:

Rev. H. N. Harder, Pastor, First Church, Aberdeen Idaho, and Member of Business Committee of General Conference:

The task God gave us to do as separate churches and as a conference is not a mean one. I am impressed with the greatness of the field: it stretches, by now, over many lands. Each conference session seems to open new areas of service and of witnessing: God is exalted, Christ is being preached, souls are being saved, and the Word of God is being taught. Servants of God whom I had seen active on the conference floor, in committees, and in boards at other times, I now greatly missed. But the Lord has raised up others, who have within themselves great possibilities of genuine and Christian leadership, to carry on. The bond of fellowship and unity of purpose was evident at the prayer meetings in the mornings and the business sessions during the day. I personally appreciated the high spiritual level maintained at all the sessions by our presiding chairman. God bless our conference and give us all grace, "looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith."

Rev. E. A. Albrecht, Pastor of the Bethel Mennonite Church, Fortuna, Missouri:

In thinking of the General Conference session held this year, one of the first things that comes to mind was the friendliness and hospitality of the people of the Berne community. When we left we could truthfully say, "It has been good to be here."

When I first saw the printed program, my first thought was that it would be dry and uninteresting with a lot of routine reports. I was very much mistaken, for it proved to be one of the most interesting and challenging sessions that I have attended. Perhaps others too felt that interest, because many faithfully attended the sessions even though some of them were long and the weather was too warm for comfort.

I believe that most delegates will come home and give a very favorable report of our conference work. One of the main impressions was of continued growth and increase since the last session in 1945. Evidence of physical and spiritual growth is seen in the addition of forty-two churches into the fellowship of the General Conference. Twenty of these belong to the Central Conference, which recently became a part of the General Conference. Other important aspects of this growth are seen in the establishing of our Seminary and Bible School, the expansion of our missionary endeavors, the magnitude of our relief program, our Mutual Aid program, the adoption of a Minister's Pension Plan, and the formation of a men's organization as an auxilliary of the General Conference. Evidence of spiritual growth was manifested in the spirit of unity and love in which the Conference work has been and is being carried out.

We need to thank God for His help and guidance, and may we not glory in ourselves, but give Him the glory and say as we are commanded in Luke 17:10, "We are unprofitable servants; we have done that which was our duty to do."

Rev. I. I. Friesen, Pastor of Bethel Mission Church, Winnipeg, Manitoba, teacher in Canadian Bible College, and member of the Board of Education:

My impressions of the Conference were at least fivefold:

1. First there was the impression that the Conference was a growing and expanding organization. This expansion and growth were especially evident in the field of missions and relief. The fact that forty-two new churches were added to the Conference at this session also helped to create this impression.
2. Secondly there was the impression that the Conference realized the need of prayer and dependence on God in carrying out its large program. The fact that the morning prayer meetings were so well attended and also the special place given to prayer during the regular sessions bore out this point.
3. Thirdly there was the impression that the Conference was emphasizing a Christ-centered program. "Looking unto Jesus," seemed to be the motto of the Conference from the president's address on to the end of the meetings. In doing relief work it was not enough just to distribute goods to the poor. It must be done in such a way as to point them to Christ.
4. There was the impression that the Conference was a united Conference. Minor differences of opinion may have occurred, but on the whole there was a substantial unity of conviction in fundamental matters
5. Finally there was the impression of a great task still to be done. We were thankful for what had been done, but there remained the impression that in many cases we had just begun, and that a great challenge to continue the work in the future had been presented to us.

Willard Claassen, Pastor of the Salem Church, Freeman, South Dakota; member of Doctrine and Conduct Committee and of the Seminary Board, and also an editor of the adult S. S. quarterly:

Our conference is growing. There was a noticeable growth in the number of delegates and guests who attended the conference, so that it has now become a sizeable undertaking to entertain a General Conference session! Our gracious hosts at Berne did a magnificent job of entertaining us, in spite of the hot, humid weather. Surely no one failed to notice and appreciate the high quality of music provided by the host church. During the past two years there has also been a marked numerical growth of the Conference. Through affiliation with the Central Conference and the reception of twenty new congregations, in addition to normal growth, the total membership of the Conference has been stepped up to approximately 45,000. There are many indications that our Conference is growing up too. The efficient work of the Executive Secretary of the Conference was much in evidence. We wonder how we could get along without a Headquarters Office in Newton. Perhaps, the neatly printed ballot books used at the Conference this year were a small symbol of our smoother functioning organization. The executive secretaries of other boards have also helped to enlarge and make more effective their work.

More impressive and encouraging still, was the spirit of the Confernce. The world-wide scope of the Conference was evidenced by the presence of delegates and guests from India, Holland, Brazil, and Paraguay. In addition to these several brethren flew from Europe for the conference. Like the recurring theme in a great symphony, now heard in the brass section then in the string section, was a recurring evangelical note in the Conference. To this writer it was an inspiring and reasurring note. The spiritual opportunities and responsibilies of the Conference are truly greater than ever before. The Spirit of unity and brotherhood which prevailed under the able leadership of our chairman, and for which we thank our Lord Jesus Christ, was a tonic to our souls. Debate on the floor often impressed this writer with how much we need each other and how we all ought to seek to do the will of God. Although we did sometimes waste time through debate, more often we gained much light through it. May God bless and guide our Conference, its officers and its work in the next trienium!

need, all of the material support which our folks at home are led to give."

Continued Need for Relief Workers

There is a continuing need for mature consecrated relief workers to replace returning personnel. At the present time there is a need for four men in the general relief worker category for the India-Java area. In China also there is need for several more men with general experience and training as well as a few mechanics, a builder, an agriculture expert, one or two with experience or training in cooperatives and several nurses.

Individuals who feel qualified and called to serve in any of these areas should write to the Director of Relief, Akron, Pennsylvania.

Dutch Mennonite Youth Serves in Relief

Johan van den Berg, a young Dutch Mennonite, who helped in the MCC relief distribution program in Holland, has now been accepted for similar service under the MCC in Austria. He will serve on the same terms as relief worker personnel from the United States or Canada. The work to which Johan is assigned consists of clothing distribution.

A SUNDAY with RUSSIAN MENNONITE REFUGEES

by P. S. GOERTZ

The ten young people in the middle and upper rows are young Russian Mennonite refugees, who were baptized at Roverestein, near Amsterdam, on August 3, 1947. They are: (Back row left to right) Hans Bergen, Hans Redekopp, Gerh. Neufeld, Hans Neuman; (Middle row) Maria Peters, Tina Dyck, Tina Redekop, Justina Neufeld, Maria Redekop and Katie Duerks. Shown in the lower row are: Rev. John Wichert, Miss Evangeline Matthies (The superviser), and P. S. Goertz.

Roverestein is the name given to an estate of a Dutch family now used as the home of 104 Mennonite refugees in Holland awaiting the day when they can start life over again on the American Continent. The estate covers some forty acres of woodland in the midst of which stands a big building now housing all the refugees still left after a number have departed from Holland to Paraguay and Canada. This building, too big for the owners now that their children are no longer with them, houses the whole group. Here they sleep, eat, worship, work, play, conduct a school for children, and carry on such other functions as are essential to keep body and soul as nearly in a normal condition as possible.

A brief survey of the group soon reveals that they have gone through harrassing experiences. A few families are intact, but most of them mourn the loss of someone that was left behind somewhere in the flight or taken into custody long ago. Some have for ten years been hoping in vain for a word from them or about them. Children are without father, or mother, women without their husbands, mothers without their daughters or sons. One could not imagine that such cruelties could befall mankind in a twentieth century civilized world.

To these people the Mennonite Central Committee has been ministering in one way or another. Located about thirty miles from Amsterdam, a center through which a good many workers from America go, Roverestein was not passed by. More particularly was this group served by two Canadian brethren, who themselves came from Russia since 1920. They were Rev. H. H. Janzen from Winnipeg and Rev. and Mrs. John Wichert from Vineland, Ontario. These two brethren spent a comparatively longer period in a spiritual ministry among them. Rev. Mr. Wichert had also given catechism instruction to a group of the younger men and women. Having grown up in Russia during the days when the churches were closed and all religious instruction was forbidden, one can imagine how little Biblical knowledge had been imparted. One finds them eager to hear the gospel and to know the way of life.

Rev. and Mrs. John Wichert arrived for their second visit on July 28. My good wife and I reached Roverestein on August 1. By this time eight young people, more or less mature in age, had applied for baptism. These all made a public confession of their faith before the whole group of baptized members. While the camp is made up of members from various bodies of Mennonites one sensed little distinction on that account. When the heat of persecution does its work such minor distinctions seem to disappear almost to a vanishing point. No doubt, these individuals, when once they get to the new world, will join an organized church belonging to a distinctive Mennonite fellowship, but here no serious issue seemed to be made of it. Everybody shared in the examination of the candidates for baptism and all rejoiced in what had taken place in the lives of these young people. Another such confession meeting was held the next night when two more presented themselves before the whole group, the Universal Mennonite Church. The testimonies were touching and edifying. I wished more than once that all our fellow-Christians at home might hear what we were hearing.

The next day, Sunday, was set apart for baptism and communion. Everybody looked forward to it. All day

Dr. P. S. Goertz, on leave of absence from his duties as dean and professor of philosophy and religion at Bethel College, and Mrs. Goertz are serving in Europe under the Mennonite Central Committee. Dean Goertz writes, "We arrived here in Copenhagen on the evening of the 28th of August. Since we arrived in Holland on the 22nd of July we have been over a good deal of territory. Twice we have gone through Germany from north to south by going to Basel from Amsterdam. Once we went through northern Germany from west to east by going from Holland to Denmark. What one sees is simply beyond description. Not even pictures gives you the atmosphere that you get when you see the people within the setting."

Saturday there was much activity in order that the whole camp inside and outside should bear true marks of festivity. The best available clothes were secured for the members to be baptized and flowers were brought in to decorate the hall where the service was to take place. On Sunday morning Brother Wichert and I had a special session with the converts. It was my duty to preach the sermon. I had chosen as text Gal. 6:17, "Henceforth let no man trouble me for I bear branded on my body the marks of Jesus Christ." Brother Wichert performed the baptismal ceremony. It was a beautiful service and a memorable day. Without question the day will linger in the minds of the refugee group as an oasis in their lives.

At 2:30 in the afternoon the communion service followed. Mr. Wichert conducted the service and the Lord's Supper, while I preached the sermon. Again one was so deeply impressed by the significance of that service. Here different Mennonite groups were present and took part. Here they came from different parts of the world. Some were there from Siberia, Russia, Holland, United States and Canada. "There shall be one fold and one shepherd." It was truly an inspiration to behold what was taking place. There can be lasting joy in the midst of the deepest sorrow.

After this eventful day the Wicherts and I stayed on for three more days of public services and spiritual counselling, while Mrs. Goertz went back to Amsterdam to serve as hostess of the M.C.C. Center while the director and his wife were on a vacation. Since then we have gone back to Roverestein once more to serve them further in the evening and also on Sunday.

Deep gratitude is constantly being expressed by these people for what their fellow Christians in the United States and Canada have done and are doing for them in their distress. The day for letting up on our services to them has not yet come. While the nature of relief and the center of need may take on a little different form, people in Europe still need our help and support. "Let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not." Gal. 6:9.

College and Seminary Notes

SEMINARY NEWS

"And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God and are the called according to his purpose." Roman 8:28

Only in the great fact of God's providence, can the Seminary face the future without its great leader, the late Abraham Warkentin. As far as the students and faculty are concerned, there is to be no change in the spiritual vision which he gave the school. At a meeting of students, faculty and friends on Thursday, September 11, the group adopted an eloquent statement affirming faith in the permanent validity of the vision which he gave the school: Christ-centered, Biblical, prayerful, warm brotherhood fellowship, evangelistic, missionary and service-minded. In other words, a school worthy of the Mennonite Church.

The enrollment is eighteen of which two are Bible school students. This is slightly less than last year, but more are expected during the subsequent two quarters of school work.

A farewell gift was presented to Leo Lorenze on September 11 as he entrained Akron preparatory to leaving for Holland. His loving attitude toward the differences between American and Dutch Mennonites, his communication of faith in the many common convictions, his unfailing interest in every aspect of our church life in the States and his fine scholarly background left an unforgettable deposit of goodwill and Christian love at this place where he came as the first foreign student. He returns to the Mennonite Theological Seminary in Amsterdam.

Dr. H. Craandijk of the Allgemeene Doopsgezinde Societeit speaks to the seminary September 16. President L. L. Ramseyer opens the Vesper series Sunday September 21 at 3:00 p. m. here at 4614 Woodlawn Avenue.

At the conclusion of Don. E. Smucker's meetings at the Salem churches of Freeman, South Dakota, a collection for the seminary brought almost $1000!

BLUFFTON COLLEGE

By noon Saturday, September 13, the enrollment had reached a total of 289. On the equivalent date last year the total was 233. There are 106 in the freshman class and 103 sophomores. Dr. Hylkema from Amsterdam visited the college Monday, September 15, and spoke in chapel. Dr. Craandijk, also of Amsterdam, will visit Bluffton community and the college September 20-22. The all college "Mixer" was held in the gymnasium Friday evening, September 12. The evening was spent in getting acquainted. Dr. Ramseyer spoke on his experiences with the student tour in Europe this past summer. This social event is sponsored by the Y.M. and Y.W.C.A. On Sunday evening, September 14, a candle light service was held in the chapel as the final event on the induction program for freshman and new students.

BETHEL COLLEGE

The Bethel College Church held its annual reception for the students on Sunday evening, September 14, in the Student Union Room, with Eldon Graber as chairman in a program of music and getting-acquainted games. Andrew Douglass and Rev. Hostetler addressed the group in behalf of the church and David Eigner (Westport, Connecticut) responded for the students. Student enrollment, still incomplete, has reached 421 at the beginning of the second week. The teaching staff has been enlarged to forty by the addition of seven new members: J. Lloyd Spaulding, economics; Ruth K. Baughman and Frances Becker, Commerce; James W. Bixel, piano; Daniel J. Ewy, mathematics; Gertrude Hohmann, voice; and Ellen Waltner, speech and dramatics. New on the general staff are: E. L. Harms in the Public Relations Department: John F. Schmidt, research assistant in the historical library; Louise Duerksen, dietitian; Dorothy Wedel Kaufman, secretary to the Dean; Kathryn Bachman, clerk, Ella Duerksen, cook; and Galen Koehn, whose duties as chief engineer begin on October 15.

In Order to Go Forward

"I therefore, press forward . . . . in order that I may attain."

A new bookstore.—Operated jointly with the Central Conference, will soon pay for itself; but right now it requires capital to begin and stock our store. Our Rosthern Book Store is now completing its own building. These two ventures will require, this year	7,000.00
A HANDBOOK FOR OUR HYMNARY.—Telling all about the story behind the songs in our MENNONITE HYMNARY: This book will sell, but right now it will require cash to get it before our people. "Sing ye praises with understanding" (Ps. 47:7). This will require, this year	2,000.00
To assist DER BOTE in the large task which it has undertaken.—Brothers in this joint undertaking, we want to do our part to make it possible to serve thousands of refugees in South America and Europe through our German publications. This venture will require, this year	1,020,00
An effective ministry requires new forms adaptable to new needs.—THE MINISTER'S HANDBOOK will soon be ready for the press. Will we be able to finance it? It will require this year	1,000.00
Our children must somehow be informed how the Gospel found expression in the story of our people.—"That they may teach their children" (Deut. 4:10). Our bookstores.—Our bookstores at Bloomington and Rosthern will, naturally, take a little time to get under way; but by the end of the year they will already be producing more than their own cost. Sales from our HANDBOOK TO THE MENNONITE HYMNARY will not begin this year. No income can be expected this first year from the Pannabecker book, the children's history, children's songbook, nor the MINISTER'S HANDBOOK. Like children that need to be fed while they are growing up but who will later produce abundantly, these projects will earn in future years. —Rev. C. E. Rediger, Secretary-Treasurer of the Congo Inland Mission, recently visited Mennonite churches at Sterling, Moundridge, Meade and Inman, Kansas. On September 14 he spoke at the mission festival of the Bethel Church Inman.

—Rev. Albert Gaeddert, Pastor of the Hoffnungsau Church, Inman, Kansas, left September 11 for Chicago where he was to attend a meeting of the M.C.C. Peace Section on September 12. Rev. Gaeddert is Vice-Chairman of the M.C.C. Peace Section, Secretary of the Peace Committee of the General Conference, and Chairman of the Peace Committee of the Western District Conference.

—Salem Church, Freeman, South Dakota: Rev. Donovan Smucker concluded an eventful week of meetings here on September 7. Both the Salem and Salem-Zion churches participated in them. Since dried fruit has been requested for relief, the Mission Society is asking its members to dry apples for this purpose. Men of the church are helping tear down a building at the Sioux Falls Air Base. This lumber will be used in the new Freeman Junior College building, in which the General Conference may be held. MENNONITE LAYMEN HOLD ANNUAL BIBLE CONFERENCE

Dr. Robert R. Fritsch, Allentown, and Rev. Samuel T. Moyer, missionary to India, were speakers at the Annual Labor Day Bible Conference held at Camp Men-O-Lan August 30 to September 1. The meetings which were sponsored by the Brotherhood and the Women's organizations of the Eastern District Conference, centered on the theme, "The Faith and Walk of Believers," Eph. 2:8; 4:1.

Norman K. Berky, Bally, served as general chairman, while local laymen presiding at the various sessions were Jacob R. Fretz, Lansdale; Alvin Mumbauer, Quakertown; Arthur Weiss, Philadelphia; Robert M. Landis, Quakertown; John Fretz, North Hills; and Mrs. Howard G. Nyce, Allentown. Mrs. Samuel T. Moyer addressed the youth rally on Saturday evening, and Rev. Cornelius Wall, Mt. Lake, Minnesota spoke at the mass meeting on Sunday evening. His subject was "Let the Church Be the Church."

Speaking on the "Epistle to the Ephesians," Dr. Fritsch urged those present to obtain study and reference books as an aid to Bible study in the home. In his scholarly way he outlined this New Testament book in a simple way so that all could appreciate and understand it's doctrinal and practical truths.

"The Epistle teaches us that God, the Father, has chosen us; Christ, the Son, has redeemed us and the Holy Spirit has sealed us. Paul did not choose Christ, but Christ chose Paul and that for a definite purpose, as indeed he has chosen every one of us for some definite purpose. Further emphasis was laid on the necessity of suffering as a Church and defining the call of a Christian as high, holy and heavenly."

Rev. Moyer's first message entitled, "Mountains of Matthew" covered (1) Temptation, (2) Learning (3) Transfirguration, (4) Intercession and Suffering (Gethsemane — Calvary) (5) Ascension. "To climb takes much effort; mountain tops are lonely places, but those who have ascended know the effort so well rewarded."

"God Searching for His Man" was the second subject in which the speaker emphasized by blackboard outline and many illustrations, that God Himself searches for man, whereas pagans search for God. Noah, Abraham, Jacob, Joseph and Moses were cited as examples. In the third lecture, Rev Moyer divided the Book of Exodus for study in a very interesting way in order to show how God taught His people the meaning of "Jehovah."

Other like interesting subjects were: "Going Places" Luke 24, and "Psalm 1 — Not So!" a delightful story of this familar scripture passage. Rev. Moyer has a happy faculty of saying a great deal in a few well-chosen words, and of probing any subject to great depths, so that many of those present went away with much food for thought and meditation. Both Rev. and Mrs. Moyers' presence meant a great deal throughout the Conference.

Rev. Walter Dick, Pastor of Second Church, Philadelphia, served as music director, and Eli R. Fretz and James Gerhart acted as camp directors. Other features were a complete program for children present. It consisted of memory work, missionary instruction, music, handwork and recreation. Mrs. Norman Berky and Miss Katherine Niswander did a splendid piece of work as directors. The Brotherhood Men's Chorus sang three numbers on Sunday evening at the mass meeting. A special offering suggested by Dr. Fritsch as a fund for improving the Camp facilities amounted to $410.

THE WORK AT ROARING SPRINGS, PA.

The first week of this past December was my initial introduction to the work here. The Home Missions Committee of the Eastern District Conference sent me here to hold a week's meetings, to look over the field as to its possibilities, and to report back to the committee. With the consent of the congregation, the committee appointed me as pastor of the church. I have been preaching here since that time, having moved here late in January, and into the parsonage a few weeks ago.

The work here over the past years had dwindled considerably, but staged a comeback about two years ago due to the efforts of a few interested members. This increase was largely among grade school children. During the summer months the attendance among the children has been a bit below that of the spring months, but the adult attendance has been increasing slowly. There are many adults and children in the town who do not attend Sunday school or church services anywhere. These we hope to reach.

In our mid-week prayer meeting, we have been praying for a real revival among us, and that the real causes of the falling off in the work might be removed. The town needs a really consistent Bible testimony, and we are praying that we might truly help to meet this need through our Sunday school, young people's fellowship, preaching services, Bible study, and visitation work. Remember the work here in your prayers.—David E. Miller, Roaring Springs, Pa.

GIFT AND FELLOWSHIP DAY, A JOYOUS EVENT

Newton, Kansas: The Annual Bethel Deaconess Hospital and Bethel Home for Aged Gift and Fellowship Day, held September 12, was a happy event with ideal weather, excellent programs, and good fellowship.

The address of the afternoon was given by Dr. R. C. Kauffman, Professor of Psychology at Bethel College, who spoke on "Measuring a Community by Its Institutions." Pointing out that it has been said that "You can tell a man by the company he keeps," "by the things he laughs at," "by the things that annoy him," etc., Dr. Kauffman raised the question as to whether there is any such standard that can be applied to the community. If there is, it was suggested that this standard be found in the statement: You can tell a community by the institutions it maintains. In its instituions are represented the positive, out-going and effective concerns of a community for the welfare of its people. More specifically, institutions were held to be significant aspects of community life for the following five reasons: 1. They represent a cooperative effort. It takes a majority, or near-majority, of interested individuals in a community to build and maintain institutions. 2. They represent a public and disinterested type of charity. Hindu and Moslem society were observed to have considerable private charity, but few philanthropic institutions. "You can do a lot of good in this world if you don't care who gets the credit." 3. In a world of long-range, impersonal and rationally-planned evil, Christian institutions represent long-range and rationally-planned forces for the good. They represent the capacity of a people to respond to an abstract ideal. 4. They provide the individuals of a community with an opportunity to repay a debt to society which all of us accrue in the very process of growing up. 5. They are tangible confirmations of our sincerity in praying, "Thy kingdom come."

After the afternoon program the ladies of the auxiliaries served a luncheon and conducted bazaar, food, and greeting card sales for the benefit of the institutions.

The evening program featured a concert by the Newton Community Chorus and a short address by Rev. Ehly of the Christian Church. Rev. Ehly spoke of sharing not only the blessings but also the sorrows of life and how much more meaningful and enjoyable life can be when this is done.

Those of the Bethel institutions express their appreciation for the interest shown in the work, for the many financial gifts, and for the untiring efforts of the auxiliaries.

Hold First Northern District Retreat

by Elsie Epp, Henderson, Nebraska

The young people of the Northern District Conference sponsored their first outdoor retreat August 6 to 10. Fifty to sixty young people from Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota and Nebraska enjoyed their experience at the camp grounds on the shores of Lake Crystal, Iowa.

Retreat instructors were Rev. Erland Waltner from Mountain Lake, Minnesota, Rev. Willard Claassen from Freeman, South Dakota, Rev. Walter Gering from Moundridge, Kansas, and Rev. George Dick from Bloomfield, Montana. Rev. Jacob T. Friesen from Beatrice, Nebraska served as camp director. Mr. Hugh Hostetler of North Newton, Kansas, as recreational director and Miss Sarah Loewen R. N. as camp nurse.

One day started with an early morning dip in the lake at six o'clock, morning devotions at 6:50 and breakfast at seven. From 8:00 to 8:15 was the time for cabin clean up which generally proved to be quite a necessity. At 8:30 we were all wending our way to the chapel, located at the farthest corner of the camp, for the forenoon classes. Rev. Waltner taught a class on "Highlights of First John", Rev. Claassen "Studies in our Basic Mennonite Principles", and Rev. Gering "Young People in the Service of the Church", challenging youth with the question "Am I willing to serve, at a price, anywhere?" A devotional chapel period and song period completed the forenoon program.

Following the "horizontal rest" at noon the retreaters gathered in the chapel for the music hour under the direction of Rev. Friesen. The remainder of the afternoon was devoted to sports, such as, kitten ball, volley ball, horse shoe, swimming and boating in charge of Hugh Hostetler. From 7:00 to 7:45 at night everyone enjoyed group games also in charge of the recreational director.

Each evening at about eight, just as the sun cast it's last rays across the water, we gathered at the lake for a vesper service. This was probably the most impressive service of the day since we gathered in the quietness of the beautiful evening for singing and meditation. In this spirit of worship and reverence we quietly walked to the chapel where Rev. Dick gave very challenging messages on "The Mission of the Church." The gong of the bell at 9:45 called the retreaters to their respective cabins for private devotions and at 10:45 the last signal for lights out was sounded.

The value of a retreat such as this can not be expressed in words. The gain derived from the experience will be revealed on through the lives of those who attended. It is with greatest anticipation that we look forward to another retreat next year.

Nursing at Wanaparti, India

by Mildred Shoemaker

Miss Mildred Shoemaker has written the last in the series of articles relative to the MCC program in India. Miss Shoemaker is on loan to the Mennonite Brethren Mission where she is supervising a mission hospital. In the article she vividly describes her work and presents the relation of medical work to evangelism. Her home is in Sterling, Illinois, and she received her R.N. degree at La Junta, Colorado.

Another day's work is finished as the sun drops behind the rocky hills. The two dozen in-patients have their medicines for the night. The last of the many outpatients has gone home after having been treated. Each one took with him either a bottle of medicine, some pills wrapped in the corner of a sarie, or some ointment in a green leaf.

As we are about to lock up, a group of people are entering the compound. This time, it is a little girl with tetanus. I am thankful that we still have a small supply of tetanus-antitoxin. While the syringe is boiling, we manage to give some fluids and a sedative orally. The rooms are all filled and overflowing, so a place is provided for them on the verandah till morning. We leave them with last minute instructions to force fluids during the night.

I can hear you asking, "But, is there no one on night duty?" No, for our staff consists of only four people—five with the woman who sweeps, cleans and carries water. The patients are not left alone for the family stays with the patient and cooks his food. There is always a crowd of relatives.

The compounder makes up the prescriptions and gives all the internal medicine. He also interprets for me, for he is the only worker who speaks English. The two women have been trained to take temperatures, give treatments and do dressings.

My work consists of a little bit of everything from writing the orders for the patients to reading the thermometers, after the nurses have taken the temperatures. Much time is spent in supervising and keeping everything running smoothly. It does not seem right that I should prescribe for the patients, but when I think of the treatment they receive in the villages, I know it is my duty to do what I can.

I was both horrified and amused the first few days as I watched the workers carry out procedures. The patient might be put on the floor or taken out in the yard for the treatment—whichever was the handiest. It was quite interesting to see how fast the patients improved and the dreadful sores healed in spite of lack of aseptic-technic.

The Lord has blessed us for many are healed. Many of these people, too, who would otherwise not be contacted, are reached with the Gospel.

Youth Serves in Mexico

[The following article describes experiences of the new service unit in Mexico and their developing program. This unit will serve the year-round establishing a hospital near the Mennonite colony.]

This week we visited the governor of Chihauhau and the American ambassador to Mexico, Mr. Thurston. While admiring the lovely new home, this thought impressed me: "All this beauty for only a few years! How much better it is to prepare for a beautiful eternal home which the rich and poor, dignified and humble alike shall share."

The Mexicans knew Mennonites long before we came. They came to respect the "Old Colony Mennonites" for their honesty, and for being God-fearing people. Many Mexicans realize these Mennonites have moved from country to country because of their religious beliefs. The good reputation of these people challenges us.

Some of the most satisfying experiences we have had are the contacts with fellow Mennonites of the Cuauhternoc and the colony near there. They manifest interest in our bringing them some kind of service, whether it be in the opening of the hospital, or with providing them with a teacher for their school.

The week end trip to the youth camp at Majalco gave us a picture of the work being done for youth in the Protestant churches of Mexico. The close association with a poor group of Mexican children was a privilege. Another valuable experience was putting up with food and shelter different from that which is common to us.

The first one year volunteers to be appointed for the Mexico Voluntary Service Unit include Melvin Funk, Hillsboro, Kansas, Director; Frances Beckenbach, Canfield, Ohio, Matron; Mr. and Mrs. Randall Heinrichs, Winnipeg, Manitoba; and Clara Schellenberg, Saskatoon, Saskatchewan. Others will be appointed later. Those interested in more information about this unit should write to Voluntary Services, MCC, Akron, Pennsylvania.

Clothes for Needy in Mississippi

It seemed as though it were an answer to prayer when the four big paper cartons of clothes came to us from our Mennonite friends about two weeks ago. We had already seen around us a great need for clothing.

Some of the girls went into the homes we had contacted earlier by Sunday School and various other activities, to see what clothes would be needed for school. We found that some of the children had missed school last year because of the lack of clothing. The mothers were glad to tell what more would be needed. Many of the mothers did not have any idea how the clothes would be supplied. We can never fully realize how happy they were to have someone take a personal interest in their needs.

A list was made of the things that were needed. The needs were found to be very great. I'm sure all of us felt that the task ahead of us was great.

As the clothes were received they were assorted as to size. We were especially glad to see so many boys clothing. It seems as though we find more boys that are in need of clothing than girls. The sizes for boys suits ranged from three to fourteen. No less appreciated were the girls and ladies dresses. The dresses ranged from infants size to ladies size. There were also some men's clothes. Four layettes were also in the boxes of clothes.

To give out these clothes is no easy task. Many ask for clothing even though their fathers would be able to supply clothes with the right type of management. Also in some of the homes the children are not taught to take care of their clothes. We often wonder about this. Should we give to those kind of people? We also wonder if the family will take care of the clothing given them. Will it be mended? Those are but a few of the many problems that confront us.

Some of the families were brought in to have their clothing fitted. The alterations are to be done by the mothers in the sewing club. The boys and girls entering school were given two suits of clothing, and those who will not be entering school, one suit of clothing. I wish that all might have shared in the joy of seeing these children receive their clothes. The parents were no less pleased. Truly it is more blessed to give than to receive.

Universal Military Training

The President's Commission on Universal Training submitted their report to President Truman late last Spring with solid approval of such a program. Columnists and political observers are convinced that the question of Universal Military Training will be one of the first items Congress will discuss when it reconvenes in January. At that time, it is expected that President Truman will submit a request for such legislation. It is hoped at that time there will be considerable sentiment in favor of such legislation and that even though it is an election year, there will be support for this measure in Congress.

414 East Fourth Street

Universal Military Training is an entirely new venture for the United States. Never has this country favored such a peacetime program. As a matter of fact, America has traditionally been very wary of anything that smacked of the military always striving to keep government and military separate and to keep military strength low during periods of peace. For these reasons this is a new and radical proposal for the nation to undertake.

Of even greater significance is such a measure to our church which historically has clung to a peace position come war or peace. Our church's European experience suggests the gravity of a program of peacetime conscription. A brief review of the experience in Switzerland, Germany, and Russia is sufficient to indicate the problems involved.

A publication has recently been issued on the present Universal Military Training plan. It is called "An Analysis of the Report of the President's Advisory Commission on Universal Training". It is a thorough critical examination issued by the National Council Against Conscription, 1013 Eighteenth Street, N. W. Washington 6, D. C. and is available for ten cents. To be intelligently informed and to express honest, informed concern about this matter, such literature is of great value.

Items of Interest

The total enrollement in 664 church-related colleges and universities was 569,870 in 1946-47. Of these college students, 46.87% were veterans of the last war.

The total enrollment of all students in secondary education was 2,100,000 last year. It is thought that this will increase to beyond three million and remain that high until about 1960.

Displaced persons are as yet crowded in concentration camps in Germany, Italy and Austria. There are about 750,000 in these countries and the number is not being reduced very rapidly. Congressman Stratton's bill HR-2910 would allow 400,000 of such displaced persons to come into the United States within the next four years. A letter to Congress voicing concern on this matter may be helpful to these people.

More than seventy-five Negro educators are now teaching in nearly forty universities and colleges throughout the United States. These are interracial predominantly white schools. There are 3,000 negroes who list their profession as college teachers in the U. S.

The most thoroughly Christian spot in the world is the Fiji Island, Dr. Henry P. Van Dusen has declared. The islands are said to be ninety-nine per cent Christian and are free from the influence of the movies, radio, liquor and prostitution.

The great opportunity for Christian missions lies, among other places, in the universities. Of the 1,497 students at St. John's University in Shanghai, China, 333 are Christians according to a survey made. The great bulk of the student body claim no religious affiliation, according to Rev. M. H. Throop.

The Secretary of State of Iowa, Rollo Bergeson, criticized the church because of their interest in mission work abroad while at the same time, church people were inactive in their own communities. To clinch his point, Mr. Bergeson referred to his own church in Sioux City which is in the center of a one-time cheaper district of ill fame. Quite a bit of this property was owned by church members who did nothing about the activity that was taking place in them. He urges a live concern for both the conditions and events at home and the needs and ministry abroad.

It is estimated that the average member of the Methodist Church in 1932 gave 5.3 per cent of his income and in 1946, he gave 1.6 per cent of his income. He is giving more money than he did during the depression years, but the percentage has dropped greatly.

The Oxford University Press has completed a survey of Bible-reading habits which indicates, rather surprisingly, that in almost one-fourth of American middle-class urban homes, the Bible is read daily.

A Successful Local Youth Group

Young people in the local church often do things and have experiences which could well be shared with others. Perhaps your young people's group has had a special project which has had unusual success—a project raising money for a special cause, visiting the aged and the sick, a mission project, a garden project or some other one like that. Or your youth group has had very vital and worthwhile meetings, or the recreational and social life of your group has been very significant.

From time to time, Mennonite Youth desires to print a descriptive story of the varied experiences of local youth groups. The story need not be long, but it should describe who the group is, how large, what the activity was and why it was significant. We urge the readers to make this a concern of theirs and to think of their own youth group and what it could share with others that would be worthwhile for them. Ed.

On Sunday, October 5, 1947, World Communion Sunday will be observed for the eighth consecutive year. While in America it is Saturday, 5 P. M. Central Standard Time, in New Zealand it will be 10:30 A.M. Sunday, with people gathering for the morning worship at which Holy Communion will be observed. During the next twenty-four hours of the Sabbath there will not be a single hour when there will not be Christians in some part of the world kneeling, standing, or seated as they partake of the sacred emblems. It will be a glorious day of fellowship with one another and with Christ. In our Mennonite Churches which observe the Lord's Supper on this day it should be a season of much prayer, repentance and consecration. As we prepare to follow the injunction, "this do in remembrance of me," let us tune ourselves with God through prayer:

Thou, O God, hast sent Thy Son that the Word might become flesh and dwell among us. As Thou and He were one, so may we also be one, "that the world might believe—that the world might know." With deep joy we call to mind those who believed and followed in unity of Spirit. Grant that we too may be one through Thy Holy Spirit, one in purpose, and one with Thy Holy Will. With heaviness of heart we think of those who in haughtiness and sin believed not and in despair and misunderstanding nailed the Son of Man upon the cross. Deliver us, our Father, from crucifying Him again.

May we realize that Thou hast given Thy Son for all mankind—that those of all races, languages and religious communions may turn to Thee in this sacred hour. So may we, as we humble ourselves to partake of these emblems, call to mind the blood shed for many, the body broken for us, and again consecrate ourselves to Thee alone. Hear our supplication offered in the Spirit of Him who gave Himself for us. AMEN. — Ellis Graber.

LOSING OUR SAVOR

Most churches or religious denominations have a way of undergoing gradual change so that as time goes on the differences between themselves and the world about them quietly vanish and the standards of the denomination become one with the world. This process of accommodation is noticably going on in the General Conference. In name and in organization the Mennonite Church is a separate organization, but the fundamental differences between it and Protestantism in general are indeed difficult to discern.

Some will say that it is good that all differences are erased or rapidly being erased. Others will say it is a tragedy that all differences are disappearing. What do you say? It is our feeling that no religious denomination has a future which cultivates differences for the sake of being different. Nor is there any hope for a religious group that clings stubbornly to its differences merely because of sentimental attachment to the past. The justification for being different is because following the will of God leads a group into a different path than following the appeal of the world. The Anabaptist fathers had a vision of the true church of Christ as being distinct from that which the Reformers saw. They sought a pure church based on New Testament standards. Has their vision been fulfilled by Protestantism in general or has the modern Mennonite Church adopted the views of modern Protestantism and forsaken its own heritage? It is obvious that we are religiously imitating other churches and regularly worshipping other gods.—J. WINFIELD FRETZ, Professor of Sociology at Bethel College, and Secretary of the Mutual Aid Board.

THE NEED FOR HONESTY

Honesty, integrity and character are fundamentally needed in the business and banking world, more so than ever. We hear so much teaching and preaching in the modern trend that it seems we are losing the basic and fundamental characteristics upon which our economic system in this country was founded. In our complex business relationships of today we need honesty, truth and justice more than ever. The fact that we have so much dishonesty and lying in business accounts for the prevalence of gambling and games of chance even among the members of the church. There must also be honesty between capital and labor, employer and employee. For years labor had been exploited by large corporations, but now too often after reaching its goals, labor is dishonest by being lazy, indifferent, and not giving a full day's work for a day's pay.

As Christian business men we must be honest in all that we do. If we teach or preach the Word, we must be honest in our preparation. We must be honest with our pupils and members and declare unto them the whole counsel of God. We must teach the love of God, but we should also teach and preach the judgment on the wicked who disbelieve. Only in this way can we be honest before God and in all our business relationships. — HARRY M. DETWILER, Cashier and Assistant Trust Officer, Union National Bank and Trust Company, Souderton, Pa., and member of the Mutual Aid Board of the General Conference.

HE LEADETH ME . . . !

In Christian circles, one often notices a certain unhealthy mysticism. It is not uncommon to hear sincere believers regard the work of the Holy Spirit in their lives in a totally abstracted sense from the teachings of scripture. Thus, we hear a brother reply, "The Spirit has led me to do this," or "The Lord has not yet told me what to do," implying a direct revelation from God apart from the Word of God.

Should we not say, (though we say it with all charity) that this unwitting zeal sadly confuses two great truths—the supernatural operation of God's Spirit creating all inward holy affections, such as repentance, faith, love, etc. (John 3:5,6) with the natural providence of God governing all his creatures. (Neh. 9:6; Col. 1:17). Simply stated, the operation of God's Spirit is not to be confounded with his providential agency, marvelous and inscrutable though it may be. We believe the will of God for daily living comes to us, not by dreams or visions nor in any inner voices or feelings, (which we often call "the leading of the Spirit") but only through the natural channels of God's providence, e.g., talents, opened or closed doors, sanctified common sense, etc., all guided by Holy Scripture. Above all, it is the finality and infallibility of the Bible which is at stake here. Just as the supernatural operations of the Spirit work alone through Scripture, so the natural providence of God only "leads" us as we first obey the teachings of Scripture.

Perhaps the reader will think this matter inconsequential. But is this not sowing seeds of confusion in

ADVENTURES IN TEACHING---WITH THE YOUNG PEOPLE

BY B. BARGEN

Whether or not the teaching of young people is an adventure—either for them or for the teacher—depends very much on the attitude which the teacher brings to the classroom.

The teacher is better able to meet the situation, or at least ought to be. She has resources, both technical and spiritual, which the young people have not yet attained. She knows the way, or at least ought to know the way, on which she proposes to lead the young people, and if it is not an adventure for her, why attempt to lead them at all?

Granted that the going of the way is an adventure to the teacher, then we face the question how can the experience with young people as a teacher become an adventure. In this brief article we want to mention a few things that make teaching an adventure for both.

In the first place, it can be an adventure if we recognize in the first place that we are not walking a traditional path. When we think of an adventure, we think of going the unusual path. We think of going into some new territory not formerly seen or explored. We expect to see new things, and to have to grapple with new situations. We are well aware at the outset that the going may be dangerous, and we know in advance that there are times when it is going to be lonesome.

On the other hand, we are aware of an urge within us that says, "Keep going!" There is something within a person that tells him no matter how good life is, it can be better, richer, enchanted! There is fundamentally no basic difference between the mental attitudes of the teacher and the pupil as they walk the path of new experience and new learning together.

You can kill the spirit of adventure at the outset by walking in the harness of fear that everything must be said and done in the way that it always has been said and done before. But the spirit of God is creative. It is always finding new ways of doing things. "Behold He maketh all things new." Precisely this is the characteristic of a good teacher—he makes all things seem new. He is not afraid to say old truths in new words. He is by no means a parrot. In fact, he is a little suspicious always of saying a thing the same way twice. We recognize this principle in teaching without question in the secular field; not everybody is willing to recognize that it is an absolute necessity as well in the realm of religious instruction. It is so easy in any realm, but especially easy in the realm of religious education, to fall into a habit of using words and phrases whose meaning is not entirely clear and which, sometimes, have no meaning whatever—at best a vague meaning for the teacher and usually no meaning at all for the pupil.

Therefore, the teacher of young people is a teacher who is not afraid. In the preparation, let us say, of a Sunday school lesson, the teacher in meditating on a Scripture passage is not afraid that perhaps the Holy Spirit will reveal some new application, but rather, when it comes, grasps it readily and treasures it, thinking all the while how it can be presented to the young people, in order to make it also meaningful to them. He prepares for adventure by expecting it.

Teaching of young people can be an adventure if the teacher and the pupils together develop an atmosphere of perfect confidence whereby they begin to realize that they dare to venture into new areas. There are many areas which are taboo in church life. Pupils, in the nature of the case, feel these with tremendous sensitivity in the Sunday school classroom, for example. There are so many things they "mustn't talk about." It is precisely in these areas that adventure lies.

It is an adventure to let go! To let go of one's fear of "what the people will say," and be one's self. In the adventure of teaching and learning the teacher must, first of all, be honest, sincere, and be herself. The same goes for the students. Any pretense, any sham, will soon be caught up by the students to the dismay of the teacher.

It is an adventure in teaching to place reliance in the discovery of truth through meditation more than in a commentary on the truth.

A reading, re-reading, and again re-reading the Scripture text of the Sunday school lesson, consistently bringing the wandering mind back to the meditation of its content and its meaning, reveals all kinds of new applications and insights which the commentary itself, seemingly, does not have the power to bring about. Underlining the passage in red, here a word, there a phrase, does something to the teacher. If gifted in this direction, a teacher may even memorize the entire Scripture text for the morning and present it completely from memory. That, too, does something for the pupils!

It can be an adventure to recognize that there is considerable humor in the Bible, and it can be brought to bear with good spiritual results if the teacher is not afraid to use it. It is an adventure for pupil and teacher alike to recognize that even in a Sunday school class contemplating the Scripture text itself, there can be rollicking good humor, and always that good humored insight into human nature with which our Bible is so rich.

Teaching of young people can be an adventure at any time, but it is almost sure to be an adventure in the field of religious education if teacher and pupil will follow even a few of the above suggestions. At least, so I have found it.

Mr. B. Bargen, frequent speaker at young people's meetings, retreats, etc., teaches the college Sunday school class at the Bethel College Church.

LITTLE HEINRICH IS HUNGRY

He was just a little boy—not more than four years old. He leaned over the large empty soup jug in the hall and scraped the sides with his tiny fingers, licking out each last precious drop—even though he had just been fed his liter of purena soup. And he was only one—one child out of 2,800 children who were fed in Kaiserslautern, Germany, by the Mennonite Central Committee Relief project.

We saw them come—poorly-clothed mothers, bringing their children. They walked slowly, and seemed very depressed and sad. Our presence aroused some curiosity among the youngsters. Or, perhaps it was the candy that some of us were passing around. We had taken some soap, combs, needles, and thread, and candy along. It had been given us by our home church for this purpose. Just simple things to us—but luxuries to those who received them. One little old lady burst into tears when we gave her a bar of soap, a spool of thread, and a comb. That's about a quarter's worth to us in America, isn't it?

Experiences like this touch one's heart. Yes, Germany is hungry; her cities lie in ruin, and prospects for future reconstruction seem dim as she endures the sting of retaliation as well as existing conditions.

What can we write to picture for all the great need in Germany now? Their need is not only for bread, but also for spiritual bread.

May we lay aside all prejudice, and may the Lord lead each one of us to contribute to this urgent needy cause, not only in gifts as He may direct, but in our prayers and in the giving of our lives to His Service. We are thankful for the consecrated workers who have gone out, not only to Germany but to other places where there is need.

In our trip to Europe with the Student Group this summer we visited not only in Germany, but also in England, France, Belgium, Holland and Switzerland. In Switzerland we were impressed greatly by the grandeur of the Alps, a mighty handiwork of God. The whole of our trip can never be put on paper or in words. It goes beyond that. With beauty we saw destruction, with happiness we saw sorrow and sadness. May God give us in America wisdom and lead us to do His will—Burt and Lila Russell Mutual Influences. Now that "normal" times have come we are becoming accustomed to a continuous flow of reporters in our midst relating about European conditions and especially about the help extended to the suffering "in the name of Christ." We have returned relief workers and foreign students among us. Recently we were visited by representatives from Holland sponsored by the Mennonite Central Committee. It is only through these person to person contacts that we can learn best to understand each others' positions, problems, needs. Only lasting contacts will, however, result in mutual benefit in matters pertaining to our faith in Jesus Christ and in applying His gospel in our daily lives.

Our Visitors from Holland. The three official Dutch visitors are Dr. H. Craandijk, Rev. T. O. Hylkema and Rev. N. van der Zijpp. Dr. Craandijk is an attorney by profession, a member of the Mennonite Church of Amsterdam, and secretary of the Alegemeene Doopsgezinde Societeit. This is the conference to which all Mennonite congregations of Holland belong. Rev. Hylkema is one of the five ministers of the Mennonite church of Amsterdam which has a membership of over 6,000. He has always been interested in Mennonites abroad, in relief work, and in the work of the Mennonite Central Committee. Rev. N. van der Zijpp is the pastor of the Mennonite church of Rotterdam and lecturer in Mennonite history at the Mennonite Theological Seminary at Amsterdam. Through his study and interest he is, no doubt, the best informed of these three in matters pertaining to the history of the Mennonites in Holland and in other countries.

Impressions. The Mennonites of Holland, once divided into as many groups as the Mennonites of America, united into one conference more than a hundred years ago, for the chief purpose of supporting a seminary to train ministers and to give financial support to weak churches. World Wars I and II made it expedient to put increased emphasis on meeting the spiritual needs of the congregations. The Gemeentedagbeweging, peace movement, and other organizations, which gave spiritual guidance, are now a part of the above mentioned General Conference.

Mrs. Anna Isaac's Last Report from the India Field

(Mrs. Isaac does not expect to return to the field, and while she has been home for some time, the report is very interesting.—Howard G. Nyce)

Mauhadih, via Champa, CP. India
July 14, 1947

Dear Brethren of the Mission Board:

Greetings with Psalm 68:19, "Blessed be the Lord who daily loadeth us with benefits (daily beareth our burdens R. V.), even the God of our salvation." This has been true in my life this last quarter.

The first week of this quarter was Passion Week. We usually make this a special week of witness in which all have opportunity to go to neighboring villages to witness to their living faith in Christ. Not nearly all availed themselves of this opportunity, but those who did received a great blessing.

May I quote from my diary of April 1. "I go out with the women to Siladi. Balquar, Adalina, Parvate, and Rebecca also go. Visited in Mehetter's house (Mehetter is not a Christian but very friendly and often comes to church). Chamarin with the sweet face was also there. We sang 'Hai, hai, Prabhu Jishu' (Alas, alas, Lord Jesus). I explained each verse of the suffering as we went along, and when we were finished Chamarin asked, "Why did He suffer all that?" What a question! Our Brahmin friends in Birbals' home were very friendly. The old mother always grasps my hand and pulls me into the house. The daughter, whose husband was murdered, was also home and clung to Balquar when we went out. After we had described Christ's suffering, the old grandmother said, "His suffering has come upon me!" "No", I said, "It is just the other way around, your suffering was laid on Him!"

Every evening we had services in our church led by our pastor, Mr. Walters.

Theophil Bhagel preached a good sermon on Good Friday. At first his emotion almost got the better of him. Then he said, "Good Friday. Why is it good? It is good only for those for whom the death of the cross has meant salvation.

Easter always begins at least at 4 a.m. for the women of Mauhadih. We go from home to home singing, "Come, sisters, let us go to find Jesus." etc. By the time we have made the rounds, the bell rings for the sunrise praise service. For me this day held a deeper significance than ever before. With my own loved one in glory, the resurrection joy takes on a vital and glorious meaning, and somehow with brimming eyes and quivering chin I could still praise God for His wonderful plan of salvation and an eternal home through Jesus Christ our Lord.

The week after Easter was an especially busy one for us since we had invited the illiterate Christian women from all the villages to come for a five-day "institute." We looked forward to these days with a certain degree of misgiving, but we were most happily surprised at the response of these women. Only eleven came, but with what zest they entered into our plans. From six a.m. to ten, from three p.m. to five, and an hour in the evening we kept them busy with lessons on how to make a Christian home. At the 6 a.m. worship period they were taught how to begin the day with God in their homes, how to gather the children around them for this, etc. They were taught Bible stories and songs, they committed verses to memory. The pastor's wife taught them to mend and to do other handwork. She also taught them simple lessons in hygiene and child care. Attendance at all meetings was 100 per cent. To see these women blossom out in these days was enough to rejoice any heart.

Before going to the hills I packed all my household things preparatory to sending them to America. That was a difficult task in more ways than one.

On April 28 we left for Landour. The time spent up here was a time of physical and spiritual refreshing. To be together with eight of our own language students was a unique experience. The hope that these young lives will soon be ready to take up the work, that some of us have to lay down and to lighten the burdens of others who are overworked, gave us courage and joy. When the time came to return home, we were eager to get back to work. Eva Pauls, Helen Nickel, and I left Landour, June 8. The Wengers had gone to South India. We reached Champa about the same time.

Since we are back, the days have been filled with many last things before leaving—last visits with Christians, last disposing of property, last correspondence, last visits to villages, etc. It had not yet rained to amount to much when we returned, so I took the first opportunity to go to Belha, two miles on the other side of the river to visit with two Christian families. I was still able to wade the river. The joy of the Christians for our visit (a Bible woman accompanied me) amply repaid me for the hot trip. The next day I visited two more out-stations by jeep. The jeep is a God-send.

Brother Samson Walters who was ordained as pastor at the last church conference is doing a good work. During the time the Wengers and I were in the hills, he had charge of the station. He faithfully visited the outstations and ministered to the church here in Mauhadih. We are very grateful for his service.

Helen Nickel is here in Mauhadih now conducting a ten weeks' normal course for primary school teachers. She has it here rather than in Jagdeeshpur because we have better housing facilities.

During our absence a boy of about fifteen died of T. B. A young widow, mother of six children, died suddenly on June 19. She had been ailing for some time. We had been much concerned about this woman's soul and had an earnest talk with her three days before she died in which we pled with her to get right with God.

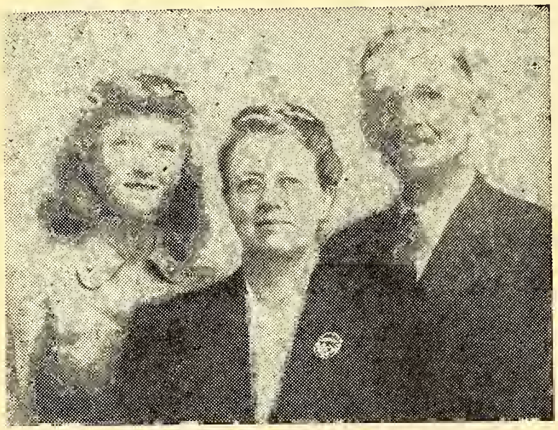
Our Travels during the Past Summer

Christena H. Duerksen

Dear Friends,

Look at the map and see whether you can find Prince Albert, in Saskatchewan, Canada. The surrounding area is the approximate location of some of our travels this summer. Here, between stretches of pine and poplar, lie the green wheatfields, the fallow ground and pleasant farmsteads. Wild roses, in profusion of bloom, line the roadsides. Tiger lilies, blue grass flowers, and even the plebian dandelion, dot the green grass among the pines. At frequent intervals—a few miles apart—lie small villages with a few stores, a machine shop, garage or two, and always a number of grain elevators, usually painted dark red, for this is primarily a wheat country. To us, who had come from the ripening wheat fields of Kansas, it seemed strange to see the fields so green and "young."



Rev. and Mrs. Duerksen and daughter Lois hope to return to India this fall. They plan to sail from the West Coast. On September 8 they left Newton, Kansas, for California, where they will await their opportunity to sail. Some of the time they will visit with Mrs. Duerksen's mother, Mrs. Justina Harder of Reedley, and part of the time they hope to spend with Mrs. Duerksen's brother, Dr. William R. Harder of Los Gatos.

Here, during the month of June, the afterglow of the sunset does not entirely fade away in the north before it merges into the rosy tints of dawn. Here the sun sets after nine o'clock in the evening and rises long before it is time to get up. One felt the need of "darkness saving" rather than "daylight saving." The people said, "Yes, we have long days now, but in the winter time we make up for it with the long, long nights. And there is always the danger of early frost."

Are you surprised to hear that there are flourishing Mennonite churches in this area? We found them by following directions from one church to the next—Lost River, Carrot River, Petaigan, Spiritwood, Rabbit Lake, Glenbush and farthest north to Meadow Lake—truly they are names to stir the imagination.

Some of the settlements were made up of young people for whom the older places did not offer enough room for expansion. Many of the other settlers had come to their communities with nothing but their debt to the steamship company that had brought them over to Canada from European shores. They still remember the bitter hunger-years in Russia; they remember the hard early years in the new country; the satisfaction of paying off the debt and the slow building-up of the homes. Some have made better progress than others. Some have had sickness and misfortune to hold them back. But they have a home, the future looks hopeful to them, and their young men and women are stepping out to take their place in the world's work.

Two very interesting experiences, in addition to the visits in the churches of Saskatchewan, were the two youth retreats held in that province. The first took place on the Youth Farm at Rosthern and the second at Elim Gospel Beach on the shores of Lake Pelletier in the southern part of Saskatchewan near Swift Current.

The Rosthern Retreat had an enrollment of 172 with a much larger attendance because of people who came for just a day or evening. It was worth much to us to be here, to see this great project of the young people. The farm with its buildings made possible the housing of such a large group. One implement shed did duty as a dining room, another with a canvass lean-to served as an auditorium, and the two large barn lofts became boy's and girl's dormitories. We visited the large Invalid Home where we saw our U.S.A. Volunteer unit at work. To know that the farm was debt free, the Invalid Home being enlarged and the Children's Home in progress of being built made us realize that Canada's young people are on the march.

Elim Gospel Beach, also a Saskatchewan Young People's project, is not in the center of so many Mennonite churches, and the enrollment was not as large as at Rosthern. Here, besides the inspiration that comes from such a gathering, there was also more opportunity for recreation in the form of boating and swimming. People, not Mennonites, living in summer cottages along the lake front spoke again and again of the great change in the place since the Mennonites took charge. Here the retreat lasted a whole week with plenty of fellowship in classes and during free time. A loud speaker brought song and message to those who were not retreaters. Rev. J. J. Esau, the blind evangelist, brought the gospel messages at both retreats. It was not long before he had us singing "I have decided to follow Jesus, no turning back, no turning back." The young people were especially happy to see both Mrs. Esau and their son Johnny along. Miss Goertz presented China along with her testimony of a Saviour who satisfies. We, naturally, took our opportunities to tell about the land dear to us.

As we think back over our days in Saskatchewan, we rejoice in the deep interest in the Lord's work that we found everywhere and also in the large number of young people who are concerned about their place in this work. We look for future missionaries and leaders to come out from among these whom we learned to know in the retreats. There isn't time to tell about the young people out in daily vacation Bible school work, the group that had been in the volunteer unit in the Montana Mission, and the various schools engaged in preparing young people for better service in the church. We consider it a rare privilege to have been enabled to take this Canadian trip and shall remember with joy those whom we know as friends there.

men in our own seminaries. The Mennonites of Holland have done so for more than 200 years. Missions? It is exactly a hundred years ago that the Dutch Mennonites started mission work. Social work? They were pioneers in this field in their country. Appreciation of cultural values? The Dutch Mennonites had men like Rembrandt and Vondel in their membership lists. And yet our Dutch visitors sometimes express envy when they witness the extensive programs of our churches which unfolded before them while they attended our conferences.

Certainly there is much that we can learn from each other. The American Mennonites can benefit by the past experiences of the Dutch, while they will be prompted to new action by observing American Mennonite activitism.

DR. H. R. BAUMAN OF INDIA EXPLAINS GREATLY EXPANDED BUDGETS

As members of the Conference read this report, they will readily understand why more money is needed to carry on the work in one field alone. This comparison is made with the 1943 budget. Dr. Bauman writes that the price of rice has increased over 100 per cent; legumes over 100 per cent; meat 400 per cent; wheat 500 per cent; Firewood over 300 per cent; bricks nearly 300 per cent; transportation or car service 500 per cent; unskilled labour 100 per cent and skilled labour 300 per cent. Then Dr. Bauman states:

"Add to this the great increase in the work itself. In the Jagdeeshpur district, for instance, in 1943 there were Christians in about eighty-five to ninety villages. Now there are Christians in 143 villages. That makes it absolutely necessary to employ more evangelistic workers.

"Then too there is a highschool in Jagdeeshpur now. That was not the case in 1943. In 1943 there was a middle school in Jagdeeshpur but its enrollment was about one-third of what it is now. The same is true of the Primary School.

"Thus the increase is forced upon us from three major factors. First, the vast increases in prices in general. Second, the corresponding increase which had to be made in salaries. Thirdly, the large increase in the actual number of workers.

"The above was compiled by Rev. J. Thiessen and Rev. H. Ratzlaff. Prices in Champa are higher."

BLUFFTON COLLEGE NEWS

The Gospel Teams held a joint meeting at the College Cabin, Thursday evening, September 18. Rev. S. T. Moyer gave the address of the evening. About sixty students attended the meeting. The faculty held a discussion meeting on the evening of the nineteenth. The group enjoyed a pot-luck supper at Buckeye Lake and then discussed the topic "Quickening the Spiritual Pulse on the Campus." Rev. Bohn, Rev. Shelly, Prof. Morgan, Dr. Bauman, and Rev. Smucker led discussions on various phases of the topic, showing how this goal might be attained through the faculty living on a high spiritual plane, through campus organizations, through life in the dormitories, through active participation of the faculty in religious life on the campus, and through participation in the local church program. Dr. Freie of Amsterdam, aunt of Magrita Freie, was a chapel speaker on the eighteenth. On the nineteeth Rev. J. N. Smucker spoke on maturing personalities and extended an invitation to associate membership in the local church. Registration has now reached the 299 mark.

FREEMAN JUNIOR COLLEGE

The enrollment this year has broken all previous records since the school was established almost half a century ago. Besides the usual busy activity of a new school term this year promises to be exceptionally full because of the large scale building program going on. A boys' dormitory and a new gym-auditorium will be under construction soon. Friday of the first week the Annual Faculty-Student Mixer was held and everybody became better acquainted.

BETHEL COLLEGE

Student presidents of the various extra-curricular organizations which supplement virtually every phase of college life, met with the Dean to set up a program for the new year and to adjust a weekly schedule of meetings. Participation is controlled by a point system and personal counselling in an attempt to balance the class, extra-curricular, and work enrollment of each student. Supervising these organizations and the general social functions of the campus is the Student Council, headed by Virgil Flickinger. Other student leaders include: Delbert Schrag, Student Christian Association; Gladys Dester, Women's Governing Council; Austin Regier, Men's Council; Helen Kornelsen, Student Volunteers; Henry Claassen, Senior Class; Harold Moyer, Junior Class; Willard Linscheid, Collegian editor; and Vernon Neufeld, editor of the Graymaroon. Expect Coming Winter To Be as Severe as Any Previous One

AKRON, Pa., September 22.—The good response of our people in helping to supply the needs which prevail in many parts of the world, is encouraging. Already thirty-two carloads of wheat have been donated, and considerably more is expected to become available in the near future.

Our workers in Central Europe are unanimous is reporting that this coming winter will without doubt be as severe as any previous one, in terms of hunger and suffering. They indicate that through the distribution channels which were set up during last winter, they can efficiently give to those who are the most needy, all of the relief materials which the Mennonite people in the United States and Canada may feel led to contribute.

Flour, canned meat and fats, dried fruits, clothing, shoes, and mending materials are among the materials which are needed most acutely in the operation of a balanced relief program. Further information on the types of relief materials needed, can be secured from the Food and Clothing folders which were sent to each congregation during the summer, or direct from the Material Aid Section, MCC, Akron, Pennsylvania.

Receive between Two and Three Thousand Letters of Appreciation

Between two and three thousand letters of appreciation were recently received from children and other persons in Germany, for the food which they received through the Mennonite Central Committee. These letters were given to our workers in Germany, who gathered them to their central office, and then in turn sent them in bulk to Akron. These letters, written in the German language, express sincere thanks for the food and other relief which was brought to them in their time of need, by the Mennonites of the United States and Canada.

Each of these letters has the return address of the sender, and it is thus possible to use this for initiating a correspondence with these persons in Germany. Any Sunday School Class, youth group, or any individual who wishes to receive one or more of these letters can write to the Publicity Office, MCC, Akron, Pennsylvania.

Peace Section Regards Present as Strategic Time

The Peace Section Executive Committee met in Chicago in September in order to discuss various concerns related to the present work in this field. It was felt that now is a particularly strategic time to promote the nonresistant teaching. Great need was seen for new items of peace literature, especially for use by young people.

The full Peace Section plans to hold a meeting on October 17 to consider together the means of promoting more effectively our witness for the nonresistant position.

Meet the Officers of the Young People's Union

Kenneth Bauman, the new president of the Young People's Union is at present a student at Bluffton College in his sophomore year. He is the first president of the Young People's Union to be under twenty-five years of age when elected. Kenneth is twenty-one. At college, he is active especially in the religious life and activity of the campus. He teaches a college Sunday school class at the church, is a member of the College Vesper Choir, the Gospel Team quartet, the Student Prayer Meeting, and is Religious Emphasis chairman of the Y.M.C.A.

Kenneth spent fourteen years in India where his parents the Drs. H. R. and Ella Bauman have been serving. Seven years have been spent in the States. In India, he attended Woodstock School, and in the States he attended high school for two years at Quakertown, Pennsylvania. Kenneth looks forward to serving as evangelist in India and is preparing for that service.

While in C.P.S. for two years, Kenneth spent six months in Luray, Virginia, and a year and a half at Spring Grove State Hospital, Catonsville, Maryland. While there he served most of his time as laboratory technician and graduated from a practical nursing course. He was in charge of unit religious service and helped in a mission in Baltimore during evenings and Sundays.

Kenneth is a member of the West Swamp Mennonite Church, Milford Square, Pennsylvania, where he served as assistant pastor this past summer. He was one of the first members of the Youth for Christ organization in Quakertown and held the position of Vice-President when he was drafted. He has served as counselor at the Junior and High School Retreats this year at Meno-lan.

From this broad and varied experience in the church, and with an earnestness and sincerity of spirit, the Y.P.U. should be able to look forward to eventful years of work with Kenneth Bauman at the helm.

Verney Unruh continues as vice president of the Y.P.U., his term being completed in 1950. He was elected to this office at the 1945 meeting of the Y.P.U. at North Newton, Kansas, and is the only officer to continue into the new term that was elected at that time.

Verney is a student at Biblical Seminary of New York where he is studying for his third year. He comes from Mountain Lake, Minnesota, studied at Bethel College for four years, served about half a year as director of the Camino, California C.P.S. camp, and spent the summer of '46 representing the Y.P.U. mainly in the Northern District.

In college Verney was a leader in the school's religious life, serving as president of the Student Christian Association. He has served in numerous churches as student minister, most recently in the Pulaski, Iowa, church while attending summer school in Chicago.

Last November, Myrtle Wasser accepted appointment to the secretary-treasurer office to complete the term of Mrs. Ernst Harder (nee Ruth Ewert) who resigned at that time preparatory to taking up work in Paraguay. At the Y.P.U. meeting at General Conference, Myrtle Wasser was re-elected for another three-year term as secretary-treasurer.

Myrtle is from Bedminster, Pennsylvania, and is a member of the Deep Run Mennonite Church. She is this year a Junior at Bluffton College. The summer of '46, Myrtle served in the voluntary service project at Norristown, Pennsylvania, in the Mental Hospital unit. This past summer she served as assistant to Rev. Ellis Graber in the religious education work of the Zion Church, Souderton, Pennsylanvia.

At college, Myrtle has been active, in supporting the relief program, in the peace club and in the religious life of the school. She is interested in journalism and has worked on the college newspaper. This year she is editor of "Ista," the Bluffton annual. She teaches a Junior Sunday School class at the First Mennonite Church, Bluffton.

Seventy-five Attend General Conference Young People's Retreat

Seventy-five young people met together at beautiful Camp Mack, Indiana, on the shores of Lake Wawbee for the second General Conference Young People's Retreat. For three days, the young people from thirty churches in all districts of the Conference and the provinces of Canada worshipped, discussed and played together, binding together the far flung fellowship of the Conference young people. The first retreat of this nature was held at Lake Sequoia in California in 1935. This second retreat was held August 29-31 in Camp Mack, Indiana.

Report of Y.P.U. Assembly Business Meeting

Report of the YPU Assembly for Business at the General Conference, August 22 and 25, Berne, Indiana

The following report of the business meeting is a review of the minutes of the meeting. The minutes were taken by the secretary-treasurer, Myrtle Wasser.

On Thursday, August 21, a Council Meeting was held at which representatives from the districts met with the Executive Committee to discuss and prepare recommendations to be presented to the YPU Assembly business sessions.

Business Meeting of YPU Assembly

On Friday afternoon, August 22, following a brief joint session with the Women's Missionary Association and Laymen, the YPU Assembly met in the Berne Evangelical Church. There were 104 delegates representing eighty-seven General Conference churches and more than a hundred visitors in addition. It filled the church. This was the largest YPU Assembly to be held. Throughout the entire conference a keen and vital interest was displayed in the YPU, signifying great possibilities for the future. Indicative of this was the large percentage of young people present at the entire conference.

Agenda of the Meeting

1. Arnold Nickel, pastor at Donnelson, Iowa, led the group in an opening meditation.

2. The procedure for the business meeting was explained. Delegates of the YPU were to be thirty years of age or under. One vote was given for every thirty young people in the church between the age of fifteen and thirty, and no one person may cast more than ten proxy votes. With a few exceptions the delegates were under thirty, a great step toward making the YPU a youth organization.

3. The minutes of the 1945 YPU meeting were read by the secretary-treasurer, Myrtle Wasser, and approved.

4. The secretary-treasurer gave the following report: The meetings held by the YPU consisted of quarterly Executive Committee meetings, annual YPU Council meetings held in conjunction with the Conference Board meetings in February, the YPU Assembly held during General Conference. A summary of the thirteen General Conference retreats was made and prepared in a mimeographed report by a committee with William Zehr as chairman. Upon the recommendation of the last Council meeting a General Conference Young People's Retreat was planned for August 29-31 at Camp Mack, Indiana. A hearty welcome was extended to the representatives of the Central District young people. The financial report was as follows:

Balance received June 11, 1945	$ 479.75
Income until July 1, 1947	1771.59
	$2251.34
Disbursements (Missionary Education Fund, Youth Section, Expenses such as postage and traveling of Exec. Committee)	2409.46
Cash balance July 1, 1947	158.12 dr.

The report was approved. Following the report a motion was made and accepted that an offering be received at the close of the meeting to help cover the deficit. The offering totaled $99.41.

5. Vice-president's report by Verney Unruh: A brief description of the Missionary Education Fund project was given. During this past school year it aided the support of four students, two Puerto Ricans at Bethel, one Puerto Rican at Bluffton, and one Paraguayan at Freeman. These people will return to serve their people after their training has been completed. The YPU Fund for the Youth Section, expenses, etc. was presented. The results of a post card survey on the youth organizations of our churches was presented according to the response.

6. Esko Loewen, editor of "Mennonite Youth" in the Mennonite gave his report. With four pages of each issue of the Mennonite, the section has attempted to bring about a fuller realization of "A United Mennonite Youth in Christ" and bring interesting, helpful, and challenging material. Also, an Around the World Mennonite Youth Fellowship, fostering correspondence between Mennonite youth of other countries, has been growing continuously and has unlimited possibilities for Christian understanding and friendship.

7. Bertha Fast, Director of General Conference Voluntary Service, gave a report of the past summer. This was the first summer of this size undertaking. The projects, planned and operated by the YPU and Peace Committee, are not in competition with MCC projects, but they are intended to supplement them. Projects were carried on in four areas: (a) Mission at Lame Deer, Montana, with the Indians, (b) Youth Farm at Rosthern, Saskatchewan, (c) Chicago Missions, Vacation Bible School, recreation, etc. (d) Youth Team which visited churches in Illinois and Indiana. Only the testimony and living example of the participants can fully tell how much these projects have meant.

8. Elmer Ediger, president, gave a report of the institutes and field work, program material preparation, failures and problems of YPU work. With the help of the Executive Committee various institutes have been conducted in the districts and have proved very helpful. This fall a packet, containing suggestions and materials for the planning of programs in our local churches, is being sent to each church. Our aspirations for YPU have been great and we have not always succeeded. Particularly acute among the problems was that of the relationship of our local groups and districts to the YPU and making them feel a part of it so that our motto might become a living reality.

9. An evaluation and looking ahead was the theme of Rev. Olin Krehbiel's talk. The YPU Advisor made comparisons between the YPU of today and the YPU in its beginning and struggle to become an organization in our conference. Looking ahead, he challenged us to become a vital group of youth, dedicated to ever greater service.

Rev. Jacob Friesen was in charge of the singing of the session.

Monday Afternoon Business Meeting

The second business meeting was held on Monday afternoon, August 25.

11. Jacob Friesen from Paraguay, student at Freeman, who is being aided by the Missionary Education Fund Project, led in the opening devotional.

12. The recommendations from the YPU Council were read by Irvin Richert, after which they were discussed, amended, and accepted. (These are printed in the September 9 issue of Mennonite Youth.)

13. The nominating committee reported on its suggestions for candidates for the two officers whose terms had expired, the president and secretary-treasurer. Hugh Hostetler in charge presented the following nominations.

President:	Harris Waltner, Marion South Dakota Burton Yost, Lansdale, Pa.
Sec.-Treas.:	Evelyn Stucky, Berne, Indiana. Myrtle Wasser, Bedminster, Pa.

The nomination of Kenneth Bauman, India, was received from the floor after which the tellers with Leo Miller as chairman took over, and the election was conducted. According to the delegates present, a total of 179 votes could be cast. The president declared Myrtle Wasser secretary-treasurer for a term of three years. Since there was no majority for president, a reelection between the two highest, Harris Waltner and Kenneth Bauman, was conducted. The president declared Kenneth Bauman the new president for six years.

There were brief district reports with the requirement that the reports be turned in to the secretary.

Rev. Paul Shelly conducted a brief consecration service.

the hearts of Christians, young and old, seeking the will of God? Does not this allow human desires to masquerade as the will of God? And, above all, does this not subtly undermine the sole authority of the Bible in faith and conduct? It is so much easier to be an armchair Christian waiting for the "will of God" than to be a working Christian delving into the Word of God—and much more dangerous! The hymn writer has fittingly said:

"What more can He say than to you He hath said,
To you who for refuge to Jesus have fled."

—J. H. FRETZ, Pastor of the Deep Run Church, Bedminster, Pa., and member of Home Mission and Church Extension Committee and of the Peace Committee of the Eastern District.

Jottings

—Ernst and Ruth Harder report from San Lorenzo, Paraguay, where they are taking care of some of the refugees which came over on the Volendam, that if the refugees continue to leave for the Mennonite settlements as they are now doing, the former number of over 1,000 will soon have dwindled down to about 370. The recent revolution also left its mark on the refugee camp when a blast of machine gun bullets hit some of the buildings. Now things have quieted down. For some time the food was lacking in such items as eggs and butter, the main fare being meat and mandiocas. This didn't bother the refugees very much, but the Harders doing hard work and used to a more varied diet had to pull in their belts notch by notch.

—Bethel Church, Winton, California: Our congregation has sent approximately four tons of dried peaches for relief. A wiener roast and a food sale, sponsored by the Sewing Circle on Sepetmber 16, was enjoyed by all. Proceeds are to be used for the kitchen fund for the church hall, which is to be built this fall.—Lorraine Heppner, Corr.

—Newport Mennonite Church, Newport, Washington: Graveside services were held for the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Krehbiel on August 26. Rev. Rudolph Schmidt and five of our young people attended the retreat at Lake Wenatchee, the week-end of August 31. Four of our young people left for school; J. W. Kliewer, Bethel College; Arnold Dalke, Grace Bible Institute; Hulda Woelk and Henry Dalke, Los Angeles Bible Institute.—Mrs. Henry Hiebert, Corr.

—Wayland Mennonite Church, Wayland, Iowa: Recently we have had a number of guests in this community in the interest of foreign relief. On Sunday evening, September 7, Miss Elma Esau spoke at our church and showed pictures. On Monday evening, September 8, Rev. Hylkema of Holland spoke at the Sugar Creek Church. On Saturday evening, September 13, Rev. and Mrs. Peter Dyck spoke to a large audience, also at the Sugar Creek Church. The ladies of our Dorcas Society met last week and packed and sent for relief four cartons: one of new clothing and three of shoes and used clothing, a total of 127 pounds. We painted our church house this summer, and we are also installing a new oil-burning furnace this fall.—Anna E. Mullett, Corr.

—Karl Schultz, who recently received his M. A. degree, in the field of pastoral counselling, from the University of Chicago, is this fall enrolling in the School of Religion at the University of Southern California, Los Angeles, to work for a Ph.D. degree in his chosen field. He will do his major work under Dr. D. D. Eitzen, Professor of Pastoral Counselling. Mr. and Mrs. Schultz, en route to California, stopped at General Conference Headquarters, Newton, on September 18. Mrs. Schultz is a registered occupational therapist.

—Dr. P. S. Goertz wrote from Copenhagen on September 3: "We spent a night and a day in Gronau where there are now about 600 refugees in two different camps. What a job it is to provide, more or less on the spur of the moment, living conditions for such stranded people. With them all is that one question, where and when can we find a new home. Our Christian friends in America and Canada have a real responsibility resting upon them. It is to be hoped that they will not get tired."

—First Mennonite Church of Christian, Moundridge, Kansas: The Sisters' Mission Society has again resumed its regular all-day meetings for the coming year after two months vacation. Rev. C. E. Rediger, Executive-Secretary of the Congo Inland Missions gave a very soul-inspiring message in word and moving pictures of our mission work there. Dr. J. Winfield Fretz was the guest speaker for the C. E. which has again resumed its work for the year. He spoke of the "Faith of Our Fathers" during the last war in which the Mennonites had a definite and challenging witness to give to the community and this country. Thirty-one Goodwill Christmas Bundles have been sent to the M.C.C. September 14, we were privileged to hear Puran Banwar, a native Christian from our India mission field, who stirred our hearts and opened our minds to the need of the work and the wonderful work which is being done there.—Mrs. Myron G. Stucky, Corr.

—First Church, McPherson, Kansas: Dr. J. E. Hartzler will be the speaker in a series of evening services, October 1-10. We plan to have our Harvest Festival on October 5. While Rev. Roland Goering was at General Conference the Hillsboro Gospel Quartet favored us with an inspiring musical program.—Mrs. Freeman Jantz, Corr.

—Emmanuel Church, Moundridge, Kansas: Rev. Walter Gering of the Eden Church will conduct special Bible Study meetings in our church during the first week in November. The mission society has purchased some kitchen units for the church basement. The society is planning a mission sale in November. This will be the first mission sale in the history of the church. A MENNONITE ENCYCLOPEDIA

A Mennonite encyclopedia? Yes, that's what's coming. The "Old" Mennonites, the Mennonite Brethren, and the General Conference are jointly at work on what will be known as The Mennonite Encycopedia.

Its 6,000 or so articles will tell you about congregations, leaders, doctrines, and practically everything connected with Mennonite faith, history, and life.

The foundation for this encyclopedia was laid in 1913 when two German Mennonites, Christian Hege, an economist who for many years wrote the daily stock-market reports for the newspaper Frankfurter Nachrichten, and Christian Neff, the outstanding church leader of the South German Mennonites, published the first installment of the first volume of what was called Mennonitisches Lexikon. For thirty years these men collected and edited material covering Mennonite history from the beginning of the church in 1525. The Mennonite Encyclopedia, now in process of preparation, is building upon, revising, and supplementing the great German work.

—Fairfield, Pa.—Miss Ruth Burkhard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Burkhard, Orrtanna, Pa., became the bride of Mr. Leo J. Harder, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Harder, Mountain Lake, Minnesota, in the Fairfield Church, Fairfield, Pa., on September 13. The pastor, George S. Stoneback, used a double ring ceremony especially arranged for the occasion and centered about the theme, "The Power of Love." The old chorale with a similar title was sung as a tenor solo before the closing prayer and benediction. At the reception the pastor presented the couple with a gift of money from the Friendly Society of the church. Both groom and bride served in the Gulfport service project during the summer of 1946.

—The Labor Day Menolan Bible Conference was attended at the various sessions by 100 to 200 people, according to a report by Ely R. Fretz. He also reports that the offering at the closing session amounted to over $400 and that this goes to the building fund. Last year an offering of over $500 became the nucleus of a fund for the erection of a large new auditorium, which was ready for use this year.

—Zoar Church, Goltry, Oklahoma: On September 21 four are to be baptized. A young father and wife are two of these. They accepted the Lord last spring. Two others will be taken into the church by letter. —Corr.

It is estimated that 3,500 people heard the Peter Dycks and saw the moving pictures of refugee life in Berlin, on board ship to Paraguay, and in Paraguay itself right up to the newly built houses. After a very closely filled schedule of visiting Mennonite communities in Nebraska, Kansas, and Oklahoma, the Dycks are to proceed to California.

PEAK LOAD

Not every day is alike in the Mennonite Publication Office.

Some days are definitely busier than others.

Before long now, December with its terrific Christmas load and its thousands of renewals will be coming through the door at 722 Main, Newton, Kansas, and when it does the subscription clerks will sigh and wish, "If only people wouldn't ALL subscribe in December!"

Such an unusual load of work coming in at one time is, in business, called a "Peak Load." You can help a lot to take this peak load off the clerks in this office by distributing your subscriptions throughout the year. One way to do it is to send the subscription which you intend to send in December now. The cost to you is the same, the convenience to us is worth a lot.

Rev. and Mrs. Shelly and family will soon leave for their new field of labor. We pray for them God's richest blessings in their future work for Him. Sunday evening, September 21 a union service of Topeka churches was held at the Methodist Church. Rev. Shelly was the speaker. We were privileged to have Ds. T. O. Hylkema, minister in the Singel Mennonite Church of Amsterdam, Holland, present to deliver the morning message, September 14. On the same date during the Sunday school hour, L. E. York, representing the Indiana Anti-Saloon League, was present and spoke. An offering of $103 in cash and subscriptions was taken. —Opal King, Corr.

Nickel, attended the General Conference at Berne, Indiana. During his absence our guest speakers were Rev. Raymond Flory, a member of the McPherson College faculty, and Dr. Orville Walters, also of McPherson. Conference reports were given by the various delegates during the morning services, September 14.—Mrs. Arthur Neufeldt, Corr.

TESTIMONIALS

"Today we received a letter from a lady to whom one of our workers had loaned a copy of the Mennonite Hymnary. This lady writes a very cheery letter and possesses a very good Christian spirit in spite of the fact that she is confined to a wheelchair. She writes: 'Miss Doris has loaned me for some days your Mennonite Hymnary and I have played all of them on my piano with the greatest spiritual edification, to say nothing of the artistic joy since the selections of music for these hymns are of the best. My husband was a music composer and I myself passionately love songs and music in spite of my impediments at playing. (I am a paralytic on the left side.)' Social Responsibility Grows

Every baby, even yours and mine, is a little savage when he comes into the world; that is, he kicks and screams until he gets what he wants, and he has no realization of the wants of anyone but himself. Teaching a child to conform to the habits of polite society, such as saying "please" and "thank you" is as simple as teaching a dog to stand up for a biscuit. But helping our little egoists to become kind, helpful, responsible citizens is no simple stimulus-response reaction.

A sense of social responsibility is caught rather than taught. The spirit of the home is sensed by the baby even. The behavior problems which confront us as our children grow up usually find their roots in our own spiritual immaturity. How humiliating it is to witness the emerging of our own deficiencies in the behavior of our off-spring! Three-year-old Tommy begins to think it smart to shirk responsibilities if dad sits around while mother works. And why should seven-year-old Tommy help little sister fasten her skate if Mother usually says to him in similar situations, "I haven't time to bother with you." As Tommy grows older how can he respect his parents wishes if his parents mistrust their neighbors and have little respect or trust in the laws of God's universe. Tommy does not come to all these conclusions by the process of reasoning. But his subconcious mind is sensitive to the spirit of those with whom he is associated.

It is true that most of us take our task of training our children very seriously — often too seriously. Figuratively we push and drag instead of tenderly leading them. We may be able to control children with "do this", don't do that;" we may get very spectacular displays of obedience that way. Of course, our children may become socially responsible and spiritually mature in spite of some parental domination. Actually the exact methods we use are not very important. The quality of our spirits which motivate our methods is supremely important.

Social responsibility blossoms naturally in a home were there is spiritual maturity. Genuine affection does not prompt us to pamper our children. If we love them, we work with them rather than for them. We love them too much to stunt their development by making all decisions for them. Children are like tender plants. In order to grow in the grace of God, children must live in the warm sunshine of parental affection. Moreover, we cannot hasten growth of plants by careless cultivating which injures the rootlets nor can we hasten the development of social responsibility by force.

PUERTO RICO IS RIPE FOR MISSION WORK

At the meeting of the General Conference at Berne consideration was given to the possibility of our Foreign Mission Board starting missionary work in Puerto Rico. There are a few facts about Puerto Rico that would be of interest to our people as further consideration is being given:

1. We talk about the "teeming millions" in India. For every person per square mile in India there are two in Puerto Rico.
2. Protestant missionary work was started in Puerto Rico in about 1898. It had been started in China and India long before that.
3. China and India can be reached only after thousands of miles of travel, usually taking weeks. At the same price as boat fare you can eat breakfast in New York, take a plane and eat your noon meal in San Juan, Puerto Rico.
4. Puerto Rico is a United States possession. It does not belong to England or to any other country. The spiritual welfare of its people is our more immediate concern.
5. Two-thirds of the Puerto Rican people live in the rural areas, yet these are the areas that have been largely negelected. Mennonites should be especially qualified to work in these rural areas, and will be warmly welcomed by other Protestants already on the island.
6. Mennonites are already favorably known all over the island. The present governor was a warm friend of our La Plata unit before he became governor, and has since kept in touch with the work.
7. Can we take on this new field without jeopardizing the great work our board is already doing? If we want to we can. Already far more money is going from our General Conference Churches into non-Mennonite projects than would be needed to do an excellent piece of work in Puerto Rico.
8. Through our CPS unit we have planted, the crop has grown, it is now ready for harvest. Are we ready?—Carl M. Lehman, business manager of Bluffton College; contributing editor, Adult Senior Sunday School Quarterly; formerly business manager M.C.C. unit, La Plata, Puerto, Rico.

REDEMPTION AND RECONCILIATION ARE BOTH NEEDED

Again and again in history the Church has risen up and saved the world from complete chaos. Can the Church do it again? Or is our tottering world too big an order for the Church? Whatever or whoever does save the world, if the Church does not, is almost surely bound to use the method and message of the Church. Any gospel for our day must have redemption and reconciliation; it must get men set right "inside" as well as give them a concern for others. The world is witnessing two great "gospels," which have divorced these two, destroy themselves; the one is the gospel of "rugged individualism," the other of "vicious collectivism." Both have their counterpart in the Church in the form of emphasis of personal experience to the exclusion of concern for others, and concern for others at the expense of personal experience. The world is too divided for a divorced Gospel. A Church with a half-gospel will go into oblivion as surely as a nation with a half political gospel. The true Gospel has always kept personal redemption and reconciliation inextricably bound together. The double salvation of the Cross, in Thomas R. Kelly's figure, first tears loose from the heart a world with all its lures to sin and a selfish, life, and casts back again into the cleansed heart a world of misery and of chaos to be carried in infinitely tender concern. Of this Gospel Paul, speaking not out of intolerant fanaticism but out of the passion of a scientist who has found a substance which will benefit all mankind—of this Gospel Paul says, "I am not ashamed." It is terrifyingly urgent that the Church realizes she has THE GOSPEL and rise up and save the world again.—Jacob J. Enz, Pastor First Mennonite Church, Nappanee, Indiana; member of Evangelism Committee (G. C.); member Education Committee, Middle District.

AN INTRODUCTION TO THE S.S. LESSONS FOR THE FOURTH QUARTER

by Paul R. Shelly

Quite often when I taught Sunday school classes I simply taught what appeared Sunday after Sunday without having any vision of the total scope covered throughout a given quarter or to the relation of the particular series I was teaching to what went before in previous quarters and to what would follow in the future. This introduction, in the first place, is to help teachers to see the relationship of the lessons of the fourth quarter to the lessons that preceded and those that follow in the future. Secondly, it is to help teachers to see the total scope of the quarter's lessons. Thirdly, it is to point out a few particular emphases that should be stressed. Finally it is to mention a few sources that may prove helpful in the preparation of the lessons.

I. RELATION TO THE LESSONS OF OTHER QUARTERS

Last quarter we had a series of lessons taken primarily from the book of Proverbs. We discussed many areas of Christian living, areas in which we are to bear fruit. We saw again that we have not lived in accordance with God's will in all details and were challenged to show a more sincere and effective Christian testimony in every area of Christian living.

In the first quarter of the new year we will be discussing the Great Christian Teachings of the Christian Church. Certainly, we again need to emphasize our beliefs. We have come through a period in which education and the Church have minimized beliefs. We have discovered that we do not produce the kind of world we want this way. Christian leaders are again stressing the fact that we need to know what we believe. This is true in the Mennonite Church as well as in all churches. The first quarter of the new year should be a quarter in which we take our Sunday school lessons seriously.

Having separate series of lessons on practice and faith presents a problem. We have made this division too much in the Church, and we have groups that stress either one or the other. The lessons of the fourth quarter will help us to overcome this problem of separating these two areas.

II. THE SCOPE OF THE LESSONS FOR THE FOURTH QUARTER

The lessons for the fourth quarter are called: "The Letters of Early Church Leaders: General Epistles, Hebrews, and Revelation." The interesting thing about this series of lessons is that even though many of them have specific subjects, many of which are practical in nature, that in almost each case one is reminded that faith and works are inseparably bound together.

In many of the lessons we are reminded that we are redeemed by the grace of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and then in the same lesson are reminded too that there are certain tests of this Christian experience. We are reminded that we must manifest this inner experience by our outward actions in all we do and say. It will be well for us to point out this relationship constantly during this quarter.

III. PARTICULAR EMPHASES TO STRESS THIS QUARTER

This quarter is again filled with lessons that provide material that we need to emphasize. Naturally there are things to emphasize in all lessons. I want to mention only a few areas that should be particularly stressed:

1. The fact that the Christian religion is based on a personal faith in God's perfect sacrifice, our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. The first three lessons of the quarter in the book of Hebrews emphasize this fact. After our series of practical lessons it is well to emphasize the source center of our faith.

2. The relation of faith and works. The first lesson from the book of James for October 26 is the classic discussion of this, and it will be well for us to see again this relationship so that we can see that there is but one gospel which is a total gospel and that we cannot separate these two parts of it.

3. Nonconformity to the world. The second lesson from the book of James for November 2, is on Christian Standards of Conduct. I think it is well for us to emphasize here among other things the doctrine of nonconformity to the world.

While we do not believe that this doctrine or principle must be expressed through a particular type of dress, yet we must teach the doctrine as it is portrayed in the Scripture, the fact that the Christian is not a part of the world but that he must live above the world, on a higher plane.

4. Nonresistance. Nonresistance, or rather the positive aspect of the principle, the way of Love should be stressed in the lesson for November 23. There is a tendency for us to neglect our teaching on this principle now that much of the tension of the war is over. Since this is a part of the total gospel we should stress it each quarter, particularly when a lesson fits this teaching as it does here.

5. The three lessons on the Book of Revelation during the last three Sundays of the quarter should be particularly helpful to us. The first lesson is Loyalty under Persecution, emphasizing the fact that God would guide and help the Christians to overcome and endure and that He would have the final word. As we think of our history and also of our immediate problem of displaced persons throughout the world this lesson will mean much to us and should give us renewed hope to carry out our task. The final lesson on God's Eternal Rule is a lesson on Heaven. We have not stressed the future life enough. It may be that some previous generations may have stressed the future life too much, stressing it to the exclusion of the life we live here and now. However, this is the Christian's hope and is a part of the total gospel and should receive it's proper emphasis.

Paul Shelly, head of the Bible department of Bluffton College, is chairman of the Curriculum Committee, which is a subcommittee of the Board of Education.

Since it is a part of our quarter's lessons we should make good use of the opportunity to stress the personal hope we have in God's eternal plan and purpose for us.

IV. SUGGESTED SOURCES FOR PREPARING LESSONS

There are many good sources which can be used for lesson preparation. Among these already used by many Sunday schools, the New Century Leader by David C. Cook Company and the Old Mennonite teachers' quarterly are the most common. There are weaknesses in both of these. The New Century Leader does not give our own emphases on some of the lessons while the Old Mennonite quarterly is weak in some phases, too. Consequently, I would recommend that Sunday schools give their teachers both of these sources since they supplement each other. In addition I would like to suggest the commentaries by Charles R. Erdman on Hebrews, the General Epistles, and Revelation. These can be secured for one dollar a book. The brief commentary on Revelation called "Christ the Redeemer and Judge" by John C. Wenger will also prove helpful.

A TESTIMONY

(Upon invitation of the Foreign Mission Board, Miss Olga Friesen did missionary work among the Hopi Indians of Arizona this past summer. The following is a testimony by her, written from Tuba City, Arizona, on August 26, 1947.)

"The Lord hath done great things for us; whereof we are glad."—Psa. 126:3

I certainly must say that the Lord has done marvelous things for me this summer while working among the Indians in Hopiland. He has rewarded me above that which I am worthy of.

I, first of all, must thank the Mission Board for making it possible for me to come to Arizona and help with the work that is being carried on by the Mennonites among the Hopis. These people are really stooped in heathen darkness. They need to be told the story of Christ till they let the blood of Christ cleanse them from their sins. I had not realized that in our America there were people living like we are told they live in the foreign fields—actually worshiping the devil.

I received many blessings from the Lord as I taught the young souls out of His Word. In all the schools I have been teaching either the junior or intermediate classes. We started teaching in Old Oraibi where we had an enrollment of about thirty-seven. Three of these were mothers, who also came to learn more about the Bible. We then continued in our teaching by going to Bellemont where we had an enrollment of about forty-two. At Bellemont Mrs. Suderman had a sewing class, while Miss Warkentin and I had the children. After the two weeks at Bellemont we went to Moencopi to help Rev. and Mrs. Wiebe in their Bible school. Here we had by far the largest enrollment. We had an enrollment of about ninety-two. The classes were large, but with the help of the Lord it was possible to have so many in one class. After having our closing program in Moencopi I went back to Oraibi to help with the last week of Bible school in New Oraibi. We had an enrollment of about fifty-eight. In Oraibi we had one Jewish boy and also two Catholic girls who attended the Bible school. Lou, the little Jewish boy, made his decision for Christ one day, and he also gave his testimony before the whole school. Although not in every school did we see a definite stand taken for the Lord, we rest on His promise that His Word "shall not return unto me void, but shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it."

One incident, which was so precious, I must relate and I certainly want to give glory to the Lord for this. On July 30 we had our regular midweek service in Moencopi. The invitation was given at the close of the meeting, but no outward sign was evident of any one yielding to the Holy Spirit's wooing. After the closing prayer, Jacqualine, nine years old, came up to me and whispered into my ear that she wanted to become a Christian when she was older. The Lord here gave me an opportunity to tell her that "now is the accepted time, now is the day of salvation." After talking with her about ten minutes she yielded and accepted the Lord as her Saviour. In the meantime Miss Warkentin had led Lucy, who is twelve years, to know the Lord as her own personal Saviour. These two girls went out of the church with faces radiant. The girls did not stop here but went right out and told the children outside what they had done. That evening we were about to switch off our bedroom light for the night when we heard someone calling us. We went to the back door, and here these same two girls were bringing another girl to us who also wanted to accept Christ. The next afternoon they brought still another girl. We certainly do praise and thank the Lord for these four girls, but they surely do need our prayers to help them in their young Christian lives.

ROSES IN DECEMBER

The last rose of summer will be shedding its petals before long and with the coming of the cold weather you may happen to see that your subscription expires sometime in November or December.

It is hard to have roses in December but it can be done.

Like the sweet perfume of the summer rose, so a subscription renewal in October when it only expires in December brightens up the entire office, eases up the work of the subscription clerks, and brings us the assurance of people whose good will for their MENNONITE is firm and strong.

An extra rose—send along with your subscription renewal, now, one also for some friend who may not be able to get the MENNONITE for himself.

QUALITIES THAT MAKE FOR GOOD SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHING

by Henry Harder

To discuss this topic it will be necessary to limit ourselves to the following: the class room, the curriculum and its material, and the teacher.

The well arranged and equipped class room is essential for good Sunday school teaching. Suitable chairs and desks for the different ages, well lighted and ventilated rooms, clean walls and floors, a Bible, a map of the world and one of the Holy Land, a picture of Jesus (one suitable of each age group) and other appropriate pictures of the Bible, of the home, or of nature are helpful in successfully teaching a Sunday school class. Every class room should be supplied with a black board and white or colored chalk. Besides being aids to teaching, these give the newcomer or passing stranger the feeling that the church, the parents of the church, and the teacher care and give diligence to the Lord's command "teaching them to observe all thing whatsoever I have commanded you." For the regular Sunday school pupil whether it be a child, youth, or adult, the class room may well be a sanctum which he will enter with diligence, reverence, and eager anticipation to learn more of the unsearchable riches that are his in Christ Jesus.

For example, the kitchen of a church, or a dark corner under the stairway, or a table in the hall, will not give the atmosphere of reverence and worship and learning for a catechism class or any other class. In so many ways members of our Mennonite churches have replaced the old with the new: reed organ with the grand piano, pipe organ, or Hammond organ, the plain dressed choir with a robed choir, etc., but in many instances very little is being done to improve our Sunday school rooms so as to make for better Sunday school teaching. A gallon of paint, a brush, the concerted efforts of the Sunday school superintendent, pastor, members of the church, and the boys and girls of the Sunday school can do much to better the appalling situation of the average Sunday school class room.

The material we use in our Sunday school determines the quality of our teaching. The Bible is the matchless textbook of religion. It is the great repository of spiritual wisdom through the ages. It is God's Word to man and the primary source to which we must go for religious instruction and inspiration. Jesus said, "Search the scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me." (John 5:39) The Bible is the center and foundation of the religious curriculm. In addition to the use of the Bible, it becomes necessary to draw material from other sources: nature, biography, history, music, science, art, and life itself. The teacher should ever endeavor to use this wealth of material and weld it together with a common purpose and permeate it with the religious motive and application so that it will touch the child's spiritual thought and feeling at many points of his experience, and the Bible itself will take on a deeper meaning in the child's daily life.

In the selection of the printed Sunday school material it is important to evaluate it according to a high religious standard. What attitude does the material reveal toward the Bible, what is the balance between doctrine and conduct, what type of theology does it represent, does it hold to any distinctive Mennonite beliefs, and how is it adopted to age groups. In many of our Mennonite Sunday schools this criteria in the selection of its material has not been observed. The Curriculum Committee of the General Conference has evaluated much available church school material on this basis and made its recommendation to our conference churches.

Space does not allow a discussion of the advantages of a graded Sunday School. Wherever possible churches should by all means introduce the graded Sunday school system, for it definitely makes for a better Sunday school and more effective teaching.

A word or two about music in our Sunday schools. No other form of expression can take the place of music in creating a spirit of reverence and devotion, or in inducing an attitude of worship and inspiring religious feeling and emotion. Children ought to sing much in Sunday school. Greatest care should be given to the selection of hymns for children's singing. Let it be music adapted to the class or department with a text that is worthy, interesting, devotional, and with words within the child's understanding and interest.

A well equipped Sunday school room, a closely graded Sunday school, and the best available Sunday school material, however, will not assure good Sunday school teaching. To do that, it takes a consecrated Christian teacher. A teacher who has experienced a personal relation with God through faith in the atoning merits of Christ the Savior and who knows what is true and central in his life because he himself has experienced it can impart it to others. Teaching that is truly Christian comes with the authority of personal experience and is so received by pupils, whatever they may do with the message or the messenger.

To this quality, so important to a Sunday school teacher, it is vital that the teacher possess teaching abilities and a knowledge of the pupil and an understanding of the methods of teaching. The Christian teacher of today who is unprepared for his specific work is at a tremendous disadvantage. And his being at a disadvantage reflects discredit not only upon him, but upon the cause for which he stands.

Effectiveness in teaching depends largely upon the adequacy of preparation. Well-trained teachers make good schools where pupils learn what they are taught. For that reason it is most important that the teacher give much time and effort to diligent preparation of the lesson. The Sunday school, too, should put forth diligent effort to train teachers for this so vital church activity. Less time for social activities and clubs and more for Sunday school will do much toward better and stronger churches. The Sunday school training classes must receive faithful attention by the pastor, the church, and the Sunday school and all who are willing to teach children.

To what extent does the Sunday school teacher avail himself or herself of the spiritual ministry of the church? Active participation in mid-week Bible studies and prayer meetings and any other spiritual services of the church are so very essential to the teacher and his or her ministry.

In conclusion, the local church needs to practice vigilance in her teaching ministry. The Sunday school, next to the Christian home is our most opportune place to bring our children and young people face to face with Jesus Christ, our Savior and Lord, and to teach them how to meet life's most varied situations.

Always, the truly Christian teacher and Sunday school will realize their utter dependence upon the Holy Spirit. The work we are doing in Sunday school is God's work and the school is a channel through which God operates. If our Lord and Master Teacher, Jesus Christ, depended upon God for all that He did and taught, how much more should we. What He did was the expression of God's working through Him, and the words He spoke were the words God had given Him. Let the Sunday school and the teacher put their trust in the Holy Spirit to teach more perfectly God's truth to man and our Sunday schools will be effective.

By Cornelius Krahn

A Century of Mennonite Missions. It was in 1847 in Holland that Mennonites for the first time began organized activities to spread the gospel in heathen countries. This was the result of revival influences from England. The Dutch Mennonites logically chose the Dutch East Indies as their mission field. Soon the Russian and German Mennonites joined in the support of this enterprise and gradually furnished most of the missionaries. World War I cut Russia off and World War II eliminated Germany. Repeatedly the Dutch sought American help in their endeavors. After World War I Rev. J. M. Leendertz visited American Mennonite congregations in behalf of their mission work. Somehow no cooperation was ever achieved. Now the Dutch and the small Swiss congregations are the sole supporters of the mission work. Worse than that is the fact that the mission work and the mission field suffered very severely during and after the war. Even at present it is still cut off from the home land. Many missionaries have lost their lives. Mrs. Schmitt and Mrs. Stauffer, now in Reedley, California, are the surviving widows of two missionaries. A Dutch missionary who recently visited eighty congregations in Holland reported an increased interest among the Dutch Mennonites in their mission work. The Dutch Mennonite Weekblad frequently discusses the problems resulting in connection with the present relationship of Holland and Indonesia.

Who Are the Mennonites? is the question that is being raised today by many people in Germany who are receiving help "in the name of Christ." Under the title "Who Are Our Helpers?" a German pastor informs his readers as follows: "Whoever has had insight into the relief work of the small Mennonite churches can only be full of deep admiration and appreciation in regard to this magnificent manifestation of Christian faith and active, unselfish, and gracious Christian charity. The Mennonites in USA and Canada number approximately 170,000, and their sacrifices for Germany are larger than those of any other American church. Most of the Mennonites are farmers or middle-class people, none are capitalists; yet each of the members of their congregations has given more only for Germany last year than on the average each German paid for his church."

". . . . Their gifts do not come in appreciation for some good their ancestors might have received in Germany. True, the Prussian kings offered them a home because of their industry in trade and colonization; but even then their principles led to unbearable conflicts in time. In the midst of Protestant churches they lived as strangers. Yet today, with all the world turning away from Germany in hatred and despise, they come to our aid as the first ones, faithful to their principles that a Christian must help him whom no one helps. Even before the shipments of love gifts was permitted they filled their warehouses by planned collections. Now their shipments come in a regular, steady flow . . ."

"A church that does all that to complete strangers without any secondary object of "propagande", does it not prove an ecumenical attitude of which we who come from the larger official churches can learn much? Their interpretation of the Gospel, their imperturbable seriousness about the Sermon on the Mount, their will of love and peace that bear such fruit, should they not have something to tell us?" (From Mitteilungen aus dem Hilfswerk sent in by Robert Kreider).

—Bethel Church, Wolf Point, Montana: In looking back this past summer we truly can say that the Lord has showered great blessings upon us, in the material as well as in the spiritual. He gave us a special blessing that he saw fit to have Rev. J. J. Esau minister to us the past three months. We deemed it a great privilege because we were a flock without a shepherd. A great interest was shown during the daily vacation Bible school the last two weeks in June, when Rev. and Mrs. Dan Toavs, who were in charge with three teachers from Wheaton College, namely: Rev. and Mrs. John Hall, Miss Ann Wilmarth and Rev. and Mrs. John Esau conducted the work. Forty-four children were present daily. Following the vacation Bible school, Rev. Esau instructed a class of young people in God's word to prepare themselves for baptism. Thirteen souls were baptized, and eighteen in all were received into the church. During the time Rev. and Mrs. Esau were in our midst they visited thirty-nine homes and were able to uplift many a burdened heart and strengthen them spiritually. The last Sunday in August we had our annual young people's "Rally Day." A very large audience was present. The speakers for the day were, Rev. J. J. Esau, who was in charge in the forenoon, and Brother Clarence Bartel, who was in charge in the afternoon, and Rev. Dan Toavs, Rev. Carl Dick, and Rev. Art Fleming. The main topic for the day was, "The Pre-eminent Christ." In the evening session the installation of our new pastor, Rev. B. J. Nickel took place. He was installed by Rev. J. J. Esau. The other speakers, Rev. Dan Toavs and Rev. Jacob Hoffman, gave words of encouragement to our new pastor. Pleasant memories will linger with us as we think back to the happenings which took place during the summer months.—A. A. Toavs.

—Immanuel Church, Moundridge, Kansas; A very impressive and beautiful consecration service was conducted by Rev. Garman Wedel for little Margie Kaye Jantz on September 28. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clement Jantz, prayerfully consecrated this little one to full time service for Christ.

—Bergthal Church, Pawnee Rock, Kansas: Delegates gave us interesting Conference reports during the sermon hour Sunday morning. The Mission Workers made twelve comforters recently, packed clothing for relief and also forty Good Will Bundles for Christmas gifts, the latter having been donated by Sunday school classes and individuals. A large group enjoyed the nature program and the basket dinner at the Rudiger Park. Earl Koehn gave a fine report of his trip to Greece. This program and picnic is sponsored annually by the Mission Workers.—Corr.

—First Church, Fredonia, Kansas: Rev and Mrs. Henry Thiessen left a week early for General Conference in order to visit relatives in Ontario. From there they went to the Ministers' Retreat at Shipshewana, Indiana, and from there to Berne. They report a blessed time. On September 4, Leo Thiessen, son of Rev. and Mrs. Thiessen, was united in marriage to Miss Mary Bruner of Moline, Kansas. They are now at home in Independence, Kansas. On September 21, Missionary Lester Wuthrich and wife visited our church and brought the message in the morning. In the afternoon he gave us an interesting talk on his experience in the Pacific. Alma Schmidt and Elfrieda Thiessen are attending Bible school at the Berean Academy, Elbing, Kansas. Mr. and Mrs. Milford Schmidt are attending Bible school in Colorado Springs.—Mrs. Alvin Schmidt, Corr.

—Peter and Frieda Dyck were in Eastern Pennsylvania recently. One evening they spoke in the Zion Church, Souderton, to an Eastern District Conference gathering, and the following evening they showed their pictures at the Souderton high school. Over 1,300 people attended the second evening at which time offerings totaling $1,659 were received for relief work.

—Paraguayan soldiers dug trenches and fought in one of the camps in which refugees were staying, but according to Cornelius De Fehr who reports, the troops behaved very orderly and took no property from the Mennonites. Neither were any of the refugees hurt. De Fehr reports that all young men on up to middle-aged men (Paraguayan) were recently conscripted to bear arms. Some evaded conscription by hiding in the forests and others went over to the rebels. The report by De Fehr was written August 19 and states that the government forces had taken

BETHEL COLLEGE CHURCH CELEBRATES ITS FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY

Sunday, October 26, will be a great day at the Bethel College Church, North Newton, Kansas, when an all-day program will be given to celebrate the fifty years of the church's organized work. The principal speakers for the occasion are Rev. J. N. Smucker, Bluffton, Ohio, former pastor of the church, and Theodore O. Wedel, Warden of the College of Preachers, Washington, D. C., and Canon of Washington Cathedral. Mr. Wedel grew up on the Bethel Campus as the son of C. H. Wedel, the first president of the college. The various church choirs and the College A Cappella Choir will furnish special music.

The Bethel College Church, organized in 1897 with ninteen charter members, has had a steady growth, under the guidance of God, to its present membership of nearly 500. Throughout the years the congregation has worshipped in the college chapel but has plans under way now to build a church on the campus as soon as conditions permit.

All former members and friends of the church, as well as friends in the surrounding churches, are cordially invited to spend the day, or a part of it, with us. A large crowd is expected for the evening service in Memorial Hall to hear a concert by the A Capella Choir and the closing address by Canon Wedel.—Lester Hostetler, Minister

The 100% PLAN of Church Subscri

What It Is

THE HUNDRED PER CENT PLAN of church subscriptions makes it possible for a church, as a church, to place a copy of our Conference publications into each Mennonite home each week. Those who prefer the English language may receive each week THE MENNONITE; those who prefer German may receive DER BOTE UND DER CHRISTLICHER BUNDESBOTE.

THE HUNDRED PER CENT PLAN is also used in connection with the children's papers—JUNIOR MESSENGER and the KINDERBOTE (German). By THE HUNDRED PER CENT PLAN, the church acts as the subscriber rather than the individual reader.

What It Does

By THE HUNDRED PER CENT PLAN, the circulation of our church papers has increased within a few years from about three thousand to almost nine thousand readers. The greater the number of readers, the greater enthusiasm there is for the work of the Conference.

THE HUNDRED PER CENT PLAN brings ALL the Conference news to ALL the churches EVERY week. It unites our people in our common undertakings. It reduces the cost of publications by enlarging the number of readers and securing better prices on printing. It brings the church paper to the absentee members of the church and keeps them informed as to what the home-church and other churches of the Conference are doing. It binds them to the home church with cords of love.

It brings to the pastor (or to the church secretary) each month the new addresses of members of your congregation who have moved during the month. Thus, it enables you to serve your absentee members more effectively.

THE PLAN gives each of the Conference boards an effective outlet for publicity. Are there a thousand refugees to be moved to Paraguay? Quickly the Mennonite Central Committee gets its news to the churches through the papers and Lo! it is done. Is there starvation in China? The Emergency Relief Board makes its appeals through the church papers, knowing that THE PLAN brings its news into every home and Lo! there is bread! So, every Conference board or committee uses the columns of the church papers freely. It is for them and it is for you!

Finally, it assists those who would like to have the paper, but who cannot afford it, to have the fellowship of reading just as other more fortunate brethren.

How It Works

1. The subscription price for either THE MENNONITE or DER BOTE is 10 per cent less under the 100 per cent plan than the regular rate for individual readers subscribing personally.

2. The church joining THE PLAN agrees to place at least one subscription in each home.

3. Where one member of the family is away from home, such absentee members may receive a copy at the address where they are.

4. First, the church officially adopts THE PLAN and appoints one person, usually the secretary of the —Brazilian Mennonites, forbidden to worship in German during the war, are again carrying on their worship in that language. Ordinary conversation can also again be carried on in German. This is due to the fact that the government has partly changed its regulations. However, instruction in the public schools is still in Portuguese and must be carried out by native-born citizens of Brazil. In order to maintain the German language and their religion, the Mennonite settlers are contemplating the opening of Bible schools, similar to those found in Canada.—Der Bote und Christlicher Bundesbote

—First Church, Aberdeen, Idaho: On September 9, in the evening, a large group of relatives and friends gathered at the church to help Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hege celebrate their fiftieth wedding anniversary. A large number of our young people have again left for school as students and teachers. We miss them in our services and young people's meetings, Ruth Dalke and Jay K. Eden of Canyon City, Utah, are to be married in our church on September 26.—E. Bartel, Corr.

—First Mennonite Church, Reedley, California: Missionary Duerksens arrived with their jeep at Mother Harder's home to await passage to India. They had charge of church services on Sunday, showing pictures in the evening. Emma Ruth was surprised by the ladies of the Worthwhile Circle with a personal to the General Conference Publications church, as the one person with whom the Publication Office carries on all correspondence.

5. The entire cost of THE PLAN is assumed as a part of the church budget like any other item, multiplying the subscription rate by the number of homes, less 10 per cent. Experience shows that where it is not put on the budget as a part of the regular church program, THE PLAN does not succeed. No special collections or solicitations must be made for this particular branch of the church work—it must be an integral part of the regular total program. It is NOT a plan where INDIVIDUALS can profit by lower subscription rates— it is a plan where ALL profit by SHARING.

6. The church secretary prepares a list of all persons who are to get either THE MENNONITE or DER BOTE. This list is mailed to the Publication Office. There the names are checked against present mailing lists to see which members are already getting the paper.

7. Those who have not been getting it are placed on the mailing list. Those who have been getting it are changed from individual to church subscriptions. All copies are mailed to individual addresses.

8. Those who have been getting it may have paid in advance for some time. Such credit for advance payment is applied as part-payment on the total amount charged to the church.

9. The church can begin THE PLAN at any time and the first payment is calculated only for the portion of the year which remains until December 31. A church which begins July 1 pays only one-half a year to begin with; a church beginning October 1 pays only one-fourth of a year.

10. On January 1 the bill for the following year is mailed to the church secretary and can be paid at any time thereafter. The church gets a discount of 10 per cent from the regular subscription rates.

11. Thereafter, no bill is presented during the year even though new names are added or occasionally some drop out, because each year the AVERAGE number of names on the list in the previous year is used as the basis for billing. This gives the church the benefit of all unexpired portions which would otherwise have to be refunded in cash and it eliminates having to pay for each new name added during the year. This is absolutely fair, both to the local church and to the Publication Board.

12. Each month the postmaster where your members are located informs the Publication Office which of your members have moved away, and gives us their new address. We immediately change these for you and notify your church secretary of these changes. In this way, your church can keep its list of members up to date and correct as nearly as possible.

13. In one church, the young people have assumed, as a project, to boost this PLAN in the local church. In others the pastor, seeing the great advantages which come to the local church, presents the matter before the church. Women's associations, always keenly interested in building up the loyalties of our young people, may urge the adoption of THE PLAN or the Men's Brotherhood may accept this as a project. But ALWAYS, once it is adopted, it is a CHURCH PROJECT —one of the finest pieces of continuous education which the church can possibly undertake.—MENNONITE PUBLICATION OFFICE, 722 MAIN STREET, NEWTON, KANSAS.

gift shower. Miss Ruth is awaiting passage to India, where she is to teach music in southern India's school for missionary children. The children of Missionary John N. C. Hiebert, whom she taught while they lived in Reedley on their furlough, will be her students in India. Miss Ruth has been such a mainstay of our church that we wonder how we can spare her. But God's ways are best, though at times it is hard to understand them.—Corr.

—Salem Church, Dalton, Ohio: Sunday, September 21, was the day chosen for the marriage of Miss Camilla Gorby of Rawson, Ohio, to Mr. David Rosenberger, son of Rev. and Mrs. A. S. Rosenberger. They will reside at Columbus, and the groom will continue his studies at Ohio State. Howard Yoder of Wooster, Ohio, challenged our stewardship for our part in helping European relief work as he related his summer's experiences to our congregation, Sunday morning, September 24.

—Bethel College Church: In a congregational meeting Sunday, September 28, the church voted to experiment with duplicate worship services the first two Sundays in November. The marriage of Marna Lou Epp to Ray Edward Lawrence took place in Wichita, September 21.—Eldon W. Graber, Corr.

—Zion Church, Elbing, Kansas: September 28, the Sunday morning message was delivered by Dr. G. Christian Weiss, president of the Gospel Missionary Union of Kansas City. Dr. Weiss is conducting community revival meetings September 17 to October 5 at Whitewater. These are sponsored by a number of churches of various denominations.—Mrs. Louis A. Janzen, Corr.

—First Mennonite Church, Reedley, California: The first California retreat for Homebuilders was a decided success at Lake Sequoia, according to the eight families from our church represented there. Our conference delegates have returned from Berne with challenging reports. Visitors in the community have been Mrs. T. J. Cooprider of Hesston, Kansas, Mrs. Marietta Carsten with her three daughters from Camino, Rev. and Mrs. Elmer Friesen and daughter from Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Roth from Upland.—Corr.

—Salem Church, Freeman, South Dakota: We have been privileged to hear first hand stories of the relief work being done in Europe and Paraguay, brought to us by Miss Esau and Mr. Dick. The pictures shown, and the experiences of which they tell, help to bring home to us the conditions which are almost impossible for us to comprehend. The buildings which were purchased at the Sioux Falls air base have been taken down and the material brought to Freeman. The work of erecting the new gymnasium-auditorium on the college campus will go forward immediately. This new building will be a valuable addition to the college and the community as it will provide ample seating facilities for community gatherings. It will be the home of the General Conference when it meets in 1950. Five new members were received into the church on Sunday, September 28. We welcome them into our midst.—Elma Waltner, Corr.

—Johannestal Church, Hillsboro, Kansas: Our pastor, Rev. J. M. Regier, has been asked to speak at a Sunday school convention at Kitchener and Waterloo, Ontario, Canada, on October 11 and 12. This has grown into quite a visitation program. Following is the itinerary prepared for him: October 8, Leamington; October 9, Port Rowan; October 10, Stirling Avenue, Kitchener; October 11, 12, Waterloo; October 13, Vineland; October 14, Niagara-on-the-Lake; October 15, Toronto; October 16, St. Catharines.—Mrs. Arnold Plenert, Corr.

—First Church, Nappanee, Indiana: A few weeks ago Rev. and Mrs. Malcolm Wenger, missionaries working among our Cheyenne Indians in Montana, spent a Sunday with us. Twenty-one members of our church were at Berne for some part of the Conference. Our September offering for the seminary is to be a memorial offering in memory of Dr. A. Warkentin. September 28 is the day for church homecoming. President L. L. Ramseyer of Bluffton College is our speaker for the morning service, and Dr. C. Henry Smith will be our speaker for the evening. This is the Sunday we are to bring our canned goods for Bluffton College and the Seminary. We are also having an all-church carry-in dinner after the morning service.—Mrs. Loyal Corwin, Corr.

—Bethel Church, Hydro, Oklahoma: A basket dinner was given in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Frey and family, Sunday September 28, at the dining hall in Hydro. Around eighty people were present.—Wilfred Ewy, Corr.

KANSAS WHEAT FOR RELIEF DRIVE

On October 5 the Kansas Wheat for Relief Drive got under way. This is certainly a very commendable effort sponsored by the Kansas Council of Churches. We can only thank God for the concern of the larger number of people about the terrible suffering of peoples in Europe.

We want to call attention to this paragraph in the promotional literature sent out by Milton R. Vogel of the Kansas Council of Churches.

> This program should not conflict with any denominational drive for relief which may be made on World-wide Communion Sunday. It does not make any difference what channel relief funds or gifts in kind go. If a denominational drive is on, push this through that drive. The state committee is chiefly interested in promoting the cause."

Since the Mennonite Central Committee has a large relief program requiring large donations of wheat and flour and other gifts in kind, this letter of Mr. Vogel suggests to Mennonite churches that they can send their donations of wheat through their own denominational channels. Such channelling of gifts through M.C.C. channels will therefore in no sense hinder or discourage the contribution of others to this cause. We would therefore urge our Mennonite churches and communities to channel their contributions as they have so generously done in other years to M.C.C. relief efforts.—Henry A. Fast, Chairman, Emergency Relief Board.

—The Boynton Mennonite Church, Hopedale, Illinois, is helping in the purchase of an auto for Dr. Schwartz on the African mission field. The C. E. is sponsoring this project, and its share of the total amount to be raised is sixty-five dollars.

—Rev. Wilmer Shelly, Topeka, Indiana has accepted the charge of the Hereford Mennonite Church, Bally, Pa. He will begin his new duties the beginning of October. Rev. Shelly will move into the former David Gehman home on Main Street, Bally, on October 1. Mr. Paul Clemmer of Philadelphia is the newly elected deacon of the Hereford Church, and he was formally installed into office on September 21 by Dr. Elmer E. S. Johnson our retiring minister. Dr. Johnson's health has improved a great deal, and he has been worshipping with us for a few Sundays. Rev. Cornelius Wall of Mountain Lake, Minnesota, who is attending Princeton Theological Seminary, has been supply minister of the Bally Church since the beginning of April. We thank him for his untiring labors with us and wish him God's richest blessings as he continues with work at the Seminary.—Mae Latshaw, Corr.

College and Seminary News

BETHEL COLLEGE

All conflicting meetings and activities have yielded this week to special Christian Life Week services sponsored by the SCA and now in progress from September 29 to October 3. Rev. Donovan E. Smucker, Professor of Theology at Mennonite Biblical Seminary, addresses the students and faculty each morning and evening in developing the general theme of the week—"Toward a Biblical Faith" — and also spends much time in private counselling with students. Student groups are in charge of the devotional periods and prayer meetings.

Rev. J. F. Balzer, pastor of the First Congregational Church at Crete, Nebraska, has been announced as the speaker for the fifty-ninth anniversary program to be held on October 12, Founders' Day, in Memorial Hall. Friends of the College will have an opportunity to contribute to the annual Christian education thank offering, which has become ever more substantial with each year.

CANADIAN MENNONITE BIBLE COLLEGE

The Bethel Mission Church in which the Canadian Mennonite Bible College is to be housed has been a scene of intense activity during the past weeks. Carpenters, plasterers, electricians, furnacemen, and volunteer church members all have had a hand in preparing for the opening of the new school. On the evening of September 21 the young people donned their working clothes to help clean the church. On the evening of the twenty-fifth the ladies of the church continued where the young people had left off. It has been an inspiring experience to see the interest shown in such an endeavor to prepare an attractive and inviting home for the new College.

The combined choirs of the Winnipeg area also have practiced under the direction of Mr. John Conrad to render several special numbers for the formal school opening on October 5. A choir of one hundred voices is anticipated for this occasion. It is indeed with gratitude and praise to our Heavenly Father that we enter into the spirit of that occasion.

FREEMAN JUNIOR COLLEGE

The annual Freeman Junior College Corporation meeting was held Sept. 19. Rev. T. A. van der Smissen of the Bethesda Church near Marion led in the devotions. The three members of the Board of Education chosen at this meeting were: Dr. Isaac Tieszen and A. V. Tieszen of Marion, and J. T. Gross of Freeman. The new officers of the Board, chosen at their last meeting, are: President Adolph Preheim; Vice-President Rev. Martin Kroeker; Secretary David P. Gross; Financial Committee, J. T. Gross and Carl Miller; Service Station Supervisor, J. T. Gross. David Decker Jr. of the Jamesville Bruderhof has enrolled at the College for special work. Jakob Friesen from Paraguay spoke to the Sunday school at the Bethany Church in Freeman. Rev. J. N. C. Hiebert, Mennonite Brethren missionary on leave from India, who is conducting meetings in the Gym sponsored by the Ministerial Association, spoke in chapel several times this week. Leland Voth of Newton, Kansas, is the College postman this year.

NATIONAL SERVICE BOARD COMMENTS ON UNIVERSAL MILITARY TRAINING

by Albert Gaeddert

Readers of The Mennonite will be interested to know that the National Service Board is being continued in Washington. During the war this board served as a liaison agency between the Brethren, Friends, Mennonites and other groups operating CPS camps and units and Selective Service System in Washington. During peace time this board continues to be the "eyes and ears" in Washington for the religious bodies, especially the so-called Historic Peace Churches. Paul Goering, Moundridge, Kansas, gives full time to this Board, and Ora Huston, from the Church of the Brethren gives half time to this Board.

Regarding Universal Military Training, these men size up the situation as follows: No scheduled hearings on U. M. T. have been made known, but it is reported that the committee will begin hearings soon after the next session of Congress begins. Whether a special session of Congress will be called is still unknown; if called, the immediate purpose would likely not be U. M. T. although it certainly is in the picture and in the expectation of the people in Washington. The War Department apparently feels confident that they will get U. M. T. in the next session of Congress. Those who follow legislative trends closely see the situation on this subject getting tighter and tighter.

The annual report of the American Civil Liberties Union has just been released in a booklet entitled "In Times of Challenge." There are several sections in this report relating to conscientious objectors to war, Selective Service draft cases, citizenship for C. O.'s, as well as other minority rights and issues. You may write for a complimentary copy of this report to the A.C.L.U., 170 Fifth Avenue, New York 10, N. Y.—Albert Gaeddert (Mr. Gaeddert is secretary of the Peace Committee of the General Conference.)

DR. H. A. FAST REPORTS ON EUROPEAN TRIP

by Eldon Graber

NORTH NEWTON, KANSAS, September 29. "The most acute need is for spiritual rebuilding," declared Dr. Henry A. Fast in a report of his European trip this summer given in the Student Union Room of Memorial Hall, Sunday evening, September 28, to college students and church members. He went on to say that the relief program of the Mennonite Central Committe had kept this need in mind, as well as the great demands for food and clothing.

Dr. Fast touched briefly on the events of his three month's journey which began the last week in May, 1947, and took him into France, Holland, Belgium, Denmark, and Germany. Everywhere the shortage of building materials and the lack of transportation facilities seemed to cripple the program of reconstruction.

"In some places one finds magnificent courage to rebuild," said Dr. Fast," and in other places, almost none." A shortage of Bibles and books in general is evident in Western Europe. University students are confronted with a shortage of both food and housing.

Dr. Fast reported that relief workers predict that food and clothing needs for European relief will be as great as last year, if not greater. This is due in part to unfavorable weather conditions in Western Europe.

Congress Likely To Consider Compulsory Military Training

New Booklet on Christian Mutual Aid by J. Winfield Fretz

AKRON, PA., September 26, 1947.—It seems apparent that when Congress reconvenes in its next regular session in January, or in its special session before that time, one of the questions to receive early consideration is that of compulsory military training. Although many religious, educational, labor and other groups are opposed to a program of compulsory military training, it is expected that various influential organizations and governmental officials will give considerable support for the passage of such legislation.

At this particular time Congressmen and others in governmental positions are especially eager to learn the attitudes of the people whom they represent. This affords a unique opportunity to give a Christian witness, pointing out the spiritual and moral principles involved in this question, and pleading that these principles be given consideration in making the decision.

Any of our people who feel led to express a concern on this question to their congressmen, either by personal contact during the congressional recess, or by writing to Washington, may secure information and assistance from the Peace Section, Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pennsylvania.

New Booklet on Christian Mutual Aid by J. Winfield Fretz

A valuable addition to Mennonite literature has been made recently in the writing of the booklet Christian Mutual Aid by J. Winfield Fretz. This is "A Handbook of Brotherhood Economics" which will be very useful among our people.

Brother Fretz is Chairman of the Aid Section of the Mennonite Central Committee. He has made an extensive study of the application of mutual aid as a Christian principle and has written this manual as a result of this study.

Distinction is made in the early part of the booklet between the literal meaning of cooperation and mutual aid. While cooperation may be used solely for the furthering of selfish ends and desires, "in genuine Christian mutual aid, there is as much concern for the other persons or group as for one's own."

In the various chapters, the practice of mutual aid is traced from early Biblical times to our present day. Special emphasis is given the growth of this practice in Anabaptist-Mennonite circles from the early seventeenth century until today. Mutual Aid activities are covered in all areas where Mennonites have settled, including Holland, Russia, United States, Canada, Brazil and Paraguay.

This handbook of mutual aid also offers the Scriptural background of these principles and gives practical suggestions for their operation in everyday living. Its purpose is to foster and promote the development of true Christian mutual aid in our Mennonite circles and communities. It is recommended for both group and personal study. Copies may be secured for twenty-five cents each, from the Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pennsylvania.

School Bags Are Appreciated

Concerning the Overseas School Bags, Cornelius Dyck, in the British Zone of Germany, writes: "These bags contain such a wonderful assortment of all the various commodities required for school children. As you know, all these items are extremely short or practically unobtainable in Germany at present. No paper is available unless five times as much old paper is given in return . . . . I wish you could have seen the gleam of expectation and gratitude which shone in the eyes of the youngsters."

Number of Relief Workers Reaches Peak

Thirty-eight workers have left for service abroad during the past five months, while fifty returned. The highest number of relief workers abroad was reached in July, when 317 were on the field. As time goes on, a higher percentage of workers on the field will be reaching the completion of their term of service. There is a need for qualified young people to replace those on the field whose terms are soon to end.

Five Mennonite Refugees Enter Canada

A mother, Mrs. Agate (Goosen) Rempel, and her four children, Margarete, Alfred, Erika and Herman arrived in Montreal on Sept. 20 aboard the S. S. TABINTA en route to British Columbia, Canada, where they will join relatives. This family was among the group of Russian Mennonites who fled into Holland several years ago, and received aid from the Dutch Mennonites and the Mennonite Central Committee. Their coming into Canada was sponsored by their relatives in Canada, and arrangements for passage were made by the Mennonite Central Committee.

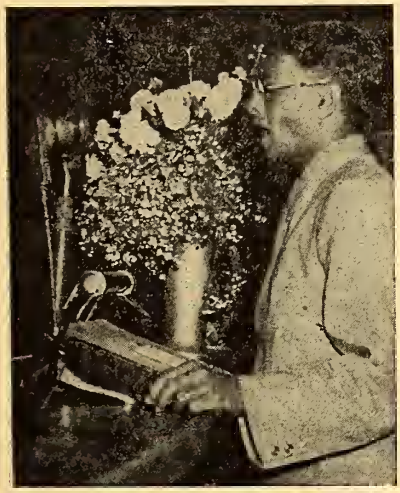
World Conference of Christian Youth

at Oslo, Norway

By Robert Kreider

(Robert Kreider, CRALOG representative and Director of MCC relief work in Germany, was appointed by the Mennonite Central Committee as observer-delegate to the World Conference of Christian Youth. Following is his report summarizing the discussion of the conference and giving his own reactions and observations.)

In its thousand years of history Oslo, Norway, never was host to a conference so widely representative of the peoples of the world as the World Conference of Christian Youth which met in Olso, July 23-31, 1947. There were 1,200 delegates from seventy-five countries of the world. In the hearts of all who gathered at Oslo there was a thankfulness to God that it was possible for Christian youth from all lands and races to assemble at Oslo. Only once before had there been such a conference. It was in Amsterdam in 1939 — a few weeks before the outbreak of World War II.



Dr. D. T. Niles, Ceylon, India, addressing the plenary session at Oslo on the subject "The God of the Bible in History."

Virtually all countries from all continents had sent delegates. Even nations behind the "Iron Curtain" had sent delegates, such as Poland, Finland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary. An invitation had been sent to the Christian Youth of the Soviet Union, but the reply from the Russian authorities was: "We are not yet ready to send a delegation."

The youth attending the conference were aged twenty to thirty. Approximately half represented denominational and church groups, and the remaining half represented Christian youth organizations such the YMCA, YWCA, and World Student Christian Federation.

Our Norwegian Hosts

The Norwegians were marvelous hosts. We shall not soon forget the hospitality of the Bang family who throughout the conference entertained us in their home. Their house overlooked the lovely Oslo Fjord. They were a consecrated Christian family— a family that had about them a spiritual glow. The people of Oslo took great delight in the delegates of various color and national costumes. The entrances to the conference halls were always clogged with Norwegian folk, holding their box cameras, wishing to catch a glimpse of these strange people from overseas. You will note if you consult a map that Oslo is on a side-road of Europe and people of far-off places are not often to be seen in this "land of the midnight sun."

The Day's Program

As is characteristic of most conferences, the program was full. First in the day was the worship service, conducted each morning in the traditional manner of a different Protestant group. In general we found the other church communions of the world more liturgical than is characteristic of Protestantism in America or what we find among our own Mennonite congregations in particular. Following this came a plenary session with one of the conference "headline" speakers. In the late morning the conference broke up into some forty discussion groups, each composed of about thirty persons. In the afternoon our discussion groups met again. Something special was planned for the evenings. One evening some twenty of the delegations presented songs of their native countries. Another evening the speaker was Bishop Berggrav, leader of the Norwegian Lutheran Church and famed prisoner of the Nazis during the Norwegian occupation. One night there was a special one-hour broadcast to the world. A unique event for all was a mass meeting on St. Olaf Day when 30,000 people of Oslo crowded into Oslo Stadium to receive the conference delegates and to commemorate the warrior-saint of Norway. Olaf is revered by the Norwegian as the man who brought Christianity to Norway and with his armies brought national unity.

One may wonder whether there was not a "confusion of tongues" at this world conference. I was surprised to learn that 83 per cent of the delegates gave English as their first choice among the languages. Both French and German figured prominently, however, as languages in the conference discussions.

Although the conference was really overwhelming in its size, and one was lost in the crowds, yet one did find real fellowship. In fact, the fellowship with Christian youth of other lands, races, and nations was the most unforgettable experience of Oslo. It was soul-stirring to meet dedicated Christian youth from every country. There was abroad in the conference a strong sense of spiritual kinship. One had but to introduce oneself to one's neighbor and soon one was in the heart of stimulating conversation which touched upon the deep concern of life. For most who attended the conference, it was their first trip abroad. The war years had intervened and had denied to this generation the joy of international contacts. Now again the doors were opening.

Spanning the Walls of Nationalism

When we met with youth of other countries we began to see ourselves and our own countries in a little better perspective. For example, we heard what others felt and thought about our own country, the United States. A Philippine girl spoke up in our discussion group to express her disapproval of American "imperialism" in her native land. It is refreshing and humbling to begin to see ourselves as others see us.

I sensed as never before how strong national loyalities are among people—even among Christians. There was a tendency for all to view his own nation with more sympathetic and less critical judgment than one judges his neighbors. But high as were the walls of nationalism, the bridges of Christian fellowship were able to span them. At Oslo were forty-five delegates from Holland and eleven from Indonesia. On the very eve of the conference war had broken out between their two countries. At Oslo the two delegations met together frequently and, as they reported, they "struggled with real searching of heart and with prayer" to submit a joint message to the conference. The youth of these two countries at war emerged with a common statement which contained the following: "The Indonesian and Dutch delegations . . . . have discussed and prayed together and are grateful that this is possible within the framework of this conference with its title: Jesus Christ is Lord, precisely at the moment when two peoples are at war with each other . . . . . The members of both delagations desire to continue to meet each other as brothers and sisters in Jesus Christ, in order to help clear the road toward cooperation between the two peoples on a basis of liberty and equal rights." The Dutch-Indonesian message was a moving experience for the conference.

Breadth of the Christian Community

All who were at Olso probably will come away from the conference with a feeling of encouragement on the width and breadth of the Christian enterprise. Admittedly Christianity is a minority movement in the world, but there is scarcely a place on the globe where there are not to be found small clusters of earnest Christians. I confess I was surprised and profoundly impressed with the vitality of the Christian life of those who came from the "new churches"—the missionary churches. They who are first generation Christians have a consecration, a devotedness to the gospel that puts to shame the older churches of the West. One cherishes the hope that the new churches of India and China might some day soon send their own missionaries to help us rewin the West for Christ.

Healing Unpleasant War Memories

It was a remarkable achievement that there could be at Olso delegates from the defeated nations—Germany, Austria, Hungary, Italy. Unfortunately the delegation from Japan did not arrive due to the complications of securing military exit permits from Japan. I was particularly eager to observe what the conference reaction would be to the German delegation. The delegation numbered twenty-four. No speaker at the conference received a greater ovation than did Pastor Niemoeller, prisoner for six years in a Nazi concentration camp. The German delegates expressed surprise over the kindly reception which they received from the other delegates. One young man, who is a student at the University of Gottingen, told me that Oslo has been an eye-opening experience for him. He said that he can better see Germany now as others see it from the outside. He added, "I have learned that it is not only Germany which has suffered during the war years and now since the war—but many countries have suffered intensely." He went on to say that he was going back to Germany to tell his fellow university students that Germany is not alone among the nations which have suffered. He explained that half the art of bearing one's own burden is the ability to look around and to find others who bear similar burdens. One afternoon we took a bus trip into the countryside near Olso. Seated in front of me was a German boy and beside him a Norwegian girl. We passed along the way a grey, formidable-looking structure. The Norwegian girl explained to us that during the German Occuption that had been a Nazi concentration camp for Norwegian women and she added that her sister had been a prisoner there for a year. The German boy asked again, "You mean, a concentration camp for women?" "Yes," she answered. Soon again we were singing folk songs of the different countries and it was the Norwegian girl who started the group singing the German Song, "Die Lorelei." Unpleasant war memories were healed at Oslo by the Christian spirit.

Oregon Young People Hold Sixth Retreat

by Elaine Widmer

The sixth Annual Oregon Young People's Retreat was held again this year at Trout Creek Camp, near Troutdale, Oregon.

A large number of young people attended the retreat and enjoyed the wonderful Christian fellowship with other young people.

The retreat theme was "And ye shall be Witnesses," Acts 1:8. This theme was relevant in all classes and was applied to each individual in his own life. The classes were conducted in the morning with the following instructors: "A Weekday Witness," Rev. W. A. Regier, Pratum; "A United Witness," Rev. Paul Roth, Barlow; "Our Heritage," Rev. Clyde Dirks, Portland; "The Witness of the Christian Home," Rev. P. A. Kliewer, Albany; Rev. Homer Leisy of Dallas gave a very interesting series of messages on the Tabernacle with his own illustrations, each evening at the fireside services.

Friday evening a very impressive communion service was conducted by the five pastors of the Oregon churches. Challenging to all retreaters was the climax services of Saturday evening when many young people made confessions and vows to God in an inspiring fagot service. These evening meetings were conducted by Rev. Leisy whose messages on the Tabernacle led up to the climax services.

Miss Ruth Jantzen of Paso Robles, California, was music instructor for the mixed chorus and orchestra.

During the surprise hour, 11:35 A. M. to 12:00, guests and visitors of the camp spoke to us. Among them were Miss Tooze, Oregon, W.C.T.U. president Miss Doris Andres, Shafter migrant worker, and also prayer meeting chairman for the retreat;and Dr. Weis.

Mrs. Ted Toews of Dallas, vice president, was dean of women and Mr. Frank Hostettler of Barlow was dean of men.

Mrs. Gladys Heyerly was head cook, and Mrs. Balzer, Mrs. Carl Waltner and Mrs. William Zehr were her helpers. All are to be complimented on the delicious meals they served us. Mrs. Paul Roth was dining room hostess.

Recreation in the afternoon was under the direction of Donald Emmert of Sweet Home. Horseshoe, ping pong, soft ball, and swimming were the main afternoon activities.

Chimes and organ music were played each morning from 6:45 to 6:55 over a public address system in Mr. Zehrs' cabin. This was a mild form of reveille.

The retreat was a great success again this year with many young people making decisions for the Lord and for His service. The retreat was under the capable leadership of Mr. William Zehr, president, who spent much of his time and efforts to make the retreat of 1947 successful.

Eternity of a Deed

He built a house; time laid it in the dust;
He wrote a book, its title now forgot;
He ruled a city, but his name is not
On any table graven, or where rust
Can gather from disuse, on marble bust.
He took a child from out a wretched cot,
Who on the state dishonor might have brought,
And reared him to the Christian's hope and trust.
The boy, to manhood grown, because a light
To many souls, and preached for human need
The wondrous love of the Omnipotent.
The work has multiplied like stars at night
When darkness deepens; every noble deed
Lasts longer than a granite monument.

When the General Conference first became interested in an organized program for its young people, it was a group of middle aged "young people" who took the initiative and made an effort to do something. That was thirty years ago, in 1917. It was at the Reedley, California, General Conference that the idea of a Young People's Union was first brought up. At first the Conference voted the idea down. But, later, when it was brought up again it was approved.

The first chairman of the committee of three responsible for the new youth program was Dr. C. E. Krehbiel. At the time of his appointment he was forty-eight years old! From that initial start, the young people's organization has been in the hands of leaders whose ages have gradually been diminishing. With the election of Kenneth Bauman, the Young People's Union has for the first time been led by a president who is under twenty-five years of age at election. Today the Young People's Union is in the hands of young people, thanks to the vision and efforts of "older young people" of another generation.

Two of the present officers are college age and are at present college students. The third of the three present officers is in Seminary. All three are young people, who are participants in the experiences of young people.

The Young People's Union faces an unusual challenge and opportunity because of this recent development — the election of young people into the position of leadership. The work of the Union is in the hands of young people. Will we pour forth our energy and zeal into its program proving ourselves to be a vital young cog in the life of the church, having ex-

An Answer to an Embarrassing Moment

by Kenneth Morse

Do you remember the time you went along with Harry in his car to a youth conference? After you got home you offered to pay the gas and oil. Harry wouldn't hear of it. He was making the trip anyway. But you wanted to share in the cost, and so you insisted. And the more you insisted, the stronger he protested. After three-and-one-half minutes of this verbal duelling, you said "O.K."—and secretly slipped the money in Harry's pocket when he turned to leave.

Unless you are the sort of person who takes every favor for granted, you have known many such embarrassing moments. You've been tempted to decline a ride or a milkshake simply because of the awkward moment that came when it was time to pay the bill.

Here's a simple suggestion that may spare you such uneasiness and encourage more sharing of good things. When you get into a situation where two people insist on paying, suggest that both pay and that the extra money be donated to a needy cause. If Harry won't take your money for gas and oil, tell him that you are sending it for the support of a war orphan or to buy dried milk for babies in Poland. Harry will be satisfied, you will feel that you've paid your way, and a baby's life in Poland may be saved.

If you run around with a gang of fellows or girls who like to do things together, why not suggest this practice to all of them? Then if you are the first to pick up the check and say, "This is on me," you can be certain that you're not only treating the bunch—you are also helping some worthy cause.

Yes, we know the situation is slightly different for a girl who is dated frequently and has her way paid. But why shouldn't she decide to share her good fortune with those less fortunate? She can match the expense of her soda or admission fee with an equal amount for the service offering next Sunday.

There aren't many really embarrassing moments for those who have learned to share.—Our Young People

Need Workers To Construct Home for the Mentally Ill

The construction work in connection with the Leitersburg Home for Mentally Ill is scheduled to begin the latter part of September. The need for carpenters and general laborers has been presented particularly to ex-CPS men.

Several have already made themselves available to form a core of workers which will see the project through, with the assistance of additional long and short term help as it becomes available.

We are in need of additional ex-CPS men as well as other interested persons who wish to contribute their services toward this building program. Write to Mental Health Services, MCC, Akron, Pennsylvania.

Voluntary Service Unit To Work with Epileptics

Early in November, an MCC Voluntary Service Unit will open at the Skillman State Village for Epileptics, Skillman, New Jersey. This mental institution was the location of one of the Service Units during the past summer, and the opportunities for further service there were so challenging that a year-round unit has been organized. Workers serve for a minimum of ten weeks, and may begin at the season most convenient. For a descriptive folder or other information on this work write to Voluntary Service, Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pennsylvania.

WHITEWATER, KANSAS, September 23.—Rev. Walter Gering recently served in the Emmaus Church, Whitewater, Kansas, through the sponsorship of the Junior C. E., showing his pictures of relief work abroad and giving an inspirational message by telling of his work among the refugees.

Instead of our annual youth rally, the C. E. societies this season are enjoying several weeks of meetings in Whitewater with Dr. G. Christian Weiss as speaker. We pray for a general revival in the hearts of many Christians as well as non-believers. These services are continuing from September 17 through October 5.—Emmaus C. E. reporter.

I saw a light
Fall from the Sabbath day
Upon my way.
It came from a brief hour
Within Thy Temple House
Where parted clouds
Had let the sunlight pass
Through painted glass
And the deep hues
Grew strangely bright
With glory jeweled light.
Thy House was beautiful
I thought.
In its stillness
The Book was read
And from the pages spread
This light upon the way
Where I must walk today.

"Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Christ Jesus"

As We See It:

FULL-TIME CHRISTIAN SERVICE

What matters to God is persons, thing are secondary. God ordained it so from the beginning that man's greatest soul-craving would only be met by his communion with his Maker; next to that, stands his need of association with his fellowbeings. From these contacts issue life itself, life in its fullest sense. True, food and drink are essential for sustenance of the body, but spiritual life goes far beyond that. Physical life is temporal; life of the spirit is eternal.

Jesus said, "My food is to do the will of him who sent me"; this, in turn, came as a result of his having given words of life to the Samaritan woman, satisfying soul-need. While Christ makes abundant references to things and nature, in every case the latter are only significant in so far as they have any bearing on man's relation to God and man.

The light on the hill or under the bushel symbolizes man as he reflects the goodness of God; Jesus stilling the storm is a challenge to man's faith; in the woe unto Jerusalem, the latter is not a collection of houses but the people who refuse to heed Jesus' invitation; seeds cast out by the sower correspond to God's word cast upon the hearts of man; and the despised and ignoble cross has become the symbol of sacrifice for all ages to come.

Is there any comparison in the worth of things and of man in the eyes of God? The whole physical world is no recompense for one soul of man.

When the teacher makes the total growth of manhood and womanhood paramount, when the farmer sets his highest goal as producing the raw materials for food and other necessities, when the businessman and industrialist puts his life into the most effective methods of production and distribution of goods for all mankind, when the doctor and other professional men place service to the individual and also human society at large above every personal gain, then we have truly Christian teachers, farmers doctors etc.; then too, every person regardless of vocation is rendering full-time Christian service. —Dr. J. S. Schultz, member of Business Committee of General Conference, and Dean of Bluffton College.

THOUGHTFUL DECISIONS NECESSARY

An age of decision? Everyone agrees, and it is. Sometimes the reference is only to that which is good and bad or decisive events which may change the course of a life and the world. We need to make these decisions reverently and seriously. In reality, however, we make many more choices each day than we realize—decisions which seem insignificant but in totality determine the depth of character, reveal the degree of our consecration, and influence the contribution which we can make.

Through conversation and my own experience, I have concluded that it is a minor difficulty when all the good elements and all the bad elements are lined up in opposition to each other. Many times the problem is not clear-cut. Frequently, a choice may be between what is good and what is better, and it is this for many which is the more difficult. It is a rather sobering fact to realize that we cannot participate in even all the worthwhile things, and hence, complexity. Because there are only twenty-four hours in a day, I believe we need to be selective about the clubs we join, the books we read, the way we spend our leisure, etc.

I am most impressed by the person who lives a balanced life, chooses the better, and finds that enrichment of life which God meant for us to possess. As the only adequate norm, I suggest the Master. To be sure, by taking the line of least resistance, we need not make choices, but I am convinced that the task confronting Christians today calls for purposeful living and thoughtful decision in every area of life!—Miss Myrtle Wasser, secretary-treasurer of the Young People's Union of the General Conference, and a Junior at Bluffton College.

"ERNTEDANKFEST" at Vineland, Ontario

by John Dyck

"O give thanks unto the Lord; for he is good" Psa. 106:1 Every thanksgiving service, or "Erntedankfest" as we call it, we are made more fully aware of the Lord's goodness toward us during the past year. It is a day in which we sum up all His blessings and mercies and gather together to offer praise and thanks unto Him. The Psalmist writes in Psalm 104:28, "That thou givest them, they gather; thou openest thine hand, they are filled with good." We realize that it has not been our toil and effort which has made the rich harvest, but that the Lord has given and opened His hand, and they were filled with good.

Our harvest thanksgiving and mission festival service, which we have on the first Sunday in October every year, is one of the larger festive Sundays of the year. It is a day in which our place of worship is always filled to capacity. It is the day when our church is decorated the most (See picture). It is the day in which we are called upon to give the largest portion back to the Lord of that which He has given unto us.

Our service of last year, 1946, was perhaps a typical "Erntedank und Missionsfest" Sunday, the manner in which we have it in the United Mennonite Church at Vineland. Our church was gaily decorated with the numerous ferns and flowers, as well as with the large display of fruits and vegetables of our soil. The morning message, which is our harvest thanksgiving service, was given by our pastor, Bishop J.J. Wichert. The offering was $439.57.

In the afternoon we had as guests for our "Missionsfest" the missionaries Dr. and Mrs. Herbert Dester. Both spoke to us, relating incidents that occurred in their work. They also impressed upon us the great need in the foreign mission field today. Truly, "the harvest is plenteous, but the labourers are few," Matt. 9:37. The missionary offering was $463.35.

After the mission service, the sale of the fruits and vegetables commences. These articles are sold to the highest bidder. Of course, the bidder's aim here is not to see how much he can get for his money, but rather how much he can give to the Lord above that which he has already given in the offerings. Dr. Dester also donated two souvenirs from the mission field toward the sale, and they helped the cause by about thirty dollars. The proceeds of the sale of the fruits and vegetables, shown in the picture, was $340.42.

There was an evening service. The offering at this service was $96.26, bringing the total receipts for the day to $1,339.60. After such a full day of blessing, you will readily understand why this is one of our larger festive Sundays.

Our church has about 230 members. Since Vineland is in the center of the Niagara Peninsula fruit belt, the majority of them are fruit farmers, a few are dairy farmers, and the remainder work in various factories in the surrounding district. Almost every fruit and vegetable is grown here, with of course, the exception of the citrus fruits. Some of the fruits grown are: strawberries, raspberries, apricots, cherries, plums, peaches, pears, grapes, and apples. The vegetables grown mostly in large acreages are: asparagus, tomatoes, and potatoes. The fruits that are brought for display at the church are usually our largest and choicest grown. For example, last year there were some apples which measured 14½ inches in circumference and weighed one pound each.

Of the money received throughout this day of thanks, about one-half is used for home missions and the other half for foreign missions. The $1,339.60 received in 1946 was distributed as follows.

Foreign Mission: Bible Society, $50; Foreign Mission, General Conference, $244.80; Mennonite Central Committee, $294.80; total, $589.60.

Home Mission: Toronto Mission, $50; Winnipeg Mission, $25; United Mennonite Bible School. Leamington, Ontario, $300; Ontario Bible School, Fort Erie, Ontario, $100; Chicago Seminary, $100; Canadian Men-

SOME IMPRESSIONS OF MY SUMMER IN EUROPE

by H. A. Fast

(H. A. Fast, head of the Bible department at Bethel College, and vice-chairman of the Mennonite Central Committee, was gone three months this past summer on a trip to Europe, where he deepened and strengthened the bond of fellowship between European and American Mennonites. Most of his time was spent in Holland.)

Most of my work during the summers' stay in Europe was performed in Holland, but my work also took me into parts of France, Belgium, Denmark, Germany and Switzerland. One does not see everything in three months, and I did not cover all of Europe. My observations therefore are limited in scope and in time. This should be taken into consideration as you read this article describing some of my impressions.

1. One soon discovers upon landing in Europe that one is in a different world. Great treasures of cultural and historical associations cluster around almost every place you see. In comparison ours is a very young country lacking in such a wealth of association. One is happy to find that people are not in such a feverish hurry as in America. On the other hand one misses some of the buoyant, energetic bustle of activity that one finds in America.

2. One is shocked to the depths when one gets his first glimpse of the utter horror of destruction that war has wrought in great cities famous in history, commerce and culture, like Bremen, Hamburg, Kiel, Cologne, Crefeld, to mention only a few.

The devastation of such cities is so staggering, — seventy to eighty per cent of the city, block on block, nothing but huge piles of rubble, blasted brick and concrete, horribly twisted steel, scarred and shaken walls, burned out hulks of houses — that one's mind stands aghast, struck speechless. A groan is all one can manage.

Only gradually does one begin to grasp something of the full terror, tragedy and destruction that this represents. That comes when one's imagination catches up with what one sees and one begins to realize that this horror of ruin represents what once were homes, family circles, schools, churches, places of business, laughter of children, playgrounds, parks and busy streets. It begins to strike home when you see innocent children, that had nothing to do with the war, come out of some ruin of destruction where they have a basement room for shelter (kitchen, living room, sleeping quarters all in one) and see them play on rubble heaps. Or when you see worn, haggard, discouraged faces of old people as they stand in soup or bread lines. Then one becomes filled with fierce indignation at the utter stupidity and insanity that is war.

3. One soon discovers that the physical destruction of war, terrible as it is,is only the more obvious of its incalculable damage. Its more serious harm lies in the way it has poisoned the human spirit and vitiated basic human relations. Never have I seen such a widespread mood of discouragement, hopelessness and fatalism over so wide an area. People accept as inevitable further wars and more wars and the fate of being ground to pieces in the process. The feeling of insecurity, fear and worry haunts men's soul. Many are filled with bitterness and hate. Even in a little paradise like Switzerland one finds this haunting sense of fear and worry. And so sane and peaceful a people as the Dutch, among whom flowered the idea of a World court and a Peace Palace, now also have learned to hate. Many people are not at all sure that "faith (in God and Jesus Christ and His Kingdom) is the victory that overcomes the world." It is certain that Christian faith and idealism and all Christian standards are undergoing a terrible ordeal of testing, and often they do not come through unscathed.

Because the moral and spiritual foundations of life and society are badly shaken by war and its aftermath, that is why the economic and political structure is very insecure. When peoples of the world lack mutual trust and goodwill they pay for it in terms of high prices, scarcity of goods, black markets, etc. When people are selfish and greedy (in Europe this is often instilled by desperate need and hunger) then severe control over personal liberty is almost inevitable. Because there is hate, occupying authorities strip a counrty of its resources and its capacity for self-help. Nations still will not trade freely with Germany, and so their own economic recovery is retarded because hate prevents them from using a vast potential market of 80,000,000 people. Because the Christian witness is weak, children and young people grow up under low and corrupting standards of morals. Because the Christian Church lacks vision and flexibility, being hampered by its century old traditions, and because it is not genuinely girded for work, sleeves rolled up and ready to get into the thick of the personal and social need, it appears to have little to offer that will capture the imagination of youth and enlist them to full surrender of themselves and their service to Jesus Christ who alone has the power to save Europe and America from the threatened collapse.

4. One is tremendously encouraged to find that Christian faith is not dead among the ruined areas of Europe. One can see brave flowers bloom on rubble heaps of destroyed cities. Even so one sees the brave flower of Christian faith and love bloom on the physical, nervous, and moral rubble heaps of war. One is happy to find such islands of sanity, industry, energy, cleanliness and health as Switzerland, Denmark, and Holland. War has struck them a terrible blow, but it has not left them paralyzed. Here and in other places of Europe one can see evidences of a new spiritual awakening in the churches. One can see a swing to a warm-hearted, evangelical faith, conscious of its call to mission and aware that the Lord said "Go" but also said: "Lo, I am with you always." One discovers in such groups an eagerness to know the will of God by searching the Scriptures and by gathering in smaller or larger groups for discussion, devotion and prayer. I had an opportunity for fellowship with such groups in Holland, Germany and Switzerland, but there doubtless were such groups also in other countries. It was especially heartening when you found this among the young whose youthful idealism had suffered such a rude shock through violent experiences of war. There was a deep and clear conviction that Jesus Christ is the only hope of the world. One found in such circles a genuine spirit of repentance and a genuine dedication of self to a whole-hearted discipleship of the Master.

5. It was also very encouraging to see a genuine revival of interest in Christian non-resistance. It was a joy to meet Philippe Vernier of Mons, Belgium, serving as pastor of a coal mining community that had learned to hate bitterly the German occupying forces. He has been preaching to his people that true Christians cannot hate. They must love their enemies. Now he had a group of young people in his church that were eager for an opportunity to help their former enemies in Germany clean up the debris of war and help build homes above the ruins. Vernier and others with a similar spirit of Christian love had also assumed responsibility for the support of thirty-five conscientious objectors to military service in Belgium. Thus these men were enabled to perform a genuine service of love to their fellow citizens. One found a similar awakening in the Mennonite churches in Holland. Their unhappy experience under German occupation had made them face very serious questions, but they were determined to find a Christlike answer for them. This they sought not only in deep philosophical discussions but also in a service of love reaching out through M. C. C. channels to the needy and hungry in enemy countries. They have one worker in Austria and are sending gifts of food where needed. Among the Swiss Mennonites and French Mennonites one found likewise a keen interest in Christian non-resistance and a deep desire to discover what was the real teaching of Jesus on this question and what was the attitude of their North American brethern on this issue. It was very encouraging to encounter this spirit of earnest inquiry among church leaders and especially among the young people.

6. One is almost overwhelmed when one sees how important and far-reaching has been the service of love of our relief efforts and relief workers. In comparison to the vast physical and spiritual need it looks as insignificant as the little boy with his little loaves and fishes, but in the hands of Christ in whose name this service has been rendered it has fed a multitude far beyond our highest hopes. Not only has it helped to keep people alive and restore to health but in ways almost too marvelous to believe it has drawn attention to Him who as Savior can heal the deep wounds of war and the sickness of the soul. One begins to sense how much our Christian brethren in Europe need American churches to stand by in a spirit of Christian understanding, love and active encouragement. Never before have I realized so keenly or seen so clearly how much the world needs the message of Christ.

Report of the Alberta Community Mennonite Church, Portland, Oregon

(The Alberta Community Church is one of the home mission churches of the General Conference. The following report written by Clyde and Berndetta Dirks, the home mission workers at Portland, was sent in by Rev. A.J. Neuenschwander, Secretary of the Home Mission Board.)

With the beginning of the public schools our Sunday school and church services are taking on a new life again. Though our attendance kept up very well during the summer months, we were conscious of the fact that many were away on vacations. Since many of the parents of the children who attend our Sunday school do not attend services anywhere, they find it easy to vacation on Sundays and to take their children with them. In the cities we find that we have a very shifting population. Some people move often due to their work and offers of better jobs. This, too, cuts deeply into the attendance at the services, but in spite of reverses such as these we praise the Lord that He is giving us good attendance at our services. We are encouraged with the ever increasing number of folk who find their way to the Church to hear the Word of God. It is our prayer that as the seed is sown many hearts may be opened to receive Christ whom we proclaim as Saviour and Lord and then respond to Him in giving their lives in joyful service. Three of our young people are now in school preparing for full time service for the Lord. Two are already working under the Home Mission Board of our Conference.

We are looking forward to "Rally Day" on October 5. This is usually a big and eventful day for our Sunday school and Church with special programs and services.

The young people of our church have now started a Young People's Prayer Meeting on Wednesday Evening. The Bible study period is conducted jointly with the adults. Then we divide the groups for prayer meetings. This, we believe, will be a real help to the building up of spiritual life within our church.

Our Junior Choir has been reorganized and is working hard to be of service to the church.

With the beginning of October we will again begin our children's Bible classes to be conducted for an hour

RESUME OF DR. CARL KREIDER'S SPEECH

by Albert Gaeddert

One of the highlights of the General Conference sessions was the address given by Dr. Carl Kreider, Dean of Goshen College. Dr. Kreider came upon the invitation of the General Conference Peace Committee. Unfortunately a large number of delegates had already left the conference; those who heard Dr. Kreider were impressed with his stirring appeal.

Two emphases stood out in what Dr. Kreider said:

1. Dictatorships and democracies both have relinquished the right to the claim of moral leadership in our world today, because both are guilty of a number of wrongs toward fellowmen committed during and after the war. He gave six illustrations of such wrongs committed: a) Taking of territory against the will of the people who live in the territory. Germany took Austria, Czechoslovakia, Poland, and other areas. Russia took Finland, etc. But are our own hands clean in this matter? What about our "security bases" in the Pacific? b) There was widespread deportation of peoples away from their homes. Germany reached the Polish Corridor and deported people eastward; Russia took people out of East Prussia and deported them. In America we took Japanese from their own homes and lands and placed them into "Relocation" camps. c) Imprisonment and enforced labor is a third guilt that we must all acknowledge. d) Widespread looting in occupied countries. Gold was taken when a victor nation occupied a country; other loot was carried away in alarming quantities. Go into any of a large number of small villages or towns in our own country and behold there a substantial portion of loot brought back. All of us have been shocked to find this not only among the rank and file but also among officers, and some of high rank. e) Immorality became rampant. The Germans, who wanted a larger population, encouraged immorality. The reports of diseases after the war lead us to be certain we were not without guilt here. f) Induced starvation became a part of national policies. Again, our hands are stained. The rations which our government permitted in Germany and Japan (1500 calories) were below what was found entirely inadequate in our own Minnesota Experiment, and the men in our experiment were adequately clothed and they lived in heated rooms. If such rations were not sufficient to "keep" a person under favorable conditions of ample clothing and proper temperatures, what must such rations have meant where there was no heat in buildings and where clothing was extremely scarce? Even in our own "zones of occupation" the infant mortality rates were 231 per 1000; in other words, one out of every four babies born died before they reached the age of one year.

The second major emphasis was this: that both among churches and local communities, as also among nations, there has been a sad lack of effective program building for World Peace. When Mr. Chamberlain returned from the Munich Conference, he said two things: 1. "I have brought peace for our time"; and 2. "Now we must arm to the teeth." This contradiction is one under which we have labored for centuries and continue to labor. We find little promise in the United Nations sessions. We blame the Russians for using the veto eighteen times. Yet we forget that Franklin D. Roosevelt was the one who suggested the veto at Yalta, and that the American representatives at San Francisco insisted that unless the veto be inserted, the United States never would adopt the United Nations program and support it.

The world stands in dire need of a peace testimony. Where can we find such testimony? In Jesus' teachings in the Sermon on the Mount: Blessed are the peacemakers. How often we have said: Blessed are the peace lovers; but what a tragic misinterpretation of the Scriptures. Let us not only be peace lovers but peace promoters, peace makers. Our own relief program stands out as a clear testimony toward peace-making; we need more such promoters of the Gospel of Love, who will "overcome evil with good."

JUST OFF THE PRESS

The long-looked-for booklet, 101 HYMNS FROM THE MENNONITE HYMNARY, is just off the press and has arrived at the Publication Office.

Every minister, surely, will want to have a sample of this book in his library, and every church using the MENNONITE HYMNARY will find that at least a small order for this new item will be a real help wherever you have small gatherings.

The "Foreword" to this little booklet points out that this selection of hymns from the MENNONITE HYMNARY is made for use in conferences, conventions, retreats, and other religious gatherings where a small, inexpensive book will serve the purpose of the meeting, and at the same time save wear and tear as well as the inconvenience that results from the use of the regular hymn books on such occasions.

What are some of these special occasions?

Outdoor meetings, family reunions, informal group meetings not meeting in the regular auditorium, young people's meetings at retreats, etc.

The first large order was bought, not by an individual Mennonite church, but by a group of Mennonite churches acting as a union meeting. The Moundridge (Kansas) churches as a group purchased 200 of these books as a permanent investment for better music in the community.

Available through your conference book stores. Price: 25c.

Conference Greetings to Gen. Conf. Missionaries, Relief Workers, and Others in Christian Service

Dear Friends at Home and Abroad:

Unfortunately our General Conference sessions cannot well be postponed until all foreign missionaries, home missionaries, relief workers, and others of our Conference engaged in professional Christian service, such as doctors and nurses, might all be able to arrange to be present. The work on the various fields must continue to go forward.

Our Christian calling demands the meeting of daily opportunities for service. While many of us were fellowshipping and planning together, you were at your assigned post of duty. With this open letter we wish to assure those of you who could not be present at Berne, Indiana, August 20-27, 1947, that you were repeatedly remembered in fitting expressions of gratitude to God.

This letter comes to bring" Conference Greetings" to those of you who could not attend the Conference, and assure you of our prayers in your behalf.

The "Macedonian Call" was often heard. There was a sense of urgency in the reports, the discussions, and the resolutions adopted. "GO QUICKLY AND TELL" served well as the motto for our endeavors. In large letters across the front of the meeting house of the First Mennonite Church, it constantly emphasized the urgent messages of those who represented your calling. Brother A. E. Kreider, for instance, the Chairman of the Foreign Mission Board, had just returned from his M.C.C. sponsored "Mission-Relief" tour around the world. While Brother Kreider was breaking the Bread of Life at the Thursday evening Communion Service, 1,060 persons participating in this sacred fellowship, we were thinking of the death of our Lord Jesus Christ, who binds all Christian hearts into one ever-widening fellowship. You would have been impressed at the thought that visitors from Holland and South America, district conference presidents, and representatives of the local congregation assisted the Conference officers in distributing these sacred emblems.

Thus the Conference Week passed very quickly. The over 1,400 delegates and visitors have returned to urge others to join with them in encouraging you who represent us in the various fields of endeavor at home and abroad in your important task.

"Now our Lord Jesus Christ himself, and God, even our Father, which hath loved us, and hath given us everlasting consolation and good hope through grace, comfort your hearts, and establish you in every good word and work." (II Thess. 2:16-17)

Gratefully yours,
THE GENERAL CONFERENCE OF THE MENNONITE CHURCH OF N. A.
Walter H. Dyck, Executive Secretary

HARVEST FESTIVAL AT THE VINELAND CHURCH, VINELAND ONTARIO

nonite Bible College, Winnipeg, Manitoba, $175; total. $750.

This year we are already planning for the coming thanksgiving service, since the need in the various fields is growing more and more. We have two of our own schools in the United Mennonite Bible School at Leamington, and the Canadian Mennonite Bible College at Winnipeg both of which are just in their infancy, therefore requiring not only much prayerful support but also great financial support as well. Then the outlook in war-torn Europe among our refugees grows more needful each day, and the MCC will be first on our list for foreign mission expenditures this year. The call to give is greater than ever. Let us be as unselfish in our giving as Christ "who gave Himself for us, that He might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto Himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works" Titus 2:14.

and a half after school each week. A number of older Juniors and Intermediates were saved in these classes last year. We are looking to God for a harvest of souls again this year.

Our church building plans are progressing slowly. Since we were hindered from building on the lots already purchased for our new church because of restrictions, we must now make other plans, but we are encouraged to go ahead because of the increasing attendance and the urgent need for more room. We ask our friends to pray with us in this special undertaking that God might definitely lead us. We covet your earnest and unceasing prayers for the furtherance of the gospel in this large city. Yours by His Grace, Clyde and Berndetta Dirks

TALES FROM MENNONITE HISTORY

By Jacob H. Janzen. (Copy 75 cents.)

In Psalm 78 are these words: "He established a testimony in Jacob, and appointed a law in Israel, which He commanded our fathers, that they should make them known to their children — even the children which should be born; who should rise up and tell them to their children, that they should set their hope in God, and not forget the works of God." Here is ample cause for being interested in our Church History. How impoverished our Bible would be, if all history were deleted from the old Testament from the Psalms, and from the New Testament!

But where is one to find church history, written not in the abstract, but in correct story form? Who will be the writers who will do the spade work from which may be constructed an enlarged comprehensive work on Mennonite church history in story form for children under the teen age, of adolescent years, and older?

The little book, Tales from Mennonite History is a work by Rev. Jacob H. Janzen D. D., in an attempt to meet this need. It covers some ninety-six pages of mimeographed sheets bound in a very substantial cover. Dr. Janzen has translated into English eighteen stories which he used with his students in the German language. They make very interesting reading, not only from the standpoint of the historical settings, but from that of what God did in and through the characters portrayed during the years under review.

The efforts of Dr. Janzen need to be encouraged. His book merits a wide reading. Interested as I am in the spread of the church through evangelization, I believe I perceive a distinct backsliding in those church bodies who evangelize and do not enthusiastically support an adequate nurture program. In this nuture program church history must have a big place, and the book of Dr. Janzen has its place.

A few questions might be raised. For example, I understand that we know practically nothing of the boyhood experiences of Menno's brother; nor do we know his name. Dr. Janzen relates these stories of boyhood days and gives the name Peter to the brother. Is my understanding therefore incorrect, or are these Tales intended to convey truth in a historical setting without being too accurate about small details of history?—S. T. Moyer.

(Order copies from the author at 164 Erb Street West, Waterloo, Ontario, Price 75 cents, ten or more 50 cents a copy.)

WRITE FOR RESERVATIONS

The officers of the Oklahoma Convention of the General Conference Mennonite Churches herewith extend a hearty invitation to the Western District Conference to hold its annual sessions in the Education Building at Enid, Oklahoma, October 22 and 23. Delegates and visitors should write to Mrs. Helen Hiebert Mueller, University Station, Enid, Oklahoma, for lodging reservations. The churches in and around Enid want to welcome delegates and guests into their homes. You will help us greatly by giving us the information that you are coming.—H. P. Fast, Convention President, Ernest Voth, Convention Secretary.

M.C.C. Moves To Meet Emergency in India

Catastrophe in India

AKRON, PA., October 3.—Acute needs have developed within the past few weeks in India. The former country of India has been divided into the new dominions of India and Pakistan, which are predominately of Hindu and Moselm religion respectively. However, in each of these areas there is a minority belonging to the other religion. These minority groups and individuals are now fleeing for safety, the Moslems to Pakistan and the Hindus to the New India. It is estimated that seven million persons are in the process of such migration, and of these as many as 250,000 are ill, or too weak to travel. The economy of India had not been adequate to provide a living for all her people even under more normal conditions, and thus under this present situation of mass movement and indescribable chaos, many people are facing starvation.

Reports of these conditions and urgent requests for relief assistance have come from the relief agencies at work in that area of India, as well as from the United States State Department. The Mennonite Central Committee is giving assistance in this time of need by loaning MCC workers from various parts of India and by sending food supplies as such are available for this emergency.

Food Will Be Needed in Hungary

"Flour, meat and fats will be musts for the coming winter. Prices have already risen, even though the harvest is just now reaching the markets. Flour is now selling at four forints a kilo (about 16c per lb.) I am told, and that does not mean that you can find any to buy, it only means that such is the price, when it is available. People are buying as much as they can to save for the winter, but with wages and prices so much out of proportion, few are able to do much. Potatoes, a stample article of diet here, cost now twice what they cost this time last year, I am told, and the harvest is now in full swing. I have the feeling from the drought that hit this country, the yield will be short and the quality poor so that this winter will find a real shortage here in this article."—Howard Blosser.

Ray Schlichting to Puerto Rico, Paraguay, Brazil

Ray Schlichting, MCC Controller, left on September 30 to visit the MCC relief units in Puerto Rico, Paraguay and Brazil for the purpose of auditing financial records.

More Foreign Students To Enroll at Bethel and Freeman

Three more European students have come to this country to study in Mennonite colleges. Albert Rolland and Yvo Malan are young Waldensian men from Italy who plan to study at Bethel College. Ernest Hege comes from Alsace to attend Freeman Junior College.

"Out of Sight, Out of Mind," New Book, Which Is Strongly Recommended

Just what are the conditions that prevail in state mental institutions? This question is answered in a very vivid way in the book "Out of Sight, Out of Mind", by Frank L. Wright, and recently published by the National Mental Health Foundation.

The factual material from which this book was written was observed and recorded by Mennonite and other CPS men as they served in state mental institutions. Through this direct source many eyewitness accounts were secured which describe realisticaly and accurately the treatment of mental patients in many of our state mental hospitals. Our people have quite generally been aware that conditions in these institutions are not satisfactory, but readers of this book will be shocked by the many actual cases which are cited. Although each report is fully documented, all names and places are disguised to prevent indentification.

Not only are these conditions revealed, but a constructive answer is also given. It is maintained that each of us has a responsibility to help in promoting a better understanding of mental illness, and in giving more of energy and means in improving the care of those who are ill.

This book should be of special interest in view of the growing concern among Mennonites in the care of the mentally ill. Copies of this book may be secured from the Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pennsylvania, for $1.00 per copy.

College and Seminary News

BETHEL COLLEGE

The Christian Life Week services led by Rev. Don Smucker closed on Friday evening with a special period of personal commitment to Christ and consecration to full-time Christian service in all worthy occupations, which was then followed by a communion service. The Memorial Hall Series of 1947-48 will open October 28 with the lecture of Camille Kelley, Judge of the Juvenile Court at Memphis, Tennessee. Three other features have been definitely scheduled: Louis Untermeyer, poet, November 17; The Chicago Little Philharmonic Orchestra, March 2; and a return engagement of the Westminster Choir, March 30. Season tickets are on sale for a dollar plus tax. Faculty and staff members and their families, a group now numbering about 150, held their fall picnic on October 6. The general, supervisory Faculty Welfare Committee consists this year of R. C. Kauffman, chairman, Eva Harshbarger, David Suderman, Bob Tully, and D. C. Wedel.

THE CANADIAN MENNONITE BIBLE COLLEGE

" . . . . . this day is the day of good tidings" II Kings 7:9.

On October 5 the formal opening of our Canadian Mennonite Bible College took place. It was a beautiful day in Winnipeg, and this contributed greatly to the festive spirit of the occasion. Friends came from as far as Saskatchewan and Ontario to take part in this event which all felt was of great historical significance in the life and work of the General Conference, especially for the Canadian churches.

Rev. J. J. Thiessen of Saskatoon and Dr. Ed. G. Kaufman of Bethel College were the speakers in the dedicatory services of the morning. Rev. W. H. Enns of Springstein, Manitoba, brought a challenging message in the afternoon meeting. The installation and consecration of teachers was a part of this service, followed by short addresses by all the teachers. One of the outstanding features of this program was the inspirational numbers rendered by the combined choir of over one hundred voices under the direction of Mr. John Conrad, music instructor of the College. The evening service consisted of a program rendered by the students of the College.

It was a full day, but a memorable one for all who were present. The leaders of the Canadian Conference feel that God has led them to the opening of this College, and that it shall be an instrument in the furthering of the gospel and the strengthening of the work in the home churches.

FREEMAN JUNIOR COLLEGE

The first number in the College Entertainment Course was given by the New York Concert Ensemble. A large audience enjoyed the well rendered program of operatic numbers. The first number on the Student Program Series was presented by Naturalist Emil E. Liers on Wednesday morning. Dr. van der Zijpp from Holland was a campus visitor for two days this week. He spoke in chapel and to various campus groups during his stay. Recent visitors on the campus were: Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Bartel and son Dennis from Drake, Saskatchewan, who stopped on the campus on their way to Hillsboro, Kansas, and Herman Regier of Madrid, Nebraska. Mrs. Benno Toews and children arrived from Canada this week to join Prof. Toews. The barracks bought from the Sioux Falls Air Base have been moved to the campus.

Jottings

—Glimpses of Mennonite History and Doctrine by John C. Wenger has come out in a second edition, revised and enlarged. John Christian Wenger is professor of theology and philosophy at Goshen College Biblical Seminary.

—The Board of Publication of the General Conference has adopted the General Conference Minister's Pension Plan according to which all employees of the Conference are eligible. The Board of Publication is very probably the first organization in the Conference to join the plan.

—Wayland Mennonite Church, Wayland, Iowa: On the evening of September 25, the Wayland Mennonite Church invited all the public school teachers and their families to a fellowship supper. County Superintendent, Lester Krehbiel, and wife were also invited. A program followed the fellowship hour in which there was singing, special music, and a sound moving picture of, "Our Iowa.". Greetings were given by the Sunday school superintendents and the pastor, and responses were given by the high school principal and superintendent. Emphasis was placed on the need of church and school working together to lift the moral level of the community. All felt that the meeting was greatly worthwhile.—Anna E. Mullett, Corr.

—Lorraine Avenue, Church, Wichita, Kansas: August 3 was an eventful day for us; since then we have been worshipping in the new church basement. The former church is almost ready now as a parsonage. Sunday evening, September 28, open house was held for friends and neighbors of the church. October 19 is to be Retreat Sunday for us. We are again conducting week-day Bible school in spite of handicaps, with about 180 pupils, 5 teachers, 3 helpers and the principal. With the progress on the new building goes a rising interest in the work of the church.—Corr.

—Salem Church, Freeman, South Dakota: Professor Ernest Lichte of Freeman Junior College is the newly elected choir director. The church is collecting money for the purchase of flour for relief. The Senior Mission Society is collecting money which is to be sent to Orie O. Miller, who then is to make a selection of shoes from his factory, these shoes to be sent for relief. Rev. Willard Claassen, pastor of the Salem Church has been invited to conduct services at the Bethesda Church, Henderson, Nebraska, October 12-17.

—Ds N. van der Zijpp, pastor of the Mennonite church in Rotterdam, Holland, and professor in the Mennonite Seminary at Amsterdam spoke in the Bethesda Church, Marion South Dakota, on October 1.

—Bergthaler Church, Altona, Manitoba: This church, which has quite a number of places of worship, nominated some ministerial candidates on September 21. According to practice the local church nominates and then later the whole church (The Bergthaler Church is made up of what we would call a number of churches in the United States.) elects the ministers from those nominated. Harvest and mission festivals were held at Winkler on September 28 and at Altona on October 5. Surrounding churches dismissed services and attended. Missionary Randall Groening, who began the mission work at Creel, Mexico, has resigned and the Heinrich Gerbrandts are now in full charge. Brother Groening writes that after having visited at home and learned many things and after having become better acquainted with the statement of faith of the Mission, he considers it best to leave the work, for he can't agree with everything. The Groenings will seek a new field, and will remember in prayer the work of their former field.—Taken from Das Bergthaler Gemeindeblatt —Immanuel Church, Los Angeles, California: Rev. and Mrs. Harold Burkholder and family have just returned from a six-week trip to the East Coast. While in Philadelphia, Rev. Burkholder addressed the opening convocation of the Reformed Episcopal Seminary. He received his Bachelor of Divinity degree at this time. Mr. and Mrs. Peter Dyck brought us an inspiring, illustrated message on the rehabilitation of European refugees. Rev. and Mrs. Frank Manning from Africa recently arrived in New York.—Corr.

—A "Wheat for Relief" drive is now being pushed in Kansas. A concerted effort is being exerted to secure 1/3 of 1 per cent of the Kansas wheat crop for overseas relief. A letter from the sponsoring committee begins, "The die is cast, and Kansas' committment stands before us, ready to be fulfilled. If it is not fulfilled, death by starvation will destroy ten millions of people this winter, people like you and I, and their deaths may well be judged against us, if we turn our heads from their plight." It is hoped that the movement "may be one of the greatest spontaneous individual moves ever made by a non-official group of common citizens, banded together of their own accord to help their fellow man in his need." Governor Carlson of Kansas issued a proclamation in behalf of the Drive in which he suggested that on October 5 every minister in the state devote his sermon to the subject, "World Relief and Its Relation to Peace on This Earth."

B. BARGEN TO SPEAK TO KANSAS CITY FELLOWSHIP

The Mennonite Fellowship of Kansas City will hold a meeting Sunday October 19, at 4 P. M., at the Mennonite Gospel Center, 1233 Washington, Kansas City Missouri. Mr. B. Bargen of Newton will give a talk on "The Meaning of Non-violence."—Gerhard Wiens, Chairman, Mennonite Fellowship of Kansas City. (Mr. Wien's address is 211 East 74 Terrace.)

—Inman Mennonite Church, Inman, Kansas: Sunday afternoon, September 28, the congregation met in church for the dedication of the parsonage. After a short service there, everybody went to the house for the dedicatory prayer and for a visiting tour through the house. This was followed by a social hour in the church where a lunch was served. On October 19, the pastor, Rev. Aaron Epp, will be ordained as minister and elder in his home church, the Bethesda Church, Henderson, Nebraska. The congregation is planning its annual mission festival for October. 26.

—Arlington Church, Arlington, Kansas: Funeral services for Mrs. G. L. Ewy, who passed away in a Hutchinson hospital on September 29, following an operation, were held at our church Wednesday afternoon, October 1. Reverend Ronald von Riesen was in charge of the services.—Mrs. Lester Ewy, Corr.

—First Church, Aberdeen, Idaho: We were indeed happy to have Rev. and Mrs. Willard Wiebe with us Wednesday evening and September 24 and 28. Rev. Wiebe is a member of our church and brought us the Wednesday evening and Sunday evening messages. Rev. and Mrs. Wiebe left September 29 for Lind, Washington, which is to be their new charge. Rev. Wiebe will be ordained as elder by Rev. H. N. Harder on October 5.—Arnold E. Bartel, Corr.

For the month of October our committee is advocating the "Mending Kit" and the "Shoe Repairing Kit" projects. Dr. Cornelius Krahn gave an illustrated and very interesting talk on a number of slides on Mennonite History and Mennonite life today. This was the final program based on the book, The Power of Love. Our pastor has very ably and challengingly given us sermons on our daily conduct and living by being vessels filled by God to walk with Jesus who is the new and living way and calling us to His service by giving of ourselves and our talents.—Mrs. Myron G. Stucky, Corr.

—Rev. J. M. Regier had to cancel his proposed trip to Ontario because of the death of his mother, Mrs. Cornelius Regier on October 4 at the Home for the Aged, Goessel, Kansas.

S. T. MOYER WORKING ON FIFTY-YEAR HISTORY

Rev. S. T. Moyer has been asked by the India Mennonite Mission Conference to serve on a committe which is to write a fifty-year history of the India mission work. He recently spent October 7-10 at General Conference Headquarters, Newton, Kansas, going through the mass of unorganized material which the Foreign Mission Board accumulated during the early years of mission work in India. Rev. Moyer has been doing research at the Musellman Library, Bluffton College, going through mission reports in the church papers etc. He hopes to have the material of the proposed book organized by the end of January. The book is to be an accurate historical account in story form for the average reader. Rev. Moyer, who is known to many as the author of With Christ on the Edge of the Jungle, hopes to move forward on his job, writing just as fast as possible and utilizing all the secretarial help necessary. The book will probably not be published before 1950 or 1951. However, Rev. Moyer hopes to have the manuscript completed before he returns to India, with the exception of the history of the last several years which will have to be incorporated just before publication. The other committee members who are working with Rev. Moyer are Miss Elenore Schmidt and Rev. J. R. Duerksen.

—Tabor Church, Newton, Kansas: Correction: Don P. Shidler of the Gospel Missionary Union of Kansas City was our guest. They have mission fields in northern Africa and South America. Miss Elma Voth will leave soon for Colombia under the auspices of the Union. Miss Elizabeth Foth and Rev. Ervin Wedel also presented their mission work in Brooklyn and Mississippi respectively. Besides the wheat relief project the church also sponsors a fruit relief project, and the Sunday school is providing the money for mending kits and clothing, amounting to $500. Our new Sunday school year began October 5. We have twenty-two classes.—Dan S. Thiesen, Corr.

—Bethesda Church, Henderson, Nebraska: Mr. and Mrs. Henry Buller, former relief workers in France, and also Mr. and Mrs. Peter Dyck, refugee workers in Europe were special speakers in our church. It is planned to have the Ministers' Conference of the Northern District in our church from October 28 to 30. Our special meetings with Rev. Willard K. Claassen of the Salem Church, Freeman, South Dakota, will convene from October 12 to 17. The ordination of Aaron Epp into the full ministry will take place on the evening of October 19. Dr. Henry A. Fast of Bethel College will deliver the ordination sermon. Aaron has accepted the pastorate of the Inman Mennonite Church, Inman, Kansas.—Mrs. Ruben Friesen, Corr.

—Henderson, Nebraska: The ordination of Aaron Epp into the full ministry will take place in the Bethesda Church on October 19. . . . We wish to invite our many friends to take part in these services —A. W. Friesen, Pastor.

—Judy's Journey is the name of a new book by Lois Lenski, the author of the prize-winning book, Strawberry Girl, and Blue Ridge Billy. Judy's Journey is "an accurate and authenic picture of the living and working conditions of migrant families." It is highly recommended by the Home Mission Council of North America. This 212-page book may be ordered from the Mennonite Book Store, 710 Main, Newton, Kansas, for $2.50 a copy.

—First Church, Beatrice, Nebraska: Commencement services were held for the Hospital graduating class on Sunday evening October 5. The minister of the local Christian church brought the commencement address. Several projects of relief are underway at our church. Among these are "Food for Relief," "Wheat for Relief," and "Mending and Shoe Repair Kits." Later we are again planning "meat canning for relief." Our pastor is at present bringing the morning messages at the Beatrice State Home on Sunday at 8:45 A. M.—Mrs. John J. Wiebe, Corr.

—Apostolic Mennonite Church, Trenton, Ohio: Sunday, September 28, 1947, Rev. and Mrs. S. T. Moyer visited our Church. Rev. Moyer in his morning message paid tribute to Dr. Rodophe Petter, who passed to his reward at Lame Deer, Montana, on January 6, 1947. Mrs. Petter, being a member of our church and reared in this community, it was fitting that Rev. Moyer should pay such glowing tribute to her distinguished and scholarly husband and to the stupendous work accomplished by Dr. Petter. After this service Rev. Moyer told of his work in India, and in the afternoon Mrs. Moyer addressed the Missionary Society and guests at the parsonage, presenting the work as a challenge to all of us.—Miss Lydia A. Augspurger, Corr.

—First Church, Pretty Prairie, Kansas: Guest speakers for our harvest festival were: Rev. and Mrs. Enns, missionaries from Africa and Rev. Puran Banwar, a native of India, who is at Bethel College at the present time. Special music was furnished by the Hillsboro Gospel Quartet. Funeral services were held Saturday, October 4 for Mrs. Jake Schwartz.—Ralph Krehbiel, Corr.

—Bethel College Church: Our committee on Evangelism, headed by Mr. Ben Bargen, held their monthly meeting Monday night, October 6. The committee is making a study of Blackwood's book, Evangelism in the Home Church. Children's consecration services were held for eight individuals September 28.—Eldon W. Graber, Corr.

—First Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota: Our new parsonage is finished now, a brick residence of eight rooms. It will make a comfortable home for our pastor and his family, Rev. L. R. Amstutz. Our church offerings have been better of late. We work toward many causes, i. e., church treasury, missions, C.P.S. men, education, publications, and others. The pastor started a winter Bible class on September 23. We will study the book of Hebrews. Recently our guest speaker was Rev. H. P. Wiebe, the principal of the local Bible school. Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Harder gave a reception in the church dining room to honor their new daughter-in-law, Ruth Burkhart Harder from Ortanna, Pa. The weather is favorable for the harvest of soy beans.—Miss Mary Bargen, Corr.

—Mennonites send many loads of flour for relief. Need funds for processing and shipping. Wayne Henrad in a letter of September 22 to Rev. Walter H. Dyck, as treasurer of the General Conference, writes, " . . . we are quite hard pressed to find sufficient funds to pay the processing and shipping cost of the contributions that are being given to us. It might be of interest too for you to know that at the present we have approximately thirty-two cars of flour in sight with a few states that have not been heard from yet. It is truly inspiring to us to see how people are again responding to this call of the needy."

—Miss Esther Neufeld, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. John T. Neufeld, Chicago, Illinois, is at present serving as the financial secretary at the General Conference Headquarters, 722 Main, Newton, Kansas. Besides filling this important position, Miss Neufeld is also a part-time student at Bethel College, North Newton, Kansas.

—Mrs. Lila Russell, whose husband, Burt Russell, has enrolled as student at Bethel College, began serving as the full-time general secretary at General Conference Headquarters in Newton during September. The Russells attended the Mennonite Bible School in Chicago during the 1946-47 school term and spent the past summer as members of the Mennonite Student Tour in Europe. Mr. Russell is majoring in vocal and instrumental music.

—Other Bethel College students who have been assisting in secretarial work at the General Conference Headquarters are John Henderson, North Newton, Kansas, Margaret Jahnke, Herbert, Saskatchewan, and Della Unruh, Goessel, Kansas.

—Bethel Church, Inman, Kansas: Our annual mission festival took place on September 21. We were privileged to have Rev. C. E. Rediger with us all day. Rev. and Mrs. Frank J. Enns and family, our missionaries from the Congo Inland Mission, were also with us. Other speakers of the day were Puran Banwar, a native of India, now attending Bethel College; Miss Sarah Buller, Newton, a missionary on leave from Nigeria, Africa; and Rev. D. J. Unruh, pastor of the First Mennonite Church, Newton, Kansas. The day proved to be a blessing to all of us.—Corr.

—The first of a series of regional Western District Sunday School-Young People's Fellowship Institutes was held Sunday, October 5, at the Bergtal Church, Pawnee Rock, Kansas. Other General Conference groups joining the host church were the congregations at Hanston, Ransom, and Colby, Kansas. The Vona, Colorado, group was unable to be represented. The morning Sunday school period was devoted to a panel discussion by Sunday school superintendents, led by Rev. Herbert Miller, Kingman, Kansas. Rev. Victor Sawatzky, Hutchinson, brought the morning message. In the afternoon session, William Juhnke led a panel discussion dealing with the special interests and needs of "isolated" Mennonite groups. Those taking part in the panel were Milton Harder, Arthur Miller, Richard Ratzlaff, Helen Kornelsen, and Ronald von Riesen. Walter H. Dyck led in a service of dedication. Irvin Goering brought the message of the evening. Special numbers of vocal and instrumental music were provided by the various churches. The noon and evening meals were served in the basement. Each of the four groups were well represented. Brother B. H. Jantzen, the field worker of the Western District Conference, is planning other regional institutes, the next one probably to be held in the southwestern part of the state.

World Conference of Christian Youth at Oslo, Norway

by Robert Kreider

(This article is continued from last week)

Our Discussion Group

The discussion groups were the feature attraction of the Oslo conference. In the discussion groups we learned to know the minds and hearts of our brethren from other lands. The membership of each discussion group remained the same throughout the conference. At noon there was the hour and three-quarters of Bible study and later in the afternoon two hours of discussion on "Christian Education in the Modern World." Among the subjects of other discussion groups were these: The Family and the Community," "The Nature of the Local Church," "Christian Obedience in a Secular Environment," "Freedom and Order," etc.

The very able coordinator of our discussion group was an African girl from the Gold Coast. The leader of our Bible discussions was a young pastor from Czechoslovakia, and the leader of the education discussions was a young woman from Austria. We found our most complete unity of thinking in the common study of the Bible. I felt as though I could sit at the feet of some of the fellow delegates— especially those who had come from the mission churches of Africa and the Orient. They have much to teach us of the meaning of the gospel message.

In our discussion of "Education in the Modern World" we found less unity. Coming from such vastly different backgrounds, we were often talking in terms of the peculiar problems of our countries—not quite realizing that the cultures of other countries were radically different one from another. Perhaps we strained too hard to reach agreements in these theoretical discussions, where it would have been better as our object to have each tell more about his land and his own ideas.

In our discussion group there were two views of Christian education. One held that Christian education was all moral instruction and all good, democratic, group experience. Many of the Americans were numbered in this group. The other group stressed that education to be worthy of the name "Christian" must be professedly Christian in name and definitely Christian in content and spirit. This major disagreement was never resolved in our group.

I have scanned my notes from the discussion group. I must share some of the random comments made by members of our group: Youth from Germany—"While I was a prisoner of war I rediscovered the Old Testament. In Germany we were told to forget the Old Testament. But I found it to minister to my special needs." . . . . . Austrian Girl—"Our fathers and forefathers were at home in the Bible, but we are not familiar with the Bible." . . . . . Girl from Gold Coast—"Or is it that we are not interested in the Bible because we are afraid of facing what the Bible has to tell us." . . . . Boy from Norway—"Originally I was interested in being a naval officer, but now I wonder whether it is right from the Biblical standpoint to enter a military career." . . . . Dutch youth—"The best way to struggle against temptation is the direct answer grounded in Scripture. That was Jesus' method of answering temptation." . . . . Girl from Africa—"We have lost our sense of what is sin. We have given various names to sin which cover up its essential nature. We call it 'patriotism,' 'national honor,' 'respectability' . . . " . . . . Girl from Norway—"Our finest gift to education is to contribute teachers with great Christian characters."

Unfulfilled Expectations

There were also those phases of the conference which were more sobering, somtimes disburbing. First is one which might be listed as a disappointment. I had gone to the conference with a certain hungering to hear some of the great, prophetic voices of Christendom. We have been told how in another generation such a world Christian leader as John R. Mott was a rallying center of faith and conviction at conferences such as this. The major speakers of this conference did not seem to be prophets. They seemed to be as uncertain, as seeking as the youth themselves. I was most stimulated by Reinhold Niebuhr of the United States and Martin Niemoeller of Germany. Both are keen social and theological analysts who have a way of stripping the veneer from much of the hollowness of the church and convicting all of us of the sin which clings to our hearts. They are like John the Baptist who preceded the Son of God, calling us to repentance. But the great message of salvation, of promise, of grace—one waited for that to be preached. Also, we listened to the speakers and found wanting guidance as to what it means to be a day to day followers of Jesus.

Avoidance of the Controversial

I confess that I and others were deeply disappointed that certain controversial subjects seemed to be avoided. We heard virtually nothing about the problem of war, peace and nonresistance. It was too "warm an issue." Yet we live in the shadow of an atomic war which casts its gloom over the future. Despite the fact that more than half the world is still suffering cruelly from the result of the war, the conference program seemed cheerfully oblivious to the problems of reconstruction and relief which are "number one" problems in the lives of many of the delegates. I wished that there might have been more serious realization of the tragic state of our world—that there is actual danger that the Christian fellowship of Oslo might be marred if our nations begin throwing atom bombs at one another.

Christianity — a Minority Movement

Another thought was sobering to me. It was this: the Christian church is a minority movement everywhere on the surface of the globe. In Denmark 98 per cent of the population is a member of the Lutheran Church, but on a Sunday morning less than 10 per cent attend worship services. So it is in Norway where 97 per cent are church members. In France only about 1 per cent of the population are said to be active in the Protestant Church. The world is filled with nominal Christians. But the working, professing Christians are few. They are the leaven, but not the loaf.

The Conference Theme

The theme of the conference was "Jesus Christ Is Lord.' Often those words were repeated until they seemed like just another slogan. But then again we heard words spoken about this conference theme which were deeply moving. I recall vividly the testimony in our discussion group of a young man from Ceylon. We were discussing what was meant by the theme, "Jesus Christ Is Lord." He explained, "To take Jesus Christ as Lord of my life means to live a completely surrendered life." He was a living demonstration of his faith because only two years before he had been paralyzed and the best doctors of Ceylon had given up hope for his recovery. He said, "I am able to stand in this group today because I took Jesus Christ to be Lord of my life." The conference was filled with little gems of inspiration such as that.

The conference on the whole was a "mountain top experience." We felt pulsing through our beings new strength, new confidence in the worldwide Christian church. And in the final moments of the conference we were hearkened back to the needs of our day. An announcement was made that it had been discovered through medical examination that one of the girls of the German delegation had an acute case of tuberculosis. A German boy told me afterward, "t.b.—we German youth all live in mortal fear off t. b." On the spot it was decided to take up a collection from the entire conference to underwrite the hospital care required by this girl from Germany. In that closing session the conference seemed alive to the need of the world and the Christian's duty to minister in it.

I am grateful that the opportunity was mine to be at Oslo. With the disciples on the Emmaus road we would wish to say—"Did not our heart burn within us, while He talked with us by the way, and while He opened to us the scriptures?"

A Witness against Race Prejudice

(Work in the City-County Hospital is one aspect of our total M. C. C. program in Gulfport, Mississippi, which also includes religious education, recreation, adult education, and family welfare. The health program consists of the hookworm control, home nursing, and this work in the City-County Hospital. The girl writing the article was one of three Christian nurses who went to this rather run-down hospital and patiently scrubbed and cleaned up, smiled and served patients, taking a clear stand as a Christian. In the end they won the respect of most of the staff. The two girls who continued in the work for a period of time were both made supervisors of different shifts.)

One evening a colored man was brought into the hospital with a rather severe laceration of his right hand. It was bleeding quite freely and it could be seen immediately that the laceration needed attention. Without thinking anything about the fact that the man was colored, Dr. X was called and asked to come out to suture this laceration. He was informed that the man was colored. Upon arrival it was very evident that Dr. X was disturbed about being asked to come out. He walked into the emergency room and immediately began to swear at the people for getting him out in the middle of the night. It was exactly 10:30 p.m. While pulling off his gloves (they were to prevent contaminating his hands rather than to protect the patient from infection) he continued to swear, using language anyone would be ashamed to repeat.

When he started to suture he had himself excited enough that he did not care what kind of job he did or how badly the patient would suffer. Although I had the novacaine all ready for use he refused to use any local anesthetic whatever. A small curved cutting needle was already on the suture and is used by all doctors. After attempting one stitch he became angry enough to throw the needle away and ask for a large straight needle. I showed him our supply of needles. He chose the largest straight round needle in the group. It was about the size of a large darning needle. Unless you can imagine how it would feel to sew a deep cut with a large darning needle without anesthesia you have no idea how this man suffered. Although he must have had a great deal of pain he never said a word. If he would move his hand the least little bit the doctor would swear at him. Needless to say, when doctors start fussing at such patients the nurses are not excluded. I was bawled out as I never imagined anyone could be. Since we northern nurses are not too popular among some of the doctors down here you can imagine work is not always too pleasant.

Well, our emergency treatment was called finished although no tetanus antitoxin was given (this is given routinely by all doctors for deep cut wounds of any kind to prevent lockjaw). Dr. X asked the man to hand over $10. He said he didn't have a cent with him. That seemed to be more than the doctor could tolerate. He threatened to call the police and have him put in jail. He finally said that if the man did not appear in the office at a certain time with the money he would be taken care of by the sheriff. The colored folks made no attempt to talk back to the doctor. They told him he would get his money and left the hospital. Dr. X also left the hospital mumbling to himself all the way out, saying all the mean things he could about the colored race.

This incident made quite an impression on me. In my mind I tried to believe that Dr. X just happened to lose his temper and that such an incident would not reoccur.

During the next few days other emergencies were cared for by Dr. X, and each time he acted like a good gentleman doctor. All these happened to be white folks. However, nurses had reported that he had lost his temper while dealing with some of the white folks also.

A couple of weeks later a colored woman, who had been hit by a car, was brought in. She was having extreme pain in her right arm and shoulder. Dr. X was called, this time not informing him that she was colored. He was furious when he arrived and found that she was black instead of white. Again he fussed at the people for getting him out in the middle of the night. Again it was not later than 11:00 p.m. He swore at these folks just as he had done in the case described. He told them they have no business coming to the hospital when they don't have more sense than to walk in front of a moving vehicle. They should go to the police station where they belong. When talking to the doctor over the phone an order was given to have an X-ray picture taken of the arm and shoulder. This had been done, so that all that was required of the doctor was to look at the X-ray to see if a fracture was present. It seemed that Dr. X felt this was expecting too much for a colored woman. Once more he told me exactly what he thought of me, and I assure you it wasn't very much.

As a result of these two episodes I was challenged to have something done about emergency care given to colored patients. I felt that we as Christian nurses should not tolerate such incidents. After much praying I informed the superintendent of nurses and the manager of the hospital that I refused to call Dr. X for any more colored cases. Dr. L, the colored doctor in Gulfport, brings his patients to the colored ward of City-County Hospital. Although a very fine surgeon, he is not permitted to use the operating rooms since his skin is black. He had never been called for emergency cases either. While talking to the hospital administrator and superintendent of nurses I told them I was going to call Dr. L for colored emergencies. I said if they would not give me permission to allow him to use the emergency rooms I would admit the patients on colored ward and find the necessary equipment so that Dr. L could take proper care of them. When they realized that I meant business, they consented to allow the colored doctor to use the emergency rooms. I am very certain that the colored folks will have much better care under Dr. L than they did under Dr. X. There is still a possibility that when the medical staff learns of this they will object violently. However, we believe that it will be worked out. We believe that God has a very definite hand in this entire procedure and He will certainly help us to do what we can toward bettering conditions in this hospital.

The physician of whom I wrote is an excellent surgeon. He is a member of the American College of Surgeons and has proved himself to be a very competent surgeon. As a general rule he is nice to work with, and we really don't have a great deal of trouble trying to please him. The other doctors on the staff are very co-operative and have been kind to us. Very few have an attitude as poor as that exhibited by Dr. X. We feel that the staff could do a great deal for their hospital by demanding a little more from the managing personnel and also the nursing staff.

Recently we had opportunity to call Dr. L. My sister, also a graduate nurse working in City-County, was taking care of emergencies. A colored man was brought in with a bad cut on his head. Dr. L was asked to come out. He was quite surprised and hesitated to come out. She informed him that permission had been granted by the hospital administrator. After assuring him that she would take full responsibility for what would happen, he consented to come out. Dr. L is very careful not to do anything that would disturb the white doctors. He came out and gave the patient proper treatment.

On the following day while discussing the incident with the superintendent of nurses, I learned that she had spoken to Dr. L earlier in the day. He was quite pleased that he was allowed to use the emergency rooms. We have heard no objection from the staff.

Again we saw how great and loving our Master is. He certainly opened the way for all these happenings. We are most grateful to Him for the results we are confident it will bring.

A Protestant minister has been invited to give a series of lectures on Christianity at the Ise Shrine in Japan. This is the temple where the Emperor, in his days of supposed divinity, worshipped. Several of the princes of that family are also receiving instruction on the Bible and the Christian faith. Whether this will result in conversion is not known.

Youth for Christ, at their third annual Youth for Christ convention, resolved to undertake an expansion program with a goal of holding a youth rally in every county of the United States. This would be 3,000 rallies. The decision was reached after the report was made that 18,000 country churches close their doors each year "and that there are 30,000 communities in our land without a pastor."

The falling of leaves is a time of beauty. We are cheered by their appearance in spring, but in autumn we are content to let them fall, assured that their seasonal life has been well lived.

Leaves are suggestive of the growth or development process. During spring and summer they help to feed the tree. By autumn another ring has been added to the tree's character. Off they fall, making room for new leaves in another growing season. Like the cells of the human body, most of which change in ten years, so leaves change in the continuous development of the tree. Change means life and growth.

So it is in the life of the spirit. It is not a static life. True, when great insights first bud forth, how fresh and vital they appear—and are. But they cannot remain as leaves. Their season over, another ring added to the individual's character or the group's experience, they fall off. For a season life lies dormant and then come new leaves and a new growing season. Regret for falling leaves? No, they are the evidence of more leaves to come. In the life of the spirit we must tend forward. To cling to leaves after they have served their purpose in adding to the character of individual or group is to stunt life. "God, grant us Thy grace to rest assured when leaves fall."

Leaves of the Spirit

AS WE SEE IT:

The Spirit Incarnate

1900 years ago much of the Jewish religion had become rigid, tradition-bound, inflexible, out of touch with the real life of man. In some circles it had become primarily a thing to argue about. As a result Jewish religion to the masses of people had become unconvincing and was either ignored or else given a rigid form of obedience.

What broke this religious inertia? God becoming incarnate in Jesus Christ and revealing how faith in Him and surrender to Him transformed man and his relationship to his fellowman.

We are in much the same situation in certain areas of Europe today. Christianity has become rigid, tradition-bound, out of contact with the real life of man, a thing to philosophize and argue about. It also has become unconvincing to many, a thing to ignore as unreal, out of touch with our time and the need of men and in any case far too impotent to cope with the demands of this tremendous time.

What can break this sorry condition of affairs? The spirit of the living Christ, of course, but the spirit of this saving Christ became incarnate in those who call themselves after His name. People who have lost faith in the Christian Church and its message need supremely a demonstration in human life and service what faith in Christ really means and what it does for a man and his relations. They need the witness of a Christian life, which constrained by the love of Christ, rolls up its sleeves and does something about the suffering of men and the physical and moral rubble heaps of war. Let the Mennonite church set itself the task of becoming a living incarnation of the spirit of Christ, serving His fellowmen in His name wherever doors of opportunity present themselves.—H. A. Fast, professor of Bible at Bethel College, and very active in the work of the Mennonite Central Committee, whose vice-president he is.

Wanted: a Prophet

A prophet is an individual who is dedicated to an aggressive testimony for God's truth regardless of any personal cost. Like the greatest of all prophets, he does not seek to ingratiate himself with any man (Matt. 22:16). From experience, he knows the meaning of Jesus' words, "Blessed are you when men revile you and persecute you and utter all kinds of evil against you falsely on my account. Rejoice and be glad, for your reward is great in heaven, for so men persecuted the prophets who were before you" Matt. 5:11, 12. Of course, he knows that there is not a blessing in every persecution, for he is more conscious than others of the fact, "That nothing burneth in hell but self-will." Not a reactionary, he is neither a revolutionary. He is an individual of deep insight and of great foresight and, therefore, far ahead of his time. A prophet usually is not popular with the majority of his contemporaries. Like a Jeremiah he may be accused of treason to the cause and considered a hindrance rather than an asset. His is a bitter cup. Of him it cannot be said, "Everyone speaks well of him." He knows the truth of the words of Luke 6:26, "Woe to you, when all men speak well of you, for so their fathers did to the false prophets." Because of his spiritual advancement, his message cannot be standard or conventional. He does not sound safe and sound. Like his Master, he may be called Beelzebub.

We need a prophet or prophets at our seminary. We need them on our college faculties. We need ministers who are prophets or are on the side of the prophets, who will not stand Peter-like with the fire-group and deny that they believe in the prophets, but who instead will courageously support the prophets and take the members of the churches they serve along in their respect and honor for them.

Our colleges and seminary do not exist to teach young men how to curry favor with everybody. Peacemakers, yes, but also sword wielders, who cut clean in their thinking and speaking, thus dividing the true from the untrue, and only in this way making true peace possible. Young prophets need to be raised up upon whom the mantles of the older prophets may fall. Prophethood does not go well with a selfish use of How To Win Friends and Influence People. That does not mean that people should not love; it means that they should, for fear must be conquered and love must be bold to speak the saving truth of Jesus Christ, our Lord and Saviour.

What shall we do with the prophets which may be amongst us? Shall we hound them or shall we honor them?

One of the most critical problems our conference is facing right now is that of securing a president for the seminary. The one who fills this capacity will have a great deal to do with the development of leadership for the General Conference. For the presidency of our seminary there is wanted: "A Prophet."—the Editor

Your Congressman and You

One of the vital links a citizen has to his national government is the representative he sends to the Congress. Right now many congressmen who are not abroad on special investigating trips are at home finding out what their constituents think and want. Church people who are concerned about the danger that universal military training means in this country and abroad should avail themselves of the opportunity to call upon their congressman to discuss with him their concern.

The House Armed Services Committee approved a bill for universal military training, H. R. 4278, only two days before Congress adjourned. The American people can now study this issue in reference to a specific bill. Many Congressmen had not made up their minds on this legislation when they left Washington. The reaction they get from their constituents during this period will help to decide how they vote. The Rules Committee of the House decides when this bill will be brought to the floor for action.

I should like to suggest that our church people do the following things while their congressman is at home:

1. Call on their representative to discuss universal military training and other vital issues. Because personal visits are more effective than letters, strong efforts should be made to see him personally while he is at home. Letters to your congressman's home or to his office in Washington are useful at any time for letting him know your thinking. Even though he cannot read individually all the letters that come to him, your congressman depends on them to help measure the intensity of the beliefs and attitudes of his constituents.

2. Some congregations may find it desirable to send one or more delegations of men and women to call upon their congressman. If people are willing to take time out from their work to discuss universal military training that in itself will make an impression on him.

3. Send a letter with thanks following the interview, which summarizes the important points in the discussion and reminds him of your concern.

WRITE — Senator Robert A. Taft who said, October 1, in Cheyenne, Wyoming, that adoption of universal military training would "force the same policy on every nation in the world and prove an obstacle to peace . . . . In the end it would encourage war rather than discourage it."

If you agree with the Senator on this point, will you write him a letter today to Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C., commending his opposition to UMT and urging that Congress defeat this measure decisively? As chairman of the Senate Republican Policy Committee, he is in an important position to help decide the outcome on this legislation.

It is important that lay people express their views on this issue. Ministers should be helpful in stimulating thinking on this matter and perhaps in helping to arrange visits. The effect of ordinary lay people discussing their views with their congressman is considerable. Most churches within the last year or two have passed official resolutions against universal military training. Congressmen expect ministers generally to oppose universal military training just as they expect most members of the American Legion to favor it.

The best kind of impression results from action which the congressman recognizes as spontaneous. When pressure from highly organized groups is brought to bear on him to vote one way or another, he reacts toward it the way any person reacts to pressure. What congressmen want to know is whether the people really believe what they say.

Church people should approach their congressman with a respect for him as a sincere person who tries to do his duty conscientiously. Anything less is hardly fair. It may mean that they are sometimes disappointed, but your congressman should be given the benefit of the doubt. It is immoral and destructive of the foundation of democratic government to accept the secondhand generalized attitude that congressmen are insincere politicians who make their constituents feel they agree with them in order to get their votes.

The issues should be discussed in a friendly manner; threats and emotional arguments have a negative influence. It is sometimes helpful to have questions for the congressmen to consider. In the discussion, problems may come up which the lay person cannot answer. While those who call on congressmen should organize their thinking in advance as much as possible, they should not expect to be able to answer everything. The discussion may cover a broad range of issues, but it should not terminate without the central bur-

Ruth Harder Writes from Paraguay

(The following excerpts are taken from a letter written by Mrs. Ernst Harder of Paraguay to her parents, Rev. and Mrs. J. A. Ewert, Hillsboro, Kansas. The Harders have been in charge of the large refugee camp at San Lorenzo.)

We are having real spring and summer weather now. The wind here reminds one of the March winds we have at home. The evenings are just simply wonderful. We have gone out for a little walk nearly every evening this week. There is just enough breeze and coolness to be comfortable with a sweater. The moon seems to be much bigger here than at home!

We did get those 110 people away last Sunday around two in the afternoon. Gerhard Buhr, Ernst, and some other boys were at the port trying to get things in order. Arrangements were that the Mennonites were to have the boat alone, but when they got there, the boat was almost filled with Paraguayan soldiers, so they had to see that they got them off again. You can imagine how they liked being chased off, but it was promised to us first. It was just an overnight ride for the people, and we heard this morning that they all got there safely together with their baggage. We had hoped to send another group away during the week, but there were no boats available. We are hoping there will be a possibility of sending about 180 during this week and the rest a week from tomorrow. That would leave us with the twenty-four who want to go to Brazil and who seemingly can't get the necessary permission. Sometimes we feel like counting the days, but here in Paraguay that isn's so good because you are liable to be disappointed nine times out of ten. At least now we think we can see the end.

One young man came back from the new land because his mother had an operation here. He gave a little report of how the work is going. He said in their village they had a hard time getting water. They den of the visit being clearly placed before the congressman in simple, direct language.

It would be helpful to read the bill for universal military training in preparing to discuss it. Naturally the views of a person who has read the specific legislation for any issue under discussion receives more attention than one who has not. Copies of H. R. 4278 may be obtained from the congressman's office in the House Office Building, Washington, D. C., or from the House Armed Services Committee.

Five Dutch Students Arrive in U. S.

Five Dutch students arrived on October 8 aboard the S. S. Edam. The names of these students and the colleges to which they are going are as follows: Grietje Graenveld, Tabor College; Jean Nalst Trenite, Bluffton College; Phillipus Weersma, Messiah Bible College; Henk Ens, Bethel College, Jean Marie Craandijk, Bethel. Also arriving on the same ship was Waldemar Timnik, a Mennonite refugee from Russia, who has been able to come to America and is on his way to relatives in Newman Grove, Nebraska. Other members of his family are now in Holland and will also come to America in a few weeks.

P. S. Goertz Ministers to Mennonite Refugees in Denmark

P. S. Goertz is serving in a ministerial capacity among the Mennonite refugees who are located in camps in Denmark. He reports much restlessness among these people who have been confined to these crowded camps for several years. The uncertainty of when and where they will be repatriated gives them considerable anxiety. Brother Goertz says further: "Looking over an audience of 300-400 such refugee Mennonites as I did the other night leaves an indelible impression. Coming as they do from an area established as a Mennonite community 400 years ago and maintained as such for all these centuries, these people can truly claim to be heirs of that heritage. Suddenly to lose it as they did and flee from it stripped of all possessions is a frightful experience. What sympathy goes out to them as one sees marks of all that on their faces! Brother H. S. Bender, who had just come from their (former) community around Danzig and Elbing, was with us at this camp for a meeting and reported that he had seen their churches and described to them the conditions they are now in. Nothing could have touched their heart more deeply."

Plan Relief for Refugees in Punjab

According to recent information Martin H. Schrag is in Delhi making further plans for MCC work among affected refugees in the Punjab. Previous contacts have been made and the government is very receptive and promises to provide every available facility. It is hoped the work will develop along medical and sanitation lines.

Sturges and Bernice Miller have been assigned to work in cooperation with the Brethren in Christ Mission aiding flood refugees as well as carrying on some of the other relief activities of the mission. They are helping to expand the milk canteen program among flood refugees and to be instrumental in the extension of the medical program.

Relief in Java Delayed

The possibility of work in Java is being delayed considerably by the continued political deadlock there. William Yoder suggests such work may be delayed for six months.

Establish Children's Home in Holland

A new area of MCC service in Holland is that of of a Children's Home at Heerwegen. This home in which forty or more needy children will be cared for, is under the immediate direction of MCC workers Lulu Smith and Alice Richert. The board of directors of this home includes several Dutch Mennonite leaders, and they have indicated interest in planning to continue this work after the MCC terminates this service.

Report on Christmas Bundles

From the children and young people in the United States and Canada a total of 12, 961 Goodwill Christmas Bundles have been received this year. These Bundles, with a total evaluation of $101,161.20 are in the process of being shipped to Belgium, Holland, Ethiopia, India, The Philippines, Java, Poland, Austria, Hungary, Germany, France, Italy, China, and Paraguay. These Bundles should reach the various countries in time to be distributed to needy children at Christmas time.

Also being shipped with these Christmas Bundles are the recreational kits and toys which had been re-received during the summer. It is hoped that these gifts will enrich the lives of the children who have suffered the hardships of the war, or who for other reasons have been unfortunate.

were down eleven meters, which is about thirty-five feet, and they hit a rock. For three weeks they have been trying to get through this rock, but it is practically impossible because it is from three to four feet thick. They don't enjoy working with and driving the oxen because they are so wild yet, and when they do go it is such slow business! They build their houses of mud bricks. The food is taken from here, that is, flour, salt, sugar, etc., but the mandioka they buy from the Friesland people. They do their own butchering.

FOOD FOR MIND AND HEART

"DER BOTE FREE SUBSCRIPTION FUND"

More and more we are beginning to realize that material aid for our suffering brethren is not enough. "Man lives not by bread alone" is true also among those that are starving. Cutural and spiritual food are very essential vitamins in the diet of mankind. This is especially true today. Let us briefly summarize the situation in our little Mennonite world.

The Mennonites of Germany were, up to World War II, most productive in the creation of good Christian literature. The Mennonites in all other countries have benefited and are still benefiting from what these people produced in their better days. Today, with a complete collapse of that country, they can hardly print a leaflet. Thousands of them have lost all of their earthly possessions. They would not be able to subscribe to a paper should one be available. And yet they are more in need of contact with their brethren in the faith than ever before. They need spiritual uplift in this desperate hour.

We are helping thousands of Mennonites cross the ocean to the Paraguayan Chaco. But do we realize what the Chaco is and what being there means? They have no books or magazines available either for school or home. They are still rooted in the German language and culture, but no books or periodicals from Germany can reach them. They can be helped, in this respect, only by us. Already some devotional books are being sent to them. Some textbooks for them will be printed in America. But they also need a living contact with their brethren in Canada, in the United States, and Europe. We can give this to them. Our expertly edited DER BOTE und BUNDESBOTE will tell them about their relatives and will supply them with the so much needed spiritual and cultural food.

The Home Mission Board has promised to furnish 1000 free subscriptions for these our brethren in South America and in Europe. The Board of Emergency Relief has kindly agreed to give assistance in this worthy undertaking. Who will help finance this Home Mission Board project? Send your contribution to: Board of Home Missions, General Conference Headquarters, 722 Main Street, Newton, Kansas, labeling your gift "DER BOTE Free Subscription Fund."—Board of Home Missions, A. MENNONITE LIFE very lively

"This issue is even better than the preceding ones." Such sentiment was expressed by some of the readers of Mennonite Life when the October, 1947, issue came out recently. This magazine is making many friends. The above picture, taken from the October issue, shows some of the barracks in Denmark in which one to two thousand Mennonite refugees from the Danzig area are being housed. Copies of Mennonite Life may be had from the Mennonite Publication Office, 710 Main, Newton, Kansas, for fifty cents a copy.

LET'S JOIN IN "WHEAT FOR RELIEF"

The General Conference Headquarters office stands ready to assist churches wishing to contribute cash toward the purchase of "wheat for relief," in helping to make these arrangements with Kansas flour mills.

This offer may be particularly helpful to smaller groups unable to buy a whole carload (a minimum of 600 sacks) by themselves. During the past week three congregations—one in Oklahoma, one in California, and one in Kansas—used the Headquarters facilities as a clearing house for the purchasing of a carload of flour.

The Mennonite Central Committee has now been suggesting that each contributing group add 15 per cent of the purchase price of the flour to be added for freight. We urge that where possible these funds be sent through the Headquarters office, credited to "wheat for relief" (Emergency Relief Board) so that such gifts will be listed to the credit of local congregations in the Headquarters Office reports.—Walter H. Dyck, Office Manager

BLUFFTON COLLEGE

The semi-annual meeting of the Board of Trustees will be held October 24. The next day will be Homecoming. On the twenty-sixth Parents' Day will be observed. Rev. Harleigh Rosenberger '41, Lockport, New York, will be the Vesper speaker on that day. The annual Bible Lectures will be held the week of November 16. The speaker selected is Dr. Charles Theodore Fritsch, Assistant Professor of Old Testament, Princeton Theological Seminary. A Ministers' Conference and Women's Conference will be held on Wednesday and Thursday of that week. Rev. Harry Yoder occupied the pulpit in the Pulaski, Iowa, church Sunday morning, October 12, and carried on solicitation work in that area in the days following. President Ramseyer filled speaking engagements at Normal, and Washington, Illinois, on October 5 and at the Bloomington Mennonite Hospital, October 6. On October 12 he spoke in the Dalton and Pandora, Ohio, churches. Gospel teams are active preparing for a year of services in churches through deputation teams. Faculty week-end institutes will also be offered to the churches. Those interested are encouraged to contact Rev. Paul Shelly for dates and personnel.

FREEMAN JUNIOR COLLEGE

Missionary Orlando Waltner, who with his family arrived from India by plane late this summer, spoke to different groups on the campus this week. On Monday he spoke to the Christian Youth Volunteers at their weekly meeting. On Tuesday he spoke to the students and faculty at a joint meeting sponsored by Y. W. and Y. M. C. A. Rev. Waltner, a graduate of the Academy and the Junior College, is the son of Rev. Alfred Waltner, who for years was a faithful member of the Board of Education of the College. Before leaving India, Rev. Orlando Waltner had charge of the work which the General Conference Mission in India carries on with the lepers. His messages are enriched by his experiences and by a deep missionary zeal. Faculty chapel speakers so far have been Dr. J. D. Unruh, Orlando Goering, Edwin P. Graber, and Dr. Harold Gross. George Claassen, ministerial student at Tabor College and president of the Y.M.C.A. on that campus, spoke to a joint meeting of the Y.W. and Y.M.C.A. this week, while he and his wife were in the community attending the meeting of the K.M.B. Conference. That conference, which meets annually, had its Sunday sessions on the campus.

Dr. J. E. Hartzler who conducted meetings in the auditorum every evening last week spoke in chapel every morning. On Monday he also spoke to the Christian Youth Volunteers at their weekly meetings. Through much hard work by many helping hands from the local communities the huge foundation for the boys' dormitory has been completed in record time. Donation labor, well organized and expertly supervised, has accomplished much in a surprisingly short time. There is, however, still much work to be done on the dormitory. The work on the new auditorium will be begun a little later. It is hoped that necessary materials, like cement, will be more easily available soon.

BETHEL COLLEGE

The annual Founders' Day program, celebrating this year the fifty-ninth anniversary of the college was held on October 12 in Memorial Hall. Rev. J. F. Balzer, Crete, Nebraska, a former professor and Dean at Bethel, addressed a large audience on "Our Protestant Task," emphasizing the place of Christian freedom within the framework of love. Nine foreign students were introduced by President Kaufman — four from Holland, two from Italy, two from Puerto Rico, and one from India. Two are expected from China and one from Germany. Forefathers' Day was also observed in the morning service; and in the afternoon Open House was held in dormitories, offices, and classrooms for the parents. During the traditional Parent-Student program and reception that followed, Leo Goertz spoke for the students, Mrs. W. C. Andreas for the parents, Max Smith for Board of Directors, and President Kaufman for the Faculty.

MENNONITE ENCYCLOPEDIA HAS HISTORY OF DIFFICULTIES

Very likely, some day in the future it will be announced that the Mennonite Encyclopedia is off the press. Behind that achievement will lie years of difficulties, for the Encyclopedia is a development of the Mennonitisches Lexikon, which is a German Mennonite production of three volumes, with fifteen installments of forty-eight pages to each volume. During the period of the First World War this work suffered what seemed nearly insuperable handicaps: "a severance for years from foreign countries, especially from those in which three-fourths of all the Mennonites live: difficulties of paper supply which stopped the presses for a time; partial devaluation of operating capital by the inflation; loss of income from nearly 1,000 subscribers in Russia by the destruction of the Mennonite colonies; discontinuance of the annual subsidy of the 'Association of Mennonite Churches in Germany' and that of the Hamburg-Altona Congregation as a result of the devaluation of the German currency." But help came from friends in America, Holland, Switzerland, and France. The first volume was finally completed in 1924, and the second volume was completed in 1937. Five installments of the third volume have been completed and published, the last installment being dated 1942. The work is uncompleted with the letter "O." Editors Hege and Neff have died. It is this Lexikon, which is now being used in the production of a Mennonite Encyclopedia.

By Cornelius Krahn

From the Book Shelf

Glimpses of Mennonites. The second enlarged edition of John C. Wenger's Glimpses of Mennonite History and Doctrine (Herold Press, Scottdale Pa., 258 p. $2.25) has just come off the press. The book is meant to be an introduction into the history and practices of the various Mennonite groups, and especially of the "Old" Mennonites or those of Pennsylvania German background, to be used in home and school. A well prepared, up-to-date and balanced list of books and articles at the end of each chapter helps the reader to continue the study of certain subjects. The book is readable and eliminates detailed discussions of secondary significance. The facts stated in the book are generally dependable and all groups are treated sympathetically. The second improved edition, will no doubt be used as widely and profitably as was the first.

In passing a few questions and suggestions should be mentioned. The young reader would, no doubt, be more attracted if there were fewer titles and dates in the text and if the pictures were distributed throughout the text which they illustrate. A change of a name as well known as Hans de Ries to John de Ris seems rather arbitrary; and the error that many Kleine Gemeinde Mennonites joined the "Holdemans" could have been avoided by checking into the matter. It is doubtful whether the selection of scattered statements from the "fathers" can justly be entitled "The Theology of the Mennonites"(a pile of bricks is not yet a house). The chapters on "The American Mennonite Pioneer" and "The Great Awakening" would be more understandable and profitable had they been pictured against a broader background as this has been done so ably by Dr. S. F. Pannabecker. All this goes to show that we have a very valuable contribution in Wenger's book, but that the Mennonite sequel to Roland H. Bainton's Church of Our Fathers has not yet been written.

A Mennonite Time Table. A unique way of writing Mennonite history has been followed by J. J. Hildebrand in his Chronoligishche Zeittafel (published by the author, 214 Cheriton Ave., R. R. 1 Box 630, Winnipeg, Manitoba 416 p. $4.50.) The author collected data and dates and arranged this information in chronological order. For example he states "October 6, 1683, Mennonites from Krefeld arrived on the Concord and founded Germantown in Pennsylvania." In this way the writer presents facts from Mennonite history from its beginning to the present time. Some of the facts cataloged are general known, some are less known, and others hardly known. All in all there are 1500 of them accompanied by numerous maps, statistics and illustrations. Of interest is the pictorial review of the development of reaping grain from the scythe to the modern combine. It is surprising with what diligence the author has accumulated facts and dates. The book is strongest in this objective. In his interpretation the author is sometimes interesting and sometimes carried away by his emotions. Occasionally the author cannot help throwing in a few remarks on politics for good measure. The reader would be able to make greater use of this diligent work if the book had an index. The book is written in the German language and has a greater emphasis on the Dutch background (Prussia, Russia, America) than on the Swiss background (South Germany, Pennsylvania). In brief, this is a unique contribution and will be especially appreciated by those who are familiar with the general lines of Mennonite history.

Plead for Men Workers

(The following letter written by Henry A. and Mary Toews to Rev. Howard G. Nyce, Secretary of the Foreign Mission Board, contains a strong plea for young men to come to the mission field. The letter was dated August 29, 1947. The Toew's address now is, Congo Inland Mission, Nyanga; Par Tshikpa; Congo Belge, W. C., Africa.)

We have been exceptionally busy lately. One reason is that Rev. and Mrs. Frank J. Enns left for their furlough in June. We hope that by this time they are nicely settled somewhere in the States. Another reason is that we are building a dwelling house this dry season. We do all of our permanent building with stone and sun dried bricks. So we have to do our major part of the building the dry season. That means if we want to get a dwelling house under roof during the three months of dry season, we have to go pretty strong to get done with it before the rains begin.

Another reason for being busy is that we have just had all the outstation teachers in for Teacher's Institute. That always adds plenty of extra duties to the already busy day. We now have over one hundred outstation teachers who spend their time in the villages teaching the children to read and write and preaching the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

Where, oh where are the young men of our conferences who are willing to say with the song writer:

"Fully surrendered Lord Divine,
  I will be true to Thee.
All that I am or have is Thine,
  I will be true to Thee."
"Tho it may cost me friends and home
  I will be true to Thee.
Cause me in lands afar to roam
  I will be true to Thee."

We are so badly in need of young men here in the field. The Lord spoke very sternly in a nearby village a few weeks ago. A young man, who had grown up near the mission and had heard the gospel over and over again but had steadfastly refused to accept Christ, went to a grass fire and was instantly killed by being ripped up by a wild buffalo. The Lord is still speaking. May the Lord abundantly bless you and keep you.

Yours in Him,

Henry A. and Mary Toews

THE SPIRITUAL PREPARATION OF THE MINISTER

by I. I. Friesen

The spiritual preparation of the minister is a prime necessity. If a minister spends all his time in preparing sermons and does not prepare himself, he is making a great mistake. Far more important than what a minister can do about his sermons is what he can do about himself. A recent writer has said, "Preaching is not the art of making a sermon and delivering it. It is the art of making a preacher and delivering that." Paul speaking to the elders of the church says, "Take heed therefore unto yourselves and to all the flock." He tells them to take heed to themselves first, for only then can they really feed the flock. The spiritual preparation of ourselves as ministers is therefore of first importance if we are to be faithful ministers to our people.

This spiritual preparation is, however, by no means always an easy matter. Before a minister realizes it he may fall into certain habits and attitudes which make spiritual preparation a very difficult thing. Let us ask ourselves what some of these hindering things may be.

There is, first of all, the danger of being so busy with many things in our ministry that we find no time for spiritual preparation. In these days the minister finds himself in a complex and difficult setting. Tremendous demands are made on his mind, heart, time and energy. He is faced with a constant round of duties, for a minister's work is never done. Unless he takes time for spiritual preparation, these demands are sure to wear him down so that he loses his effectiveness in the ministry, because like Martha he is "careful and troubled about many things," and fails to choose the good part for which our Lord commended her sister Mary.

A second danger which hinders us in our spiritual preparation is the habit of applying the truth to others and not to ourselves. A minister is constantly thinking of how to feed his flock. This is commendable but the danger is always present of neglecting to feed himself. A minister may be like the town baker who distributes loaves to others but himself starves to death. If we are to be spiritual in our ministry, we must allow the Word to speak to us, for we need to check ourselves against the standards of God as well as those to whom we minister. In other words, we need to study the Bible for the truths and lessons we get out of it for our own souls.

A third danger that hinders spiritual preparation is a spirit of professionalism in the ministry. Just because we deal so much with spiritual things there is the danger of their becoming common to us. Each year there are so many sermons to preach, so many marriages and funerals at which to officiate etc. We become mechanical or professional in our duties and perform them without zeal or fire, forgetting that we are dealing with imperishable souls that have an eternal destiny and are the ones for whom Christ died.

Finally there is the danger of succumbing to a spirit of defeatism or a sense of futility in our ministry. We see how strongly entrenched the evil in the world seems to be. We see how small a portion of the whole we are touching. We see how little our labours seem to have accomplished. Such a spirit of defeatism in a minister makes him a poor leader of his people. Such a spirit can only be overcome by a deeper spiritual preparation of the minister which fixes his eyes on a living and loving Lord who still performs miracles even in our day.

After a consideration of these negative habits and attitudes, let us look at some positive things that can help a minister in his spiritual preparation.

First among these is prayer. Chalmers has said that most failures in the ministry are not due to a lack of visiting, or study, or of organizational activity but to a lack of prayer. Prayer replenishes our lost virtue and the energy which the toil of passion has taken from us. The early disciples wanted to give themselves to prayer and the ministry of the Word. We notice here that they put prayer first and regarded it as something that was so taxing and toilsome as to demand their best strength. There are many things that would drive a minister to his knees. Like Moses he sometimes feels like saying, "Wherefore layest thou the burden of all this people upon me? Have I conceived all this people? Have I begotten them that thou shouldst say unto me. Carry them in thy bosom? I am not able to bear all this people alone, because it is too heavy for me." The parable of the friend at midnight may be called the preacher's parable supreme, for he too must say, "A friend of mine in his journey is come to me and I have nothing to set before him." Let us realize that only by dwelling in the presence of our Lord can we receive the message needed by our people, for a sermon like a river must begin in the sky.

A second help in spiritual preparation is deep humility. Sometimes the very respect which our office receives may foster spiritual pride and make us insensible to our own defects in the sight of God. Because we are constantly standing before others we deceive ourselves into thinking that we are better than others. However, a proud heart is not spiritually prepared to serve God. We may well ask ourselves, "Who maketh thee to differ from another? What hast thou that thou didst not receive?" There are many factors in our ministry that should make us humble. There is first of all the magnitude of our task. As ministers we are to be incarnations of the truth we preach. In a certain sense the Word is to become flesh in us. Then we also have responsibilities for others. We are to present every man perfect in Christ Jesus. Such tasks are indeed humbling in their appalling responsibility. On the other hand, any success we may have in making spiritual progress in our own lives or in helping others must be credited to God. It is God who takes our five loaves and two fishes and makes them a banquet for hungry souls. We are but unprofitable servants.

A third help in our spiritual preparation is a deep consecration of ourselves to God. Such a consecration and surrender to God makes it possible for God's Spirit to guide and direct us. Such a surrender and consecration is also the basic condition for the receiving of an infilling of the Holy Spirit, and Pentecost teaches us that spiritual power came to the disciples only when they were filled with the Holy Ghost.

> How tragically we have lost the outgoing quality of ministry to human need which characterized our Lord himself. When he confronted a hungry crowd, he fed them. When he found men sick he healed them. When he discerned problems of human adjustment he turned teacher and gave men courses in applied psychology, applied sociology, applied ethics. When he realized that the party was about to be a flop, he turned the water into wine. When he saw a man paralyzed because of an unresolved moral conflict in his life, he said "Thy sins are forgiven thee, . . ." and so cured the man's functional disorder. "And the common people heard him gladly."

THE BACKGROUND AND DELIVERY OF THE SERMON

by Wilmer Shelly

I should like to preface my paper with a very suitable verse of scripture from the writings of the Apostle Peter "If any man speak, let him speak as the oracle of God; if any man minister, let him do it as the ability which God giveth; that God in all things may be glorified through Jesus Christ, to whom be praise and dominion for ever and ever, Amen." I Pet. 4:11.

The lawyer has his courtroom, the scientist has his laboratory, the artist has his studio, and the preacher has his pulpit. We are to consider that area of the ministerial office, namely the preaching function of the ministerial office, both before he goes into his pulpit, and while he is in the pulpit delivering his sermon. The topic as assigned is in two parts, (1) the background of the sermon, and (2) the delivery of the sermon. By the background we shall include its source or origin and its preparation up to the time of its delivery.

I. The Background of the Sermon. Phillips Brooks says there are three conditions affecting the background of a sermon, (1) the preacher, (2) the material or truth to be presented, and (3) the congregation. The background of a sermon is influenced by the preacher's own background. We should not attempt to be a kind of preacher God did not make us to be. This is not pride, it is modesty and honesty. The preacher's home and family, his church and schools attended, rural or urban background, his social and cultural environment, these are reflected in his preaching. The preacher's sermons are influenced by his attitude toward men, I mean a sympathetic attitude towards all men, saints and sinners. A sympathy for all men is developed by living with them and for them. The preacher should circulate among his people, enter into their lives, around the barn, in their places of business, meet them in their week-day clothes. Jesus was a mingler among men. God became incarnate that He might live with men. No matter what our educational endowments, or our gifts as silver-tongued orators, these are no substitutes for elbow-rubbing. A preacher may have, and does have, his deficiencies, but let them not be of the heart. Sympathy with our people, an insight into their problems and burdens, this gives diversity and fertility to sermons. If it is a system of theology we preach, or if we ride the same horse, we soon come round to the place of beginning. Preaching out of a sympathy for and with men, we will never exhaust our material. Our sympathy for men will turn us back to the Old and New Testaments to see what we can find there for them.

The preacher must have "ears to hear and eyes to see," for "there are sermons in stones and books in running brooks." Christ was observant. His discourses reveal what He saw, "behold a sower—two women grinding at the mill—consider the lilies—behold the fig tree." Henry Ward Beecher saw a jewel in a jewelry store and then preached a sermon on the text, "and they shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts, in the day when I make up my jewels." Beecher had eyes and saw things.

The purpose for which we are preaching, or the kind of truth we wish to present also influences the background of our sermons. If evangelical Christianity is the truth we wish to preach, the background differs from that of the "high church" variety, or that which a Catholic priest would disseminate in South America.

The audience also influences the background of the sermon. The audience is a Christian gathering. It is not loose and incoherent as the multitude which stood around Paul on Mars Hill merely to "tell or to hear some new thing." A preacher coming into a congregation will study his people as a man analyzes the soil of a farm he has bought. He will want to know what the soil needs for the crops he intends to produce. He will study its contour, type of soil, whether light or heavy, sandy or clay, and then plan his farming program accordingly. Granted that all his preaching is evangelical, still the type of congregation will influence his messages and determine what he aims to accomplish. A wise perception of what the people need, not necessarily what they want, resulting from a careful study of one's parish, a true knowledge of the congregation, a special knowledge of those special people, and a sympathetic understanding of the conditions under which those people live—this is necessary, and will influence the background of our preaching.

Considering now the background and preparation of any particular sermon, the decision on what to preach

August 15 to 19, 1947, was another memorabl casion which will long be remembered by many m ters and their families. At that time, approxima 195 pastors, missionaries, their wives and children, tled down to a period of fellowship and medita alongside the beautiful, quiet Lake Shipshew near Shipshewana, Indiana.

The silent ripples of the Lake were symbolic o inward movement of our spirits. Like the unseen f of nature moving upon the waters, so the Spir God was moving the hearts of those privileged t present. I should like to mention just three in movements of the Spirit that impressed themselve on the heart of the writer.

I. There was the inward movement of the consc ness of God's presence.

Sometimes we become in danger of losing our consciousness by the many activities that force t selves upon our lives. We become out of tune God because of the static of our busy and mu lives. The mechanics of life tend to make us and think like machines. What does the twen century pastor need more than to come apart and mit God to speak to his soul in the still, small v Such was the experience of Elijah, that great pr and warrior of God, who being accustomed to tangible forces of life needed to renew his confid in the unseen, hidden things of God—the still, s voice.

God was in the still, small voice, and the Holy S was working mightily through us as we gathere side the lake for our evening prayer service. It not essential for one to close his eyes to pray- looking across the waters to the stately trees an golden sunset, one was assured that God was near. Aye, the Psalmist expressed it beautifully, Lord reigneth, He is clothed with majesty . . . with strength, Thy throne is established of old; art from everlasting" (Psa. 93:1,2). Yes we learned God was near to the soul that sought Him.

I. There was the inward movement of fellowship peace with God and the brethren.

'aul in Romans 5:1ff calls our attention to the re- ; of justification, "Being therefore justified by ı, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus st." The key to this verse rests in the word, erefore," which is the secret of Paul's teaching nique. All that lies before is worthless unless it es forth in what follows after. All that follows is ndent on what lies before. The word "peace" here lies to unite or to have unity. True peace with God with one's fellow laborers can come only through ıine faith in Christ as Savior and Lord. There can- be one without the other. That is the only bond of ıine fellowship, and that truth made its impact up- us. Where brethren and sisters are truly "in the d," there is always a genuine fellowship and peace. was like precious ointment upon the head . . . and he dew of Hermon, that descended upon the moun- s of Zion" (Psa. 133:2,3).

II.There was also the inward movement of total secration to the work of God's Kingdom.

Daily we were led in this direction as we studied second Epistle of Paul to Timothy. We were made scious of the many joys as well as temptations that front the Christian pastor and missionary. Long ll I remember the emphasis of not being "ashamed he Gospel of Jesus Christ," and the importance of ntaining the "inner glow" of the Christian experi- e.These as well as the daily devotional period, the yer services, the sessions on "Effective Preaching," study of our mission fields, led us to a new vision of largeness of the task before us and a personal con- ation to the glorious work of God's redemptive pro- m.

Thus, as we fellowshipped together, we were aware he Spirit of God moving among us. We were con- nt that such opportunties should not be discontin- , but should in the future, be strengthened and made e effective—Ronald von Riesen should not be hasty. The best meal is not the result of a hurried raid of the pantry. Sermons are not like mushrooms; they cannot be forced on Saturday night or Sunday morning. Permit a personal illustration. Some months ago I read in a religious periodical of a German Protestant pastor who was in a concentration camp during the war. Before his death he said, "The only way to meet totalitarian Hitlerism is with totalitarian Christianity." Those words stuck as something challenging, and the thought became the background for a sermon some months later on the theme "Totalitarian Christianity," using as the text "thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind and with all thy strength." That was total. Other verses of scripture suggested themselves, such as "there is one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all" — "God hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name, that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things on earth, and things under the earth, and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord to the glory of God the Father." Our hymn writers tell of the same total faith in such lines as, "love so amazing, so divine, demands my soul, my life, my all," and "Crown Him Lord of All." Sermons need a background of time to mature and contain a texture that will last longer than a mushroom, for it was not forced like a mushroom, or like the earth at the dawn of creation it may be "without form and void."

For certain days and certain themes, the preacher needs a sermon each year, and knowing this he will be on the alert to clip and file material so that the background may be a year's accumulation of material.

In the actual preparation of the sermon, with all that has gone before as the background, what remains is the selection of the text, unless the text may itself have been the origin or background, and the organizing of the material and the preparation for actual delivery. Here there are several methods, (1) writing the sermon in its entirety, introduction, discussion, conclusion. (2) taking notes and from them arranging an outline, or (3) some great minds have the entire sermon as a mental picture and have it fall together as the inventor sees his finished machine or gadget in its completeness before he begins to produce it. This is for the genius only.

II. The Delivery of the Sermon. Broadus, in his book, "The Preparation and Delivery of the Sermon, states three methods of delivering a sermon, (1) reading a sermon that has been carefully written, (2) reciting, repeating, a sermon from memory that has been written and memorized, and (3) free, or extemporaneous speaking without dependence on manuscript. By free and extemporaneous speaking he means the speaking itself is extemporaneous; the sermon has been carefully prepared.

Reading a completely written sermon compels completeness of preparation and may produce excellence of style and grammatical correctness, and may be a wise procedure in treating a controversial subject where misunderstanding and misinterpretation are possible.

To write and memorize a sermon shackels the mind and spirit. There is the fear of forgetting. It is artificial and lacks fervor.

There remains then the free and extemporaneous method where the preacher has prepared his message and speaks without dependence on his manuscript, but uses notes according to the needs and wishes of the particular preacher. The advantages of this type of delivery are that there is more ease and effectiveness than reading or reciting. Ideas that occur during the preaching may be used. After careful preparation some of the noblest and most inspiring thoughts come while the preacher is engaged in preaching. Again, a sympathetic congregation will inspire a preacher so that the message rises far above the prepared message and prepared language. The preacher can more effectively strike the right key in the conclusion and final exhortation if free from the manuscript or reciting a memorized message. This leaves the Spirit free. Of course, the devout preacher seeks the leading of the Holy Spirit during his preparation. The Spirit can help then and also while preaching the sermon if it is not in a mold cast in one shape only. Also in this method of preaching the preacher is most natural. The voice, the eye, the gestures will follow what nature dictates. It will most likely gain the fullest sympathy from the hearers.

In conclusion, let me state what we all know, there is no one and only plan for the background or method of delivering a sermon. They do not all come out alike like coins out of a mint. Let us make full allowance for the divine power in our work. The Holy Spirit is with us to prepare and preach our sermons. "We are laborers together with God." Great sermons are not preached by those who set out to do that very thing. They spring from sources higher than vanity or ambition according to Beecher. That is a great sermon that has power to do great things in the hearts of men. Nor should we be discouraged if some of our people part of the time, and part of our people some of the time react to our preaching as did Festus when he said to Paul, "Go thy way for this time. I will hear thee again of this matter."

A journey is not complete until we reach our destination. So with a sermon. It is not complete until it reaches its destination, the people who sit in front of us. I shall close with a prayer that Blackwood gives in his book The Fine Art of Preaching: "Here, O God, is my sermon. It is a piece of my heart and of my life. Take it, I beseech Thee, and use it as an earthen vessel. Cleanse it with Thy Holy Spirit; then fill it and flood it with the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ, Amen."

BUILDING THE WORSHIP SERVICE

by A. S. Rosnberger

"O worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness; fear before him, all the earth." Psa. 96:9. Worship is an essential part of the relationship between man and his Creator, and to build a worship service that is reverent and effective is an important part of the minister's task. The Sunday morning service is, for the most part, the golden opportunity to reach the largest number of people. We need to give careful thought and attention to this, and any other service, so as to lead our people into a close and vital touch with God the Father, and with His son, Jesus Christ, and to prepare the way for the Holy Spirit to have full sway in the service.

Sabbath Morning Prayer

by Hazel L. Caanday

Lord, gather up within Thy hand today
The prayers which each and all of us shall pray;
The gifts we ask for, and the joys we seek,
The problems and the triumphs of the week;
Each plea for mercy, and each gift of praise,
Each bit of thankfulness for happy days—
Lord, blend our prayers in one.

Lord, gather up within Thy hand today
The hearts of each and all of us, we pray:
We are, some young, some old, some bowed with tears;
Some strong in faith and love, some warped by fears;
Though each the other may not understand,
Lord, hold us all within Thy powerful hand—
And melt our hearts in one.

There are a number of things that we must take for granted as preparatory to a worship service. The minister needs to be prepared to lead his people. This is above all spiritual so that he may be in a devotional mood that is real and genuine. While general devotional preparation for the Sabbath service is being made all through the week, in a specific way this should begin at least on Saturday evening. This evening spent calmly in meditation, reflection and reading is more conducive to a good service the next day than an evening crowded full of business or social events.

Then on Sunday morning the minister should come to the service on time, present an appearance of care and neatness with respect to his own person, and be in a mood that makes his leadership real and genuine, not artificial or professional. Early Sunday morning prayers, reading of scripture, singing or listening to hymns, will aid in inspiring a real devotional mood. Certainly frenzied, last-minute preparation will not do so.

There are also some things that are necessary on the part of the congregation in order to have a service of real worship. The congregation, too, should come on time and in an attitude of worship. Promptness helps the tone of the service, but we need to remember that there may be good reasons why people may occassionally come late. Our people need to be encouraged and instructed to make their own preparation for the Sabbath services so that they may come in a devotional mood. One cannot rush into a service from strenuous and stirring activity, and settle down immediately to the spirit of quiet worship. He who prepares to worship will profit most.

During the course of the service, the admonition "Be still and know that I am God" needs to be kept in mind by all. Real worship needs quiet. Whispering in the congregation is a real problem when it occurs. However, it is questionable whether rebukes made in public will get the best results. As a rule any such disturbance will be on the part of young people who do not fully understand. Reasoning with them and appealing to their sense of Christian fair play will usually help a lot. Many churches have nurseries and do not have the problem of children crying or making noise. Others do not have such, and here mothers and fathers will need to cooperate and take the children out if the crying or other noise is too loud or prolonged.

Another person who has an important relationship to the worship service is the janitor. To have the right amount of heat and ventilation is a task of no mean status. A janitor who has learned to condition properly a building is "worth his weight in gold." A building that is too hot, or too cold, or too stuffy makes for handicaps that can hardly be overcome.

We think now of the music of the service. The first phase of this is usually the voluntary, or prelude. This is more than to cover up the noise that occurs between the Sunday school and church service. It is a part of the worship and should be recognized as such. It helps to give the spiritual tone to the service. "When the music begins, let each one be quiet" is good admonition as worship commences.

The hymns will need to be very carefully chosen. This means much more than opening the hymn book and picking one of the first hymns to which one happens to open. There should be a careful choice with reference to their part in the service. Perhaps the opening hymn will be of general worship, then the others may be selected in keeping with the nature of the service, or the sermon theme. A half hour, more or less, may be time well spent in selecting hymns.

There is a tendency to restrict ourselves to a certain limited group of hymns that we have learned to know. In our Mennonite Hymnary there are so many fine hymns, and unless we are willing to make that effort to learn the new ones, we will lose out on many that are most worthwhile. Perhaps the new ones will not go so well the first few times, but the ultimate result will be very valuable.

In churches which have choirs, a competent director will have the ability to add much to the service and direct the part of the choir so as to make the whole service most worshipful. In churches that do not have choirs, special numbers or additional hymns will need to be fitted in. The important thing is that the minister and music leaders work together in cooperation and understanding of the factors that make for vital and genuine worship.

A most important phase of the service is the pastor's leadership in the pastoral prayer. An article appeared recently which was entitled "The Sad State of Public Prayer." This indicates that only too often the minister does not give enough thought to his prayer and thus neglects an item of utmost importance. To come to the pulpit with no thought of the prayer is as bad as to come unprepared for the sermon.

The pastor must be the leader as the congregation unites in prayer before the Lord. We do not have room here to discuss all that such a prayer should include, but we believe it should have the following characteristics: It must be sincere and real. It should not be informative to God. We are not praying to tell the Lord what is needed. We are rather to lift people and causes to God in intercession. The pastoral prayer should be organized. A prayer that is thought through can be concise, inclusive and beautiful. Without forethought there will likely be repetition and rambling. The prayer should be reverent. The minister stands between God and man, and here is no place for show or for parading of words. The voice of the minister should be clear, tender and mellow, with the ring of sincerity that comes from a true heart.

The scripture reading for the worship service should be carefully selected with thought to its relationship to the theme being worked out. The reading may be the context, an illustrative story from some part of the Bible, or some other passage that throws light on the general theme.

It is important that a minister strives to read well. If there is any difficulty in this respect, time spent in reading for practice is time well spent. People want to hear the scripture read clearly and loudly enough to be heard by all. To look up occasionally when reading adds much to the effectiveness.

It is well to use responsive readings frequently. In the introduction to the responsive readings in our Hymnary we read, "The regular use of these responsive readings cannot be too strongly urged. Thereby, as in the singing of the hymns, every soul present may share actively in the worship service." Whether the minister wishes to use both responsive readings and his own reading of scripture in the service is a matter of choice on his part. If both are used, the scripture reading should not be too long.

Among the other parts of the worship service we think of the invocation. Here in solemn reverence we ask the presence of God in our worship. There is no need for a long drawn out petition.

The offering is a devotional act, not merely taking up a collection. It is the time when we bring to God what is really His, and this should be an essential part of our worship. This part of the service can be greatly enchanced by proper musical selections.

Announcements should be made in a brief, businesslike way. Many churches have "bulletins" which contain the announcements, but often it is advisable to make some of these more emphatic by a reference from the pulpit. An effort should be made to make such as short as consistent with their purpose.

With the benediction we bring the service to a close. Most authorities recommend a benediction taken from the Bible rather than one in the minister's own words. The singing of a doxology makes an effective close to the service.

Since in this paper we are thinking of building a worship service, the question may arise whether the sermon is to be considered a part of worship, or whether it stands apart as a separate entity. It seems to me very definitely that the sermon is a part of our worship. True preaching has been defined as the revelation of God to man; as the proclamation of a message, not from human lips, but from the depths of the Eternal; as the proclamation of a word not the preacher's own, because it is the Word of God incarnate; as presenting God's way of life through Jesus Christ. There can be no separation of such a message from the spirit and act of worship.

These thoughts are offered to be of some help that we may all seek to improve our conduct of the worship service. But as they are offered, it is with the thought in mind that no matter what man may do, unless the Spirit of God is present in the service, we can accomplish nothing. Our hope is that through the observance of proper principles in our planning of worship, we may open the way for the fullest working of the Spirit of God and do nothing to hinder the leading of His Spirit. May God use us as humble servants through whom man may be led to God, and His son, Jesus Christ; and through whom the eternal truth is given to men.

BOARD OF PUBLICATION ANNOUNCES POLICY ON USE OF SUPPLEMENTS

At the meeting of the Board of Publication at Berne in August, in reviewing its publication policies, the Board of Publication decided that due to the large amount of material accumulating the editor is to issue monthly supplements as needed, thus increasing the size of your MENNONITE from time to time by an additional eight pages. The use of these supplements has, in the past, not been entirely clear. The new policy makes the space available, due to conference or some urgent business on the part of some board, to give the necessary publicity to its particular program.

Your Board of Publication is seeking to serve the entire Conference—its boards, its various committees, and churches—and the use of the new supplement program by those who need the space will be a step in that direction.

left foot on October 4 at Mennolan Retreat Grounds when a scaffold on which he was working gave way and threw him and some other men about seven feet to the ground. While he has had a lot of pain, he is resting fairly well at this writing. The doctors hope to put his foot into a walking cast within a week, after which he will be able to leave the hospital. He will be handicapped in his work for quite a while. In the absence of the pastor on October 5, Rev. Walter W. Wolfe of the Germantown church filled the pulpit. Rev. Wolfe also preached for us one Sunday while Rev. Plenert attended the General Conference. In addition to his pastoral duties at Germantown, Rev. Wolfe is finishing his Seminary course in Philadelphia and also works in a Jewish mission. He has some interesting and inspiring experiences to relate of his work among the Jews.—Ruth E. —Eden Church, Moundridge, Kansas: Our pastor, Rev. Walter Gering, has spared no efforts in making our mid-week Bible study meetings worthwhile. With the help of a committee, he has been planning and organizing unit material for each meeting. The first thirty minutes are devoted to a worship service consisting of music and poetry with organ interludes suited to the theme of the evening. The following half hour is spent in discussing one of the parables of our Lord. During this time Rev. David P. Neufeldt of Rosemary, Alberta, at present a student at Bethel College, directs the children's Bible study hour. He also works with the children on Sunday mornings.—Reuben Krehbiel, Corr.

—Bergtal Church, Pawnee Rock, Kansas: The C. E. recently sponsored Dr. L. C. Kreider, who spoke to us on the possibilities of atomic energy. On September 28 relatives and the church group helped Mr. and Mrs. Otto Schmitt celebrate their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary. A fine program and lovely refreshments were the features of the evening. In a recent letter, Miss Louise Deckert gave us a descriptive outline of her duties in the La Platte Hospital.—Corr.

—Peter and Frieda Dyck, who are to return to Europe to help with the migration of more refugees, have the following schedule for the latter part of October and first part of November: participation in the M.C.C. meeting, Chicago 18; a few days of restful visiting with relatives in Winnipeg; ordination of Peter Dyck as elder in his home church, Tiefengrund, Laird, Saskatchewan, October 26; participation in the Brethren in Christ Conference, Duntroon, Ontario, October 28; Waterloo-Kitchener Church, October 29; Leamington, October 30; Vineland, October 31; Niagara-on-the-Lake, November 1; travel to Akron, Pa.; and later to Europe.

—Zion Church, Arena, North Dakota: Rev. and Mrs. Herbert H. Peters have resigned from this church and have gone to Luton, Iowa, where they now have a church. Rev. Edward Duerksen of Avon, South Dakota; Rev. J. J. Regier of Freeman, and Rev. M. M. Lehman of Butterfield, Minnesota, held services in our church on September 28. Miss Arlene Hinkel, who is preparing as a missionary to Africa, left here in September for Chicago, where she is taking nurses' training.—Mrs. D. Buller, Corr.

—Poor and primitive as the Indians of Paraguay are, they never despair over their condition. So runs a report from the Colony Friesland in Paraguay. In building their houses or huts the Indians use no nails whatever. Rude logs and branches are tied together and the walls plastered with clay. The writer reports that they are always happy and also have time to sit in the shade and drink their "unendurable" tea. The writer goes on to say that the Mennonites have stepped up milk production from the native cattle from one liter (about a quart) to as high as seven liters a day in some cases.

—Missionary Frank Mannings recently came home on furlough from Africa, where they serve in Tanganyika under the Africa Inland Mission. Because of difficulty in securing passage Rev. Manning flew from England to the United States, while Mrs. Manning went by boat. The Mannings are now living at North Newton, Kansas. Before they return to Africa by the beginning of 1949, they plan to visit in forty states. Rev. Manning reports that industrialization is coming so fast in Africa that the natives are being catapulted into it instead of experiencing a slow industrial evolution as in the case of the people of the United States.

—Puran Banwar, formerly business manager of the Champa Leper Asylum and now a student at Bethel College, relates that his oldest boy writes in his letters that he would like to have books from America, in the Hindi language. Books are not so abundant in India as they are here in America. Library facilities are very limited. Furthermore, most of the outstanding books are published in the English language, because they have a wider sale in that way. Mr. Banwar thinks that with schools springing up over India and a rising tide of literacy, the trend will change, and there will be many more books available in the Hindi language.

—Bethel Church, Hydro, Oklahoma: Rev. Waldo Kaufman's sermon subject for recent communion services was, "The Poverty of Christ." We were reminded: That Christ had nothing as his own in this world. When he was born, they borrowed the manger for his bed. He borrowed bread and fish when he fed the multitudes on the grassy mountain-side. He borrowed the ship into which he went to teach the crowd of people. He borrowed the colt on which he rode into Jerusalem. If poverty has come to your home, don't be discouraged. God must love poor people, for he has made so many of us. —Wilfred Ewy, Corr.

—Miss Elma Esau of Whitewater, Kansas, plans to go to Akron, Pa., after November 1 to serve in the Mutual Aid Section of the Mennonite Central Committee. Miss Esau, who will work under William Snyder, head of the Mutual Aid Section, spent two years in England, Holland, and Denmark doing relief work. When asked whether these had been interesting and enriching years, Miss Esau replied that she would not exchange them for any other years in her life.

—Topeka Church, Topeka, Indiana: Family night was observed September 25 and also a farewell for Rev. and Mrs. Wilmer Shelly and family, who left the next morning for Bally, Pennsylvania, where Reverend Shelly will become pastor of the Hereford Mennonite Church. Reverend Shellys were presented with a chest of silverware. Holy communion was observed October 5. Rev. Allen Yoder of near Goshen was present to bring the message and conduct the service. Harvest-Home service was held October 12. Rev. A. E. Kreider of Goshen was present and spoke of the relief work being done in different countries. Canned food and vegetables were brought. These will be given Bluffton College and Mennonite Biblical Seminary. One of our older members, John Demal, passed from this life October 8, at the home of a son in South Bend, Indiana. Funeral services and buriel took place in South Bend.—Corr.

—Salem Church, Dalton, Ohio: October 12, at our church, in speaking of his European trip with students, President L. L. Ramseyer of Bluffton College drew some conclusions on this order: That Mennonites need have no inferiority feelings since they are a large international organization. That love, understanding, and respect are the natural outcomes of the mingling of varied and mixed groups of people when there is a mutual spirit of sharing circumstances (as evidenced in the student group). That we, as Mennonites should feel the responsibility of helping needy brethren, like the displaced Russian Mennonites. That because of a lack of a good church program the Dutch church has lost its vitality and its non-resistance. That the theory of resorting to war to solve problems is blown to the winds when you see how the little children, who are victims of the war, know no hatred or class differences. That "Beneath the Cross of Jesus" there is no room for worldly greed and all its fiendish mainfestations but only room for good neighbors like the Good Sarmaritan. At the evening service October 12, Dr. N van der Zijpp of Rotterdam, Holland, enlightened us very much as he told of the experiences the Dutch Mennonites suffered during the recent World War and shortly before. In Holland, which is only as big as Ohio, there are lady ministers; there are no Sunday schools except for children ages six to twelve years; Dutch Mennonites, which are all united in one body, number 70,000 and many live in cities. About 100 young Dutch Mennonite men have come out for the C.O. stand.—Corr.

—First Mennonite Church of Sugarcreek, Ohio: On October 12, we had as our guest speaker Dr. Van der Zijpp, pastor of the Mennonite Church in Rotterdam, Holland. He gave us an interesting and inspiring story of conditions in his homeland during and after the last war. Next Sunday morning we are having a special dedication and consecration service in honor of all our church and Sunday school officers and teachers. Six of our Junior Sunday school classes gave their morning offering of $13.09 to buy Christmas gifts for the American Indians at the Moencopi Mission, Tuba City, Arizona.—Wiley McDowell, Corr.

—Rev. C. E. Krehbiel has been confined to the Bethel Hospital, Newton, since he had another stroke recently. It is reported that he can talk and is resting quite well.

—Dr. P. J. Wedel of North Newton has also been confined to the Bethel Hospital, but is reported to be improving.

—Boynton Church, Hopedale, Illinois: On the evening of October 12, Pastor Maynard Shelly reported on the Mennonite student tour of Europe, in which he participated in this past summer. The special offering went for M.C.C. relief.

In Memoriam

Mary Wall Regier was born in Altonau, Russia, on December 6, 1859. When nine or ten years old the family moved to Alexanderkron. When she was eighteen the family migrated to America and settled southwest of Moundridge, Kansas. Soon the question of uniting with a church came up. She and three other young people, Abraham Martens, Jacob B. Dick, and Mrs. Jacob Lohrentz, because of their desire to be baptized, expedited the organization of the Hebron Church. Rev. Bernhard Buhler baptized them. On February 23, 1880, she was united in marriage to Cornelius Regier, with whom she shared life until his death in 1911. She was also preceded in death by three children: August, aged five; Mrs. John F. Moyer, aged thirty-two; and Jacob aged sixty-two. She reached the age of eighty-seven years, nine months, and twenty-eight days. She is survived by eight children: Mrs. Cornelius Pankratz and Samuel, Moundridge; John, Hillsboro; Herman, Syracuse; Cornelius, West Liberty, West Virginia; Mrs. John P. Claassen, Omaha, Nebraska; Emil, Eagle, Colorado; and Alvin, King City, California.

Mr. E. B. Ross, Trenton, Ohio, died very suddenly of a heart attack at his home on August 6, 1947. Mr. Ross, a highly esteemed resident of this community, united in marriage with Miss Alvina Imhoff, who mourns the loss of a devoted husband. Rev. J. E. Amstutz conducted the services, basing his remarks on John 14:1-3.

Mrs. Marie Ehresman Hebel, member of the Mennonite Church at Trenton, Ohio, passed away at her home in Chicago, Illinois, on August 6, 1947. She leaves to mourn her loss two daughters, and her sister Miss Bertha Ehresman of Trenton, Ohio.

Mrs. Elizabeth Amanda Augspurger, Trenton, Ohio, died suddenly of a heart condition at her home on September 26, 1947. On March 31, 1892, she united in marriage with William B. Augspurger. She was a member of The Trenton Mennonite Church. She is survived by her husband, three sons and three daughters who mourn the loss of a devoted wife and mother. Rev. J. E. Amstutz conducted the services, basing his remarks on Rev. 2:10.

Annetta High, daughter of Lafayette and Susanna (nee Fretz) Yost was born, August 27, 1857, in Bedminster Township. Bucks County, Pa., and fell asleep September 17, 1947. In 1881 she married Samuel D. High, who preceded her in death in 1928. Both were life-long members of the Deep Run Congregation. They lived on the old Fretz homestead in Bedminster Township their entire lives with the exception of the last few years which Sister High spent in the Mennonite Home for the Aged, Frederick. She is survived by two children, J. Freeman of Philadelphia and Mrs. Russell Miller of Albuquerque, New Mexico.

Emilie Miller Ewy, daughter of Jacob and Katherine Miller, was born in Podusilna Galicia, Austria, on February 14, 1878, and slipped quietly to the beyond on September 29, 1947. When five she migrated with her parents to Harvey County, Kansas. Later they moved to a farm near Arlington. In 1896 she was baptized and received into the Mennonite church at Pretty Prairie. Later she transferred her membership to the Arlington Church, where she was a loyal worker the rest of her life. In 1910 she married Gustav L. Ewy, who with the following children now survives her: Mrs. James Lawson, Moundridge; Mrs. Walter Murphy of Pretty Prairie; Albert, Hutchinson; Marvin, Fowler; Eddie, Arlington, and Lester, Partridge.

Elizabeth Schroeder, daughter of Jacob and Margaret Hiebert Schroeder, was born September 26, 1886, at Hillsboro, Kansas, and passed to her reward on September 6, 1947. In 1905 she was baptized and received into the Alexanderwohl Church. Her father passed away in 1918. Then in 1923 mother and Elizabeth established their home in Hillsboro, where they lived together until both entered the Home for the Aged at Goessel in 1945. Her mother passed away in 1946. She is mourned by the following brothers and sisters: Henry R., Goessel; Jacob H., Canton; Emil, Hillsboro; Abraham J., Hillsboro; David J., Goessel; Mrs. Sara Balzer and Miss Mariam Schroeder, Newton; Mrs. Margaret Janzen, Hesston; and Peter J., Richland, Montana.

Jacob U. Schmidt, son of P. H. and Anna Unruh Schmidt was born on February 7, 1882, and died September 9, 1947. In 1902 he was baptized and received as a member of the Alexanderwohl Church, of which he remained a member until his death. He was united in marriage with Mary G. Hiebert on June 6, 1907. He leaves to mourn his departure his sorrowing wife and the following children: Walter J., Lehigh; Mrs. John B. Flaming and Adolph L., Hillsboro; Mrs. Orlando Voth and Rudolf, Newton; Carl, Denver, Colorado; and Bernhard D. of the home.

Jacob A. Baer son of Jacob and Elizabeth Langenwalter Baer, was born in Madison County, Illinois, June 2, 1872, and passed away on September 16, 1947. In 1880 he moved with his parents to a farm two miles south of Summerfield. This was still his estate at the time of his death. He was baptized and received into the Summerfield Church in 1885. It he served in various capacities until his death. In 1902 he was united in marriage with Myrtha Pletsher. Together they lived on the farm of his boyhood until 1938 when they moved to New Baden. Active in farm organizations he was president of the Summerfield Farmers Co-operative Grain Company for over twenty years. Besides his widow he leaves three sons, Donald on the home farm; Lester of New Baden, and Orville of Trenton.

Mrs. Margaretha Enns Voth was born December 10, 1872, in South Russia. She came to America with the great Mennonite migration of 1874. She was baptized in 1890 by Rev. Jacob Buller and received into the Alexanderwohl Church, Goessel, Kansas. She was united in marriage to John J. Voth in 1890. With him she shared the joys and sorrows of life for over fifty-six years. She had great faith and trust in her heavenly Father. She passed away to be with the Lord on August 25, 1947. She leaves to mourn her sudden departure: her loving husband, and the following children: Charley and family of Garden City; Mrs. Frank Unruh and family of Wichita; Herbert and family of Hillsboro; and Frieda Leo, Rebecca, and Roland of the home.

GO AND DO LIKEWISE

From the church bulletin of one of our churches which is considering the 100 PER CENT PLAN, we take the following paragraph:

"ARE YOU a subscriber to THE MENNONITE? If so, have you read the interesting Conference reports in the September 9 issue? If not, please get your copy at the door this morning and read it. Then subscribe for it, for every Mennonite family should receive this paper, which is the official General Conference organ. It keeps church members informed on activities of the Conference, on missions, relief, activities of other churches, etc."

This church secured from the Publication Office a batch of sample copies of THE MENNONITE to distribute among its members. Are you using the facilities of your Mennonite Publication Office as fully as you could? Write us, indicating what your needs are, and we will be glad to furnish you sample copies of any of our publications which you think may be of help to you in your church work. Puerto Rico through Medical Eyes

It has been my good fortune to be a part of the M.C.C. Unit at La Plata for the past two months. It has been a pleasure and a joy caring for the medical needs and giving advice to the people. Needless to say, their needs are great and likewise are the obstacles preventing better medical care. Because of my short experience, all I can present is impressions which I have acquired through working with the people.

As I see it, the three greatest problems are malnutrition, parasitic infestations, and tuberculosis; and all three have for their origin poverty, poor housing, and lack of sanitation, which of course is the biggest public health problem of the island. Because of the lack of sanitation many infectious diseases as well as the parasitic diseases are very common. Improper disposal of human excreta causes the ground to become polluted. Few of the mountain folk can afford shoes; as a consequence the majority are infected with hookworm, and because of hookworm, most people are very anemic and become easy victims to such systemic diseases as tuberculosis.

Unsanitary conditions also lead to other diseases—for example, the various types of dysentery. The source of their water supply is the rivers and streams, which are extremely contaminated from human waste products and from public bathing. In addition, many skin conditions with weeping sores are the direct consequence of filth and dirt because of an inadequate amount of water to cleanse themselves. Mountain people must go to the streams below for their water, and must carry it all by hand to their huts.

Because of poverty the people cannot buy the proper kind of food. Rice and beans are the main staple food which the people live on. Mothers come to the clinic with undernourished babies which they have been feeding tea and coffee because they have no milk to give them. Thus we see many cases of severe malnutrition and vitamin deficiencies. These medical problems cannot be solved by medicine alone, but are socio-economic problems which must be solved before these conditions can be overcome.

Tuberculosis is as common now in Puerto Rico as it was in United States fifty years ago. Statistics show it to be one of the chief causes of death. In our clinic we find several new active cases every week. It is depressing to find far advanced cases in either husband or wife and be unable to offer much encouragement. John Driver, our medical social worker, devotes a large share of his time to seeking sanitarium care and keeping in touch with our tuberculosis patients. Because of insufficient housing, only a small percentage can be admitted into sanitariums. However, recently since the discovery of streptomycin a few of the far advanced cases can be successfully treated here. But we have room for only four patients, and they require a course of treatment extending over a period of sixty days. So, at best, we can care for only a few of the many who need treatment badly. Then there are those of a less severe nature whom we treat by artifical pneumothorax every week. Many have been successfully treated in this manner.

Even in the midst of this great need there is one comforting thought: Puerto Rico does not have some of the diseases which are so common in the United States. Heart disease is almost unheard of, strange as it may seem. How does one account for this? There are two answers which come to my attention. In the first place, the Puerto Rican does not live as fast and as complexly; and in the second place, there is a very low incidence of rheumatic fever, which is so common in certain localities in the United States. There are also very few cases of pneumonia, which can be attributed to the tropical climate.

The dire medical needs are not due to an inadequate number of doctors, for there are sufficient doctors on the island who by diligent and intelligent service could give ample medical care to everyone. However, they choose to treat only those who can pay, and at the same time they prescribe the latest and most expensive medicines on the market, having no knowledge of their actions or the purpose for which they were intended. They fail even to use good sound medical judgment. For example, they give penicillin for everything, including cancer, cases of malnutrition, etc.

In the final analysis in arriving at a conclusion, I am convinced that the medical needs are greatly insignificant as compared to the spiritual needs of the people. It is merely a means to an end. If it becomes anything but that, it is our business to move out. Only as we labor "In the Name of Christ" can we hope to accomplish anything of lasting value.—Paul G. Brenneman.

We Like To Be Popular

When you are young, your future lies ahead of you. The whole realm of human aspiration and experience is yours to choose from. No one has classified and and pigeon-holed you as being this or that. No one knows much about your capacity or talent.

In face of the potentialities of the future, young people are extremely sensitive to disapproval. They have to make a name for themselves, they want desparately to win approval in order to make a name for themselves. Therefore, it is extremely hard for a young person to be different or peculiar. He wants to be with the gang and do the things that are popular with the gang.

If her group wears old sloppy clothes with the shirt tails hanging out and that is the popular thing, Jean gets a lot of fun out of dressing that way. If you really 'arrive' in some circles, you join a fraternity or sorority when you go to college. You do what is popular and so stay out front; that is the opinion of many people and particularly is it true when we are young.

This urge to be admired and "one of the crowd" can be a commendable urge, and then it can be one that is troublesome. It partly depends on one's own use of the desire and partly upon the group with which one associates. Because we tend to do what our group does, there has always been a concern about the crowd we run with. A rough, abusive fighting group tends to make roughness, abusiveness and fighting the popular thing to do. Likewise, a friendly group with wholesome interests tends to make that the popular thing to do.

But, we don't live in ideal groups. We live in a dynamic world in which there are many viewpoints and attitudes and ways of doing things.

So, here you are. You want to have the approval of your group and you have to make choices between what is right and what is wrong for you to do. One solution to the problem is to be aloof from those who do things of which you disapprove. That method works quite often, but as a rigid policy it is hardly adequate. Too often circumstances put one in association with those with whom we disagree. Furthermore, to follow that policy reflects a defensiveness and weakness on our own part — what we have is weaker than that with which we come in contact. How then should we contact ourselves?

An accompanying article, "How To Say No" presents the problems as it applies to the matter of drink Since the principles used in the specific case described has such a wide application, to ponder the plan used is of very great value. The idea of temperance in all things needs to be thought and discussed and not only the one narrow aspect of the problem, that dealing with alcoholic beverages.

How To Say, "No"

By Mary-Frances Sheridan

Any one can say "yes." It is short and pointed, and, one would think in dismissing the matter quickly, a thoroughly agreeable answer. But it is not always the best and sometimes it may even be the lazy, undiscerning answer, the reply of one who knows little and cares less. Surprisingly enough, it often takes intelligence and a knowledge of the facts to say "No."

A few months ago one of my friends, whom we'll call Jean (though of course that wasn't her real name), told me of an incident which concerns this very point. Attending a party given by a girl in her high school class, she overheard the hostess and some of the boys discussing the mixing of rum "cokes." Later, when Jean was offered a glass of this concoction, she was paralyzed with embarrassment and without a word of objection she took the glass which she continued to hold in an agony of indecision.

Seated at the other end of the davenport was a girl whom she knew, as every one in the school did, as one of West High's most outstanding and popular students. Her name, we'll say, was Carol. This girl did not hesitate. She quietly but firmly refused the beverage.

Encouraged by this example, Jean waited until no one was looking her way. Then she unobtrusively set her glass behind the lamp on a nearby table. Later she said of the incident, "I don't know what came over me just before I took that glass; I guess I was just afraid to say 'no'. "

Panicky

But she didn't forget the episode. She kept wondering why it was that she had felt panicky and confused while the other girl had been calm and poised. Jean realized that her timorous attitude had been based on the fear of being called a "sissy." Yet Carol, who certainly would not enjoy being made fun of either, had been sure and unshaken. Was it because of this girl's popularity, her likeability, perhaps because she had an unusual personality that the others had neither jeered nor coaxed her? My friend decided to find out.

A few days after the party Jean met Carol during lunch period outside the school cafeteria and, with several minutes to spare before the next class, she struck up a conversation.

"Say, Carol. I wish you'd tell me how you manage to keep the kids from razzing you when somebody tries to hand you a 'spiked' drink and you turn it down."

The other girl answered frankly, "O don't think I wasn't scared the first time I said 'no.' I was, but I found out that if you just refuse it in the simplest most polite way you know how, usually nobody will be offended. Once in a while somebody will make a crack, and, if he keeps on teasing me, I just tell him a few reasons why I don't drink."

"You mean you know why you don't drink? Do you have reasons besides that your folks don't like it? Jean asked in astonishment.

"You bet I do," answered Carol "There's no use being a dumb-bunny about alcohol when it's so easy to get the truth about it. My sister in teachers' college brought home some good articles and a book for me to read. Come over to my house after glee club practice this afternoon and I'll show them to you."

Facts

Jean went; and as a result her interest was aroused just as Carol's had been. In the next few weeks she made it her business to find facts about alcohol. What she learned was a revelation to her. Of course, she realized that she had not now become an authority on the alcohol problem, but the information she had gleaned began to give her more self-confidence.

The chance to find out whether knowing the facts really would help to overcome her old fear of saying "no" came, not at another party, but one afternoon at the corner drug store in an after-school "gab session" of several fellows and girls whom Jean knew. Somehow the conversation turned to drinking, and when one of the boys asked her opinion, she told, in a straightforward but tactful way, her reasons for leaving liquor alone. She didn't lose a single friend or an ounce of self respect by what she said that afternoon. In fact, it is rumored that she gained a couple of admirers.

The experience Jean had is not a rare, "once in a lifetime" event. Actually, the same principles which she found true might apply to any problem in which we need a somewhat greater thinking power than that required by a turnip seed.

Guide Posts

As Carol's sister in teachers' college explained to the two girls, "I have three guide posts which help me to make intelligent decisions:

"1. Know your facts. You can't make up your mind on a question if you're an ignoramus. And be sure you obtain those facts, not from idle hearsay, but from reliable sources.

"2. Have a conviction about the facts. If you continue to be careless with matches in spite of knowing the danger of starting a fire, then mere knowledge of the facts is not enough. You have to think the facts through to a decision which seems to you to be the best one you could choose.

"3. Think of a polite way to state your conviction if you are in a situation in which your decision has to be defended. You can be courteous without letting down on your conviction."

On the question of drinking or abstaining from alcoholic beverages, nobody needs to be a robot without self-will. The facts are available. The right to decide is the privilege of every one who wishes to take advantage of that right. For, after all, what good is freedom of thought if it is not exercised? Through neglect we might lose the ability to solve our own problems, to reach clear-cut decisions for ourselves and to stick to them. Just as we must exercise our muscles in order to keep physically fit, so we need to remember that a few mental "pushups" are good for keeping the mind from growing sluggish. Let's be alert. Let's be ready to face tough situations because we know solid facts.

Of course it's true— any one anywhere can answer a spunkless, effortless, unthinking yes. It may take courage to say no. It will certainly take intelligence to say a firm, immovable no and to have the reasons for this answer at one's command.—The Gem

The hurricane which lashed the Gulf Coast in the middle of September, swept through Gulfport, Miss., as it moved north to dissipate in Southern Arkansas. The Voluntary Service Unit at Gulfport reported that on the morning of September 19 the hurricane struck. The day before they had made a few preparations in response to the warnings repeated over the radio. By the nineteenth a strong wind "of Kansas or Oklahoma caliber was blowing." Some trees had been blown over and bits of roofing were lying around. A flash flood in a nearby bayou put the men to work in knee deep water getting shop equipment and trucks in safety. Beyond that the campers seemed not to have had very frightening experiences. They reported, however, that the town of Gulfport was rather severely lashed especially along the coast where piers, boats and buildings were destroyed. In town many windows were broken and roofs torn off soaking the interiors of houses. Since the hurricane everyone has been busy repairing damages.

A total of nearly twelve million dollars was paid to carry through the program of Civilian Public Service in which 12,000 conscientious objectors participated. In the six-year period the Brethren, Friends and Mennonites paid out a total of $7,202,249.36 for the operation of C.P.S., and Government paid $4,731,558.00. Almost 7,000 of the 12,000 assignees came from Brethren, Friend, or Mennonite churches. The Mennonites paid $3,188,578,05 for their share of the program.

John van den Berg, a young Dutch Mennonite, who helped in the MCC relief distribution program in Holland, has now been accepted for similar service under the MCC in Austria. He will serve on the same terms as relief worker personnel from the United States and Canada. The work to which Johan is assigned consists of clothing distribution.

The MCC reports that there is a continuing need for mature consecrated relief workers to replace returning personnel. At the present time there is a need for four men in the general relief worker catagory for the India-Java area. In China also there is need for several more men with general experience and training as well as a few mechanics, a builder, an agriculture expert, one or two with experience or training in cooperatives, and several nurses. Individuals who feel qualified and called to serve in any of these areas should write to the Director of Relief, Akron, Pennsylvania.

VISIONS

In his book, The Wilson Era, Josephus Daniels, secretary of the navy under Wilson, relates how he once asked Andrew Carnegie what was the secret of his remarkable success. Carnegie replied, "I owe all to my flashes." Mystified, Daniels said, "What do you mean by flashes?"

"All my life," replied Carnegie, "I woke up early in the morning, and always there came into my mind with the waking a flash telling me what to do that day, and if I followed those matin flashes, I always succeeded."

"You mean," said Daniels, "that you have heavenly visions, and like the man of the Scriptures you were not disobedient to your visions?"

"Call it that if you like," answered Carnegie, or call it flashes; but it was the following of those silent admonitions and directions which brought me the success you say I have achieved."

Whatever may be said about flashes in the business world, there is no doubt about flashes of divine impulse in the moral and spirtual world. When they come, happy is the man who, like Paul, is not disobedient to the heavenly vision.—Dr. Clarence Edward Macartney

The Disciples of Christ youth held their fourth annual meeting of the International Christian Youth Fellowship Commission. The delegates gathered at Emporia, Kansas, from thirty states, the District of Columbia, Canada, and Mexico and represented 250,000 young people of the Disciples churches. The group went on record as opposing peacetime conscription and approved the proposed merger of the International Society of Christian Endeavor and the United Christian Youth Movement.

Many Christians sincerely want peace today but are "too indifferent" to do anything about it, T. Z. Koo, of Princeton, N. J., world secretary of the Student Volunteer Movement, told several thousand young people attending the World Convention of Churches of Christ (Disciples).

"Too many young people are not doing their share for peace, which most of them earnestly desire," Mr. Koo said.

He urged youth to take a militant attitude toward peace by "recognizing the purpose of God leading mankind today out of the world of separate nations toward one world," and learning the "art of practical peacemaking. Peacemaking is not only making peace treaties but creating the spiritual factors of living that lead to peace, such as understanding between nations, respect and co-operation between races and helping each other out of the spiritual bankruptcy caused by the war." Half the Jews of the world live in the United States. New York has more than two million, Chicago has three hundred and twenty-five thousand, and Philadelphia two hundred and seventy-five thousand. Christians in the U. S. have a great opportunity to be Christian in their attitudes and relations with the Jews rather than suspicious and hateful as has been all too customary. It is thus that Christ will become a challenge to all men.

Much of the time we tend to long for a life whose skies are always blue and sunny. And yet it seems that just as the varying seasons of the year serve their purpose, so the varying seasons of the spirit also serve theirs. There is the conversion season, the season of sowing and burial.

> "Yet grains of wheat before they grow,
> Are buried in the earth below;
> All that is old doth perish there
> To form a life both new and fair;
> So too are we
> From self and sin made free."

There is the winter season of the spirit (the dark nights of the soul) when life has receded and there is no evidence of growth. There is the spring season when the forces of God work mightily. Harvest follows. Many minor winters follow, for though there is one major surrender in life, many minor surrenders follow as growth in grace is experienced. Aside from this parallel is that of youth and old age. In the springtime of youth there is beautiful, stirring growth, but only in the autumn of old age can one pick the ripe, mellow fruit of life. The seasons of the spirit serve their purpose. Winter is no cause for despair. It is the prelude to spring. Spring must fade into harvest, and then a new winter may be necessary. The seasons of the spirit serve their purpose in maturing one for God. Skies blue and sunny are pleasant, but often a snowstorm or a hard rain precedes them, or it may even be a long winter.

From the editor's point - of - view:

THE ATTITUDE TOWARDS ALCOHOL in our day may include some cause for thanksgiving when it is considered in the light of history. It is readily evident that we are living in a drinking age, an age in which people seem to feel that drink can add zest to life. Expenditures for liquor are enormous. There are a great many drinkers. Brewers are wealthy and powerful, and their vicious propaganda is spread continuously and far and wide. The thought of prohibition is not well accepted. Alcohol itself is on a great spree. But right along with these dark facts are some bright ones. There seems to be an insight into the harmfulness of alcoholism that did not exist in the days of our forefathers. It seems that alcohol was at first considered a poison. But by the 13th Century it was being used as a medicine in the south of Europe. Many claims were made for it. Here is one of them:

"It sloweth age, it strengtheneth youth, it helpeth digestion, it abandoneth melancholie, it relisheth the heart, it lighteneth the mind, it quickeneth the spirits, it keepeth and preserveth the head from whirling, the eyes from dazzling, the tongue from lisping, the mouth from snaffling, the teeth from chattering, and the throat from rattling; it keepeth the stomach from wambling, the heart from swelling, the hands from shivering, the sinews from shrinking, the veins from crumbling, the bones from aching, and the marrow from soaking."

The Pilgrims brought beer with them on the Mayflower. In their journal it is recorded: "For we could not now take time for further search or consideration: our victuals being much spent, especially our beer." William Penn, the great Quaker, built a brewery in 1683 and sold beer at Pennsbury in Bucks County, Pennsylvania. It is reported that "Many of the leading figures of the Revolution were either brewers or financially interested in breweries and taverns." Abraham Lincoln tells of a non-drinking Quaker who had to pay an extra 10 per cent on his life insurance because ' " 'he was thin and watery and mentally cranked in that he repudiated the good things of God as found in alcoholic drink.' " ' Today many Christians and others are not so enthusiastic about alcoholic drinks. There is much light on its harmful effects. In addition to this there seems to be a growing insight into why people drink. It is becoming more and more evident that when an individual is not at peace within, he may use alcohol in the attempt to deal with his troubles. Furthermore, the work of Alcoholics Anonymous, has rescued many from drink where other methods failed. So along with the dark facts are some bright ones. One wonders whether the strength of our knowledge of alcohol isn't partly offset by the great spiritual emptiness within people today that makes them a ready to try drink. The facts are not all discouraging, and the very darkness of some seems to indicate that alcoholism is but one part of a complex of problems that we need to consider. That too is a valuable lesson.

ALCOHOLICS ANONYMOUS have been so successful in reclaiming alcoholics that their methods deserve attention. These methods are very suggestive for Christian workers. Therefore we are happy to present in this issue an article on this unique organization of former alcoholics. Groups of Alcoholics Anonymous can be found in many of the larger cities. For example, anyone wishing to get in contact with such a group in the city of Wichita, Kansas, can do so by writing to Secretary, Box 1657, Wichita. Those caught in the bonds of drink and wishing to be free may appreciate being directed to such a group, or the process may be reversed, for members of this organization are anxious to win others to freedom from drink.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT has perhaps a number of angles to it. There are those who believe that the prospect of such punishment will serve to keep the would-be murderer from committing the crime. That some crimes are not committed because of the prospect of punishment is undoubtedly true. But how far this can be applied is another question. Warden Lawes, for many years warden of Sing Sing Penitentiary, points out in his book, "Murderers" that the prospect of death does not keep the murderer from his crime. When excited and desperate enough, he acts regardless of the consequences. In the same way nations may hesitate about going to war because of possible consequences. But when excited and warped and desperate enough, they may act regardless of the possible consequences. Since punishment neither wipes out the heartache caused, the question remains whether not more thought should be given to the prevention of conditions out of which violence may develop. The Christian faith holds that love of the right results in more good conduct than fear of punishment. A clean heart is the best guarantee of right conduct.

Alcoholism and Its Cure

by R. C. Kauffman

Alcoholic consumption in the United States for the decade preceding World War II rose from 3.5 gallons per capita to about 14 gallons per capita. The evidence is that during the war years this rate of consumption took a marked further increase. Most of this increase may be accounted for by the more widespread acceptance of "controlled social drinking." At the same time, the indications are that there is also a far greater number of those who may properly be called, "alcoholics." An alcoholic is one who cannot use alcohol without doing so to decided excess. Having on any occasion taken his first drink, he is unable to stop of his own volition until reaching the point of more or less complete intoxication.

The theories in explanation of why some people become alcoholics are many and varied. So are the proposed "cures." On the physiological side there is, for example, the theory that certain individuals have an allergy to alcohol—a peculiar allergy in that it creates not an avoidance of it, but a helpless submission to it. It is the brain and spinal cord, particularly, of such individuals that is said to respond in allergic fashion to alcohol. Peculiarly sensitive to and irritated by alcohol, an excess of cerebro-spinal fluid (the fluid that normally surrounds and protects the brain and spinal cord) is produced by the body as a defensive measure. The pressure of this on the brain, in turn, produces the helpless inclination to further indulgence. The corresponding cure, claimed to have been effective in a considerable number of cases, is to drain the excessive cerebro-spinal fluid through a puncture of the spinal column.

On the psychological side, is the belief that alcoholism is the outgrowth of a deeper and more fundamental personality problem. From this point of view the cry of the social reformer, "Look at all the broken homes, broken personalities, etc. caused by alcoholism" would be changed to, "Look at the alcoholism caused by broken homes, broken personalities, etc." Alcoholism, as seen here, is but a symptom— a symptom of something else in the life of the individual that needs correction and any cure that hopes to be in any wise permanent must concern itself with this underlying conflict.

More recently, within the past ten years or so, another approach has gained considerable prominence. It is that of the "Alcoholics Anonymous." It is an interesting approach in that it resembles the old-time religious conversion more than either a distinctly psychological or physiological method of attack. "Alcoholics Anonymous" or "AA," popularly so called, is an informal fellowship of about twelve thousand formerly alcoholic men and women who are today found banded together as groups in about 325 American and Canadian communities. Each group has the same and only objective: "to help other alcoholics to recover from their illness."

The "AA" method of approach is outlined in the "12 Steps to Recovery" of their Program. These "12 Steps" are as follows:

1. We admitted we were powerless over alcohol—that our lives have become unmanageable.
2. Came to believe that a Power greater than ourselves could restore us to sanity.
3. Made a decision to turn our will and our lives over to the care of God AS WE UNDERSTOOD HIM.
4. Made a searching and fearless moral inventory of ourselves.
5. Admitted to God, to ourselves, and to another human being the exact nature of our wrongs.
6. Were entirely ready to have God remove these defects of character.
7. Humbly asked Him to remove our shortcomings.
8. Made a list of all persons we had harmed, and became willing to make amends to them all.
9. Made direct amends to such people wherever possible, except when to do so would injure them or others.
10. Continued to take personal inventory and when we were wrong promptly admitted it.
11. Sought prayer and meditation to improve our conscious contact with God as we understood Him, praying only for knowledge of His will for and the power to carry that out.
12. Having had a spiritual experience as the result of these steps, we tried to carry this message to alcoholics, and to practice these principles in all our affairs.

The elements of this "AA" procedure held in common with religious conversion are evident: the conviction of sin; an admission of utter helplessness; a complete reliance upon God; confession and rectification of past transgressions; the joining of a fellowship of believers; and a consuming missionary zeal, by means of which new members are brought into the fellowship and by means of which their own faith is kept alive. It should be recognized too, of course, that some of these elements parallel psychiatric technique, though psychiatry using its own terms speaks of "personality change," "mental catharsis," "abnormal self-concern," " a new compelling interest in life," "the expulsive power of a new affection," etc. In the final analysis, however, psychiatry says, 'Know yourself, be strong and you will be able to face life," whereas Alcoholics Anonymous say, "Know thyself, ask God for power and you become truly free."

It is this free and candid recognition of God, "a Power greater than yourself," as an essential part of the process that makes it a religious one. In fact, the only point at which the "AA" procedure may be said to differ significantly from conversion as known in religious circles is that such conversion usually insists upon the acceptance of a more or less precisely defined doctrinal content. With Alcoholics Anonymous the doctrinal element is reduced to a minimum—in fact, can hardly be said to exist at all. Catholics, Protestants, Jews—all are numbered among their members without change in religious affiliation. The only point of belief insisted upon is the acceptance of God as He is understood by the believer. And this point is really not so much insisted upon as it is recommended as the only way in which they have, by their experience, found delivery to be effective and enduring.

According to their own estimation. 50 per cent of the alcoholics taken in hand by members of the "AA" recover almost immediately; 25 per cent get well after suffering a relapse or two, and the rest remain doubtful. This rate of success is exceptionally high. Statistics on traditional medical and religious cures are lacking, but it has been informally estimated that they are no more than 2 or 3 per cent effective in the general run of cases. One factor that no doubt adds tremendously to the success of the "AA" program is that each member was at one time himself an alcoholic and is now a living witness to its effectiveness. Like Gothic cathedral windows, alcoholism must be viewed from within to be truly seen.

Although it is too early to state that Alcoholics Anonymous is the final answer to alcoholism, its brief record is impressive and its implications should be of interest not only with respect to the immediate problem of alcoholism, but also to those concerned with the therapeutic value of psychiatry and religion in general.

Towards Unity

by B. Bargen

B. Bargen, formerly instructor of commercial subjects at Bethel College and now Manager of the Mennonite Publication Office, Newton, Kansas, spent about two and one-half months this past summer centralizing the files of the Mennonite Central Committee. He wrote the following article about his work at Akron at the request of the editor of the Bundesbote, in which it first appeared.

It happens, as children grow up, that they outgrow their clothes, and father and mother look around for clothes to fit the growing children. Thus, too, with the children of the church.

As a child, the Mennonite Central Committee offices, found it adequate in the offices to handle the limited amount of correspondence in the simplest ways. But as the organization grew, as one department after another was added, simple ways had to give way to improve methods. The summer of 1946 found approximately eleven departments doing a large volume of work, involving more than just the simplest correspondence. It involved passports, visas, bills of lading, baling tickets, tags, loading records, personnel records, telegrams, and cablegrams with workers in all of the world. MCC was growing up!

In order to centralize all these records in one comprehensive system a study was made of over two hundred filing drawers to determine the nature of their contents, methods of filing, and methods whereby any particular piece of correspondence or business record might be made available to anyone in the organization at a moment's notice. This involved material for a period as far back as 1920, when the MCC was first organized, when one filing drawer was sufficient to house all records of any kind for a period of several years, to 1946, when the business of just a few weeks would completely fill a drawer.

In a new building, called the "Archives Building," one entire floor, by the new method, is devoted to centralized filing and research. By a messenger who runs her rounds four times daily, there now arrives each day from all eleven departments material to be filed in one central file. These are carefully read, coded for filing, and then girls specially trained for this work place each paper in files scientifically designed to speed up finding and filing by name or by subject as the case may demand.

When material is needed a telephone call from any department to the Central Files, immediately dispatches a file clerk to the file to locate the desired paper. The paper is charged to the person requesting it, until the paper is returned, just like a book is charged to the person taking it from the library, so that at any time we know who has that letter, that invoice, or that report.

All material is carefully indexed in a card index of approximately twenty-thousand cards. Every relief worker, every project, and all important events mentioned in letters or reports are on this cross index, so that a complete bibliography on any subject is available at a moment's notice.

This was a step toward unification, so that all seventy-five workers now stationed at MCC headquarters, at Akron, may work like ONE mind. Guesswork has been superseded by system; time formerly spent in looking for things is now spent in creatively working with information in hand; and red tape becomes BREAD tape, in a literal sense, for the entire purpose of MCC is toward efficient relief of bread-hungry and spirit-hungering hundreds and thousands in famine areas the world over. Time counts! The work of the Kingdom is urgent.

What Should a Mennonite Do with His Money?

What should a Mennonite do with his money? Should he buy more land? More new machinery? Government bonds or additional insurance? Financial experts, farm economists, and practical business men are unanimous that this is generally a poor time to buy. Our own common sense tells us it is better to sell or invest than it is to buy. Yet some people have to buy even during these times. Young people who were in CPS are among those who need to make loans now. They are among those the Mutual Aid Board is trying to help in a modest way. What should a Mennonite do with his money? For those who have more than sufficient funds on hand to meet their own immediate needs we invite you to invest funds in the General Conference Mutual Aid Board. The aim and the puropse of the Board are:

1. To enable the Board to help young Mennonite people establish a home.
2. To enable the Board to help young people get a modest start at farming or in business.
3. To enable the Board to help young people complete their education.
4. To help the Board assist in Mennonite programs of colonizations and resettlement.

An investment in this Board is an investment in the next generation of the Mennonite Church. Your money is loaned to deserving young men only after careful investigation as to their character, experience, ability to carry out the project for which they want the money and on the basis of genuine need. To date $25,000.00 have been loaned and all repayments made according to schedule. Here are the ways in which churches, district conference boards, and individuals may invest money with the Board of Mutual Aid.

1. Freewill gifts to the Board.
2. Non-interest bearing loans for five years.
3. Interest-bearing loans from 2 to 5 years at 1½ per cent interest.
4. Interest-bearing loans for 10 years at 2 per cent interest.

The Board of Mutual Aid consists of: Chairman—Harry M. Detwiler, Souderton, Pa.; Vice-Chairman—Hans Regier, Whitewater, Kansas; Executive Secretary—Winfield Fretz, North Newton, Kansas; other Members—Julius A. Franz, Lind, Washington; Jacob A. Schowalter, Newton, Kansas; William Stauffer, Sugarcreek, Ohio.

EASTERN DISTRICT CONFERENCE LABOR DAY BIBLE CONFERENCE

The Laymen's Bible Conference, sponsored by the Womens' Mission Societies and the Brotherhood and held at Camp Men-O-Lan on the Labor Day week-end, was well attended throughout the three days. There were 126 registrations and many other folks who attended sessions for the day only.

The Theme "THE CHURCH AT WORK" from Acts 4:31 and 5:42 was followed generally by the leaders, Dr. Robt. R. Fritsch, Emeritus Professor of English Bible, Muhlenberg College, and our own Rev. J. R. Duerksen, on furlough from the Mission Field in India. Dr. Fritsch's messages made many of us conscious of a new sense of stewardship. Rev. Duerksen divided his messages into five divisions, namely: "The Why of Missions," "The Three-fold Task," "My Parish," "With Persecutions and with Thanksgiving," "It Pays To Serve the Lord."

Rev. A. H. Schultz did a fine job as music director. There was much group singing interspersed with vocal and instrumental numbers.

Miss Katherine Niswander, assisted by Mrs. Norman Berky and others, arranged for special programs for the children during the lecture periods. Story telling, craft work and singing, etc. kept the young folks happy.

At the close of his last message, Dr. Fritsch suggested that a special thank-offering be received for the purpose of enlarging Camp Men-O-Lan to better accommodate future Bible conferences, retreats, etc. This offering amounted to over $520.00.

IT PAYS

We were glad to read that the Minnesota district of the Missouri Synod increased the salaries of home missionaries to a minimum level of $1,800.00, plus parsonage.

Only recently the president of a large Metropolitan New York Church told us that he personally had seen to it that his pastor was given comfortable parsonage facilities and an increase in salary and then added: "It pays! When the pastor is bothered with financial worries and home inconveniences he cannot do his best work."

May we suggest that laymen ask fellowmen from other congregations which have raised their pastor's salary and they will find that the above is not an empty statement. It is true! "It pays!"

The Growth of a Mennonite Fellowship

By Freeman H. Swartz

On Sunday, June 23, 1946, a morning service was inaugrated in the Lancaster Community. It was held in the Santee Chapel on the campus of the Reformed and Evangelical Semniary. There were eighty-five persons present. The sermon for the occasion was preached by Rev. Don Smucker. He was introduced by Rev. Freeman H. Swartz, Chairman of the Home Mission and Church Extension Committee of The Eastern District Conference, as the designated pastor to lead the work in Lancaster City.

Previous to the morning meeting, a Sunday School had been formed. There were sixty-five present. This group was divided into three classes—one for the adults, one for the girls, and one for the boys. Mr. William Snyder, MCC office, Akron, was selected as the superintendent. Mr. Orrie Baer and Mr. Elmer Wenger, had previously been selected by the Fellowship to serve as secretary and treasurer.

Fellowship Polity

The polity upon which this work was begun and continued was that there were many persons in Lancaster City and surrounding community who did not affiliate with the Mennonite Church simply because they could not find a fellowship that met all their need. The consequence was that they were uniting elsewhere, joining groups outside of the Mennonite household. Some General Conference members living in Lancaster and others who lived nearby urged our Committee to start a Fellowship.

An interesting side-light on the above situation is the fact that of the five real estate men consulted relative to the selection of a lot for future building needs, three had Mennonite names and heritage but not a single one was affiliated with a Mennonite group today.

Lancaster is an example of the value of "Mennonite Fellowship." September 24, 1944, we gathered a group of more than thirty interested persons in the Y.M.C.A. for a Sunday afternoon meeting. The meetings were continued throughout the following winter with varying attendance. During the following summer, 1945, Rev. Alfred Regier, pastor at Calvary Congregation, Mechanics Grove, made a survey of the families and friends who had shown some interest in the meetings. He found some forty families whose variant interest ranged from "very much interested" to "interested, but too late; we have begun attending elsewhere."

The meeting place was also a deterent to the growth of the work. It was quite a task for some of the elderly persons to climb the two flights of steps to the third floor auditorium. So also was the time of meeting. The services were in the afternoon. The hours were changed several times to accomodate the attendants, some of whom came from neighboring farmsteads.

Growth in the Second Year

In the second year, the Committee used several men to carry on its work. Rev. John Boehr supplied during the late fall and early winter months. Rev. Don Smucker was used occasionally from February until June. In March, 1945, the meeting place was changed to the Lancaster School of the Bible. This Chapel was on the first floor. Here the attendance increased—rising one time to the 130's! Finally, at the insistance of the local committee, a regular Sunday morning meeting was scheduled. This was announced for June 23. The attendance and interest shown then, and since, has well justified their claims.

Two landmarks which indicated the approval of the Lord on our venture, were the generous support the congregations of the Eastern District, who contributed, in May, nearly enough to pay for the three thousand dollar lot which had been purchased by the Conference in Grandview North and the gracious release of ten thousand dollars by the General Conference Home Mission Board for this work.

Thus with our faces set toward a new direction in Church extension, we look for a blessed third year of ministry. The Committee solicits the prayerful support of the readers of The Mennonite for Pastor Don Smucker and the small group that he has undertaken to shepherd in Lancaster—in the heart of Mennonite Country in America!

Appreciation for Assistances

Several citations are necessary to give due credit for the beginnings of this work. The faithfulness of a number of Eastern District families who kept faith when things seemed darkest. This number was augmented by others as the work gained momentum. Then there was the very helpful series of meetings by Dr. Jacob Janzen; these served to revive some of the previous bonds which had existed between Russian Mennonites who had settled in that community. We would not over look the encouragement of the Pastors of Eastern District congregations contingent to this field. The graciousness of the Lancaster School of the Bible, a truly inter-denominational group, deserves mention. The ecumenical kindness of the Reformed and Evangelical Seminary Board in granting us the privilege to use their Seminary Chapel. This is indeed heart warming. And the unnamed donor of a hundred Mennonite Hymnaries should not be

Bluffton College Bible Lectures, November 17-22

Dr. Allen G. Wehrli To Be Speaker

Each year Bluffton College selects some outstanding minister to give a week of Bible lecturs on the campus. These are primarily for the benefit of students, but are also of great help to townspeople and out of town visitors who attend. This year Dr. Allen G. Wehrli,, Professor of Old Testament Theology, Eden Seminary, Webster Grove, Missouri, has been selected. He is an outstanding leader in the Evangelical and Reformed church and has the reputation of being a very interesting and helpful lecturer. All those who can attend are cordially invited and will be greatly benefited by the series.

The series this year will be based on the Old Testament. We, as Christians, place much of our emphasis on New Testament teachings, and perhaps do not refer as frequently as we should to the Old Testament foundation of our faith. The Sunday and the evening series of lectures will be based on the early books of the Old Testament.

With dormitories filled, it is necessary that we have this information so that we may know how many rooms need to be found in private homes. All of you are given a cordial invitation. We are sure that we can find the places for you, however, please give us advance information concerning your coming if it is at all possible.

By Cornelius Krahn

Swiss and Dutch Mennonite Youth Compare Notes. in De Hoeksteen, the organ of the Doopsgezinde Jongerenbond, a Dutch Mennonite student gives his impressions about the Mennonite youth conference in Switzerland which was attended by six hundred to seven hundred people. The general theme of the conference was "Christ Is My Life." The youth committee was not youthful in years. Nevertheless the Dutch student was impressed by the willingness of the young people to give testimonies after the older ministers had spoken on the topic. He says, "as far as the knowledge of the Bible is concerned contact between the Dutch and Swiss Mennonite young people would be most fruitful for us." Summarizing he says, We observed that they were more Biblical and characterized by a separation from the world. Whether the above described youth conference does justice to what we call young people is another question. We should, however, remember that the Mennonites in Switzerland are farmers, which also explains why they live in greater separation from the world. It is, for example, typical that the women and girls did not testify at the meeting." Inviting the Dutch and Swiss Mennonite young people to correspond with each other, he concludes: "Inspite of all the differences, we as Mennonites the world over have, in the name of Christ, a great task and a high calling."

Learning From Each Other

Under the heading "World Mennonitism" H. C. Yoder wrote the following significant lines published in the European Relief Notes, Vol. III, No. 1. The subheadings are ours.

Converting Others.

We often hear the hope expressed that out of our contacts with European Mennonites through our Relief activities there may arise a really unified Mennonitism. Too often I fear we approach the idea too naively. Too often we feel it is merely a matter of converting the Mennonites of Holland, France and Germany to American Mennonitism. We are all thankful that our forefathers have preserved for us in Canada and the United States an evangelical gospel and a nonresistant belief and we all hope that those groups who have felt driven to depart from these will rethink their position.

A Two Way Process:

But we dare not be so perfect in our own estimation, so selfrighteous, as to consider our relations with European Mennonites as a missionary effort or a process of reformation. The flow of ideas can not be a one way process. The European Mennonites have developed in the cradle of our faith and also treasure their heritage and have many of the original sources by which we trace our development and evaluate our genius.

What We Can Learn.

I have not had as many or as close contacts with the European Mennonites as I would like but I have seen several points which offer fields for profitable consideration. Where we of the western shore of the Atlantic are divided seventeen or eighteen ways those on the eastern shores are divided only according to language or country. They believe strongly in the Scriptural virtue of bearing with one another's infirmities. Again they may permit social practices which we justly frown upon but they have not permitted the divorcement of religion from the social and business interests in their lives. I believe their attitude towards God is more natural than that of the average Mennonite at home.

If each of us contribute what is best in our practice and each recognize what is good in the other and are willing to be taught, then I believe our Church can become a more efficient instrument in God's hand on both sides of the Atlantic. May our venture in relief work develop towards that end.

ALCOHOLISM PART OF VAST COMPLEX OF PROBLEMS

Alcoholism, I believe, has basic social roots and the most important treatment, paradoxically, is to prevent it. Social regulatory measures and social education are necessary if we are to safeguard the race from injury to its individuals and to its social structure by alcoholism. I need not go into details, but will say this, that whoever really seeks to combat alcoholism will sooner or later find himself a social reformer as he sees the problem more fully, and, if what he sees arouses his social energies he will seek to combat the evils of the economic system. He will find himself confronted with the horrors of malnutrition, bad housing, and with the terrors of the business cycle and its dread unemployment. Sooner or later he will find himself up against the sinister fact that the manufacturer and sale of alcoholic beverages is an extremely large and powerful business which does not have many scruples about false advertising and social corruption as the means to its end, which is merely profit.—Abraham Myerson, M. Impressions Upon Coming to America

by Johannes Hilverda

It is not so easy for me to express my thoughts about America, the American people, and the Mennonites here, because we have been in the United States only fourteen days. Generally one has to be at least a year in a certain country, traversing the land in all directions, living and talking and working and worshipping with the people in big cities and in the country, before one can make up his mind and get the right idea about a people, a country and the churches. We saw only a glimpse of New York and Chicago, and saw only a few districts of the country and met only in short conversations a few Americans, and a few Mennonites. Therefore, I can give you only my first impressions and perhaps after being longer in America my ideas will change and I'll get another point of view about the things I write about now.

(By request, Johannes Hilverda of Aalsmeer, Holland, and now a student at Bethel, has kindly consented to describe some of his first impressions of America, and the people upon arriving here to study. In a sense, it was unfair to ask for an article so soon after the arrival of the group of students. At the same time, many first impressions stand out vividly for a while, then with time lose their early sharpness. At any rate, we wish this to be a way of welcoming our Dutch friends to the States. Certainly the churches consider it a privilege to have these students with us, and we hope that they may partake to the full of our home, school, and church life throughout the coming year.—Editor.)

We arrived on Monday afternoon, September 16 at New York, and really we were very deeply impressed by the very high skyscrapers we saw when we approached the harbor of Hoboken. I think we will never forget that. We do not have such high and large buildings in Holland. We saw many pictures and films of New York, but still it was a great sensation to see this all in reality. When we came nearer and nearer, we could see the dust hanging between the high buildings and we saw the great numbers of cars along the roads. It did not only impress me, but there was something in it that frightened me, too. I think it was the strange feeling how one man might feel himself a lost being in such great multitudes of people, between such enormous buildings, and in such a noisy atmosphere. When you are accustomed to living in Holland at a rustic lakeside, this all frightens you for a moment. It was a more materialistic sensation to see in the shops a great number of things we had not been able to buy for six or seven years in Holland: simple things as peanuts, oranges, bananas, shoes, radios, all kind of clothing and a lot of other things. Happily we had no American money at that moment . . . . we would have spent it all at once!

There was one Mennonite friend from the M. C. C. headquarters at Akron at the harbor to meet us. Later on more Mennonite friends arrived with cars to take us to Akron. Another sensation was the first men we saw in the streets of Hoboken, when we came out of the harbor, were strikers, and we were really astonished when we talked with them because they appeared to real Dutchmen!

On Tuesday afternoon we arrived at Akron where we were very heartily welcomed by the M. C. C. headquarters. We enjoyed talking about several problems and meeting those ones whose names we had often heard and from whom we sometimes received letters. We spent a happy time at this heart of Mennonite life in America. Everyone was very friendly and helpful and interested in our problems. We were happy to talk with the president of your Young People's Union, and we found out that we had many things in common. One thing really thrilled us and that was the way you Mennonites sing in your religious meetings and services. We never heard such singing before. It was really beautiful and very much better than we do in our churches in Holland.

We had some fine days at Akron. I think one of the differences between Europeans and Americans is that Americans are much more friendly, polite and helpful than the average European is. I think a foreigner feels at home much sooner in an American family than a foreigner would feel at home in Europe. Another difference is that Americans in general talk much more than we do and we found out that the American people like very much to talk to foreigners about their own country. We found out that life in America is much more comfortable than in Europe. We were amazed about your comfortable trains and diners, your cars and houses. We have no things like that in Holland.

All things in America seem to have the purpose to make life easier. "Take it easy" is one of your common expressions. It is really a feature of the character and the life of the average American, I think. The Americans live much faster than we do. They do not trouble about unnecessary, theoretical things as we do. They live pracitically and easily. Sometimes I have the feeling that there is the danger of this hurried way of living of getting superficial and seeking your pleasure in momentary things only. But I also found out that you Mennonites are not in every case representative of the average American. You are living closer to your European background than most Americans do.

We discovered also that most Americans laugh much sooner than we do in general. As far as I can see now I think that we Dutch Mennonite students can learn much from the American Mennonites, especially concerning practical Christianity. We feel that there is more spirit of fellowship among you and perhaps that is because of your colleges, your relief work and things like that. We don't have such things in Holland. Perhaps there is more fellowship among you, too, because of your being more separated from the world than we are in general in Holland. I think we will learn much and have a fine time at Bethel College where we feel now already quite at home.

Choosing a Retreat Ground

by Harry Yoder

Many things enter into making a retreat ground what it should be. Perhaps there are two primary factors to be taken into account in creating the proper atmosphere for a retreat, namely, physical surroundings and camp personnel. It is the purpose of this symposium to discuss the matter of physical surroundings.

1. The site for a retreat ground. Here is where we should make use of the beauty spots of God's Creation. The ideal place is in a wooded section along a lake or body of water. If the camp can be built on a little raise or slope facing a lake it adds to the atmosphere. Especially does this add a certain 'something' to services such as the morning watch, sunset service, Galilean services, etc. The enticements of a body of water seem to be vital in working out a young people's program. For instance, the sunset services mean much more when the location is such that the sun is setting across the lake at the actual time of the meeting.

Let me hasten to say that the location should be where are no 'public interests.' The camp or retreat itself is to be the only attraction. An evening lakeside service can easily be ruined by the noises at the public bathing beach just around the bend of the lake shore, or by the motor boats being used at that hour. If privately owned cottages are on the retreat grounds, or too close, difficulties often arise. Thus, I say the ideal sight is a beautiful lake front with no other interests interfering.

2. Should the location be near home? It is well to have the camp far enough away from home to avoid interruptions from 'Local people.' This is one phase of camp life which many well-meaning interested people will not fully understand. However, the greatest good comes to those who are permitted to spend a week or more together with their leaders uninterruped. If a group comes to the camp for the week-end only, they have not caught the spirit of the retreat nor understand the schedule, which means a retarding of the whole foreward movement. If a retreat is held within a somewhat thickly populated church area, it might be well to plan a part of the retreat program so that visitors could be welcome. The ideal is to have it far enough away from home to avoid interruptions and educate our people to it.

3. Proper equipment is indeed necessary.

a. The administration building is important. Perhaps expense can be kept low by having a number of things under the same roof. In this building I suggest the office with all equipment for registering and handling the business affairs of a camp. A reception room to be used for a number of purposes—meeting incoming groups, class room, faculty meetings, etc. Also this building could have at least one screened in porch for classes, etc. In one corner could be a store or snack shop. Depending on the structure of the building, the dinning room and kitchen could be located in the basement. If there is an upstairs, it could be used for either the 'summer staff of workers' who care for the camp or the faculty and leaders. Sometimes the sleeping hours of these two groups conflict a bit, therefore, I suggest separate sleeping houses for them. This is not a serious problem however. If there is not room enough for the kitchen and dining room in the administration building I would suggest a separate building for this and the upstairs used for the working staff.

b. In addition to the administration building and dining hall there must be room enough and appropriate for group meetings—call it a chapel or auditorium. This might easily be in connection with one of the other buildings. If it is only to serve retreat groups, it might not need to be of a great size. If Conferences and the like are to use the retreat grounds, it would need to be larger. If the dining hall and sleeping quarters for the working staff are in a separate building, then I suggest the auditorium to be at one end of the administration building.

This is the second of a series of articles centering around the issue of choosing a retreat site for a district conference group. Rev. Harry Yoder, of the Central District and until recently minister at Carlock, Illinois, and now connected with Bluffton College, has served a number of years as director and leader at the Camp Mack Retreat of the Middle and Central District conferences. He here discusses the question of choosing a retreat ground in the light of his experience at Camp Mack.

c. There must be adequate sleeping quarters for the retreaters. I suggest the 'bunk houses' for this purpose always be in small units. Cabins should house not more than twelve or fourteen. Much more satisfactory results can be gained with the entire group divided into small units. Cabins need plenty of ventilation with windows or shutters which can be operated from the inside. Girls and boys cabins should be properly located in relation to each other.

d. Adequate toilet facilities are very necessary. If "cleanliness is next to Godliness" let us make this a reality in our church camps.

e. Insist on the best drinking water possible. This tends to elminate much illness, etc. This is of primary importance.

f. Adequate space and materials should be available for a good recreation program. In choosing a site this must be kept in mind. No one wants to play ball in the midst of trees or on a rough field. The amount and type of equipment depends upon the extent of your recreation desires. A good variety of recreation should be provided so that all can participate. If the camp is located on a lake, then lake equipment must be provided—boats, swimming beach.

g. A first aid room is needed. This can be a small room with cots, etc. provided. The camp nurse will appreciate having first aid kits. Perhaps the first aid room should be in the administration building in order to be near the phone, etc.

h. Building space must be provided for times when the weather conditions are not ideal. Therefore, I suggest in the equipment to include a large sized building which might be used for various things in camp life. Especially should the ground floor room have a good sized room with a fire place. In case of rain this can be used instead of the camp fire, etc. Parts of this building could be used for class rooms or perhaps the upstairs for housing overflow crowds. Or the building might have some screened porches for various uses. In any camp, provision must be made for times when you are forced indoors.

i. Among the wishes for equipment should be musical instruments. Pianos, rent a Hammond or something of the sort, Chimes near the sunset point will be very valuable. If old familiar hymns and good music enter the retreater's minds as they gather it creates a worshipful attitude.

j. One bit of equipment needed at camp is a shower for those who do not swim. We nearly always have some among the leaders who do not participate in the swimming and who would appreciate the use of a shower room.

For the ideal camp much other equipment could be mentioned, but we must be practical. A hand crafts building would be good but can be managed in a corner of one of the larger buildings somewhere. The music can be managed in connection with one of the larger buildings. As a camp site grows, some of the added needs come, too.

4. The size of the camp grounds depends upon the size of groups it serves and the size of the constituent group. Care should be taken that a large enough plot of ground is purchased so that the camp never will feel crowded for space. If possible when purchasing a lake front ample space should be purchased so that public interests do not close in on the camp.

5. The expense of setting up a retreat ground can become enormous. This again should be according to the strength of the group it serves. Here a wise group will take into consideration its already accepted financial responsibility. These years of "much money" will not always last. This must be remembered. The other side is this—one of the greatest investments we can make is in the equipment and grounds which help develop the religious and spiritual life of our young people. Certainly this is true of our retreats. And here is a real place for growth within our church.

6. The summer program will need to be worked out according to the various activites in each local situation. In some areas of retreats there is the industrial section, while in others it is the farming area. The whole program will need to take into consideration the make-up of the people and their other conferences and activities. The program should include a wide range of our church people—all the way from junior camps to business men. The greater the number of groups we can interest the larger is our opportunity. Especially should it mean much to the leaders and potential leaders in our churches. We can do much to train and inspire our people in this way when a summer program is properly handled.

Autumn

The vigor, life, and newness of spring with its fresh greenness, fragrant blossoms and balmy days have again, as thousands of seasons past, changed to the mellow, calm days of autumn when the colors of the sunset are reflected from those once shiny green leaves of spring. There is the yellow of the cottonwood, the brown of the elm, the oranges, reds and crimsons of the oak and here and there in brilliant contrast the green of a pine.

Perhaps you, too, have said autumn is the best season of the year. Around it there seems to be the mellowed richness of having grown old beautifully. Where spring was new with its spring rains, breezes, and new green shoots sprouting from tree and meadow, autumn offers the crunch of dry leaves under the foot, the silence of a cool brisk evening with an early sunset, the tans and browns of fodder in the field blendded with the green of a new wheat field just beyond. And it all seems so possessed with mature, calm age.

It is on those days of quiet beauty that a walk in the country is irresistible. A walk down a country road when the bark of a dog can be heard a mile away and the laughter of children at the neighbor's house seems to be right next to you. The smell of wood smoke in the air, or in the idle play of rabbits in the field deepen the serenity of the moment.

Perhaps you have followed a creek and have seen the cattle in a playful mood chasing each other with tails in air and heels kicking high. Stones tossed in the creek disturb the calm water and flat stones skip countless times to the other bank. Happily and lazily the water gurgles where it runs down a rapid. A roasted marshmellow and a toasted weiner over the fire have a special flavor and the heat of the fire feels good as you slowly turn absorbing the warmth. When the moon is full, it rises almost as soon as the sun sets. And it is big and red as it appears.

We all have many rich memories of the autumnal season — the evening of seasonal life. Memories of other seasons when the harvest was gathered and barns were full, granaries bulged, and rows of jars with bright colors lined the basement shelves. It is the end of a season. It is the period of dormancy, of waiting. It is the time when we can look back and look forward. It is the season when we can feel the thrill of achievement and anticipate the work to come.

Autumn is the time for thankfulness, communion, fellowship and wonder. Thankfulness and communion with the Creator God who does such marvelous works. Fellowship with kindred spirits all privileged to partake of the gifts of the Creator and wonder and awe at His handiwork.

One result of the oppression during the war in Holland was the trend toward unification of the church. The General Synod of the Netherlands Reformed Church met for the first time in three centuries in the historic Amsterdam New Church. Some of the churches which split off long ago from the old body, are ready to rejoin it.

MATERIAL AID NOTES

Due to the many inquiries coming in to the Akron office concerning the sending of packages to specific individuals in Europe, we feel that it would be well to clarify this matter.

The only ways open at the present time by which an individual in the United States can send a parcel or package to another individual in Europe is through regular parcel post channels and the CARE organization.

CARE is an organization set up whereby people can purchase a package containing about 29 pounds of concentrated foods for delivery to individuals in Austria, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, Finland, France, Greece, Italy, Norway, Poland, Netherlands; French, British, American and Russian sectors of Berlin; and British, French, and American zones of Germany. These packages may be purchased for a total cost of $10 and delivery is guaranteed or the purchase price will be refunded.

Postal regulations now permit a person to send one eleven-pound parcel per week to an individual in most European countries except the Russian occupied zone of Germany and all of Berlin. Check this with your local post office as there may be minor changes as time passes. These parcels may contain non-perishable foods, toilet articles, clothing, and similar items of a personal nature. These are the only methods of sending food and clothing to individual persons in Europe. Any other shipments will necessarily have to go in our regular freight shipments which are consigned to our repersentative on the field for general distribution.

Last week a plan was announced whereby individuals and groups in this country could "adopt" a needy Mennonite family in Central Europe and send them an eleven-pound package by parcel post. These packages should be sent directly from the individuals's own post office and will not go through regular M. C. C. channels. In this manner a direct, personal contact can be made with needy families.

In checking the lists of names which we have received up to this time, we find that it includes needy Mennonites from a number of places in Central Europe. A number were forced to leave Poland as a result of the war and are now scattered throughout Austria, the American, British, and French-occupied Zones of Germany. Other lists include names of families from Russia who are now in Germany and resident German Mennonite families who are in dire need.

This is a unique opportunity to witness to our less fortunate brethren in Europe. May our prayers go with these Christmas packages that they may bring both spiritual and physical joy to their recipients.

Names of families may be secured by writing to the Material Aid Section, Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pennsylvania. (Canadians will receive names of residents of the British Zone in Germany only, as other zones are not open to parcel post service from Canada.)

During the past two weeks shipments to Germany included two carloads of miscellaneous foods. These carloads were shipped from the Mennonite food warehouses located at Kalona, Iowa, and at Silver Springs, Pennsylvania. Also shipped to Germany was a carload of Ralston Relief Cereal. These shipments made a total of 107 tons with an evaluation of $25,750.35 and left aboard the S. S. American Traveler on September 28.

Inductions

During the month of September there were thirty-eight C.P.S. men assigned to camp according to the National Service Board. Of these, fifteen were Mennonite, seven Brethren, and sixteen were assigned to Government Camps. Just how many reported to camp is not known yet, but it is believed that there were about 20. For the month of October there are only twelve assignments to Mennonite Camps.

Rev. David Hoogie, director of the Bible School at Munich, North Dakota, was a chapel speaker this Week. Rev. S. T. Moyer, missionary on leave from India, is making his home in Freeman during this school year and has joined the faculty as instructor in Mennonite History and Bible. His wife, the former Meta Habegger, taught here some twenty-five years ago. Kathryn Hofer sang a solo in chapel Thursday. The college choir made its first appearance this week. The organization shows great promise. The Community Program Service will present the second number in this year's series on October 25, when John Gurney, an outstanding young American bass-baritone will give a concert. A new washing machine was recently purchased for the home economics department.

BLUFFTON COLLEGE NEWS

The first number of the College Music Course is to be given Friday evening, October 18. The artist is Harold Haugh tenor, a member of the staff of the Oberlin Conservatory of Music. BETHEL COLLEGE

A large crowd attended the observances of Parent-Student Day and Founders Day, both held on October 13 for the convenience of the constituency. Several hours of open house preceded the traditional program at three o'clock, in which Paul Albrecht gave the welcome from the students, Mrs. P. E. Frantz the response from the parents, and Rev. P. A. Wedel and President Kaufman spoke for the Board of Directors and faculty. During the evening program that followed the fellowship meal and a concert by the College orchestra, Rev. J. M. Regier spoke on "Our Debt to the Past," and introduced a number who were present at the laying of the cornerstone on October 12, 1888. On the platform with them were also thirty foreign students, a number of whom responded to the introduction of President Kaufman with short talks and music. Other music for these programs was furnished by the Alexanderwohl and Emmaus churches, a flute quartet, Walter Jost, pianist, and Alvin Franz, bass.

Jottings

Word of the death of Missionary Ferdinand J. Isaac was received at General Conference Headquarters on the morning of October 12. The cable telling of Missionary Isaac's death, was received on October 12. It is assumed that Missionary Isaac died October 11, according to our time. The cable, which was dated October 12 (India time) bore the message: "Ferd Isaac died of heart failure this morning." The cable was sent from Champa, India, by Dr. Harvey R. Bauman.

—The Eicher Emmanuel Mennonite Church (Iowa), on October 11, closed a week of evangelistic services which were well attended. Rev. P. P. Tschetter of Pretty Prairie, Kansas, conducted these meetings, bringing inspirational and heart-searching messages on "Names of Believers," "Disciples," "Children," "Brethren," "Christians" and "Saints."—Corr.

—Halstead (Kansas) Church: The bouquets provided by Jake Mueller Sr. for the services every Sunday have been much appreciated. After the services he would send them to the shut-ins or the sick or to the hospital. Thirty-two women did mending for relief at an all-day meeting. Twenty-nine men and women were out for church cleaning. Dr. E. G. Kaufman of Bethel College was guest speaker on October 3. He told of many interesting experiences of his trip to Europe this summer. Mr. Henry Ruth passed away in his home in Newton Monday, and funeral services were held in our church with Rev. David C. Wedel in charge.—Corr.

—The Second Quarterly Conference of the Eastern District Conference was held in the Grace Mennonite Church, Lansdale, Pa. Rev. Arthur S. Rosenberger brought the messages. In the afternoon sessions he presented "an overall picture of the work and the need" of the Mennonite Biblical Seminary and Bible School.

—Meadow Mennonite Church, Colby, Kansas: Rev. J. H. Epp of Kingman, Kansas, stopped here on his way back from Vona, Colorado, for an evening meet- on September 24. Brother Abe H. Goossen has been elected as delegate for the coming Western District Conference.—Mrs. Dan N. Epp. Corr.

—Bethel Church, Winton, California: On September 29, Rev. and Mrs. Glanzer left for a five to six week trip to South Dakota to visit relatives and friends. Different ministers are helping out during the absence of Rev. Glanzer. The Young People's Sunday School Class holds a pot-luck, get-together on the first Sunday of each month. The afternoon is usually spent in some sort of a program and singing. The Ladies' Sewing Circle has done its bit in sending food for relief. This past summer men, women, and children gathered to cut peaches for relief. The dried peaches were then sent across.—Lorraine Heppner, Corr.

—The Mennonite Relief Clothing Center, Newton, Kansas, is receiving increasingly larger amounts of clothing according to Mrs. Selma Linscheid, Director. More clothes were received during eight months of this year than in the whole previous year. The greatest amount of clothing for any month came in last February. The M.C.C. has expressed the hope that people will give very generously of clothing for this winter, for the need for it will be very great.

—Rev. Walter H. Dyck, Executive Secretary of the General Conference, recently conducted extended meetings in the First Church, Berne, Indiana. From there he went to Chicago to be present at the dedication of the new seminary and Bible school buildings.

—Grace Church, Lansdale, Pa. While only a few of our members are actually farmers, many have a farm background and many raise vegetables in their own gardens and truck patches. It is our custom, therefore, to hold a harvest home service every fall. This year the front of the church auditorium was decorated with flowers, fruits, vegetables,flour, canned goods, and groceries. These donations were later taken to the Home for the Aged at Frederick. The local Brotherhood held its fourth dinner to welcome back returned service men and women. All but two or three have returned home from the armed services and C.P.S., while one new draftee is leaving this week for C.P.S. Our church is conducting a "Seven Weeks Every Member Active Program." On our fall communion Sunday a special offering was taken for the support of the new Mennonite Bible Seminary in Chicago. On October 20, Home Coming Sunday, we expect to have in our pulpit Rev. S. T. Moyer. He is a native of Lansdale and although he is a member of the Zion Church Souderton, he has given our church much encouragement from its beginning seventeen years ago. Rev. Moyer preached the sermon at the first service held in our church, September 29, 1929. At the evening service that day we expect many of our former members to be present, including Rev. and Mrs. George Gregor and Rev. J. Herbert Fretz—Ruth E. Fretz —Friedensberg, Avon, South Dakota: Recent guest speakers have been: Paul Bartel, missionary to China; Rev. and Mrs. Harvey Boese, missionaries to East Siam; Miss Elizabeth Foth, Brooklyn, New York; Rev. and Mrs. Erwin Wedel, Jackson, Mississippi; and Miss Aganetha Fast. The Mission Society and friends contributed eighty-six dollars for the Good Will Christmas Bundles. On October 29 the mission society gave a mission program with Miss Helen Thiezen, missionary from Africa, as guest speaker. The offering at this program was $104.—Anna Unruh, Corr.

—Eden Church, Moundridge, Kansas: We observe our annual Harvest Festival on October 6. A large group turned out for the occasion in spite of a rainy day, and substantial (total over ten thousand dollars—editor's note) offerings were received. Dr. C. E. Krehbiel gave the festival sermon in the morning, and after a dinner in the church basement, Rev. Sam J. Goering addressed the congregation. The afternoon meeting was a homecoming service in honor of the boys who have been in government service.—Ellis Goering, Corr.

—Kitchener, Ontario: Rev. Andrew Shelly, Pastor of the Stirling Avenue Mennonite Church, is speaker for the Mennonite Hour broadcast during October.

—Esko Loewen, editor of the Mennonite Youth Section, came to North Newton the week-end of October 13 to take Mrs. Loewen and infant daughter Margaret Sue with him to Chicago where he is studying at the Mennonite Seminary.

—Bethlehem Mennonite Church, Bloomfield, Montana: Our pastor and members of the church board conducted the annual harvest festival services, held on September 29. One interesting feature was a brief outline of the history of our church. The history will be printed in booklet form. The church was lavishly decorated with flowers and vegetable displays. The offering amounted to a little more than three thousand dollars. The proceeds of the mission held by the Ladies' Sewing Society amounted to seventeen hundred dollars. The ladies are sending another shipment of new and used clothing this week. Rev. Gerhard Friesen of Newton, Kansas, was with us October 6 and spoke both morn- and evening.—Corr.

—Bethesda Church, Henderson, Nebraska: Over two thousand pounds of new and used clothing, about two hundred Goodwill Christmas Bundles, and several sacks of soap were sent to the M.C.C. during September. The freight alone amounted to $101.

—First Mennonite Church, Nappanee, Indiana: September 29 Rev. Paul Shelly spoke in our church on "The Challenge of Christian Education," in the morning service and on "How the Christian College Helps Young People Make Life Decisions' in the evening. Our recent offerings for the Mennonite Seminary in Chicago amounted to $157. Members of the church donated 290 quarts of canned goods to Bluffton College. This was taken to Bluffton by the pastor, who attended a meeting of the Middle District Committee of Education. "Faith of Our Fathers" is the course which the high school class is studying this quarter. It explains why a Mennonite denomination came to be.—Mrs. Loyal Corwin, Corr.

—Lorraine Avenue Mennonite Church, Wichita, Kansas: October 6 was a day of rich blessings for our church. Holy Communion was observed in the morning. We also had baptismal services and the reception of new members. In the afternoon the corner stone of our new church was laid. Ministers of our neighboring churches participated and also the President of the Wichita Council of Churches. Rev. D. C. Wedel, President of the Western District Conference, brought the message. Dr. H. A. Fast brought the greetings from the Home Mission Committee of the Western District Conference. We thank each one for the inspiring and challenging words spoken. May our church ever prove to be to each individual worshipper the answer to the need of the soul.—Mrs. E. D. Schmidt, Corr.

—Deep Run (Pa.) Church: Vocational percentages of the congregation as given by the pastor are: farmers 43 per cent; trade man 23 per cent; truckers 14 per cent; office and professional 12 per cent; factory employees 8 per cent. Forty-seven per cent of the members are housewives.

—Salem Church, Freeman, South Dakota: The Young People's Retreat was held August 22-25 with Rev. Paul Shelly and Rev. Marvin Dirks as guest speakers. A number of young people consecrated their lives for Christian service during these meetings. The M.C.C. is sending a truck to Freeman October 15 to gather the relief contributions of the local churches. Miss Aganetha Fast spoke to the Junior and Senior missionary societies on September 12. Dr. John C. Wenger, professor of Bible at Goshen College, conducted a series of meetings in our community. Rev. Benno Toews of the Freeman College Bible Department, had charge of the Sunday School Review September 29.—Mrs. Willard Claassen, Corr.

Johnson's coming to our church to serve us as pastor. Rev. Paul R. Shelly, a son of our congregation, will conduct the morning worship service. Dr. J. E. Hartzler of Hartford, Connecticut, will preach. Horace S. Patterson, a chaplain's assistant in World War II, will give hymn interpretations on the organ, and the Atta Boy Male Quartet will sing.—Mae Latshaw, Press Agent —The Springfield (Pa.) Church has decided to give a one year free subscription of The Mennonite to new members received into the church.

World Order In Our Day

by L. C. Kreider

In the hour before dawn on July 16, 1945, the hills of Jornado del Muerto, a desert stretch in New Mexico, were briefly lighted with a light no man had seen before. For better or for worse, a new world lay before mankind. But only a few dozen picked men saw the blinding flash and the pillar of smoke and dust or heard the deafening roar, and only a few hundred men knew of the event, for the success of the explosion was the top military secret of a world at war. Three weeks later, to the very day, the secret was divulged with most devastating force on the Japanese city of Hiroshima, where conservative estimates place the number killed in that awful moment at 100,000 out of the quarter of a million people in the city at that time. The effective area of destruction was about four square miles. Buildings were destroyed by the concussion and by fires caused by the great heat of the explosion, the temperature of which was estimated to be greater than on the surface of the sun. All this came from a mass of explosive material about the size of an orange. Three days later the second bomb was dropped on Nagasaki, and the following summer two more were dropped into the Bikini lagoon for purposes of military experiment. One of these sent up a column of water 2,200 feet in diameter to a height of 5,500 feet with spray going much higher. The column was estimated to contain 10,000,000 tons of water.

At that time those in the best position to know estimated that other leading countries of the world would also be making similar bombs within five years. Over two years have now passed, and their guess still seems valid. Two of the five years are already gone. . . . . and preparation for and talk of another war is constantly in our papers.

Many condemn the scientists for harnessing the inner forces of the atom, not realizing that this accomplishment was as inevitable as the birth of a child when its time is due. This is but the latest child of a large scientific and technological family whose elder brothers are the lever, wheel, printing-press, steam, electricity, chemical industry, medicine, aircraft, radio, television and rockets. Though the youngest, it promises to be the strongest child in the family and, like its brothers, powerful to work either good or ill depending on whether its master, (Picture: After the bombing of Hiroshima) we human beings, use it wisely or evilly.

But suppose that man had not learned to release the energy that lies within the atom. Could we then feel at ease or complacent about war? A hundred thousand people killed in modern "area saturation" bombing during air raids lasting two weeks are just as dead as if they were killed in the twinkling of an eye. Neither method is a respecter of age, sex, or condition of man. The methods of the past war were terrible enough that civilization might have been destroyed (some say it was) if the conflict had continued much longer. But other dreadful weapons, too, are possible. Some can still remember the terror of poison gases used in the first world war. Gases many times more dreadful were prepared in tremendous quantity and held ready for use in the war recently ended but were not used principally because there was greater tactical advantage in the use of explosives in this predominantly offensive war. Let us not grow complacent about poison gases as weapons. Remember, too, the possibility of biological warfare, for our country in the last war had 3,900 people hard at work on its methods, and it is probable that we were outdistanced by other countries in this. New and dreadful strains of diseases can be developed, the people of one nation protected by innoculation, and the disease then spread over an enemy country. Or a plant disease that selectively attacks a crop such as wheat could be developed by nations that grow no wheat, or those who have developed resistant strains use it against unprotected wheat growers of another country.

All of these things do indeed present a black picture with the spirit of man as it is—still willing to be stirred up by fearful, suspicious, jealous, grasping, or overconfident leaders, hungry for power to such a pitch that they are willing to quit quiet, peaceful, and humble pursuits and rise en masse to kill their fellowmen who like themselves live quiet, peaceful, and humble lives at home but who by accident of birth happen to live across an international boundary line.

Let those that despair of averting catastrophic war in our time remember with new courage that great and even non-Christian nations like India and China have existed for centuries without large scale armed conflicts with their neighbors. Let us also remember that as recently as ten generations ago it was considered unsafe in much of the so-called civilized world for a man to step out of the front door of his home unarmed at night for fear of violence. It is doubtful if the hearts of men on the whole are much whiter today than those that lived ten generations ago, yet today we have far greater personal safety in our communities than men had then. A general mutual agreement to live and let live, coupled by a police force to care for the relatively few not willing to cooperate, accomplished wonders. That is ideally the program of the United Nations as magnified to an international scale, and we as peace loving people will do well to keep informed of its progress and to give it our thoughtful and prayerful support and cooperation. It could do wonders in our time if given an opportunity and an intelligent support.

But to the Christian, legislated goodness and morality backed by a police force, desirable as it may be until something better and more basic can be done, can never be accepted as an ultimate answer. As our Master, the Christ, has so forcefully taught by both precept and example, the best way to overcome evil is by doing good. Christians differ in their ideas of whether in this world it will be possible to overcome all evil through the way of Christ in our time, but most are united in agreeing that it is the method of the true Christian and the only long range approach to the conquest of evil that man has available.

These are words easily spoken but difficult to practice, for they touch our every attitude, motive, and action. We must become more sensitive in many areas and realize that it does make a difference when we throw out a half loaf of bread because it is somewhat dry when others are hungry; that we heat our homes to an unhealthful eighty-five degrees when others have no fuel; and that we lightly cast away clothes at the end of a season or when we desire the thrill of a new garment when many have so little to protect themselves from the cold.

We must learn that we do not live to ourselves alone but that our business and social practices vitally affect lives in distant places. High import duties may line the pockets of business men and make farming a more profitable venture, but it may bring economic ruin to lives across the ocean. This is said to have been one of the basic sources of friction which led to the recent war in Europe. Killing baby pigs and plowing under crops may hold up prices, but people living in the "have-not" nations can scarcely be expected to view such practices with unconcern. Our attitude toward the Negro, the Mexican, and the Oriental living within our land is closely followed on the other side of the earth. Japanese war lords did not forget this in justifying the attack on Pearl Harbor to their subjects. Whenever one people makes life too difficult for those in another land the ground is already plowed and fitted for another war. It is in this prepared soil that unscrupulous leaders, hungry for power, sow the seeds that yield the dreadful harvest of death, destruction, misery and want.

Pushed forward with the realization of what another war will mean and beckoned onward by our example in Christ and his sacrifice on the cross, let us all earnestly strive to live such lives that goodness and peace may abound and that the curse of another war need not be saddled again upon ourselves and our children. Time is short, but with God's help much pain and distress can yet be spared mankind.

A WAY WITHOUT WAR

The Swedish People Were Resourceful

In 1905 it became evident to many people that war between Norway and Sweden was inevitable. What about? What are such crises ever about? Some trouble, some problem, some event that seems to have two sides and that both peoples want solved their own way. The problem this time was union.

DAY OF PRAYER FOR PEACE

One reads and hears much in these days about tense relations with other nations, and it is important that we as Christians maintain a stable and consistent attitude on this question. There is serious danger that we unconsciously absorb some of the un-Christian emotions of hatred and suspicion which are manifested so freely about us.

The Peace Section of the Mennonite Central Committee suggests that in all of our churches a Day of Prayer for Peace be observed on Sunday, November 9. On this day it is strongly urged that special emphasis be given to public and private prayer, (1) that God's will might overrule in the affairs of the nations; (2) that the world may be spared the judgment of a third world war; (3) that the hearts of evil rulers be touched; (4) that whether under freedom or persecution, our Mennonite people may give a strong and clear witness for the way of Love; (5) that the door may open for a positive witness through relief work in Russia; (6) that we ourselves may have strength and courage to maintain a forgiving spirit toward all men.

Since 1814 Norway had been a part of Sweden—a junior partner to the government, partly self-governed, partly ruled by the bigger country. The Norwegians did not like the arrangement. They had different economic interests; they had different social arrangements; they just were not the same as the Swedes. They wanted to separate from the union.

In 1905 a commission of two Swedes and two Norwegians studied the problem. They reported that an easy settlement could be made. But the Swedish government would not accept the report. The Norwegians' parliament went ahead and made the report into law whether the Swedes liked it or not. The king of Sweden vetoed the law. The Norwegian ministers resigned. The Norwegians declared the king unable to rule in Norway, declared the union dissolved and began to organize an entirely separate government.

This was when many people in Norway and Sweden began to say that war was inevitable.

You know how the formula goes from there. It is always the same. Brief notices in the newspapers pointing to strained relations . . . a few days later front-page stories about the crisis . . . then streamer headlines in big capital letters: "VIEWS GRAVE CRISIS," "SACRED RIGHTS," "NATIONAL HONOR," and then finally in letters four inches high: "WAR INEVITABLE!"

Always the quiet peace-loving people, going their own way, tending to their own business, not caring one way or the other about "nation honor" and the sacred rights," are carefully prodded, pushed and propagandized. The well-oiled machinery of war, always ready, always prepared for its hour, sets up its steady drumming—gently at first, then louder and louder and louder, waking up the people, making them raise their heads and look around in wonder at the stir, playing on their hearts, playing with the things they hold sacred. Louder and louder until in the crescendo of drum-beat and flag waving the peaceful people sell themselves again for the same stale mess of potage.

But not this time!

This time it was the people who were ready. This time it was the people who were awake. This time it was the people who arose. The people were prepared to defend peace and justice.

On May 1, 1905, the Swedish people marched through the streets of Stockholm—a May-day demonstration in the cause of peace. Thirty thousand people in a parade marched through a city of 300,000! Almost ten per cent of the people in a parade. Signs read "Justice to Norway," "Peace With Norway," "Peace Is Secured by Justice."

A mass meeting was held; the speaker of the day said, "Peace with Norway can be secured only if Sweden treats Norway the way the Swedes would want to be treated by the Norwegians if Norway were the more powerful country." At the end of the meeting all 30,000 of the assembled Swedes roared their adoption of a resolution demanding that the crisis be settled by giving justice to Norway. They demanded that the Swedish government give the Norwegians the right to be an independent country if they wanted to.

Then that great crowd of Swedes stood up and sang, Ja, vi elsker dette Landet—the Norwegian national anthem!

United To Save

by Jacob J. Enz

On the outskirts of a Midwestern town a mother was seen running to and fro in a field of tall green wheat. Now and then she lifted her voice as if calling someone. The shadows were lengthening. She hastened her search. Exhausted, she called to a school teacher just returning from his day's work and enlisted his aid in the search for her boy who had evidently gotten lost while playing in the field against his mother's careful instructions.

Out of good sense the school teacher started down the street toward town, enlisting more assistance instead of going into the field and continuing the search with the woman. He knocked at several houses and asked for help; he enlisted the aid of some builders who were in the process of putting their tools away. He asked some high school boys and girls who were on their way home from school, to help. He knocked at some more doors. Then, with a large group at hand, he returned to the scene and instructed the helpers to line up along the edge of the field, join hands, and start walking across the field in one long line. In just five minutes a cry went up! The child had been found! To her dismay the mother found that in the course of her lone search she had come within ten steps of the sleeping and tired boy. What one person could not do in hours, an organized group did in a matter of minutes!

This story brings home with the impact of a conviction the Church's God-given method for finding the moral the spiritual AWOL's in our communities as well as the Church's apparent negligence in this crucial task.

When Jesus called the fishermen to become "fishers of men," he was not asking primarily for the "hook and line" variety of fishermen. He wanted a team of men to launch out into the deep with a huge net and bring men into the kingdom by the thousands.

Or, from a slightly different angle, just as surely as there is need of thousands of yards of chord for a net used in making big catches in contrast to the single line needed for just one fish, just as surely there is need for the blending into a corporate witness the redeemed personalities of individual children of God.

The Church is the place where this great net of witness is woven; the talents and abilities of every redeemed person must go into it. Some tried and true Christians will make up the heavy ropes that take the strain, others will make up the weights and corks that keep the net spread wide, while others will make up the chord criss-crossed for the catch. None of these parts can function separately with much effect. The Church must never lose sight of this basic function, namely—the blending of redeemd personalities into a corporate Witness, the vitality of which cannot be denied.

But, strange as it may seem, the average church though organized to the final degree for raising money, for keeping up a good physical plant, for its educational task etc., has little or no organization or method for the purpose of winning men. The Church has been satisfied with the "hook and line" type of fishing done by the pastor or some extra zealous personal worker, while the rest of the talent of the church is used up in maintaining the status quo. If there is to be more than just a trickle of men coming into the Kingdom the "hook and line" type of fishing will have to be largely replaced in favor of Jesus' method—a group of people united in their witness, each witnessing in his place according to his gift. There are no exemptions from witnessing in the true Church. "Ye shall be witnesses unto me."

The very life of the Church depends on getting back to this New Testament conception of evangelism. The church that is interested only in conserving what little it has will die for the very simple reason that the growing wave of paganism all around it, against which this church makes no effort, will surely submerge it. That church, on the other hand, which organizes its membership into a united front of witness will certainly roll back the tide of evil out of the hearts of men.

What strategy has your church for winning people to Christ and His way of life? Is every member of your church aware that he is responsible in a measure for every non-Christian person he contacts

Has your church inquired whether there are non-Christian people living in the vicinity of your church? Is your church concerned about the children that play in its very shadows? M.C.C. Reports Picture in Austria Blacker than Before

"I have been here in Austria for one year now, and the food situation has not become one bit better. In September, 1946, the official calory level was 1550, and now in September, 1947 the colories level is still 1550. Under such emergency condition a person can struggle through for one year, but when it continues the same the second year and more, the burden becomes progressively heavier and unbearable because of the long background of suffering and deprivation.

"With . . . . . a summer of killing drought behind us and the prospects of another fuelless and frigid winter ahead, the total picture is frankly blacker than ever before. Every problem is becoming more and more severe. Out of the host of problems three stand out to us: tuberculosis, old people, and refugees.

"We are giving packages to people between the ages of twenty-five and forty with open t. b., but aid is still sorely needed for those with active t. b. in this age bracket, plus all of those with t. b. over forty years of age. A total of 60,000 old and economically poor people over seventy years of age are in desperate need of help. City officials are besieging us with requests to help them. Refugees are living like animals in and around the railroad stations, as they make Vienna a transient center for eastern Europe. Aid to them is negligible. These are the severest of the severe problems in which help is desperately needed and seemingly not forthcoming. Vienna and Austria are still sending out S.O.S. signals."—Bert Smucker.

Literature on Military Conscription

The Christian and Conscription, by Edward Yoder and Don Smucker, is a very timely booklet in view of the probable consideration of compulsory military training in Congress during the next few months. The critique given on CPS and on conscription and the chapter on "Chartering Our Post-war Course" are particularly pertinent and helpful. Copies are available for twenty-five cents each from the Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pennsylvania.

MENNONITES THE WORLD OVER

By Cornelius Krahn

A MENNONITE GOES TO WASHINGTON

The Bethel College Church and Bethel College of North Newton, Kansas, recently had the opportunity of welcoming back one of their sons and to fellowship with him during a weekend. It was Theodore O. Wedel, son of the first president of Bethel College and one of the first two ministers of the Bethel College Church. The occasion was the golden anniversary of the Bethel College Church.

Off the campus. Theodore O. Wedel grew up on the campus, received his advanced education at Oberlin, Harvard, and Yale and taught English at several universities. In 1929 he was ordained to the ministry of the Episcopal Church which he had joined. He has studied theology at American and European seminaries and is now Canon of Washington Cathedral and Warden of the College of Preachers. A few years ago he published the book, The Coming Great Church.

On the Campus. At the golden anniversary of Bethel College Theodore O. Wedel returned to the campus to speak at that occasion. Now that the church was to celebrate its golden anniversary, he again accepted an invitation to deliver an address and share some reminiscences with the congregation. He did the latter in a very interesting and delightful way. He recalled that their family had lived in what is now the library and related some lasting impressions which he had received as a child from the Biblical exortations given in the chapel and occasionally when taken into the woodshed by a "nonresistant" father. Many reminiscenes were exchanged throughout the day when friends came to shake hands with him.

The Message. The Christian Church was originally a "colony" of heaven on earth. This "other-worldly" character of the Church has suffered much loss in American Protestantism. The Mennonite Church which originally placed great emphasis on separation from the world is now rapidly adjusting itself to American Protestantism. The speaker stated further that American Protestantism has to a large degree made an ideal "Jesus-man," whom we ought to imitate, out of Christ the Redeemer. The nineteenth century began to differentiate between the "gospel of Paul," giving preference to the former. According to the speaker Christ the Redeemer and Jesus the ideal are inseparable as they were prior to the nineteenth century. Again there are movements underway to breach the gulf between them.

After a full day of meetings a lively discussion followed in the parsonage, where questions like infant and adult baptism, regeneration and baptism, Existentialism and Barthianism were discussed.

Some Conclusions. The Mennonites of America have been widely influenced directly and indirectly by men like Wesley and Schleiermacher, by James and Moody, by Congregationalists and Baptists, etc. These influences have prevented stagnation and helped more or less to develop the inherent genius of the Mennonites. It is to be expected that doses of Kierkegard, Barth, Brunner, Berdjajew and Niebuhr could help to balance the spiritual and intellectual diet.

College and Seminary News

STANLEY JONES SPEAKS AT SEMINARY

This past week has been a very rich experience for everyone at Mennonite Biblical Seminary. Walter H. Dyck, Executive Secretary of the General Conference, spent the previous week-end with us following his participation in the Mennonite Central Committee meetings. Sunday morning he preached at the Mennonite Bible Mission and in the afternoon attended our Vesper Service.

A. E. Kreider, Chairman of the General Conference Mission Board, addressed the Vesper Service on October 19 and gave us a stirring challenge to answer the call coming from our mission fields. From here he went to the Western District Conference in Enid, Oklahoma. The Seminary was represented at this same conference by John T. Neufeld, Pastor of the Mennonite Bible Mission and Business Manager of this school.

On Wednesday Bishop George Lapp addressed the entire seminary student body on the challenge of missions in India. He served for almost forty years in that great mission field roughly paralleling the career of P. A. Penner, the pioneer General Conference missionary. Bishop Lapp served under the Old Mennonite Mission Board. He showed how Christianity has brought very splendid by-products to India in raising the general standard of health, education and moral living. On the other hand he pleaded for an out and out confession of Christ as a central part of missionary strategy. This address was something of an introduction to the E. B. Hoff Memorial Lectures presented by E. Stanley Jones, the renowned missionary and evangelist.

Jones Strikes Basic Evangelical Note

It was an unusually fine opportunity to discover in a series of six messages the basic direction of Dr. Jones' thought. His opening message was based on Titus 3:3-5. He gave a powerful presentation of the awful bondage of sin and God's answer through His grace and "the washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Spirit which He shed on us abundantly through Jesus Christ, our Saviour." The second message was an exposition of Acts 1:1-3. He indicated the seven bases of salvation for the Christian Gospel. First, the Word become flesh, second the Word become guidance, third the Word become vicarious in the atonement and the passion of Jesus Christ, fourth the Word become victorious in the resurrection of Jesus Christ, fifth the Word become final in the ascension of our Lord, sixth the Word become program in the total life of the church and the world through the Kingdom of God, and seventh the Word become power through the Holy Spirit. He declared that the Christian faith without the Holy Spirit is a counsel of perfection but that with the Holy Spirit the Christian faith and life are the only realistic basis for our walk through this world. The third message was a personal testimony about his own conversion and religious experience. He declared that his life was one long verification of his central belief in Jesus Christ. The fourth message was on the cross as the central fact of redemption, using the text from Revelation 13:8, "The lamb slain from the foundation of the world." He declared that the cross was both a once and for all event of salvation and also a principle of life which has existed from the foundation of the world.

The fifth lecture was from Romans 1:6 about Christians as those who have been called to belong to Jesus Christ. He declared that we are called to belong to Jesus Christ, and therefore the first law of life is self-surrender. Our task is to get hell out of sinful men and to get heaven into them.

His final message dealt with the situation in India in which he expressed his belief that missionary activity will be possible in the new independent India and, moreover, that it will permit both direct effort at conversion and Christian service activities. He declared that this is in the Indian constitution, but he said that we must go to India not only to teach but also to learn, to come now as friends and partners rather than masters.

As a direct outcome of his meetings, the students of Bethany Seminary started a twenty-hour prayer vigil praying for the conversion and revival of the church and those outside of the kingdom. Special intercession was made for world peace. This in brief was the presentation and the impact of E. Stanley Jones.

CANADIAN MENNONITE BIBLE COLLEGE ANNOUNCES WINTER TERM

The administration of the Canadian Mennonite Bible College is seeking to serve its people by announcing a special course for ministers, Sunday school workers, choir leaders, and young people who are interested in Christian service during the winter term, beginning with January 5 and ending March 25. Special teachers and lecturers will have a part in this course to make it a very attractive program for such who are interested in this work.

The quarter term plan as adopted by the College lends itself very favorably toward such a special course. Regular students can take advantage of these special courses while they continue their regular school work. Special students on the other hand can also come in and enroll in regular classes and finish certain courses during these slack winter months and receive full college credit for them if they have the necessary academic qualifications.

Many young people from the farm should be able to take advantage of this special offer. We hope that all who might be interested will write for further particulars and for the catalogue giving this information. Send your communications to the Canadian Mennonite Bible College, 103 Furby Street, Winnipeg, Manitoba.

BLUFFTON BOARD OF TRUSTEES CHANGES

The Board of Trustees met October 24. Action was taken looking toward the remodeling of College Hall and Science Hall. The composition of the Board was changed by constitutional amendment in such a way that no employed persons will now have voting power on the Board. This change also reduced the size of the voting Board and gives the representatives elected directly by church conferences a majority of the votes. Dr. Harry M. Gage, employed as a consultant, attended the Board meeting and spoke to the Board. The financial audit showed a balanced budget for the eighth consecutive year. Rev. Freeman Swartz, Pastor of the Mennonite Church at Schwenksville, Pennsylvania, was the chapel speaker October 24.

FOREIGN STUDENTS AT BETHEL

The Dean's office reports an enrollment of 439 students for the first quarter of this year. Six European students are attending Bethel as a part of the student exchange program of the Mennonite colleges. One of them, Leo Beck from Amsterdam, is here for his second year. Two, Albert Roland and Yvo Malan, are Waldensian students from northern Italy. The rest, Janke van Wijland, Jeanne Marie Craandijk, and Henk Ens, are Dutch students from various parts of the Netherlands. There is one native from India, Puran Banwar, studying here. Several missionary children from Africa and India are also enrolled. Approximately thirty Canadian students are included in the student body. Over one hundred of the Bethel students are second generation students; that is either one or both of their parents attended Bethel. The all-school play, "The Great Big Doorstep" will be given at Memorial Hall on November 7 and 8.

TWELVE MISSIONARIES MAY SAIL DURING NOVEMBER

ALLENTOWN, PA., October 22.—After what seems to have been many fruitless efforts to get reservations for missionaries, it seems that the doors opened wide all at once and November will be the month when many of our workers will be sent to the fields. Rev. and Mrs. J. R. Duerksen and daughter Lois, and Rev. and Mrs. Aron Jantzen and daughter Cynthia have reservations on the Marine Swallow, sailing from San Franicsco to Bombay, India, November 28. Rev. and Mrs. Edward Burkhalter and daughter Mary Kay, will leave New York on the Queen Mary for England, November 12. From England they will sail on the P & O steamer Strathmore November 21 for Bombay. Dr. and Mrs H. E. Dester will sail from New York on the steamer Escanaba Victory on November 12, bound for Bombay. Nor is this all, we are glad to say that we have reservations for Rev. and Mrs. Lester Wuthrich on the steamer Kenneth McKay from Houston, Texas, to Shanghai, November 23. Today, I received the passport from Brother W. C. Voth and immediately called the Travel Service, and they were confident that he too can leave on the same boat. We are waiting to hear from Washington concerning Miss Fast's passport, and should that return within the next few days, she might also be able to leave on the Kenneth McKay. We praise the Lord for the open doors.

Since last spring the Executive Secretary has made arrangements with the Hotel Latham, 4 East 28th St., New York, to have out-going missionaries, as well as returning missionaries, stop at the hotel. Many other mission boards use this hotel for this purpose. Should members of Conference desire to write a farewell note to the Desters and the Burkhalters, they can send the mail to this hotel. For Jantzens and Duerksens, write: c/o Marine Swallow, American President Lines, San Francisco—Howard G. Nyce, Executive Secretary.

Western District Conference Convened at Enid, Oklahoma, Oct. 22,23

The following is a brief, editorial review of the Fifty-Sixth Session of the Western District Conference, which convened at Enid, Oklahoma, October 22 and 23.

President Henry Hege, in his conference sermon, declared that the love of Christ must be the steel framework of all our building in order to hold us together and to enable us to withstand storm. In his welcome the Mayor of Enid suggested that it was his understanding that the Mennonite church was founded on self-discipline rather than on dogma, and that this self-discipline made for the kind of freedom on which democracy thrives. The Executive Committee recommended that a committee study the plan of a "Unified Budget" for Conference. The Committee also recommended the purchase of 500 copies of the new "101 Hymns from the Mennonite Hymnary" for conference use. B. H. Janzen, field worker, stressed the necessity of conference loyalty. The statistical report disclosed a membership of 12,552 and an average stewardship figure of $42.31. (Three new churches, with a total membership of 347, were admitted at Conference.) The question was raised as to whether the churches were adding enough members through evangelism? There seemed to be a feeling that we could improve in this, and W. F. Unruh pointed out that the Evangelism Committee of the General Conference would promote a special evangelism movement during November. August Epp, in reporting for the Minister's Pension Plan (General Conference), urged the lay members to push the plan. The Home Mission Committee asserted that "the most pressing need now, as it has been for the past few years, is for consecrated, conference-minded, trained pastors with which to supply our pastorless churches." The Committee also fosters Mennonite fellowships in large cities like Kansas City and others, and it arranges summer pastorates for ministerial students. The Board of Trustees would like to swell the amount of money in the Revolving Church Building Fund, which fund is drawn upon (loans) by small churches in building houses of worship. The Bethel College report showed a larger enrollment and senior class than ever before. The school will commemorate the sixtieth anniversary of the cornerstone laying of the Administration Building on October 12, 1948. The Peace Committee urged: 1: That lay members visit their congressmen relative to universal military training. 2. That the churches observe the Day of Prayer for Peace on November 9. 3. That a vigorous program of peace education be carried on in the churches so that the coming generation may not be as uninstructed as those caught in the wars of the past. The Committee is planning a peace institute for next summer. The Education Committee reported that another Bible School Workshop is planned for next spring. Another sub-report dealt with recommended books for children and with suggestions for beginning a church library. The young people reported that they were trying to raise five dollars per member for a retreat grounds project. J. H. Langenwalter, in a sub-report on the Kansas Council of Churches, pointed out how a small denomination like ours can make a constructive contribution to such a body as the Kansas Council. John T. Neufeld, reporting on the Mennonite Biblical Seminary, declared rejoicing that now the Mennonites can have an eloquent testimony for the gospel of peace in the sounding center of Chicago. He related that the Mennonite students have expressed admiration for courses and teachers of the Bethany Seminary. The Mutual Aid Board of the General Conference reported that it could function more adequately if it had more money to loan. In reporting on the Bethel Hospital and the Bethel Home for Aged, Mr. H. J. Andres stated, "What we as individuals, as institutions, as churches, and as a conference must always remember is that there is spiritual value in being sick and infirm, and there is a spiritual value in caring for those who are sick and infirm." Rev. A. E. Kreider in his talk on missions pointed out that there are about 100 General Conference missionaries now but that a steady stream of new workers is needed. In his talk on relief he revealed that there are about 300 Mennonite workers in seventeen countries, serving under an emblem on which there is a cross and some clasped hands. He urged that we go through our closets once more in the search for clothes for relief. Rev. J. N. Smucker, in some concluding remarks, exhorted those present to keep in the center of God's love.

At an afternoon meeting of the Women's Missionary Societies, Mrs. Arthur Friesen spoke on "Mission Work among the Indians in Oklahoma." At the evening meeting, open to all, Mrs. Frank Enns of the Congo Inland Mission of Africa spoke, and Rev. Walter Gering showed pictures of M.C.C. relief work in Europe. The young people had a banquet and evening program on the last day.

At the Ministers' Conference, held at Meno on October 21 a panel discussion on "The Minister and His Relation to His Fellow Ministers" resulted in a resolution urging the drawing up of a "code of ethics" for ministers. Henry Hege, in a topic on "The Minister and His Responsibility to the Community," stressed that ministers should be like Christ, who was not so much interested in what people were as in what they could be.

Rural Life Conference To Convene at Bethel College

In co-operation with McPherson College and Friends University, Bethel College is again inaugurating an annual Rural Life Conference which was interrupted by the war. The conference this year will be held on November 14 and 15 on the Bethel College campus beginning at 9:00 A. M. on November 14. Among the leaders of the conference will be Dr. Walter Kollmorgen, at the present time chairman of the Department of Geography at the University of Kansas. Mr. Kollmorgen is best known for his more than thirty studies of agricultural communities throughout the United States. Among them the study of the Old Order Amish community life and agricultural practices in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania. Mr. Kollmorgen for six years was an agricultural economist on the staff of the Bureau of Agricutural Economics under the United States Department of Agriculture.

Ralph Templin of Community Services, Incorporated, Yellow Springs, Ohio, will speak on the subject of decentralization. Mr. Templin served as the principal of a pioneering school in north central India from 1925 to 1940. During these years he experimented in education along the co-operative lines, developed at Antioch College at Yellow Springs, Ohio. For a number of years also Mr. Templin directed the School of Living at Suffern, New York. He is at the present time initiating a training center for a pattern of rural life for persons wishing to engage in part-time farming.

Stanley Hamilton, executive secretary of the Rural Life Association at Richmond, Indiana, will be present to discuss rural life activities in the midwest states.

In addition to these three men, James Elrod of McPherson, will discuss plans of the Church of the Brethren to help buy farms for its young people. Professor William Friesen of Bethel College will read a paper on an agricultural program for a liberal arts college. Mr. Friesen is instructor in agriculture and manager of the Bethel College farms.

The Bethel College dramatics society will present a pageant, "Giants of the Wasteland", on Friday evening, November 14, prior to the address by Dr. Walter Kollmorgen on "New Frontiers for Old Communities."

A special feature of the conference will be the dedication of the new Franz Farm Shop on the college campus. Among those who will speak in connection with this service are: President E. G. Kaufman; P. R. Kaufman, Instructor in Industrial Arts; Melvin Klaassen of Whitewater, Kansas, representing the students; Jonas Voran of Moundridge, Kansas, representing the parents; J. W. Fretz, Professor of Rural Sociology; and Dr. Walter Kollmorgen of the University of Kansas. Henry Franz of Lind, Washington one of the donors and representative of the Franz family, after whom the building is named, will respond.

Following the dedication of the building, members of the conference will visit the Bethel College farms.

On Saturday morning, November 15, conference guests will leave on a field trip for a visit to nearby communities. Among the places of interest to be visited are the Co-operative Feed Store, oil station, lumber yard, and creamery in Moundridge, as well as the privately owned Stucky and Sons Grocery Store. Following the visit to Moundridge a visit will be paid to the Goessel co-operative store, high school, hospital and churches in the community. The climax will be a visit to the Central Co-operative Creamery at Hillsboro, where the guests will eat lunch and return to the campus for the home coming football game between Bethel and Sterling colleges. There will be no registration fees. Guests wishing overnight accommodation should write immediately to J. W. Fretz at North Newton, Kansas.

GENERAL CONFERENCE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MET OCTOBER 24

Members of the General Conference Executive Committee met on October 24 at Newton, Kansas. Present at the meeting were J. N. Smucker, O. A. Krehbiel, A. E. Kreider, J. M. Regier, H. J. Andres, E. G. Kaufman, C. H. Goering, H. A. Fast, and W. H. Dyck. Both forenoon and afternoon sessions were held in the Staff Room, Bethel Deaconess Hospital, Newton, Kansas.

The Executive Committee reviewed the resolutions adopted at the General Conference at Berne, Indiana, August 20-27, 1947, and proceeded to put a number of these into effect. The appointment of Rev. Ben Esch, Washington, Illinois, to the Board of Home Missions, replacing Rev. W. B. Weaver, Danvers, Illinois, resigned, was heartily endorsed. The Historical Committee was enlarged to seven members. Vacancies created by the resignation of Rev. Paul Shelly and the death of Dr. A. Warkentin were filled. Additional appointments to the Historical Committee and the Pension and Minister's Aid Committee will be announced as soon as acceptance of these responsibilties has been confirmed.

It was decided that the 1948 Council of Boards Meeting should be held in the third week in February in Chicago. Details are to be sent to members of boards and committees. Plans for the Fourth Mennonite World Conference are going forward. The Brethren J. N. Smucker and H. A. Fast were designated by Executive Committee to represent General Conference interests in the setting up of the program. The M.C.C. has accepted the sponsorship of the World Conference.

The Brethren H. J. Andres, H. A. Fast, and C. H. Goering were reappointed as members of the Headquarters Office Consultative Committee.

The support of the Mennonite Biblical Seminary was encouraged through the following resolution: "That our congregations be encouraged to give our Mennonite Biblical Seminary and Mennonite Bible School of Chicago, Illinois, their prayerful and financial support, and that our churches include this school on their regular schedule of offerings." Steps to be undertaken in the active Stewardship Educational Campaign were evaluated.—Walter H. Dyck, Executive Secretary.

BETHEL COLLEGE CHURCH FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY SERVICES

by Eldon W. Graber

NORTH NEWTON, KANSAS. October 28.—The fiftieth anniversary of the Bethel College Church was celebrated Sunday October 26, with services lead by the Reverend Jesse N. Smucker, president of the General Conference, and Canon Theodore O. Wedel, Washington, D. C. Contributions totaling nearly five thousand dollars during the day brought the building fund for the new church to something over forty-six thousand dollars. ($50,000 or so if building lots are figured)

The Reverend Mr. Smucker, former pastor of the church, delivered the morning sermon in which he indicated that the Christian Church was under a cloud which the Church must dispel if it is to assume leadership in the coming age.

During the Sunday school hour Canon Wedel spoke on reminiscences of the early years of the church. He referred to the days of his childhood which were spent on the Bethel College campus during the time his father, the Reverend C. H. Wedel, served the church.

"Let your children see and hear you pray", stated the Canon as he spoke of the values gained by children from religious services.

The afternoon meeting was devoted to the history of the Bethel College Church, the educational, and the missionary work of the congregation. At this service the Reverend Mr. Smucker spoke on "The Task of the Christian Church Today."

Fellowship Meal Served In Evening

The fellowship meal in the dining room of the Memorial Hall was followed by the introduction of guests and visitors. Two of the charter members of the church, Mrs. Mary Wirkler Krehbiel and Miss Elizabeth Wirkler, were present for this meal.

The Bethel College Choir opened the evening's program with a concert that was followed with chorale singing by both audience and the Choir. The Reverend A. J. Dyck, chairman of the Board of Directors of Bethel College, presented the deed for the church building lot to Mr. A. D. Claassen, chairman of the Board of Trustees of the church.

The closing address, "The Wonder of the Christian Church," was given by Canon Wedel. His was a ringing appeal to join the Christian Church and to make use of the power which it was capable of giving. The meeting was brought to a close with a report of the financial contributions to the new church building program.

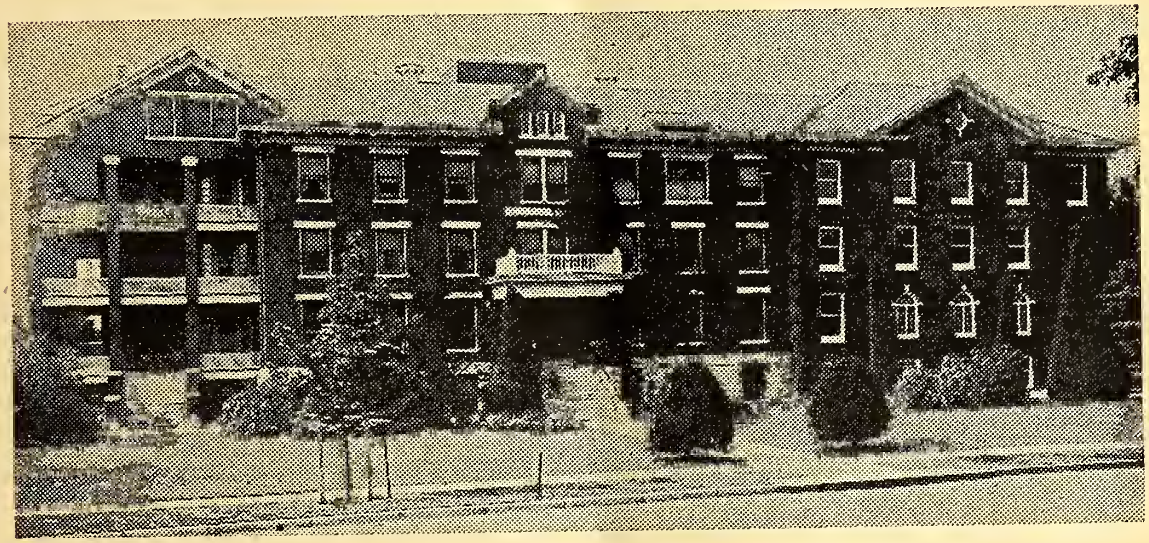
Within the Walls of Healing

(Student Nurses' Issue)



Within the walls of healing—Bethel Deaconess Hospital

I often wonder what goes on
Within the walls of healing.
Is all as calm and restful there
As would appear to vagrant eye
When night with peace is sealing
The long, dark corridors?

Hospital doors are friendly doors
But oh, how much they hide!
For there are many tears to dry
And pains to soothe, some fears to quell
Of those who come inside
These open doors.

But there is peace and rest, oh yes,
For here the Master loves to walk.
He understands, He shares the pain
Of all who come to Him and claim
His healing touch; who with Him talk,
And lay their every burden down within His keeping.

What meaneth then these walls of healing?
It is a place where skill of man
Is blended with the quickening touch
Of God. A partnership; a service
Unto Him and you—without a ban—
In love to all Humanity.

—Mrs. Orlando Schmidt, nee Ruth Wenger, one of our graduates.

Behold! He Is Here!

. . . . as our Creator

All about us we see evidences of God, our Creator. Behold the sky above us; its blue purity speaks of His truth. Behold the mountains, rugged, huge and strong; they speak of His strength and power. Who has not prayed with the Psalmist: "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help"? Behold the shimmering face of a quiet lake on a balmy summer day as it reflects the beauty of the sun on a thousand ripples; it testifies of His calm assurance. Behold a million tiny snowflakes, caressing the tiny fir tree until its boughs bend under the load of downy white; they tell of His beauty. Behold a stately pine, its head held proudly and its roots embedded firmly in the rocky soil of the mountainside; it speaks of His majesty. For surely, "the Lord made the heavens, honour and majesty are before Him; strength and beauty are His sanctuary." Behold a river, a crystal ribbon flowing on and on; its testimony is of His eternity. "Lord, thou hast been our dwelling place in all generations . . . even from everlasting to everlasting thou art God."

But in order to discover the wisdom of God we need to look beyond His ceration in nature. We find His infinite wisdom revealed in the crown of His creation, MAN. "And God said, Let us make man in our image . . . and so God created man in His own image." How could man ever regard life anything else but sacred after God had breathed into his nostrils His own breath? How could man ever violate the sanctity of life when he is created in His own image?

The human body likewise speaks of God's wisdom. Blest with a capable brain and adaptable hand, man has been able to put his genius into action; invention and discovery have brought cultural change after cultural change, and with cultural change has come improvement. God's desire for man that he "have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth" seems to be realized. God's wisdom is further demonstrated in the human body by the fact that many tiny cells unite to form tissues; tissues unite to form organs; organs of the body are under the direction of an intricate nervous system. Working in absolute harmony they perform the complicated body functions. Each organ performs its unique function in complete and effective harmony with the rest of the body. When enemies marshal their forces and invade the human body, it immediately begins an active campaign against the bacteria. When a bone is broken or a tissue is torn, the body begins repair. When parts begin to fail in the performance of their duties, other parts compensate for the ineffective parts. Thus each moment we live, the body is constantly testifying of the wisdom of the Almighty God. Little wonder that the Apostle Paul said: "Know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost?"

Looking beyond the body, we are aware of the existence of the soul of man. There we discover the virtues that come from God, kindness, generosity, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, hope, and love. It is a tragic fact that in the souls of many people sin has replaced these virtues of godliness with hate, fear, and selfishness. No wonder that today our world is suffering from hunger, war, poverty, disease, and broken hearts. Would that men today might give Christ room in their hearts and lives.

God, our Creator, with wisdom so infinite, so endless, has created us, body and soul. Can our souls find pleasure in dishonoring such a Maker? No, His exaltation must be our aim!—Florence Nachtigall, student nurse.

. . . . as our Companion

"Lo, I am with you alway," are the assuring words of our Master as He commissions His followers to be His witnesses. And He meant exactly what He said, for every day we are reminded of His help and enjoy the blessed companionship of a true friend.

Truly we are grateful for a Christian school of nursing, where Christ is upheld pre-eminently and where we can become better acquainted with Him through the teaching of His Word. As we leave the classroom after an hour of Bible study we are invigorated with new zeal to strive toward a higher goal. The daily morning evening group devotional periods and the Saturday evening Bible class aid in keeping within us the consciousness that He, whom we serve, is with us.

Not only do the periods of fellowship with Christ cause us to rejoice in His abiding presence, but our knowledge that He is our source of strength enables us to enter upon the problems of each day courageously. There is the patient who has no hope of recovery, and who feels that there is nothing left for him to enjoy. To him all is despair and suffering. How could I face him smiling and suffering. How could I face him smiling, if I could not breathe a prayer for guidance to speak the cheering words he so needs? One nurse was especially burdened for a man, who was suffering from an incurable disease. She knew he must soon go to meet his Maker, and she also knew that he was not a Christian. She paused long in meditation and prayer one evening before entering his room, asking God to speak through His Word. After she had finished the devotional reading and prayer, he brokenly asked if he might pray. The prayer of penitence and confession of sins which ascended to God in that sickroom shall never be forgotten. Her Companion, Christ, aided her to point another soul to Him.

"I would hate to face the problems of each day without Christ as my companion," is the testimony of every Christian nurse.—Erma Zook, student nurse.

. . . . as our Physician

"They that are whole have no need of a physician but they that are sick." Mark 2:17

Let us pause for a moment and see what the physicians are doing. The verse just quoted tells us they are needed by those who are ill. We cannot help but marvel at the wonders science has discovered in the field of medicine. Yet more marvelous is the fact that there are those who willingly apply themselves that they might know how to administer correctly these helpful, in some respects dangerous drugs, in order that the sick might be made whole. Physicians draw admiration from the oldest to the youngest, for they are the ones to whom we may go when illness comes to weaken us physically and discourage us mentally.

As nurses, our responsibility to the doctors is to carry out their orders promptly and accurately. Sometimes the physical life of a patient depends on whether or not these orders are carried out. What shame and remorse would attend us should we fail the physician and the patient at this point!

Have we ever considered the thought that we have one Physician that is greater than those we confide in when we are ill. He is Christ, who healeth all our diseases. Just as our physicians have left orders for us to carry out, so also has our Great Physician left orders for us to take care of. "Go ye . . . . and preach the Gospel to all." This is the order He has left us. Do we obey promptly for the welfare of human beings or are these orders not our concern? Scores of men are dying daily without being told of One Who can heal their sin-sick souls. Is it nothing to you my friend?—Viola Regier, student nurse.

I Serve Him Because:

I serve Him because He is a wonderful Master and Lord.

How happy I am that the Lord not only saved me, but that He keeps and satisfies me. It is so wonderful to trust the One Who has made us, knowing that He has a special plan for our lives and will make them beautiful and worthwhile if we will only let Him.

I was afraid to surrender my life to my Lord, fearing that He would ask me to do things which were impossible for me to do, and that He would send me places where I would be terribly unhappy. Since then I have found that He never asks the impossible of us because as His children, we can do all things through Christ. He has said, "My grace is sufficient for thee for my strength is made perfect in weakness." It is when I feel the greatest need of Him that His strength is manifested and He floods my soul with gladness.

He has also shown me that when He calls His children to do a task, He gives them joy in doing it. If we are willing to let Him, He can change even our desires to fit His plan for our lives.

My Lord supplies His children's every need. In Phil. 4:19 we read, "And my God shall supply all your needs according to His riches in glory by Christ Jesus." This includes all our physical and spiritual needs.

It is the life for Christ that really counts and satisfies. We are told in Isa. 58:10-11 "If thou draw out the soul to the hungry and satisfy the afflicted soul, then shall thy light rise in darkness and thine obscurity be as the noon day; and the Lord shall guide thee continually and satisfy thy soul in dry places."

Knowing and witnessing all these things, how could I possibly keep from loving and serving my wonderful Lord!—Mary Richert, student nurse.

So you want to know why I serve Christ? Well, suppose we turn to God's Word for the answer, to a verse everyone knows. Yes, you guessed it; it's John 3:16, "For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

Did you ever stop to think what it cost God to give his Son for us? Or did you ever think about the price Jesus paid, when He left the glories of heaven for the shame and suffering of this world? What matchless love He must have to have borne my sins for me!

Then too, I read in the Bible a command of Jesus, "as my Father hath sent me, even so send I you." Am I to overlook this? Should I be disobedient to One Who gave His all for me? Knowing that my Master gave His life in death upon the cross for me, could I do less then yield my life to Him for service?

"I met Him, and knew Him, and blushed to see,
That His eyes full of sorrow were fixed upon me,
And I faltered and fell at His feet that day,
While my castles melted and vanished away.

"Melted and vanished, and in their place,
Naught else did I see but the Master's face,
And I cried aloud: "Oh, make me meek,
To follow the steps of thy wounded feet."

"My thoughts are now for the souls of men,
I have lost my life to find it again,
E'er since that day in a quiet place,
When I met my Master, face to face."

But, you say, what gain do you get from serving Christ? There's no money, no high position or popularity. Just what do you get in return for your service?

My friend, there's a life of peace, a knowledge of work "well done," and joy and happiness that are immeasurable. Nothing can bring greater happiness than serving the Lord Jesus Christ, knowing that someday we shall see Him "face to face" and reign with Him throughout eternity.

And how can you better serve Him than by ministering to His sick and needy children? Is there any privilege greater than relieving pain and physical discomfort as you strive to minister to spiritual needs also?

My God is good, and I serve Him because He first gave Himself for me.—Elaine Stewart, student nurse.

Why do I serve? I would say with Paul in Phil. 1:20, "According to my earnest expectation and my hope that in nothing I shall be ashamed, but that with all boldness as always, so now also Christ shall be magnified in my body, whether it be by life or by death."

Our Master said, "it is more blessed to give than to receive." Why should it not also be so in our service? Should we seek only to be served? Should we not rather seek to yield our lives to Him and serve Him in serving our fellowmen?

". . Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone: but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit." John 12:24.—Ruth Neufeld, student nurse.

Therefore We Serve Him

"If you love Him, why not serve Him," questions the "Climbing Jacob's Ladder" chorus that youth loves to sing. Eph. 5:2 instructs, "and walk in love, as Christ also hath loved us." How evident is this love when the patient requests, "Will you please loan my radio and magazines to the patient next door? He sighs so heavily"! Grateful indeed is the receiver. Later he visits his friend and asks, "You and the others around me have something that I don't have. What is it?" To a student nurse, he queried, "What makes you so happy?" He received the answer, the only true answer: "Christ." Therefore we serve Him, for He is love.

"He gives me joy in place of sorrow—and beauty for ashes here." Two ambulatory patients visit a fellow patient, and together with the nurse, enjoy sweet fellowship reading His word and praying. They will leave strengthened in the bonds of happy fellowship. Calmed by sedatives a lad, whose wounds have been dressed, states confidently "Jesus will help me. Doctor, will you pray too?" The doctor assures him of the need of much prayer in his life too. Therefore we serve Him, for He brings true happiness!

We serve Him here at Bethel, because prayers brought us to this field of service. Students and visitors at Sarepta often view the pictures of graduate students and sisters that fill the walls of the long hall. We realize they are furthering their service in diverse ways. Listen again to His bidding:

"Go, labor on, Spend and be spent.
Thy joy to do the Father's will.
It is the way the Master went;
Should not the servant tread it still?"

Finally, we serve Him here because it gives us the privilege to live in wholesome surroundings with Christians. With sisters and fellow students we share our Saviour, thus allowing Him to prepare us for further service. We worship together — we play together. Yet in the midst of it all, the telephone may ring—one hears the scurrying of hurried feet—and catches the last glimpse of two nurses running back to the hospital to serve! It makes no difference whether the emergency comes day or night; for to say, "Behold! He is here," we must serve joyfully at any time in any situation.

Will you pray with us for nursing care which would edify His name? Then only can we confidently say, "Behold! He is here."—Sarah Boehr, student nurse.

O Church of Christ

by

Dorothy A. Krehbiel

O Church of Christ,
Lift high the cross,
To show to all
His great redeeming grace;
That in His love
So freely given,
There is no barrier
To any race.

O Church of Christ,
Show forth the peace,
That He doth give Unto His own;
And may we thus
Filled with His love,
Clasp hands in peace,
His way make known.

Conviction and Tolerance

Can I as a Christian have convictions for which I am willing to live and die, and at the same time maintain an attitude of Christian love and understanding toward those who offend me by having beliefs different than mine?

The experience of the Christian Church shows what a profound and difficult problem this is. There were and are among us those who go to the extreme of saying that their convictions are absolutely true and in the name of Christ try with any means available to eliminate "error." Our Mennonite forefathers once experienced what an extreme expression of this zeal could mean.

Then, particularly in recent centuries, there have been and are those who pride themselves in not taking a critical attitude toward other beliefs. These would say, "What I believe is truth for me, and what you believe is truth for you." When life's crises come, however, these people have often found that they have lost the ability to tell truth from falsehood.

Furthermore, we Christians often seem to act as if we thought it impossible to have convictions and tolerance at the same time. We tend to divide our fellow Christians into one or the other of these groups: if our brother speaks with strong conviction some of us say he has spiritual pride; if he speaks for tolerance and understanding some of us say he has no convictions.

Could it be possible that in some measure both attitudes are necessary? As a suggestion: The truth of God is revealed in Christ and in Holy Scripture. God expects me to search seriously and ask for the fullest understanding of it, and expects me to live by the convictions I have. But the revelation of God is infinitely greater than my understanding alone can encompass. There is the possibility that another may grasp some part of truth I have not seen. At any rate, he should merit my Christian respect and a serious consideration of his position. Does the solution perhaps lie in this direction?—Paul Albrecht graduated with highest distinction from Bethel College last spring and is now a student at Chicago Theological Seminary.

On Preaching

"Preach the Word." Here we have an injunction relevant to all bearers of the Good News of God. "Preach the Word' is directed with apostolic urgency to the ministry in the General Conference, as well as to all ministers of the universal Church. It is our duty "by the foolishness of preaching," by God's wisdom, "to save them that believe." (I Cor. 1:21) In preaching we are concerned with the message of God for man. We say it is a simple gospel, and so it is; but in our preaching in the past and in the present, there has, sad to say, been much carelessness masqueraded in the name of simplicity. Our "simplicity" in the pupit has cost us the respect of honest, straight thinking people. Simple preaching in too many instances has meant indifference to the greatest commission God gives men. It dare not be so if men and women shall be found for God through preaching. A deep sense of devotion, like that of St. Paul, coupled with God-given scholarly insight, like that of St. John, must always have a bearing upon the Spoken Word. The Church has a message for our time. Preaching the Word must not lull our people to sleep, but make their hearts burn within them as they leave the place of worship to toil at the tasks of life.—Wesley C. Ewert is pastor of the First Mennonite Church, Philadelphia, Pa.

FULL TIME CHRISTIAN SERVICE

"Full time Christian service" is a term frequently used to designate those who are engaged in full time service of the Church. It is unfortunate that this meaning has been given to the term, as all Christians, regardless of their occupation or profession, should make it the aim of their life to uphold the principles of Christianity in all their business or social contacts.

The layman has an opportunity for full time Christian service when he buys or sells, when he works or plays, when he offers counsel as a physician, teacher, lawyer or banker. We reach people who do not have a contact with the church or a pastor, and therefore we can make an impression which the pastor cannot, as much as he would like to do so. We can prove that we are Christian by our dealings.

As laymen, we too must render full time service to our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.—Walter H. Temple.

THE CHURCH CHRISTMAS PROGRAM

by Joanna S. Andres

Because inquiries regarding Christmas program suggestions have come to me, I would like to pass on one dominant thought.

That our churches have barred the door to the lighter themes that surround our Santa, the mistletoe, the holly, and are holding fast to the true spirit of Christmas—the joy of the holy birth of God's Son, is something to be truly grateful for.

Without doubt each committee whose privilege it becomes to plan for the Christmas program is very conscious of this vital theme around which the program for the celebration of His birth must be built.

Sometimes, however, in the building of our Christmas programs, no matter how carefully the various songs and recitations are selected as to thought content, the end result of the program in its final performance becomes child-centered rather than Christ-centered.

Unwantedly the program committee finds that the child is being made the center of attraction as he or she steps out to "perform." Sometimes the child's performance even brings forth a laugh if he is small and has been quite natural in some side-performance. And the parents return home that evening, deeply satisfied with their child.

The Sunday school Christmas program, which is really the church Christmas program, is one time in the year when even the child must step back and the Christ alone step forth to be loved and worshiped and adored!

We have other days for the child: there is promotion day, children's day, mother's day. Christmas belongs to the Christ alone! He must be enthroned in one grand mass service of praise and worship.

How can this be done? The entire Sunday school must join in, all the choirs of the church taking part, and even the Christmas audience joining in the singing of some familiar hymn, such as the beloved "Silent Night," and this by just a motion of the choir leader's baton.

Such a program requires practice. One hour for six Sunday afternoons is sufficient to perfect a worship celebration which could begin with the solo "Open the Gates of the Temple" and close with the great "Hallelujah Chorus."

A skeleton outline for such a service could be: Annunciation, The Nativity, Application, Adoration. The program would consist of scripture and song—the scripture spoken in mass voices, sometimes all participating, sometimes a single department of Sunday school. Two leaders are needed: one to lead the singing, the second to coach the speaking portions. O come let us adore Him!

Each new Christmas cometh
Christchild down to earth,
Bringing joy and gladness
In His holy birth.

Waiting hearts He enters,
Leaves His blessing there;
With His constant presence
Guides them everywhere.

E'en to me Thou comest
Blessed Christchild mine!
In Thy love Thou keepest
Me forever Thine.

Comments on the World Conference of Christian Youth

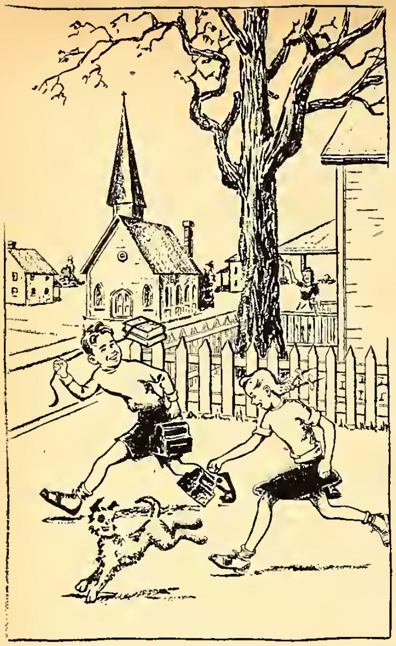
by Lester Hostetler

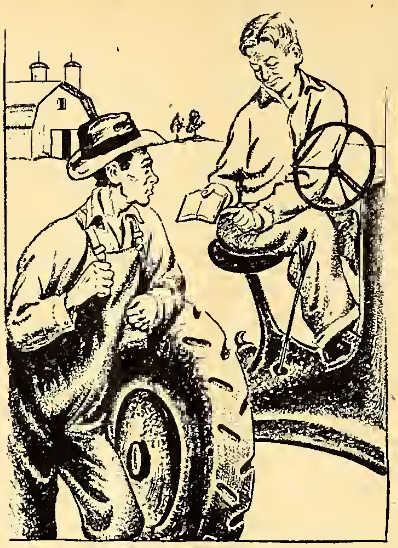
The World Conference of Christian Youth, held in July in the city of Oslo, Norway, bringing together 1200 delegates from seventy-three countries, is of more than usual significance to the Christian Church. It was an episode in the drama of world Christianity which throws light on the opportunities as well as the problems of the Church today.

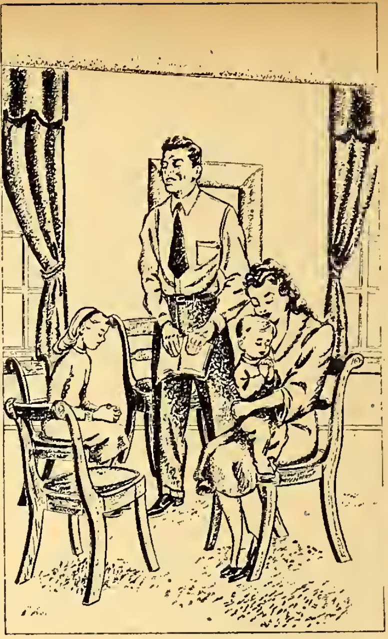
The facts that the conference, representing churches and Christian youth organizations from so many countries—victor and vanquished—was able to meet just two years after the most devastating war in history, is nothing short of a miracle. It is the miracle of the Christian fellowship. Divided by surface barriers such as race and tongue and color of skin, each with nationalistic loyalties, the Christian people of the world have yet many things in common. They have a common consciousness of sin and guilt, longing for salvation and a conviction that Jesus is the Lord of life. The Oslo Conference, as reported by our Mennonite representative, Robert Kreider, and others, was colorful and varied. There was a "confusion of tongues." But there was also a broad Christian fellowship which resulted in the clearing away of misunderstandings and a new appreciation of those "not of us."

There evidently were no easy solutions offered for the world problem. While there was expressed a common abhorrence of war and the frightening possibilities of a new world war, no prophetic voice was raised to challenge youth to a radically new way of life. The young people learned, as all of must, that there is no easy, ready-made remedy for the ills of the world. The theme of the Conference, "Jesus Christ Is Lord," was studied and discussed from various angles, but it evidently remains for some future leader to see clearly what the Lordship of Jesus means in international life and to lead the Christian people of the nations from the

EVANGELISM







THROUGH THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

by John T. Neufeld

The Santa Fe train on which I am riding from Newton to Chicago has slowed down and also made some lengthy stops because of the dense fog.

The world is in a fog, and many institutions and organizations are puzzled as to which way to turn. The church, however, has definite instructions on how to proceed even in a fog. The train is beginning to move again; so let us move forward in this campaign of evangelism through the Sunday school and the Church.

Jesus said: "There shall be wars and rumors of wars, but the end is not yet . . . .The gospel must be preached . . . ."

We present in this issue three pictures. These are miniatures of posters that now being used in the Sunday school. These same pictures will also appear on three separate tracts entitled: Someone Is Missing, Your Neighbor, and Plowing for God. Each one of these should be an inspiration to every Christian. Your Sunday school superintendent can obtain these tracts from the Evangelism Committee, 4614 Woodlawn Avenue, Chicago, 15, Illinois. The price is seventy-five cents per hundred.

As I am writing this the sun has come and the fog is disappearing. The light of the gospel is the only thing that will chase the fog away. Let us go forward in the name of Christ.—The Evangelism Committee, John T. Neufeld, J. J. Enz, and William F. Unruh.

bondage of a militaristic philosophy to the freedem which is in Christ. The world problem will not be solved by "starry-eyed idealists" or by easy slogans but by the realities of a Person—Christ crucified. The Cross amazes and perplexes men and causes them to shrink from it. Our eyes have been on a crown rather than a Cross. The United States delegates, largest in number at the Conference, discovered to their amazement, and even resentment, that some people in the world look upon our great "Christian America" as a dangerous, selfish, empire-building power!

Many of the delegates learned, somewhat to their dismay, that the Christian fellowship represents but a small minority of the world's population. Robert Kreider reports that only 10 per cent of the people in Denmark attend worship services, even though 98 per cent of the population are members of the Lutheran Church. Virtually the same condition prevails in Norway, while in France only about 1 per cent of the population is active in the Protestant church. While Christianity has indeed gone to the ends of the earth, the Christian teaching has not permeated the life and thinking of the of the majority of the people. There remains a great missionary task to challenge us. The structure of our so-called Christian civilization is crumbling. Youth confronts grave problems and there is much pessimism abroad. But youth is also challenged with incomparable opportunity. The Oslo Conference and the Amsterdam Conference held eight years earlier, just before the outbreak of the war, are but the beginning, we trust, of a world fellowship of young people which will continue to grow and find its common salvation and that of the world at the foot of the Cross.

One Hundredth Anniversary of the East. Dist. Conf.

by J. H. Fretz

The One Hundredth Anniversary of the Eastern District Conference is now past! On Sunday afternoon, October 26, about 300 Mennonites and friends journeyed back over the six roads to Skippack, the birthplace of the Eastern District Conference. The meeting was begun with the singing of "Holy God, we Praise Thy Name," after which the chairman of the day, Walter Temple, Deacon of the historic Germantown Congregation, made a few fitting remarks, stating that the meeting was to be a fellowship between all Mennonite groups and Christians. Freeman Swartz then explained in brief the souvenir programs which had been published for the occasion. The devotions were in charge of Henry Johnson, minister of the local congregation. The Vice Chairman of Conference, Ellis Graber, gave words of greeting and conducted the Men's Chorus from Souderton in two appropriate numbers. Old hymnbooks used in the Conference were displayed by William Shelly of First Philadelphia Congregation, who also commented on our past hymnology. Those in attendance at this meeting will never forget the German singing led by Edwin Meyers of the Deep Run Congregation of the Franconia Conference. Two hymns, "Lobe den Herren" and "Befiehl! Du Deine Wege" which have come down to us through all our hymnbooks, were sung heartily by the congregation. The remainder of the meeting included messages from the following visiting brethren: Melvin Bishop, Enos Wismer and Quintus Leatherman of the Franconia Conference Mennonites; the brethren, Brunner and Baer of the Mennoite Brethren in Christ. Brother Slotter of the Lutheran Church; Elmer Johnson of the Schwenkfelder Church and Henry Johnson of the local Skippack Congregation. After the meeting old publications of the Conference and the Oberholtzer Bible were exhibited.

On Monday the Quarterly Conference of the Eastern District met at Schwenksville. In the afternoon a paper entitled, "The Sermonizing of Our Early Ministers" was read by J. H. Fretz, following which the older members assembled recounted many interesting and amusing anecdotes remembered about John Oberholtzer, Moses Gottshall, Christian Clemmer and other early conference ministers. In the evening J. N. Smucker, Chairman of General Conference, gave an interesting exposition on Jude before the assembled conference.

The main historical meeting was held on the anniversary date October 28, and in the same building, the historic Skippack Meetinghouse, where just 100 years before, a group of eleven Mennonite ministers and deacons, led by John Oberholtzer, met to organize the Eastern District Conference. A large crowd again pilgrimaged to Skippack to attend this unique meeting. James Gerhart, Chairman of the Historical Committee, was chairman of the evening. The devotions were conducted by Seward Rosenberger, one of the older ministers of conference. Three messages were delivered during the evening. J. N. Smucker gave a very challenging message on the task of the Church, using the letters of the word, "Church" for his outline. He emphasized that the Church is to Conserve the good, Herald the gospel, Unite a disunited world, Release men from sin and release the power of God, Challenge the best in man and Heal the wounds of mankind. A young girl's chorus from West Swamp, led by Mrs. William Sell, furnished the special music for the evening. Following this, Howard G. Nyce, chairman of conference spoke on Ps. 16:7, speaking on his heritage and early experiences in the church. Freeman Swartz presented the historical address of the evening on the subject of "Constitutionalism among the East Pennsylvania Mennonites." He showed how Oberholtzer's written constitution occasioned the unfortunate 1847 division and furthermore how it affected the Hunsicker Schism, the organization of the Canadian Conference, the Skippack withdrawal, the Evangelical Mennonite Schism and early mission work in Ohio. Brother Swartz closed his address with a plea for more brotherliness and recognition between Mennonite groups. The meeting closed with the spirited singing of the German hymn "Grosser Gott, Wir Loben Dich" led by David Allebach of the Plain Mennonite Congregation, near Lansdale, Pennsylvania.

Not only is Skippack, where these anniversary gathings were held significant in Eastern District History. It is the ancestral home for all Mennonites of Eastern Pennsylvania. Skippack was the second settlement of Mennonites in Pennsylvania, being established in 1702. Especially in the years around 1710 to 1740, Mennonites settled here or pushed beyond to its infant out-lying settlements, making up what is now known as the Franconia and Eastern District Conferences. It was here at Skippack that Christopher Dock, the famous Mennonite Schoolmaster held his pioneer school. Abraham Hunsicker, one of the early conference ministers from Skippack founded Freeland Seminary in 1848, the first school of higher education in America conducted by Mennonites. In 1851 Hunsicker and others, separated from the Skippack Congregation to begin independent work, and in 1861 the Skippack Congregation itself withdrew from the conference and has remained independent ever since. The One Hundredth Anniversary of the Eastern District is over, but in the hearts of those who attended shall remain happy memories of the challenging messages, the brotherly spirit, the German singing, and the inspiration to go forth in the work of the Lord!

"YE VISITED ME"

In Matthew 25 we have the scene of the Judgment. Those on the right hand were commended because they had given definite evidence of their Christian faith and concern by doing deeds of kindness and love to those that were less fortunate. Christ accepted these evidences of concern as done unto Him.

The Board of Home Missions, in cooperation with the Relief Board, has directed the sending of 1000 copies of Der Bote to that many homes of our brethren in their situation of distress. Some of the copies are to be sent to homes in Europe, but the majority go to homes in Paraguay.

A few of our brethren have been able to go as representatives of our relief organizations to visit and encourage these people, but for the vast majority of us this is impossible. Even if it were possible for many of us to go in person to visit these refugees who are now being settled in Paraguay, it would almost constitute a hardship.

We have a substitute that can go and visit these heroic people each week. You can have a definite part in supporting this substitute by sending a subscription of $2 to "Der Bote Free Subscription Fund." Send in your subscription to General Conference Headquarters, 722 Main Street, Newton, Kansas. In Canada send money to Rev. G. G. Epp, Rosthern, Saskatchewan. Rev. Epp is member of the Board of Home Missions.

Can we do this as a Thanksgiving gift and send it in before November 26, 1947? Thank you. In the Name of Christ, A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary, Board of Home Missions.

College and Seminary News

EDMUND MILLER ACCEPTS PRESIDENCY OF FREEMAN JUNIOR COLLEGE

Because of his long felt desire to devote more of his time to teaching, President J. D. Unruh has on several occasions requested the Board of Trustees to relieve him of his administrative duties. This request was finally granted, and at the October 3 meeting of the Board of Trustees, Rev. Edmund J. Miller, Chicago was elected President of Freeman Junior College, effective June 1, 1948. Rev. Miller was present at the Board session and formally accepted the position.

Miller was born in Freeman, graduated from the Junior College, and then transferred to Bethel College where he received his A. B. degree in 1935. He has also attended Biblical Seminary in New York, Western Baptist Seminary in Portland, Oregon, and Moody's Bible Institute. He is finishing his work for the B. D. degree at Mennonite Biblical Seminary, Chicago, at the end of the present school term.

Rev. Miller's varied experiences will be helpful to him in his new position. While at Biblical Seminary in New York, he served for a year as Director of Religious Education in the Russian Mission and for a year as Associate Pastor and Director of Young People's work of the Olivet Memorial Church, New York City. He then moved to Portland, Oregon, where for three years he served as pastor to the Alberta Mennonite Community Church. Then followed some six years in the pastorate of the Menno Mennonite Church at Lind, Washington. For the past year he has served as Field Secretary for the Mennonite Biblical Seminary at Chicago.

Mrs. Miller, formerly Christine Oakes, Rochester, New York, is at present working on her master's degree in religious education. She has served for some time as the editor of the Junior Quarterly of the General Conference. The Miller's with their three-year-old son Jon, will occupy one of the apartments in the boy's dormitory now in the process of construction. We will, with all of our many school friends, pray for the Millers a rich and blessed ministry in this important work in God's Kingdom.

SEMINARY SERVES AND IS SERVED

Dr. S. F. Pannabecker is conducting meetings at the Zion Mennonite Church, Souderton, Pa. Nov. 2-6. Marvin Dirks has special meeting during the same period at Hutchinson, Kansas. The Seminary quartet, David Habegger, Irvin Richert, Alvin Franz and James Mason conducted the service at Pekin, Illinois, November 2 and then journeyed to Peoria, Illinois to sing at the Central Conference C. E. Rally in which Rev. Don. E. Smucker was the speaker.

Very generous gifts of food were contributed recently by brethren from the Dalton and Pandora churches in Ohio; the Normal, Danvers, and Carlock congregations in Illinois and the Eighth Street church of Goshen, Indiana. The Illinois food was brought in a trailer hitched to the car of Missionaries Vernon and Lilly Sprunger of the Congo Inland Mission here on furlough. Brother Sprunger attended Bethany Biblical Seminary on a previous furlough.

SPRINGSTEIN CHURCH GIVES LIBERALLY TO CANADIAN MENNONITE BIBLE COLLEGE

Several week ago, a truck with three students went out to the neighboring Mennonite community of Springstein to return with a heaping load of potatoes, vegetables and canned goods. One could not believe one's eyes to see the generosity which these dear friends showed the students of our College in so graciously supplying for the needs of the winter.

On Sunday, October 12, the whole student body went to Springstein to render a "thank you" program The theme for the evening was. "We would see Jesus." The College Choir, under the direction of Mr. J. Conrad, rendered several numbers. Student speakers for the evening were: John Siemens, Herschel, Saskatchewan, and Hugo Hildebrand, Winnipeg. Readings, quartet numbers, and a solo by Miss Annetta de Graaff of Holland, comprised the remainder of the program. Bill Dick, Leamington, Ontario, acted as chairman.

Following the program the ladies of the church served a lovely lunch and presented the students with a large box of zwieback, cake, etc., upon leaving. The college is grateful for the opportunity to serve and fellowship with churches of our Conference. It is our hope that God's name can be glorified in this manner.

STANLEY JONES TO SPEAK AT BLUFFTON

The first number on the Bluffton College Concert Series was given by Roena Savage, Negro Soprano, November 10. The second number will be Bill Palmer, Accordion, December 9. "The Messiah" will be given Sunday afternoon, December 14, at 2:30 in the High School Gymnasium, by the Bluffton College Choral Society. President Ramseyer attended a meeting of the presidents of Ohio Colleges in Granville, Ohio November 4, 5. Rev. Harry Yoder carried on solicitation work in the interest of the Building Fund in Summerfield, Illinois, and Fortuna, Missouri, recently. Dr. E. Stanley Jones is to be a chapel speaker December 9. Bible lectures open November 16, with Dr. Charles T. Fritsch of Princeton Theological Seminary the speaker. Dr. Fritsch gave a series of lectures at the Dallas Theological Seminary last year.

THE CHAPEL HOUR AT BETHEL

The students enjoy the variety of inspirational and educational programs brought to them during the daily morning chapel hour. Reports from all over the world by travelers, missionaries, and natives of foreign countries such as Missionary S. T. Moyer from India, Menno Schrag who has recently returned from a tour of Palestine and the Near East, and Dr. van der Zijpp, a Dutch Mennonite minister from Rotterdam, are interesting and informative. Addresses are often given by local ministers and civic leaders such as Rev. Irving Faust, pastor of the Newton Congregational Church, and George Wilkins, city manager of Newton. Many times members of the college faculty address the assembly, giving the students the opportunity to become better acquainted with their teachers. President Kaufman speaks regularly on Monday morning. The Friday morning music chapel hour is greatly appreciated by the student body. Often local faculty or student musical talent is presented in these weekly concerts.

SEMINARY ANNOUNCES VESPER SPEAKERS FOR COMING MONTHS

Dr. S. F. Pannabecker, Acting President of Mennonite Biblical Seminary in Chicago, has just announced the list of Vesper speakers for the next few months.

The Vesper Services of the Seminary have been organized in cooperation with the Mennonite Student Fellowship which has met informally for a number of years. At present the members of this fellowship attend the Vesper Services and occasionally meet separately following the meeting. This fellowship includes Mennonite people of various conferences and background throughout the city.

Thus far, Dr. L. L. Ramseyer of Bluffton College has spoken on "The Student Tour of Europe." Dr. S. F. Pannabecker has presented a lecture on "Scenes from Mennonite Theological Education," and Rev. A. E. Kreider, Chairman of the Foreign Mission Board of the General Conference, spoke on "Mission Field Churches in the Light of the War." Mr. Orie O. Miller, Executive Secretary of the Mennonite Central Committee, spoke on November 9 on "The World Program of the M. C. C."

At subsequent meetings the following speakers will address the vesper group. Rev. J. T. Neufeld of the Mennonite Bible Mission, who is also Business Manager of the Mennonite Biblical Seminary, speaks on November 23 on "A Fixed Faith for a Troubled World." Rev. D. E. Smucker of the Seminary speaks on December 7 on "The Theological Situation in the Mennonite Church." On December 21 there will be a Christmas program at the Seminary Home, 4614 Woodlawn Avenue, by the seminary children. Resuming the regular cycle of programs Mr. Menno Schrag, Editor of the Mennonite Weekly Review, will address the group on January 18 on the topic, "Glimpses of the Holy Land." Rev. Marvin Dirks of the faculty speaks on February 1 on "The Philippine Internment in Retrospect."

These services are held at 3:00 p.m. at the Kenwood New Church, 46th and Woodlawn, which is adjacent to the Seminary buildings. The first half of the program consists of worship service including hymn singing, scripture, prayer, and an anthem by the seminary choir directed by Rev. Marvin Dirks. The second part of the program is an address on some topic of wide interest to Mennonite people. The programs are open to the public, and interested individuals are cordially invited. At a later date speakers for the remainder of the year will be announced.

P. J. Boehr Tells of Latest Move

KAIFENG, HONAN, CHINA, September 30.— We read in the Word that, "The steps of a good man are ordered of the Lord, and He delighteth in his way." We also believe that "the stops" are ordered of the Lord; and so while we were so anxiously thinking of a way to get away from here to go to West China, an air-route has begun operations from Chengchow, the railroad center about sixty miles west of here. We were just getting ready to go west to Chenkchow by rail, from there south to Hankow, thence by Yangtze river steamer westward to Ch 'ungking (Szechuan Province) and finally on north from there by autotruck for five to six days over mountainous roads to our new field, Paochi, Shensi Province. Now, however, this air-route can take us straight acrass country and straight west to Sian, capital of Shensi Province. The reason for opening this air-route is that the railroad to the west has been broken, bridges destroyed, and even tunnels blown up, so that there is great uncertainty about getting railroad traffic started before the end of the year.

The rail-river-auto-truck round-about trip from here to Paochi would require about three weeks travel. We believe the total cost for personnel and goods would possibly be as high or higher than personnel travel and goods transport from here by air by the direct route. And so we are definitely negotiating for a cargo plane to pick up our goods here at Kaifeng airfield and take as many as are permitted of the people who are to go. The rest will then go by passenger plane from Chengchow, God leading, on the regular run which has lately been inaugurated between Chengchow and Sian. They have plane service thrice a week.

Our great wish now is that the Lord may lead us graciously and expeditiously, so that we can get started there at Paochi and can get some rooms ready for the returning missionaries. We still believe we will be able to receive those who can come, and we wish to extend a welcome to them and a God-speed!

The Communist movement has been spreading in the meantime. Just a few days Ch'hsien, Honan, was occupied by them, but Dr. Hu and family got out once again "on time." He and his family live here in the same compound where we are. Even Paochi had a "scare" we hear, but word has reached here that "all's well" there again. In fact, we are surrounded here by "the other side," and the railroad to the east has been out of repair often the last few weeks account of internal strife. The Russian Mennonites hope to leave here this week by rail, but they may

M.C.C. Discusses Further Migration of Mennonite Refugees

AKRON, PA. October 31.—Plans for further helping Mennonite refugees in Europe to move to new homelands was discussed in the Special MCC meeting in Chicago on October 18, and a common willingness to move forward in this work was evident. It is possible that some financial assistance can be secured from the International Refugee Organization toward ocean passage; but it was agreed that if such assistance is not forthcoming, we as a people should be ready to make possible the migration of these our brethren who are in distress.

C. F. Klassen and William T. Snyder recently met with government officials in Ottawa, Canada, to discuss matters relating to immigration of refugees from Europe. The Canadian Christian Council for Resettlement of Refugees also contacted certain officials for the purpose of encouraging the admission of more close relatives into Canada. This Canadian Christian Council is an organization interested in helping in the resettlement of refugees who do not qualify under the mandate of the International Refugee Organization.

Last "Volendam" Refugees Leave Camp for Permanent Settlement

The last of the refugee groups left the San Lorenzo Camp on Monday, October 6, for Colony Volendam, ending the Immigration Paraguay 471, eight months after the group of 2,303 left Europe for South America. It has been a difficult experience for these Mennonites to be detained so long, due to the Paraguayan revolution. The relief workers are relieved and happy that finally the camp can be discontinued, but not a bit happier than the refugees themselves. Most of them have had from two to four years of "Lager Leben" and are justifiably tired of it.

Most of these people have settled in two areas in Paraguay. One new settlement is near Fernheim Colony, where, over 800 are located. A larger group, numbering over 1,100 settled in a new colony, named Colony Volendam, near Rosario.

The progress already made in the new colony, Volendam, according to Brother G. Warkentin, is really noteworthy. Each of the eleven villages has organized, and each has a different plan in becoming established. So far, all people in one village live in one or two large buildings while erecting their separate houses and planting their corn and mandioca (Paraguayan potatoes). In some cases each family builds alone; in others there are several families working together. When more than one family build collectively, the homes for the widows are built first, and then for those who have a father or older brother.

"Compassionate Trips" Open to American and British Zones of Germany

Permission to enter the U. S. or British Zones of Germany may now be secured under certain conditions by individuals desiring to visit parents or relatives over seventy years of age, or parents under seventy years of age who are ill. In the latter case the illness must be certified by a German doctor. The visit may extend over a three-month period. Such visitors will be subject to German food rationing and German civilian transportation. Housing would be with the relatives being visited.

Application should be made to Military Permit Section, Civil Affairs Division, War Department. (It should be noted that this information applies to persons living in the United States, but not to those living in Canada.)

M. C. C. Workers Tackle Relief Problem in India

Reports from India indicate that our workers are finding places of service in the relief emergency in that country. Martin Schrag, in cooperation with Dr. Lucas of the National Christian Council, is engaged in making a survey of the critical area in India, to determine the nature and extent of the needs that exist. Although it is known that acute needs do prevail, it has not been possible to make this complete survey because of inadequate personnel and transportation. This work therefore will be significant and helpful, not only to our work in India, but to the overall relief interest in that country.

Ex-C. P. S. Men and Families To Hold Re-union

On November 16, Sunday afternoon at 2 P. M., a reunion of ex-CPS men and families from the Eastern area (including Ohio) will be held at the former Hagerstown Unit I, Leitersburg, Maryland. The reunion will be of special interest to former members of the Hagerstown Unit and also to all men who had served in mental hospital units, since it will be held on the farm which now is becoming the eastern home for mentally ill.

not be able to do so because of railroad breakage. We are looking to the Lord of the Harvest, who inspired the prophet to say: "When the enemy shall come in like a flood the Spirit of the Lord will lift us a Standard against him." China and the Christian work here needs much prayer now!

Please note the new address: Mennonite Mission, Paochi, Shensi, China.—Yours in the fellowship of the gospel, P. J. and Frieda Boehr.

In Smyrna, a great city of Asia Minor, lived, long, long ago an old man—almost a hundred years of age—the bishop Polycarpus. You will enjoy reading the story of how the friends of this grand, old man hid him in the caves to keep him from being discovered and tortured for being a Christian. You will enjoy seeing how it all came out and why the story of this man is one of the treasured stories of early church history. It is told in Jacob H. Janzen's little book, TALES FROM MENNONITE HISTORY, available through our Conference book stores.

Jottings

—Eden Church, Inola, Oklahoma: We were richly blessed by the messages brought to us by Rev. S. T. Moyer, October 12-19. Rev. Moyer, who has been a missionary to India for twenty-seven years, related many experiences and made many friends while here. He served with Bible study in the morning and with a message at night. His message for our Thank Festival on October 19 was based on Psalm 116. The offering taken that morning went for relief. In the afternoon he spoke on missions, and the offering went for that cause. Rev. Waldo Flickinger of the "Go Ye" Mission also spoke at the Thanks and Mission Festival.

—First Church, Colfax, Washington: Many of our young people attended the retreat at Lake Wenatchee over the week-end of August 31. A number of them are now in college. Our Wednesday prayer meeting and Bible study is very interesting. The young people also have a Bible study. The mission society is busy with relief work.—Mrs. Horace Rogers, Corr.

—Woodland Church, Warroad, Minnesota: Our all-day harvest festival on October 26 was a blessed event. Our guest speakers were: Rev. Abram Unruh, Alsen, North Dakota; Rev. Geigley, Pastor Emeritus of the Fairfield Mennonite Church. She is a graduate of Bluffton College and St. Agnes Nurses Training School. The groom is the son of Mrs. B. Florence Crist, Bridgewater, Virginia. Mr. Crist, now employed by the Geigley Orchards, has been supervisor on relief cattle ships for the Brethren Service Committee and the Church Word Service. Following the ceremony there was a reception at the home of the bride, at which time G. S. Stoneback, pastor of the Fairfield Mennonite Church, presented the couple with a gift from the Friendly Society.

—First Church, McPherson, Kansas: The ladies of our church canned 187 cans of jam, chicken and lard for relief. On October 5 we had our harvest festival. A sum of approximately $1,900 was collected. It is being repaired at present. We have started midweek services. A period of crafts work follows the study hour. Four new members have been added to our congregation. The ladies of our church will serve at the 4H banquet November 1. —Mrs. Freeman Jantz, Corr.

—Alexanderwohl Church, Goessel, Kansas: Our congregation contributed 2,034 bushels of wheat and $1,500 in cash to the wheat project for relief. We sent 130 Christmas bundles, forty-eight mending kits and thirty-five shoe repairing kits for the needy in Europe.—Katie Wedel, Corr.

—Bethel Church, Langdon, North Dakota: Rev. Don P. Shidler from Kansas City, Missouri, held a series of revival meetings at which he taught from the first three chapters of Revelation. He also showed pictures of places where he had visited. His messages were of great inspiration to the congregation as he taught from the Bible and told of his experiences across the waters among the black people.—Mrs. LeRoy J. Schanz, Corr.

—Deep Run, Pa.: Our pastor's sermons the last two Sundays were in keeping with the one hundredth anniversary of our conference. Monday evening, October 20 we had the rare privilege of having Dr. Van der Zijpp, a minister from Holland in our midst. He is touring America under the M.C.C. and had much to tell us of the war and religious life in Holland. Next Sunday Rev. Fretz and Rev. Ward Shelly of the Perkasie congregation will exchange pulpits. A Relief Clothing Drive is being made by our Ladies Missionary Society for new and used clothing.—Mae Gross, Corr.

—Wayland Church, Wayland, Iowa. The ladies of the Dorcas Society have just completed packing and shipping nine cartons of used clothing for relief, weighing 360 pounds, all of which was sent to the Clothing Center at Newton, Kansas. Two barrels of canned fruit, containing 108 quarts, for the Orphans Home at Ottumwa, Iowa, were also donated and shipped. The installing of a new automatic oil-burning furnace for the Church has also been completed.—Anna E. Mullett, Corr.

—Bethel Church, Winton, Califorina: Installation services were held October 12 for Rev. Myron D. Hilty of Diagonal, Iowa. He has been installed into our church as our pastor by Rev. P. K. Regier of Reedley, California. Following the services, a reception was given in honor of Rev. and Mrs. Hilty and family.—Lorraine Heppner, Corr.

—Zion Church Elbing, Kansas: Work on what well may be called "God's Acre" has been started by our Christian Endeavor in the form of clearing and plowing a "used-to-be" farmstead which will be planted to spring crops. With the permission of the owner all income of the same is to be used for the Christian Endeavor projects. Raising funds for the proposed retreat grounds is the ultimate goal.—Mrs. Louis A. Janzen, Corr.

—First Church, Beatrice, Nebraska: Twenty-two "Shoe Repairing Kits" were prepared by the men's Sunday School classes. The Ladies Mission Societies packed nine "Sewing Kits." The Henderson Bethesda Church Christian Endeavor has accepted an invitation to present a program at our C. E. meeting on November 2. In a recent bulletin our pastor encouraged us to observe "meatless" Tuesdays and "eggless" Thursdays. He reminded us "that as Christians we should be the first to conserve food." Eleven members from our church attended the recent Western District conference at Enid, Oklahoma. Our oldest church member Miss Agathe Hamm, who was ninety years old passed away recently.—Mrs. John J. Wiebe, Corr.

—Eden Church, Moundridge, Kansas: On Sunday October 26 we observed the Harvest Festival. Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander of Quakertown, Pa., Secretary of the Home Mission Board, brought to us the morning and evening messages. He continued his services to us the week following by conducting a study of the book of James at the morning services and bringing evangelistic messages in the evening.—Corr.

—Goessel, Mennonite Church, Goessel, Kansas: Our congregation served as host to a joint Christian Endeavor program of the Tabor, Alexanderwohl, and Goessel Christian Endeavor societies on Sunday evening, November 2. The church was filled to capacity. The program consisted of excellent musical numbers, including a combined mixed chorus, and an address by Mr. B. Bargen of Newton. Mr. Bargen spoke very capably on the "Three Concepts of God." He pointed out how some individuals consider God as a magnified man; others consider Him a blind brute force; still others think of Him as a spirit. This last concept, linked together with the possibilities of youth, will certainly be a challenge toward the development of staunch Christian character. The Juniors had a fine program in the High School Auditorium.—Corr.

HAVE YOU NEW OR USED TOYS TO GIVE?

With Christmas time drawing near, Camp Bernard, Gulfport, Mississippi, is again beginning work on a toy project for the underprivileged. These toys which are distributed to the needy children in this vicinity are very helpful in bringing happiness at Christmas time. Toys are given to Colored and White without discrimination. All toys given in the past were greatly appreciated.

With this project in mind, Camp Bernard is putting out an appeal to Christian friends in Mennonite communities for new or used toys. Toys such as balls, crayons, color books, bats mechanical toys, etc., can always be used.

Camp Bernard feels that this would be a good project for Sunday school classes, young people's organizations, or ladies aid societies. All toys should be in good repair and sent to: Camp Bernard, Voluntary Service Unit, Box 241, Gulfport, Mississippi.

Camp Bernard is also in need of feed sacks, either printed or plain, to use in connection with the women's sewing class. The purpose of this class is to teach the mothers to economize by teaching them how to sew and mend their families clothing. This material should also be sent to the above address. This too would make a worthwhile project for a ladies mission and aid society.

—Dr. S. F. Pannabecker of the Mennonite Seminary gave a series of Bible lectures at the Zion Mennonite Church, Souderton, Pa., November 3-6. His subjects were: "The Source of Happiness—Beatitudes and Life," "The Right To Suffer—Discipline and Discipleship," "Life in Two Worlds—Grasping and Giving," and "Christian Growth—Salvation and Character." Our Sunday morning November 2, Dr. Pannabecker spoke on "Entrance into the Kingdom." In the evening he spoke to the Young People's Fellowship on "Religions Outstide Christendom" and told of his contact with them during his experiences in relief and missionary work. The Sunday evening speaker at Zion Church on November 16 will be Mr. George W. Lewis Jr., District Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League. During the local option elections in Pennsylvania this fall, forty-one municipalities changed from "Wet" to "Dry" and only seven from "Dry" to "Wet."

—Hereford Church, Bally, Pa., Rev. Wilmer Shelly was installed as pastor of the Hereford Mennonite Church on November 9. Rev. Howard Nyce gave the installation sermon. Dr. Elmer E. S. Johnson presented the charge to the pastor, and Rev. Freeman Swartz presented the charge to the congregation. A reception followed the service. That evening the Ladies Aid sponsored a program by J. N. Byler of the M.C.C. Brother Byler showed colored slides taken during his tour of Europe last spring.

—Thanks for a spiritual ministry as well as for material aid, come from the Mennonite refugee camp in the American Zone in Germany.

—Mrs. H. W. Jantzen, the mother of Rev. B. H. Jantzen, field worker of the Western District Conference, passed away at Nowata, Okla, on October 31 at the age of seventy-five.

—Rev. Dan Toavs has accepted a call of the Glendale, Washington, Church. He was installed as pastor on October 19. The Toavs are living in Lynden.

—Hoffnungsau Church, Inman, Kansas: Sixty-one attended young people's retreat which our church sponsored at Camp Fellowship, Goddard, Kansas, October 31 and November 1. The aim of the retreat was to draw apart awhile so that we might look at our task as young people in our church.—Mrs. Elmer Voth, Corr.

—Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hiebert of Newport, Washington, were recent callers at the General Conference Headquarters.

—Correction: On page eight of last week's issue the "Grace Church, Albany, Oregon:" should have read "Grace Church, Dallas, Oregon."

Organization of Local Youth Groups

The fundamental need of all youth groups is to have young people who are consecrated to their Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. No amount of organization will make a worthwhile youth group unless this first essential is met.

However, having said this, one must add that consecration alone does not make a successful youth group. There is a need in our General Conference Youth organization for an overall plan which can be put into practice in each local youth group. Our General Conference Young People's Union is thinking about this issue and in time will probably have some plan to suggest. I have been asked, in the meantime, to recommend a plan to our churches.

Let it be said that this plan is merely a suggestion. It can be used in one of two ways. It can become a method of organization in your local youth group. Each of these areas can be taken care of by a committee or a commission. On the other hand, it can merely become the basis which you use to evaluate the effectiveness of your group in each of the following five areas. These five areas should in some way be included in each youth program: worship, study, recreation, service, and missions. I will give a few suggestions in each of these areas.

WORSHIP

The worship committee can take charge of both the public meetings of worship and stress the need for private devotions. Worship should be the strongest part of our programs.

Too often our worship services in our youth programs are simply opening exercises. There is little preparation for this period. Young people can be taught to worship so that each worship period becomes a period of decision. The hymns must be properly chosen. The scripture lesson must be wisely chosen and read well. The surroundings should be worshipful. The message should be of such a nature that it will evoke the desired response.

There is also a great need for private devotions in the lives of all of the members. As we study the life of Jesus we are reminded that he faced all the issues of life by taking them to His father in prayer. This too, is our privilege.

Prayer

Each day I pray, God, give me strength
anew,
To do the task I do not wish to do,
To yield obedience, never asking why;
To love and own the truth and scorn the lie;
To look a cold world
bravely in the face;
To cheer all those that pass me in the race;
To bear my burdens gaily, unafraid,
To lend a hand to those that need my aid,
To measure what I am by what I give—
God, give me strength that I may rightly live.

STUDY

We are told in II Tim. 2:15, "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." The study committee is the committee that takes care of choosing the topics for discussion and arranges for methods by which to conduct this part of each meeting.

BY PAUL R. SHELLY

When one deals with young people right out of high school one is amazed at the lack of knowledge that many of them have about the basic Christian truths, about ethical principles, about their task in life, about their own church and the principles for which it stands, and other areas.

If a church has an active Sunday school and an active youth group there is no reason for this lack of knowledge. Other groups which are not Christian know where they stand. The success of Germany and other dictator countries for many years was largely due to the fact that the leaders of these countries knew their aims and taught their young people well. We are not in agreement with their aims. However, we do well to emulate their effectiveness in method.

RECREATION

In travelling among Mennonites young people from coast to coast in the United States and Canada I feel that this area is one of the areas that needs most attention. There have been three things that I have noticed in almost each Mennonite community. The first is that the leaders are almost universally opposed to most of our modern forms of commercial amusements, as well as other types of questionable forms of recreation. The second observation is that in each Mennonite community some of the young people are openly or secretly particpating in some commercial amusements as well as in some of the questionable forms of recreation. There are, of course, varying degrees of this. The third is that in almost all cases the church has not provided any positive answer in the field of recreation. Here too, there are notable exceptions. The Kitchener community has provided recreation for its community for a number of years now. The Freeman community has also done something this past year.

I feel very strongly that if our Mennonites want to solve the recreation issue the place to begin is in each local community. By the time a young person is eighteen and comes to college he has established his recreational patterns, and it is difficult for the college to change the pattern which has been developed in the home community. An active, capable, consecrated, recreation committee can do much in this area.

SERVICE

This area is also weak in many of our youth groups. The youth group in many sections is a group that meets on Sundays to worship and talk, but it very seldom carries out any of the convictions and conclusions that the young people reach in their meetings.

There is a great deal of work this committee can accomplish. There is the work of the local church. The pastor can use much assistance in many ways. Particularly, is this true in most of our churches where the pastor cannot afford secretarial help. There is work that should be done in the community. There are certain needs that the youth group should be concerned about. There are all types of projects which fall into this category. One needs to keep in mind that this, too, is part of the Christian gospel.

MISSIONS

We are all doing something in this area. However, this work could also be better organized. A committee which has this as its major could do a lot in a local group. This would include the arranging of programs for some of the evening meetings. It would include the carrying out of the various missionary projects of the district and the General Conference Young People's Union. It could provide opportunities for keeping the missionary vision before all of the young people of the church. It could also be the committee that would be concerned with the winning of new members.

CONCLUSION

There are a number of conclusions that I would like to give. I will not be able to discuss them. This must wait till a later time.

1. There are resources available in each of these areas. I want to suggest two at this point. The one is the Mennonite Community Sourcebook, which can be ordered from the M.C.C. for fifty cents. This includes bibliographies in all of these areas. The other is the booklets prepared on Recreation, Service, Worship, and Study, put out by the Christian Board of Publication, St. Louis, Missouri. These are twenty-five cents each.

2. Suggestions in each of these areas including successful ventures in local societies will be printed periodically in the Youth Section of The Mennonite.

3. Societies that have a well-rounded program in these five areas will be successful, and the young people participating in such youth groups will have no problem as to what to do with their leisure time.

4. The C.P.S. camps, our colleges, and our retreats provide for a program which includes all of these areas. This is not done perfectly and yet all of these areas are cared for. Each local church should carry out similar programs.

5. Problems arise when young people go outside of the church to carry out any of these five areas.

America through a Missionary's Eyes

by Mrs. Stanley Jones of India

Which end of this thing do you talk into? I asked as a young cousin handed me a peculiar black instrument.

"Why the end with the cord attached," she gasped, her eyes wide with astonishment.

I finished my conversation and put the receiver on the table. She snatched it and laid it on its cradle.

"I have not used a telephone for nearly nine years," I said apologetically.

"I suppose things here seem very strange and marvelous to you now," she remarked. "O course telephones are old. But we have progressed a lot in many ways, haven't we?"

"Ask me that question after I have been here a month," I said.

She asked it again after three months.

"Well, what do you think of us now? I suppose you are always being astonished."

"Yes, I am being astonished," I replied slowly, "but not with Frigidaires and airplanes and air conditioning and radios."

"With what then?" she demanded.

"I'm afraid you won't like it—but if you really want to know . . . ."

I was right. She did not like it. She is still indigant and hurt. But we too, are hurt. Disillusionment is painful. And when the object of that disillusionment is anything as dear as one's own beloved native land, the pain goes deep.

We have sometimes wondered about the attitude of the student who returns to India after study abroad in a so-called "Christian" land. But we begin to understand his reactions. Because of our long residence out of the country, whether we will or no, I suspect that we see it very much as the foreigner sees it.

It is very easy for us over in India to begin to idealize America.

We live with the caste system. We see sixty millions of outcasts despised and looked down upon

MISSION RALLY AT NORTH NEWTON, KANSAS

NOVEMBER 16

The Student Volunteers of Bethel College, in cooperation with the Western District Young Peoples' Union, are sponsoring a mission rally which is to be held in the Memorial Hall at North Newton, Kansas, on Sunday, November 16, 1947.

There is to be a fellowship meal beginning at 5:30 P. M., during which rice and curry will be served. (This is a typical dish in India). Also during this hour of fellowship there will be an informal program consisting of general singing, special music by the surrounding Christian Endeavors and the young peoples' groups, an introduction of the mission candidates, and a talk by Puran Banwar, native of India attending Bethel College.

The evening program will begin promptly at 7:30. The speaker of the evening will be Rev. Orland Waltner, recently returned General Conference Missionary from India. He will also show moving pictures of India. Special music will be provided by the Christian Endeavor groups and the Student Volunteers.

by the 2,300 upper castes. We see the sickly, stunted, pathetic little girl-wives and mothers; the widow treated as an ill omen; millions of lovely women kept behind closed doors.

We see men, women and children worshiping the cow, the cobra, the monkey; bowing down before idols of wood and stone. We are surrounded on all sides by the sick and the suffering who have no medical aid; the poverty-stricken who have never once known what it means to have their hunger satisfied.

We fight against filth, ignorance, supersition, and somehow, as the years go by, we forget that America has faults and shortcomings. We think of America singing, "Our fathers' God to Thee"; stamping her coins, "In God We Trust"; putting the Eighteenth Amendment into the Constitution; leading in idealism. And then—we come home!

We were in America on our last furlough during the days of prohibition. In the eighteen months that we were here, not once had any of us seen a saloon, a glass of liquor, or a drunken man. I am not suggesting that they did not exist. But we could honestly say we had not seen them. But we returned this time—

To find ourselves in a city where we had to go hungry because we could discover no place to eat where beer was not sold.

To be confronted by miles of glaring advertisments, imploring us to drink, smoke, visit certain roadhouses.

To find it almost impossible to escape the everlasting cigarette. Many a time in a train or bus or waiting room or restaurant, I have said, "Is it possible that this is America, the land of the free, where I don't even have the privilege of breathing pure air?"

We were startled to see not only men but women and girls smoking, drinking, in saloons and beer gardens.

To hear oaths and vuglar expressions on the lips of high school and college girls of good families—expressions once limited to the type of folks with whom one did not associate.

We noted the change in vocabulary: self-expression, syncretism, freedom, nudity, thrill; not often the words modesty, decency, duty, responsibilty, obligation.

We were puzzled to find many churches closed on Sunday evening, but cinema doors wide open and crowds pouring in.

Often we could discover no midweek prayer meeting, but forums, dramas, scouting, dancing, bridge, in church parlors.

To find churches being sold for debt: benevolent budgets cut; Christians work of all kinds being closed because of lack of funds; thousands losing their homes, unable to get work; going on relief; but to find that, apparently, America still had abundant money for ball games, motorcars, movies, cigarettes, and beer.

"Why Doesn't God Do More?"

Mr. Very Wealthy was showing an acquaintance and his small son around his tremendous estate.

"Beautiful lawn," murmured the visitor as he surveyed the green velvet-like-carpet that was immaculately clipped and trimmed.

"Ought to be," said Mr. Wealthy with proud complacency. "Had the whole thing brought here as sod at a dollar a square foot."

"And those trees!" exclaimed the other. "I've never seen more perfect specimens. Such grace and beautiful foliage!"

"Had them transplanted," confided Mr. Wealthy. "Cost me two thousand dollars apiece."

Junior could contain himself no longer. "Gee, Mr. Wealthy, think of what God could have done if he'd had all your money!"

The observations of children are sometimes profound. Think of what God could do for the children of Greece and the orphans of Belgium if he only had more money to put in the hands of his church relief agencies which are buying and shipping as fast as they can milk, meat and grain that can save the lives of thousands who are slowly starving to death.

Think what God could do in war torn China if he only had the money to send six thousand instead of six hundred missionaries to the devastated cities and drought-ridden countryside.

Think of what God could do for the children if he had the money spent on liquor to invest in Christian education. It is hard to believe that our country is twice as interested in booze as in learning.

Think of what God could do if he had just a tenth

I live
Not in myself,
But I become Portion of all Around me.
—Byron

of the money spent on tobacco, candy and gum to invest in training young men and women to go out and proclaim the good news of Jesus Christ and what he can do for human personality to the indifferent, the careless, the bewildered and the neglected people of the world?

Why doesn't God do more for people? Because he hasn't the money! And why doesn't he have the money? Because men and women do not love him with all their minds, hearts and souls. They love drinks, smokes, eats and clothes and entertainment so much that God and his church must worry along on small charge.

The average giving of Protestant Christians of every denomination on this continent was sixteen dollars and fifty cents for last year. When you consider the work of God's churches throughout the world and measure their programmes against the investment the returns are amazing. God's trouble is that his children on the average invest only one-tenth of one per cent of their income in his work.—Jesse F. Perrin

Forgiveness . . .

A spirit of forgiveness is the secret of MacArthur's remarkable achievement in Japan, reports the vice-president and general manager of the United Press, Earl J. Johnson, from Japan. The whole supreme headquarters staff feel that way about it, according to the United Press official. They have come to realize that the Japanese people themselves were victims of a small insane military clique; they have found overwhelming evidence that the people had no heart for the war. "You begin to see," states Mr. Johnson, "why men who work on such a broad canvas feel responsibilty to civilization to drop rancor, revenge and hate from their hearts. They feel their role is to establish freedom and justice in this island empire. They appear to regard themselves as evangelists of democracy." As a policy, "forgive us our trespasses" is proving itself on Japan. When will we let it prove itself in the rest of the World?—Between the Lines, August 4, 1947

In observing that there was more drinking on the campuses of Harvard University and Radcliffe College this year than formerly, workers with students in the Boston area declare that ultimate control of morality lies in standards taught and practiced at home and church. The student whose home and church have given him no standards is "adrift on a sea of moral indifference."

In an Iowa survey it was revealed that eighty per cent of rural families attend church at least once a month compared with fifty per cent of town families in the same area. We fear that big city figures would be still lower.

Since the end of the war over one hundred Finns have applied for posts in foreign mission fields, and forty-five already have been sent to Southwest Africa and Hunan, China. During the war the mission at Amboland in Southwest Africa grew in spite of difficulties. Finland could send no funds, but other nations came to the rescue. Now, a real missionary revival is reported to be sweeping the northern republic, teachers, doctors and nurses as well as pastors having volunteered.

We Thank Thee

by Thomas Curtis Clark

(The first stanza is an adaptation by Mrs. Willis Rich.)

For all our lands, our wide-flung prairie wealth,
Our mighty rivers born of friendly spring,
Our inland seas, our mountains proud and high,
Forests and orchards richly blossoming;
For all these, Lord, our deep, thanks are said,
As, humbly glad, we hail Thanks Day serene;
But most of all, dear Father of our lives,
For all Thy love that in these things is seen.

We thank Thee not for prestige born of war,
For dauntless navies built for battle stress;
Nor would we boast of armies massed for strife;
These all are vain, O Lord of kindliness.
What need have we of swords and bayonets,
Of mighty cannon belching poisoned flame!
O, woo us from the pagan love of these
Lest we again defile Thy sacred name.

We thank Thee, Lord, on this recurring day,
For liberty to worship as we will;
We thank Thee for the hero souls of old
Who dared wild seas their mission to fulfill.
O gird our hearts with stalwart faith in good,
Give us new trust in Thy providing hand,
And may a spirit born of brotherhood
Inspire our hearts and bless our native land.

"That They All May Be One"

"That they all may be one." Much use is being made of these words in our own circle of Mennonites, and I fear some of it is misuse, in that there is a very obvious tendency to seek to bring about conference unity through conference legislation. But for what did our Saviour pray? The context, as well as the entire scope of Scripture, is only too clear. That they may be one through the new birth. John 17:2-3, " . . . that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, ... " John 14:6; 3:36. The new birth is more than receiving a new philosophy—it is receiving Jesus Christ as personal Saviour from sin.

That they may be one through sanctification. John 17:15-17, "I pray . . . that thou shouldest keep them from the evil. . . . . Sanctify them through thy truth: thy word is truth." Sancitification is an act of God whereby we are set apart for His personal use. I Cor. 6:19-20; I Thess. 5:23-24.

That they may be one in service. John 17:18, 21, 23. " . . . even so have I also sent them into the world." " . . . that the world may believe . . ." " . . . that the world may know that thou hast sent me, and hast loved them, as thou hast loved me." His one great burden is that the world might behold Him through the lives of His blood washed children, and seeing Him might also receive Him as their source of cleansing and escape from an eternal hell.

That they may be one in hope. John 17:24, " . . . that they may behold my glory . . . ." Our hope is not a reformed world through the efforts of man, but a transformed world through the coming again of Jesus Christ. The first step in this great transformation is the translation of His Body, the Church, that we might behold His glory. May God grant that we "All may be one" as we behold the Lord Jesus Christ crucified, resurrected, ascended, coming again as our one and only hope.—Wilbert A. Regier, pastor of the Emmanuel Mennonite Church, Pratum, Oregon; Secretary of the Evangelization Committee of the Pacific District, and President of the Oregon (General Conference) Fellowship.

Need To Declare the Good News of Peace Making

Does the General Conference (or the whole union of Mennonites or a union of the historic peace churches) need evangelists of non-resistance? Should we have men who could go on preaching missions across the nation, bringing to others the way of peacemaking as embodied in the unique insights of our historic interpretation of the Christian Gospel? What are we doing to make the beauty, the desirability, the necessity of the Way of Peace evident to others in our own land? Can they believe if they have no preacher? Certainly men, who know the way of repentance and forgiveness, who know how to win the confidence and respect of those who differ from us, who are keen and alert in all international affairs, and who speak ably and enjoy it, could make an impact upon thousands in this age of the atomic bomb and bacteriological weapons. Support could come from one, or more, or all of the bodies mentioned. There is need that the gospel of non-resistance be declared. Perhaps, the approach mentioned would be one way of attempting it.—The Editor

Bread for All

Someone has suggested that it would be a snap to feed the two to three billion people on this earth if men generally were more holy and less sensual. Today some people in Europe seek to obtain nourishment by boiling potatoe peelings. In America, in some cases, food is left on plates and thrown away. Such waste is not Christian; neither is over-indulgence. Now comes news from Canada that a scientific experiment with mice seems to indicate that eating sparingly is more conducive to long life than eating richly. Maybe this will be an added incentive to sharing. But more basic to the problem may be the suggestion that Americans generally over-indulge in the material because they are trying to satisfy both their animal and soul hungers with it. Food conservation and sharing becomes increasingly successful as people became motivated by the goal of Christian fellowship. W. Harold Row of the Church of the Brethren in urging sacrifice says, "This sacrifice must be the amount you would want someone to give if you were starving." This is indeed a most searching statement

As I Imagine Thanksgiving Day in Europe

By Jessie Brown

No, they have no Thanksgiving Day in Europe. After all, that is an American holiday, but they do have its equivalent in their Harvest Festival which comes about the same time of year or sooner. The spirit of Thanksgiving is there—they who at present have so little compared to our over abundance—even they celebrate "Dankfest."

The small church around the corner in London, several blocks from us, is having a service. Entering the unheated church through the open door, we see people coming with their arms filled with the produce of their garden. Their clothes look shabby, some faces thin, but they are happy today. The altar is overflowing with pumpkins, cabbage, potatoes, corn—just to mention a few. An old lady slowly moves up to the front with her thank-you gift—flowers. Her shoes are polished to hide the wear and cracks. (Her last shoe stamp probably went to her grand-children.) Yes, food is rationed. We marvel how people can spare anything, rations being below that of war years. The baker even brought a bread baked in the form of a sheaf of wheat and fishes—symbols! A great day for all. Later these things are distributed to homes for children or other institutions.

Spirit of Thanksgiving

by Harold Buller

Is e'er thanksgiving found within the well fed heart
That drops a pasty penny to the poor,
Or even in the padded gift that cushions pride upon a pious thought?

If never here
How then is wrought the purity of praise,
The sweet refrain of God inspired lays that tell of love?
And when is seen, as guiding stars above Judean plain,
The blessed light of joy in hearts of men.

See, yonder in the starving night
Amid the dust of crumbling years kneel two;
The one though hungry thanks the Lord for life
And passes on his scanty morsel to the soul that craved a crust.
Oh, where is born more noble praise in prayer
Than comes when those who have not, share?

God is good. They feel his presence with them, and in spite of the hardships this year may have brought, Harvest Festival means a thanks-giving.

Switzerland, the country, in a sense, untouched by war, is more thankful than ever before. They have their "Dank-fest" too, but besides that, clothing and food and other material is gathered together for the suffering ones right over the border. This relief is nothing new. They have been doing it for years.

We find the Harvest Festival in other European countries: France, Belgium, Holland, Denmark. "Give thanks!" We find it in Germany too. In a deaconess home in the British Zone. Thank God for liberation of several sisters who had been imprisoned by the Poles; thank God for making it possible (in spite of ruins and poor housing) to rent a building for the sick and twenty-eight children saved from the East, not to mention the twenty orphans they hope to get; thankful to God that they have a few paper cartons to place their things in since they have hardly any furniture; grateful they still have a few things to wear although some had been barefoot; grateful they can still follow their calling and minister to the sick even though it has meant sending newborns home wrapped in newspapers; grateful to God for sending them six new deaconesses with spirit and zeal to serve the Lord.

When they begin to enumerate their blessings and thank God—in what position does that place us? Does it seem strange on the other hand if some over there should doubt God and his love for mankind? Does it seem strange to us if some think life hardly worthwhile having to work so hard all day for one meager meal and then go to bed still hungry and cold? These people are like you and I. And then does it seem strange to us they are overwhelmed when they hear of the Friendship Train, or when a package arrives from the United States—the thought of somebody caring—or a gift through our relief organization with the explanation "In the name of Christ," renewing their faith in Christians and deepening their faith in God?

Here is a musician thankful that his instrument was left him to express his soul's emotions even though he cannot get a position for lack of shoes. A university professor, half-starved, is happy that he is able to teach without dictation from authorities. A university student is happy in the thought of a correspondent who doesn't consider them Huns.

Thankful for what? That there is an agency which traced the brother of a girl. The rest lie buried. Do we—no, we can't grasp it—what it means to lose a home or to witness the death of one's own father, mother, and finance at the time of invasion and then give thanks that there is a Christian Way to regard our enemies!

Any little thing we do God can bless a hundredfold. Some of us might value our present-day opportunities more if a dear little French Catholic Sister would kiss our cheek in gratitude and thanks for a layette our relief unit gave, if we would see the tears of a mother living in a dugout over a CARE package (the housing conditions don't begin to compare with ours!), if we could see the tiny, blue, skinny fingers clinging to the bowl of hot broth, the large thoughtful eyes admiring the raisins or oranges, neither of which he had ever seen before, if we could walk through a hospital and see the daily food ration of two pieces of soggy dark bread served three times a day (the whole diet! how can people get well?!); if we could see a child delighted over a bundle and especially holding and valuing the tiny New Testament above all else, for he has been told some of the truths there-in and the reason for our practical testimony. These people are thankful for what they have left and what friends give them, blessings, both physical and spiritual.

There is a challenge to us living in this wonderful land of opportunities, in America. Do we see it?

Miss Jessie Brown served as M.C.C. relief worker in Europe from the summer of 1945 to the summer of 1946. As secretary to Sam J. Goering, general director of European relief, she saw conditions in England, Holland, France, Germany, Belgium, and Switzerland.

M.C.C. Reports Increase in Clothing Contributions

ARKON, PA., November 7.—A sharp increase in clothing contributions has taken place during the month of October. Prior to October the rather consistent decrease in clothing gifts had been a serious concern, in view of the coming winter, during which suffering in Europe will certainly be most severe. This recent increase is heartening for it indicates that our people are conscious of the needs and are willing to give. "Let us not be weary in well doing, for in due season we shall reap if we faint not."

During October the clothing receipts at the MCC Centers were: Reedley, 4,854 lbs; Kitchener, 8,745 lbs; Newton, 24,328 lbs; and Ephrata 58,225. For Ephrata, this was an all-time record. For the other centers it was also much higher than in recent previous months. The report from the Winnipeg Center has not yet been received, but a good record is expected there too.

This increase may be attributed in part to the seasonal trend, but no doubt another reason is that our people are learning of the acute needs which have been stressed in our church papers and also in the daily papers. It is hoped that the next few months will continue this high record.

Help Russian Mennonite Refugees To Come to United States

A group of seven Russian Mennonite refugees have recently been able to come from Europe to the United States. In the group were Katherine Arendt and son Edward, Elizabeth Arendt, Gerhard Neufeld, his wife, Anna and daughter Lena and his sister Justine Arendt. These people were living in southern Russia until the recent war, when they were forced to flee for safety. After a time of much hardship they found refuge in Holland at the MCC center. There several of them who were able worked in housekeeping, teaching and other duties.

Recently arrangements were made so that these people could come to America. The Neufeld family has gone to Mountain Lake, Minnesota, to join friends who have financed and sponsored their coming from Europe. The Arendt family has gone to Washington (state) where they have met relatives. In this case however, another party paid the expenses of their passage in coming to America,

These particular cases are somewhat unique. Occasionally refugees are able to enter the United States or Canada when a close relative sponsors them financially and otherwise. However, in this instance other concerned individuals assumed this burden. This is certainly a worthy cause, and more of our people might do this, and possibly would, were the complete situation known by them. Many refugees have no close relatives in the United States or Canada, and thus have no one to help them in this way. Many more have such relatives, which, however, have come to America only recently themselves and thus are not in position to help those who are now refugees. Are there not among our brotherhood those who will volunteer to sponsor the immigration of a Mennonite refugee family? For further information write to Mennonite Aid, MCC, Akron, Pennsylvania.

To Continue Voluntary Service Unit in Mexico

Plans are being made for the continuing Voluntary Service project in Mexico. Orie O. Miller accompanied by William Ensz of Winkler, Manitoba, Canada, is spending several days with the workers there, observing the needs and determining the particular service which the MCC Unit can render most advantageously. The work in Mexico thus far has been chiefly that of health and education.

The workers already in Mexico include Melvin Funk, Francis Beckenbach Funk, Erna Klassen, Clara Schellenberg, and Mr. and Mrs. Randall Heindrichs. Harold Palmer of Rheinholds, Pennsylvania, has been appointed to join the unit later.

THE GLORY OF THE LORD SHALL BE REVEALED

First Report from the Gen. Conf. Home Mission Field, Paint Rock, N. C.

BY REV. AND MRS. ANDREW HOLLIMAN

Greetings to all of our friends everywhere as found in Eph. 2:8-9, "For by grace are ye saved through faith: And that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: not of works, lest any man should boast."

Perhaps your interest, as well as ours, is the work that is being done here in Paint Rock. Should any reader by chance come to Paint Rock, he would turn off the main highway No. 64 between Ashville, North Caroline, and Knoxville, Tennessee, near the state line. About one mile down a gravel road he would find a little old-fashioned post office connected with a small grocery store. The community round about Paint Rock has a population of about 200.

Just before reaching the store your eyes would behold a little tabernacle "in bud," sitting at the edge of a hill, which, we trust, one day will blossom to decorate the community of Paint Rock as Grace Community Chapel. In size the building is 56 x 30. It belongs to our Conference. The five or six-acre tract of land on which it stands is leased from the Southern Railway at the rate of one dollar a year.

Upon our arrival here this summer, Rev. J. J. Plenert and Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander came to make plans for remodelling the building that formerly served as a school house into a chapel and home. Plans were made and laborers were hired, and immediately the work began. In the meantime Sunday school and services were held in an old community building.

All praise is due unto Him who has begun this good work. For some time already we have been able to have services in our own building, although it is not yet quite complete. Certain materials to complete the home have not yet become available.

Sharing the Gospel

We have different ways of spreading the gospel. On different nights throughout the week my wife, several of the other willing singers, and I, go out to different homes of the sick and shut-in, reading a portion of God's word with prayer and singing. All of this is done by foot, both up the hills and down the valleys.

Our Sunday school and morning worship services are quite well attended with an average of about forty. However, the evening services are much better attended. It seems as though our people have a taste for evening services.

We need your prayers as we labor in a field that is ripe unto harvest. Yours "to the unreached.' —Rev. and Mrs. Andrew Holliman

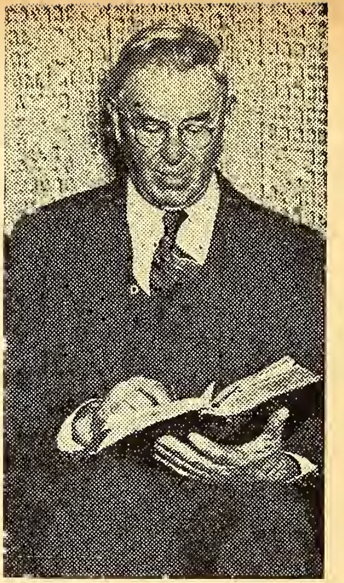
GOD'S WORD PROMPTS SHARING FOOD WITH NEEDY



Courtesy, "Wichita Eagle"

"BIBLE PASSAGE PROMPTS KANSAS FARMER TO LOAD FIVE CARS OF FRIENDSHIP TRAIN," read the headline of the Wichita (Kansas) Eagle, Monday morning, November 10.

The passage reads: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." (Matthew 25:40)

Pointing out these words of Christ is Mr. David White, (above) Kingsdown, Kansas, who gave 3,226 bushels of wheat to the M.C.C. This is being milled into "white flour" to become part of the Southwestern Friendship train leaving Newton on Friday morning, November 21, 8 a. m.

Expressing the appreciation of the Mennonite Central Committee to Mr. White by telephone a week ago, the writer heard these words, "Don't thank me, we wanted to help this good cause along." The 3,226 bushels being milled into almost 1,500 sacks of flour by the Buhler Milling Company will be distributed by the Mennonite Central Committee. "We just couldn't resist the temptation of giving, my wife and I . . . . It just made us feel so good . . . And maybe we'll have some more yet . . . . I'll have to talk to my wife about it."

Expressing a sound Christian attitude, Mr. White implies a fair warning even to the Mennonites whom he is assisting in their expanding relief effort. "You know, if we want to avoid another, war we'd better give our wheat than our boys and girls."

The Emergency Relief Board is cooperating in receiving contributions for "flour for Relief." Since the Atchison, Topeka, & Santa Fe has offered to transport up to 120 cars free of charge on its way to the east coast, every effort is being made to help lengthen the train, and strengthen the hands of workers abroad.

At least fifteen cars of Kansas Mennonite relief goods will join the Southwestern Friendship Train, November 21. All friends of "In the Name of Christ" relief are invited to attend "Send-off" dedicatory services at Newton, November 21, 7:30 a. m. Our

by John E. Fretz

"So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." Rom. 10:17

During the laymen's meeting at the General Conference at Berne, Brother A. A. Penner of Mountain Lake, Minnesota, brought to the attention of those present, a plea from the American Bible Society for sorely needed Bibles and Testaments for the peoples of war torn Europe and other areas.

This appeal impressed many of those present as one worthy of the support of every Christian concerned with the spiritual well being of these suffering brethren, and most certainly a fitting supplement to our material aid program now being carried on through the M.C.C., so much so that your interim committee felt led to suggest this urgent plea for Bibles and Testaments as a project for our laymen throughout the General Conference.

Reports from our relief workers indicate that there is a scarcity of Bibles and Testaments almost everywhere and a growing demand for copies of the printed Word. If this is so, does it not follow that we should strive to provide spiritual food for the soul as well as material food for the body? Spiritual poverty is soon followed by physical poverty. It has well been said that "without the Way, there is no going; without the Truth, there is no knowing, and without the Life, there is no living."

Various ways of giving have been suggested. Perhaps, the simplest way would be to have local churches (Sunday school Bible classes, men's fellowships or individuals) send their contributions directly to the Conference Headquarters, 722 Main Street, Newton, Kansas, marked "Laymen's Bible Fund." Others may prefer to buy the Bibles and bring them to the churches for public dedication on Universal Bible Sunday December 14, this year, as one of the Eastern District churches plans to do, and then forward them to the M. C. C. for distribution. In this latter case, it will be necessary, of course, to purchase German, French or Dutch Bibles or Testaments, depending upon the field of distribution.

It is not intended that these suggestions are to limit you to any area or field. Undoubtedly, some will prefer to purchase Bibles, Testaments or tracts for one of the mission fields of our Conference or copies in Spanish or German for our fast expanding work in South America. The need truly is great in every place. Preliminary arrangements for distribution have been made with both the American Bible Society and the M.C.C. office at Akron, Pa.

Brethren, let us make this a matter of prayer; Let us do it in the name of Christ! The sending forth and the sharing of God's word has always been the happy privilege of those who love Him. — John E. Fretz, Secretary, Gen. Conf. Laymen's Committee.

CANADIAN BIBLE FREEMAN BLUFFTON BETHEL SEMINARY

"DECISION WEEK" AT CANADIAN MENNONITE BIBLE COLLEGE

The week from November 3 to 7 was designated as "Decision Week" by the Canadian Mennonite Bible College. Special services were held with a spiritual emphasis. Rev. J. J. Thiessen of Saskatoon consented to lead us in this time of consecration and dedication. Many of the activities of the week gave preference to these services. which were held both in the morning and in the evening.

During the past week the students have been active in various phases of Christian service. An octet sang in the Concordia and General Hospitals on Sunday, October 26. It has also been a rich opportunity for a number of students to work in the local Mennonite Central Committee office. Mr. and Mrs. Peter Sawatzky have recently been given charge of a Sunday school work in the St. Vital area. This is held in a foundry provided by the owner, Mr. Duerksen, of that locality.

DR. A. C. WIEAND PRESENTS NEW HARMONY OF THE GOSPELS TO THE SEMINARY FAMILY

Dr. A. C. Wieand is widely known to the General Conference people. He has preached in a number of our churches and delivered Bible lectures at both Bluffton and Bethel. On Wednesday, November 5, Dr. Wieand officially presented his new harmony of the gospels to the seminary family. In acknowledging what many believe to be the outstanding book written by Dr. Wieand, President Rufus Bowman paid tribute to his predecessor in the presidency of Bethany. He indicated his profound respect and deep love for this Christian brother who founded and nurtured this school for over forty years. Among the interesting features of Dr. Wieand's new book is the fact that it is given in the Revised Standard Version. All in all it contains a remarkable number of helps for seeing the total movement of the ministry and mission of Jesus Christ as presented in Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John. It is divided into three parts the preparation for the ministry of Christ, the ministry itself, and the consummation of the ministry. Dr. Wieand urged that students have the life of Christ so clearly in mind that it can be thought through by memory and visualized in the most vivid manner possible.

FREEMAN FACULTY DOINGS

Recent chapel speakers were: Miss Kaufman, Mr. Lichti, Mr. Linscheid, and Mr. Neufeld. Mrs. E. P. Graber spoke to the Y.W.C.A. on Thursday. The Academy play, "Freckles," will be presented on November 13 and 14 in the College auditorium. At the October faculty meeting Mr. Benj. Waltner had charge of the devotions while at the meeting of the faculty wives Mrs. Benno Toews led in devotions. At the luncheon of the joint groups which followed these meetings, Mrs. Dan Neufeld and Mrs. Orlando Goering were hostesses. Dr. Harold Gross and Prof. Benjamin Waltner attended the State Deans and Registrars meeting at Mitchell this week.

RURAL LIFE CONFERENCE AT BETHEL

On November 14 and 15 Bethel College was host to the Rural Life Conference sponsored by McPherson College, Friends University, and Bethel College. Walter Kollmorgan, chairman of the Department of Geography at the University of Kansas, and Stanley Hamilton, executive secretary of the Rural Life Association at Richmond, Indiana, were among the leaders of the conference. Mr. Kollmorgan spoke Friday evening on the topic, "New Frontiers for Old Communities." Friday afternoon, Mr. Hamilton discussed rural life activities in the Midwest. The dedication of the new Franz General Shop was a special feature of the conference on Friday afternoon. The reading choir of Bethel College under the direction of Ellen Waltner, dramatics instructor, presented a pageant, "Giants of the Wasteland," on Friday evening. On Saturday morning the group took a field trip to private and cooperative enterprises in nearby communities.

Frank Laubach has achieved universal acclaim for the marvelous success with his slogan "Each one teach one," in the Philippine Islands, bringing the gospel to those natives by teaching them to read.

"Each one teach one," would be an excellent motto for readers of The MENNONITE. "Not many" of us Mennonites are teachers; yet all of us can at least "teach one," by sending in the name and address of some person who, in your opinion, should be reading THE MENNONITE but is not. Our addressing machine will do the rest. That "brainy" little machine actually picks out the names who are to receive sample copies each week and gets them to the post office on their way.

Will "each one teach one"?

Just think what that would mean! With 7,500 readers of our MENNONITE we could overnight have 7,500 names of good, carfully selected prospects for new readers. Woudn't THAT strengthen the fellowship of our Conference through the printed word!

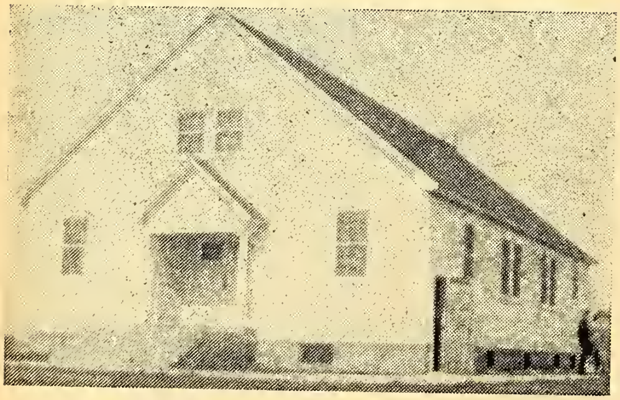
First Menn. Church, Burns, Kansas, To Dedicate New House of Worship

Burns, Kansas, November 12, 1947.—The First Mennonite Church of Burns, Kans. will dedicate its new house of worship on the afternoon of November 23. The program will begin at 2 P. M. Rev. D. C. Wedel will give the dedicatory sermon, and Rev. H. J. Dyck will speak in behalf of the Home Mission Committee of the Western District. Guests are invited to stay for the fellowship meal which will be served after the program. In the evening the church will observe its harvest festival with Puran Banwar as the guest speaker. The church invites all friends to attend these services.

Sod for the new church was broken November 1, 1945, and the cornerstone was laid on December 30, 1945. The house of worship stands two miles northwest of Burns and can be reached by gravelled road.

The congregation now numbers fifty-four members. The twenty-four families making up the membership are all farm families. The church had its beginning June 15, 1941, when ten families came together for Sunday school. Next the Home Mission Committee began to supply student ministers. One of these student ministers was Henry Goossen, the present pastor who after serving the church regularly for a while, was called, and then ordained on July 25, 1944. The church was officially organized on June 16, 1944, with thirty charter members. The average attendance on Sunday mornings now is seventy-five.



BREAD FOR ALL

which if acted upon even partially, by those who have. would provide bread for many. Encouraging is the report by Charles Luckman, chairman of the national food conservation program "that continuation of the present food-saving measures for another two months would provide the additional 100,000,000 bushels of grain needed for Europe by the first of next year." The world has the technical means of providing food for all, but too many too much of the time lack in the Spirit.—The Editor

Farewell from the J.R. Duerksens

Dear Fellow Workers in the Great Cause of Missions:

To the many friends who have made our furlough a happy and profitable time we come with a word of farewell. Plans are now complete for us, together with the Aron Jantzens, to sail from San Francisco November 28 on the SS Marine Swallow of the American President Lines. The Lord willing we are to arrive in Bombay, India, on December 29.

In many of your guest books we wrote "Jagdeeshpur" as our address. At the recent Missionary Conference held in India it became necessary to restation missionaries in order to man the field, and we have also been restationad. We are to go to Janjgir to take up work in the Bible School for the time being. The appointment came as a surprise to us, and we regret that we could not know it sooner and make the proper preparation. But we feel encouraged to go on when we remember that it will not be in our own strength and that many of you will be upholding us in your prayers. The work will be interesting and also difficult. It is to be expected that the present strong, nationalistic feeling will also be evident in various phases of the work of the church. We will need wisdom from on high and surely a larger measure of patience and understanding to meet conditions. But we believe we have a prayer-answering God who does not desire that any should perish but that all should come to know the redemption that is in Christ Jesus.

Our daughter Lois is happy in our appointment, for she will be only seven miles from Champa and the Bauman children, Betty, Harvella and Albert. And what is seven miles when you have bicycles, bullock carts and even Jeeps! During the winter months there is usually a temporary bridge over the Hasdeo river that cuts through between Champa and Janjgir. In March they will go up to school together.

We have had the privilege of being in many of your homes, in your churches and in larger gatherings. We have been richly blessed and want to thank each one who has had a part in making us feel at home while on furlough. You greatly encouraged us by wanting to know about our own work in India and we count it an honour to have been able to speak so often of the work dear to us. For those of you who can make it possible, we extend a hearty invitation to come out to India for the Jubilee celebration in 1950. We believe our mission is built upon a firm foundation and we are glad to belong to those who have laboured there. So, until we meet again, God bless you.

GROUP OPPOSED TO UNIVERSAL MILITARY TRAINING INTERVIEWS SENATOR CLYDE M. REED

Newton, Kansas, November 11, 1947.—A group of twenty persons, opposed to universal military training, interviewed Senator Clyde M. Reed at Wichita, Kansas, on November 11. Questioned as to what his position would be in regard to the conscientious objector, the Senator indicated that he would go far to uphold the rights of conscience but that he considered these rights in relation to the national welfare. When members of the group expressed their apprehension about militarizing effects that the proposed training would have upon the youth of America, the Senator declared that he did not share this apprehension. As far as his stand on universal military training is concerned, the Senator declared that if the choice lay between a large standing army or universal military training, he would favor the latter. However, he was not ready at this time with his decision as to what might be the most effective preparation for a future war. In regard to Russia, the Senator stated that the worst thing that we could do would be to try what he termed "moral suasion." The Senator expressed the conviction that this world would be a lot better off if the ideals of Jesus were followed. Mr. Reed gave about forty-five minutes time to the group which was composed of the pastor the Evangelical United Brethren Church of Newton and Mennonites of three different branches, most of whom were from Marion and Harvey counties.

GROUP INTERVIEWS CONGRESSMAN REES

North Newton, Kansas, November 11, 1947.—Dr. J. Winfield Fretz, Virgil Flickinger student at Bethel, Aaron Epp, pastor of the Inman Mennonite Church, and three laymembers of that church went to Emporia on November 11 and presented their point-of-view on conscription to Congressman Rees. The Congressman was noncommittal on the issue. The group also urged support of the Stratton Bill which would permit the immigration of refugees into the United States. The interview lasted about one-half hour.

Jottings

—Friedensberg Church, Avon, South Dakota: The annual harvest and mission festival was again observed. Orlando Waltners were the guest speakers. The services were both inspiring and challenging. The offering in the forenoon for relief amounted to $1,012, and that of the afternoon for missions was $774, quite generous offerings for this small country church!—Corr.

—Hebron Church, Buhler, Kansas: The Mission Workers, Candlelighters and Helping Hands extend a cordial invivation to their 1947 Mission Sale on November 23, 10:30 A. M. Besides the sale of articles, a short mission program will be rendered in the morning. A noon meal will be served.

—Last May, C. J. Rempel of the M.C.C. went to South America to: 1. Make available to the Mennonites there facts about the teaching of nonresistance. 2. Present to various South American governments facts about the Mennonites. 3. Continue negotiations for a possible migration of Mennonite refugees into Brazil and Argentina. Brother Rempel now reports that he was able to do something along the line of the first and second projects. However, both countries give little prospect for the settlement of Mennonite refugees. Brazil objects to the non-resistance of the Mennonites and to their desire to settle in large, compact colonies. Argentina is undergoing governmental changes and could not now handle such a large scale settlement as the M.C.C. would like to carry through. Mr. Rempel reports that Argentina officials had a good knowledge of the Mennonites because the refugees who had arrived there on the Volendam had attracted much attention. Brazilian officials, Mr. Rempel says, knew nothing about who or what the Mennonites were. One official thought that they were Jews because some of the Mennonites had names like Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

—Mr. Joe Weaver, who used to be with the National Service Board for Religious Objectors, Washington, D. C., and later with the Crossroads Coop, North Newton, Kansas, is now with CARE. His office has been transferred from New York to Philadelphia, where he works with the packaging. He reports that they use fifteen to twenty carloads of food in one day and put out 20,000 packages a day. Four hundred men work at this job on an assembly line basis. He reports that eggs are one dollar a dozen in New York. Mr. Weaver recently came to Kansas to get his family. They will live fifteen miles outside of Philadelphia.

—Salem Church, Dalton, Ohio: Rev. Paul Whitmer, retired minister living in Bluffton, Ohio, filled the pulpit during Rev. Rosenberger's absence November 2. Our congregation was accorded a special blessing in the visit of Rev. and Mrs. Samuel Moyer with us November 7 to 9. Their Bible studies and missionary messages demonstrated clearly the need for both education and evangelism on the mission field in India.

Besides evangelizing the multitudes, there must be built up Christian nuture through a teaching program, fellowship and prayer. Always there is a call for more missionaries. The far-off land of India was made real to us also by the Indian articles the Moyers showed us Sunday, November 2, the Women's Missionary Society gave a very well-planned and worthwhile program for the C. E.—Corr.

—Johannestal Church, Hillsboro, Kansas; Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Enns celebrated their Golden Wedding on November 9. Rev. and Mrs. J. M. Regier are spending the next two weeks in Omaha, Nebraska, with their daughter Winifred and other relatives. On November 16, David Janzen, and on November 23, Milton Harder, both ministerial students at Bethel College, shall be with us during Rev Regier's absence. We are planning on having our Harvest Thank Festival on Thanksgiving Day with Dr. H. A. Fast bringing us the morning message. Rev. and Mrs. Frank Enns from Africa shall be with us in the afternoon, and Rev. Sam Goering will show us pictures of the suffering and relief in Europe in the evening.—Mrs. Arnold A. Plenert, Corr.

—Salem Church, Munich, North Dakota: Rev. J. A. Tieszen, Marion, South Dakota and Missionary Cornelius Klassen from Ecuador, South America, were the guest speakers at our harvest and mission festival, October 5. The combined offerings for relief and foreign missions amounted to $1,900. Miss Elma Esau, M.C.C. relief worker, Rev. Don P. Shidler and Rev. and Mrs. Abram Dyck, missionaries to Ecuador, South America, were recent guest speakers in our church. The Bethany Bible School opened November 3, for another term. Rev. G. W. Schroeder is the instructor. The Be Ye Doers Mission Society sent twenty-nine blankets, one comforter and eighteen mending kits to the M.C.C. for relief.—Corr.

—Alberta Community Church, Portland, Oregon: Our Sunday school enrollment has increased from 70 to 128 in the last three years. The child evangelism classes were again started on October 15. These are held after school once each week. Miss Ruth Beard and Miss Ruth Nelson, students at Multnomah School of the Bible, are the instructors. Rev. and Mrs. Elmer Fricke, who plan to leave for India soon under the Ceylon and India General Mission, were in charge of the service on October 26 at the evening meeting. On October 23, a group from the church met at the parsonage to re-tie and upholster the davenport. The davenport is Conference property that is used at the church. The parsonage garage has received a new roof and other reinforcements recently. Mrs. S. S. Baumgartner donated her electric range to the parsonage also. It was very much appreciated.—Mrs. Homer Welty, Corr.

—Zion Church, Elbing, Kansas: Two carloads of flour for relief, which are sent through the M.C.C. to Europe, were dedicated Sunday, November 9, when our pastor, Rev. H. J. Dyck, based his message on I Chron. 29:10-18. The dedicatory prayer asked for safe transportation of and blessing upon the flour. The second part of the morning's service was devoted to "Prayer for the Rulers of the World," as requested by the M.C.C. I Tim. 2:1-4 was the text used by Rev. Walter H. Dyck. The necessity and importance of prayer for those in authority was stressed.—Mrs. Louis A. Janzen, Corr.

GREETINGS TO THE CHURCHES OF THE WESTERN DISTRICT CONFERENCE

For many years now the Mennonite group in the Fredonia area has endeavored to maintain itself by worshipping in a school house not far from Fredonia. At best this cannot be permanently satisfactory. So when the opportunity presented itself to them to secure their own house of worship they undertook, in consultation with the Home Mission Committee, to purchase a school house and move it to Fredonia.

Being a small group, the funds needed for this purpose are more than this group is able to raise. The Home Mission Committee having investigated the matter, therefore, wishes to recommend to the churches of the conference that when the First Mennonite Church of Fredonia appeals to them for funds, they receive such appeal in a spirit of Christian helpfulness, knowing that we are to bear one another's burdens.

It is suggested that all funds be given through the Home Mission Treasury, Rev. H. J. Dyck, Elbing, Kansas, Treasurer.—W. F. Unruh, Chairman; A. E. Funk, Secretary.

—Magdalen Friesen, M.C.C. relief worker, until recently in Amsterdam, Holland, wrote on November 6: "Marie Brunk and I will be leaving for Germany tomorrow in order to continue our immigration work among our Mennonite refugees in the U. S. Zone of Germany. It is a very satisfying kind of work and I am happy that the way has opened for us to go into Germany." Miss Friesen's new address will be: I.R.O. Team 1002; A.P.O. 154; Stuttgart, Germany; c/o Postmaster, New York.

—Saron Church, Orienta, Oklahoma: Rev. Homer Leisy, who was with us October 13-19, presented God's Word in a most blessed way. Other workers who presented their needs to us prior to this were: Miss Marie Stoesz, Office and Deputation Secretary to the Sudan United Mission, Brooklyn, New York, and sister to our pastor's wife; Misses Myrna Gage and Anna Fast, who are engaged in child evangelism work in Atlanta, Georgia, (Miss Fast is a sister to our pastor); E. W. Zimmerman of the Northern Bible Society, and lastly Miss Elisabeth Goertz, who gave us a very interesting evening as she related experiences from her mission work in China. Our contributions for purchasing flour for relief amounted to $2,372.50—Corr.

—The Zion Church, Souderton, Pa., has worked out a calendar of evening services for November and December. These services do not include those for the fifty senior high students in the Young People's Fellowship, who meet every Sunday evening. Sunday evening, November 23, Mrs. S. T. Moyer will speak, and the "Annual Missionary Thank-Offering" will be received by the Ladies Missionary Society. November 30, a religious drama, "American Saint of Democracy," by Fred Eastman will be presented in the auditorium. This one act play depicts the life of John Woolman, the noted Quaker of New Jersey who is now known as one of the greatest saints of Colonial America.

—Rev. A. E. Kreider spoke at a mission rally held in the Stirling Avenue Mennonite Church, Kitchener, Ontario, the week-end of November 8, 9.

—Professor N. Paul Stucky of Bethel College reports that he recently had four visits within twenty-four hours with Missionary Gerald Stucky of Colombia, South America, by means of short-wave radio. The shortest of the visits was forty minutes in length. Other friends also talked with Gerald Stucky, who was using a friend's short-wave set in Bogota. Brother Gerald Stucky hopes to get in touch again with Professor N. Paul Stucky sometime after Thanksgiving.

—Oklahoma Bible Academy, Meno, Oklahoma: Dr. Clarence Benson of Chicago will speak to the student body on December 4. Rev. Jacob J. Regier of Freeman, South Dakota, was the evangelist at services held November 10-14.

—Boynton Mennonite Church, Hopedale, Illinois: A youth rally was held on November 2 with Rev. Don Smucker of the Mennonite Biblical Seminary as speaker. The rally was held at the Peoria Mission, Peoria.

—Sister Sarah Rempel of the Mennonite Deaconess Hospital, Beatrice, Nebraska, recently visited with friends in the Newton, Kansas, community.

—Rev. W. C. Voth recently underwent an operation at the Bethel Hospital, Newton. He was released on November 7. The doctor has ordered him to keep off his feet rather generally for the next six weeks.

—Loren Gingerich, son of Dr. and Mrs. Gingerich, Goshen, Indiana, was fatally hurt in an automobile-bicycle accident on Nov. 7. Rev. Lester Hostetler of North Newton, Kansas, officiated at the funeral which was held in Goshen on November 10. Loren was baptized and received as a member of the Bethel College Church last spring. Dr. and Mrs. Gingerich and children lived at North Newton from 1941 to 1947 while Dr. Gingerich served as professor of history at Bethel College. Dr. Gingerich is now doing research and writing for the Mennonite Central Committee.

—Ernest Bachman, Newton, Kansas, is serving as district field worker for the Kansas Council of Churches in the Council's drive for wheat for relief. Mr. Bachman covers ten counties. Though middle-aged, Mr. Bachman went to Europe on a cattle boat shipment some time ago. Since that time he has been active in soliciting gifts for relief.

—Lehigh Mennonite Church, Lehigh, Kansas: An all-day sewing for relief in the church basement, with a hot lunch at noon, was carried out on November 12. A study club of young mothers was recently organized by our pastor's wife. They have chosen the name of Y.M.M. (Young Mennonite Matrons). They meet once a month in different home to review literature on "Building Christian Homes." This group will also do service projects for missions and relief. A "Candle Light Worship Service" is planned for our Thanksgiving service which is to be held in the evening.—Mrs. F.G.U., Corr.

He served for a period of over fifty years in the Sunday school as superintendent and teacher of the Men's Bible Class. For more than twenty-five years he served efficiently as secretary of the congregation. Four children were born into the union. Three survive: they are Huldah, teacher in the Oklahoma Bible Academy, Meno, Oklahoma, Byron here at home, and Dwight M., Petersburg, Virginia. Since the homegoing of Mrs. Myers in 1944, he spent most of his time with Dwight in Virginia, The end came August 31 when he fell asleep in the Lord.

Mr. Thatcher joined Flatland Mennonite Church October 30, 1887. When they moved to Quakertown, both Mr. and Mrs. Thatcher transferred their membership to Bethany Mennonite Church, September 16, 1938. After a sick period of several months the end came October 15, 1947.

His entire life was characterized by faithfulness and loyalty, intermingled with a wholesome sense of humor. In the Church and in the business world he had many friends, for he was a friend. He is also remembered as a benefactor of his church and of Eastern District Conference institutions. Preceding him in death are: a son, Russel F., born May 26, 1893, died June 24, 1894, and his wife, who died February 10th, 1911. Mourning his death are his daughter, Mrs. Robert Schmidt and her husband of 137 Seacliffe Road, Ocean City.

An Ancient Brick Speaks

by Eugene W. Nelson

Four thousand years ago, a man wrote a letter. Then, about four years ago, a bookkeeper, a chemist, and an archaeologist all teamed up and deciphered that same missive. Does this sound a little bit queer? Well, it's exactly what happened—and here's the story.

For a number of years now—about seventy-five or so—archaeologists have been digging among the ruins of many ancient towns in the Babylonian area. This area is located in Asia Minor between the Tigris and the Euphrates Rivers. Much of the "booty" from recent excavations has consisted of material that we may call "the contents of ancient Babylonian wastebaskets." That is, the finds have consisted of the clay tablets on which the men of those far-off times used to write, just as we of today write on paper. Ever since the archaeologists started systematically collecting these bricks—covered as they are with queer-looking letters, the scientists have been trying to work out some simple system for preserving and deciphering the correspondence contained on them.

Of course, the secret of translating the writing that appears on the clay tablets was solved many years ago. But that was just the beginning of a lot of trouble for the archaelogists. In the first place, the clay tablets were likely to be ruined before they could be read. In the second place, it took a trained museum worker so long to look up the exact meaning of each little mark on any one tablet that it began to look as though our own civilization would be gone before all the Babylonian correspondence was figured out. And these bricks contained a lot of interesting information, since among them were personal papers, business contracts, legal documents, schoolboys' exercise books, texts used in schools, to name but a few of the subjects covered.

The ancient Babylonians wrote with a triangular-pointed stylus instead of a pen or a lead pencil as we do. The writer jabbed his "pen" into a small piece of damp clay, making a series of wedge-shaped marks that scientists call"cuneiform," or "nail," writing. Usually the completed document of wet clay was dried in the sun. If the tablet were of some importance, however, it would be baked in a fire. Naturally, after these tablets had been buried for a few thousand years, they began to get rather squishy. So, when they were dug up, they were in danger of being mashed out of shape before the scholars could translate them.

Even when the talking bricks were successfully dried, they were often so crusted with mineral deposits that the writing couldn't be made out. That's where the chemist came in. A consulting chemist figured out a method whereby the soft, wet tablets

YOUR LIFE IS A SERMON

The good St. Francis of Assisi once stepped down into the cloisters of his monastery and, laying his hand on the shoulder of a young monk, said, "Brother, let us go down into the town and preach." So they went forth the venerable father and the young man. And they walked along upon their way conversing as they went. They wound their way down the principal streets, round the lowly alleys and lanes, and to the village beyond, till they found themselves back at the monastery again. Then said the young monk, "Father, when shall we begin to preach?" And the father looked kindly down upon his son and said: "My child, we have been preaching; we were preaching while we were walking. We have been seen—looked at; our behaviour has been remarked; and so we have delivered a morning sermon. Ah! my son, it is of no use that we walk anywhere to preach unless we preach as we walk."—Paxton Hood

Couldn't and Could

Couldn't and Could were two promising boys
Who lived not a great while ago.
They had just the same playmates and just the same toys,
And just the same chances for winning life's joys
And all that the years may bestow.

And Could soon found out he could fashion his life
On lines very much as he planned;
He could cultivate goodness and guard against strife,
And win with the watchword, "I can!"
He could have all his deeds with good cheer to be rife,
And build him a name that would stand.

But poor little Couldn't just couldn't pull through;
All the trials he met with a sigh;
When a task needed doing, he couldn't he knew;
And hence, when he couldn't, how could he? Could you—
If you couldn't determine you'd try?

So Could just kept building his way to success,
Not clouding his sky with a doubt;
But Couldn't strayed into the Slough of Distress.
Alas! and his end is easy to guess—
Strayed in, but he couldn't get out.

And that was the difference 'twixt Couldn't and Could:
Each followed his own chosen plan;
And when Couldn't just wouldn't Could earnestly would,
And where one of them weakened the other made good,
And won with this watchword, "I can!"

could be removed from a "dig," as an excavation site is called, dried in the sun, specially packed, and firmly baked to hardness in an electric furnace. Next, he concocted an acid solution that removed all mineral crusts without harming the clay. There still remained the problem of the slowness of translating. The Babylonians, like the Chinese, used so many symbols when writing that not even a brighter-than-average scholar can remember them all. This meant hours lost hunting through reference books when translating the tablets. That's where the bookkeeper helped. An archaeologist hired a bookkeeper who worked out a visual index system whereby the meaning of any Babylonian symbol could be found almost instantly.

And that's how a chemist, a bookkeeper, and archaeologists have opened the door to the personal lives of people whose civilization lies buried beneath desert sands, Since each tablet is dated—whether legal document or merely a private letter—the scientists have been able to find out a lot of hitherto unsuspected things about life in Babylon three thousand years ago. For instance, the archaeologists have actually worked out charts showing how wages and the cost of living played tag with each other during those times. Then as now the wages always lagged behind in the race!

The tablets also tell us how much trouble was caused in the Babylonian business world when women started to work in industry. Doesn't that sound like something out of yesterday's newspaper? Eventually, in Babylon, the women were replaced by slave labor, which the men bosses could control more easily. After that—at least, this is the way the clay tablets tell the story—there was peace and quiet in the city and business went on as before.

But not all of the talking bricks tell of weighty business deals or the succession of kings. Take this one, for instance. On a bit of hardened clay, as hard, no doubt, as the heart of the girl to whom it was addressed, was found this wail from a baffled Babylonian lover to the current light of his life:

"To Bilbea: May the gods for my sake preserve your health. Tell me how you are. I went to Babylon, but I did not see you. I was greatly disappointed. Write me the reason for your leaving so I may be cheered. For my sake, keep well always. Gimil."—Forward

Figs From Thistles?

by Kenneth Morse

"Can you gather grapes from thorns or figs from thistles?" Jesus asked the question.

Can you make a friend of your neighbor by treating him as an enemy? This is the method many nations use.

Can you encourage the discovery of truth by passing on rumors and propaganda? Many reporters and speakers think so.

Can you expect to receive honors for schoolwork when you can't be bothered to do your assignments? This is the attitude of some students.

Can you jazz up a stately hymn tune and expect to help people catch the meaning of its words? This is the method some song leaders and pianists use.

Can you grow into a strong healthy person highly respected by everyone as you drink, smoke and gamble? These are the habits of some capable young people.

Can you gather figs from thistles? Jesus asked the question. And his answer was "No." Only a good tree yields good fruit. Bad men can't devise a good peace. If you sow your wild oats you'll reap a wild harvest; and weeds grow fast, as every gardener knows.

If you treat a person or a nation as an enemy you lose the opportunity to win a friend. If you lie to save your skin, you may lose it along with your reputation for honesty. If you loaf through school, you may loaf through life and live on charity. If you jazz up a hymn you get jazz and forget the hymn. If you break the law of moderation in living, you pay the penalty of broken health and defeated living.

No, figs don't grow on thistles. The fruitage of your life is determined by the kind of person you are. Now, when you are young, is the time to put down deep roots into the fertile soil of your Christian faith. Dig deep, grow tall, stand stalwart against the storm and yield abundant fruit. Christians, like trees, are known by the fruit they bear.

Skillman Service Unit Opens

A service unit to function the year around has been announced by the Mennonite Central Committee. The new unit will be located at Skillman, New Jersey, at the Skillman State Village for Epileptics. The unit will accept volunteer members in the fall, winter, spring, and summer on November 1 and 15, February 1 and 15, May 1 and 15, and August 1 and 15. Miss Amanda Ediger, graduate of Bethel College, who has had extensive experience in similar service units at Ypsilanti, Michigan, Gulfport Mississippi, and settlement house work in Chicago, is the director of the unit.

Work in an institution for epileptics has a great variety of opportunities for service. The patients may be brilliant, average or dull. They may be mentally ill or normal. The reason they are in Skillman is because they were unable to adjust to normal life. In the main, the cases in the institution are mentally ill or mentally deficient since these are the ones who find it most difficult to adjust to life situations.

The institution is in great need of attendant help in the Village. It is established on a cottage plan making each unit small and more family like. At present the numerous cottages are short-staffed thus making the unit one that would be greatly appreciated by the officials. The hospital staff is very considerate and interested in the workers at the institution.

Volunteers receive the regular attendants wages, having the same status as regular attendants.

Skillman Village is located half way between New York and Philadelphia. It is seven miles from Princeton University. The opportunities to see the ocean and cities of the East are added free-time attractions. Skillman is about 100 miles from Akron, Pa.

Those desiring more information on Skillman can get it by writing to Voluntary Services, Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pennsylvania. Other winter and one year units are at Gulfport, Mississippi, and in Mexico.

Let Me Be Captured by a Cause

A Young Person's Prayer

LORD GOD, I confess unto thee my grievous sins of self-absorption.

Forgive me my wanderings of mind and will in the narrow confines of my one small self.

Pull me out of this small world by capturing me in thy Cause.

Grant me a purpose for which to live, a purpose that in some way is measured by thy will.

Through my cause lay thou the destinies and hopes of other men heavily upon my heart.

Let my cause cost me something, but grant me the joy of loving it with all my mind and heart and life.

Sanctify me through the perils of my cause. Hallow me in its heroisms. Stiffen me in its stern decisions. Baptize me in the necessities it imposes upon me. So let us achieve in it joy and power.

In the name of One who said of his cause, "And how am I straitened till it be accomplished!" Amen.

I sense here and there little signs that men and women are looking toward the Mennonite formulation of the faith with a new keenness of interest, a new receptive spirit. In Berlin I spoke to a leading Protestant churchman who said, "I wish the Mennonites had great writers and spokesman—they have in their past a message for Germany today." The man who said these words spoke out of great conviction, for he is one who had to pay the price of several years in a concentration camp.—Robert S. Kreider, Berlin, Germany.

SERVICE OPPORTUNITIES AT MCC HEADQUARTERS

The MCC offices at Akron are in immediate need of qualified competent stenographers. Girls who have had training and experience in office and secretarial work and who are interested in this type of Christian service would find the Akron office experience intensely interesting and gratifying. At Akron one can obtain that balanced "cross-road's glance" of Mennonite service activities by being in direct touch with the various phases of MCC work—relief, mental health service, voluntary service, refugee service, peace and others, together with fellowshipping and working side by side with other fellow Christian workers.

In addition to stenographers, a research assistant and two young men capable of serving in the offices in semi-administrative capacities are also needed.

Anyone interested and available should contact the Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pennsylvania at once for further information. Recommendations or advice of anyone probably available will also be appreciated.

How To Detect Propaganda

We are fooled by propaganda chiefly because we don't recognize it when we see it. It may be fun to be fooled, but it is more fun to know. We can more easily recognize propaganda when we see it if we are familiar with the seven common devices used by propagandists. These are:

1. The Name Calling Device. This device casts a slur at the thing one opposes. Negroes become niggers, Russians become reds and there is a cut in the voice. He says, "Those Jews" with an inflection that reveals disapproval.

2. The Glittering Generalities Device. Here, rather than face the issue and honestly analyse the problem, nothing but scintillating generalizations are made. It is nice to listen to, but when all is said, nothing has been said. The issue at stake has been skipped.

3. The Transfer Device. Rather than face the issue, the matter is avoided and attention is transferred to an area where the propagandist is on surer ground.

4. The Testimonial Device. By getting a bunch of names which people respect and admire under testimonies favoring the cause being presented, the propagandist convinces people.

5. The Plain Folks Device. The Presidential candidate has his picture taken out on his farm with his overalls and he is gingerly patting a cow.

6. The Card Stacking Device. The confidential note that this man will win!

7. The Band Wagon Device. Aw, come on, everybody is doing it! It is the popular thing. You're just not "on board" unless you "join up."

Why are we fooled by these devices? Because they appeal to our emotions rather than to our reason. They make us believe and do something we would not believe or do if we thought about it calmly, dispassionately. In examining these devices, note that they work most effectively at those times when we are too lazy to think for ourselves; also they tie into emotions which sway us to be "for" or "against" nations, races, religions, ideals, economic and political policies and practices, and so on through automobiles, toothpaste, soap suds and the other thing one hears sung about on the radio.

With the coming debate on Universal Military Training, these techniques will again be swaying people. Check up on yourself by measuring what is said by these seven measuring sticks.—Portions from Intercollegian

YES, GOD SPEAKS

by B. Bargen

The question, "Does God speak to us?" is not debatable. Yes, He speaks.

This morning we had a little experience in which, we thought, He spoke to us directly. Would you like to hear the story?

Mrs. T. A. van der Smissen, who, as you know, is editor of the JUNIOR MESSENGER, sent us about a month and a half ago a mat which is used by a printer to form a picture from hot lead. We had promised to return the mat to Mrs. van der Smissen when the printer finished using it in the August 17 issue of the JUNIOR MESSENGER. Thinking that we likely had forgotten it— and we had!—she wrote us a few weeks ago asking whether we would be so kind as to return the mat to her, since she had promised to return it to the MCC Headquarters. So we called the printers and asked them to return it to us and they said they would. After several days when it had not been returned, we called again, and they told us that it had been delivered and laid on the desk in the Publication Office. That is strange! We usually know what is on our desk.

Conferring with the girls in the shoproom at the rear of the Headquarters Building we discovered that the mat had, actually, been returned, but not knowing what it was they had thrown it in the waste-basket, and it had been taken out by the janitor for disposal. Rummaging through the accumulated waste of a week or ten days failed to reveal the mat. We would have to see the janitor when he came back.

When he came back we forgot to talk to him about it, and the next morning we recalled that we must talk to the janitor about it. When the janitor came, we again forgot it. And while he was outside sweeping the sidewalk, the thought came to us, "We must immediately now, before we forget it again, speak to the janitor and ask him to bring us the mat." Then the thought came to us that surely God does not wish us to jump up from our desk at every little impulse. His spirit guides; He will surely remind us when the janitor comes by the desk on his way in from sweeping outside.

Nothing was said about this thought of confidence to anyone, but we went about our task at our desk, piled high with the work of the morning.

When the janitor came in from his outside sweeping, our mind fully occupied with the work at our desk, we failed to notice him. Only ten minutes later when one of the girls from the back room came saying, "Here is the mat you were looking for," did we realize that God's Spirit conveys the messages in His own way, in His own time.

You say, "Yes, but that is such a little incident." Indeed, it is a little incident, and God speaks to us in the little ways. We are reminded—and from this let us be cautious—of a little proverb which we learned when we were still young, "Wer das Kleine nicht ehrt ist das Grosse nicht wehrt."

Yes, God speaks!

Christian Stewardship is the practice of systematic and proportionate giving of

Time,
Abilities and Material Possessions

based on the conviction that these are a trust from God, to be used in His service for the benefit of all mankind

How are You Fulfilling Your Trust?

"Let us invest now: time, talent, and possessions for eternity to come."

A true steward is one who manages or superintends the affairs of another. Jesus said "Occupy until I come." These imperative words must challenge the very life of every one, who has appropriated salvation by faith, through the blood of Jesus Christ to dedication. To experience a personal acquaintance with Him as was the case with the Macedonian Christians, is God's gift unto us. Though great trial of affliction and deep poverty was the lot of the Macedonian believers, yet because of an experienced joy in Christ Jesus, "they first gave their ownselves to the Lord" in view of Christian service, which resulted in the liberality of their gifts. The Macedonian approach to this vital topic of stewardship gives us the Christian clue as to the method which is honorable to God and will produce the desired results.

To dedicate our life to God is to say with Samuel, "Speak Lord, thy servant heareth," backed with true obedience. To experience such daily relationship with Him is to make us keenly aware of these things which are at our disposal and which God can effectively use to promote His worthy cause.

Every Christian steward, who seeks to do the bidding of his Saviour, must become a conscientious dispenser of Time. Life is but a divine loan. We are responsible for the interest it bears. Time today is man's opportunity to utilize to the utmost for God our "Creditor." Eternity is God's day for striking the balance. If we consider time as a trust from God, then we have nothing to fear as to what God's time scale will reveal in the light of eternity. Are we minute men for God? Again every, Christian steward, who is conscientious in God's business, must exercise his abilities to the fullest capacity. Maybe you are gifted in one or more of the following fields: music, speech, artistry, accounting, farming, etc. But the question is, do you consider your particular talent as a "Trust-Token" for God? Claiming a selfish ownership is not enough. This gift, this talent of yours will prove a real asset to your personal life only, as you convert it into a channel for personal service to the glory of God. The Lord Jesus Christ today stands as the peerless Prince of Givers, because He gave what He had for the redemption of a sin cursed world. Are we unselfishly outpouring ourselves through our God-given talents to the glory of Him that loved us and gave Himself for us?

Lastly, every Christian steward must consider himself a co-partner with God. Thus he must give not only of time and talent but also of his possessions, be they few or many. In order to pass the test of giving of our possessions, we must look to Him, our chief Partner, Who gave us a costly and eternal pattern as revealed in John 3:16.

"The height of His giving was Love.
The depth of His giving was Christ.
The breadth of His giving was the World.
The length of His give is Life."

If we in our Christian stewardship will be governed by this simple but effective pattern, then it will be: Love that constrains us to give of our ability and our possessions. Sacrifice will be the test of that love and devotion. The World will be the extent of our vision and mission. Eternal salvation to the lost, and edification to the redeemed will be the Alpha and Omega result of Christian stewardship. Let us invest now: time, talent, and possessions for eternity to come. —By Jacob J. Regier, Pastor of the Salem-Zion Mennonite Church, Freeman, South Dakota.

You Are Urged To Contact Key Congressmen and Senators on U.M.T.

November 17 was the opening day of the special session of Congress. Shall we in a special way remember our government officials in prayer as they seek ways and means to lead, direct, and protect our country and people.

At this session the question of Universal Military Training will very likely be acted upon. We who are opposed to Universal Military Training should make it a point to let our congressmen and senators know how we feel about conscription and why we oppose it. The senators and representatives are our representatives. If we will let them know what we want and let them feel that we have confidence in them, it will help them to make the right decisions.

We can be sure that they will appreciate a personal letter, a telephone call, or a telegram.

Following is a list of names of key congressmen and senators whose attitude on Universal Military Training will strongly influence House and Senate Action.—H. B. Schmidt in behalf of the Peace Committee of the Western District Conference.

Hasseoveo, a Beloved Christian!

by Mrs. Rodolphe Petter

A RAP on my back door . . . . It was the orderly from the local, large government hospital, which now only serves as a clinic, since the Crow and the Northern Cheyenne reservations have been consolidated. This orderly runs the ambulance which takes Cheyenne patients back and forth to the Crow Agency hospital.

I greeted him . . . . In low voice he said hesitatingly, "The nurse sent me over to tell you Emma died on the operating table" . . . . Things suddenly got black before my eyes. I reeled and clutched the door for support . . . . In very agony of soul my thought was that it could not be possible. Why should my own wound in the process of healing so soon receive a new thrust and bleed again?

The news flew as on wings . . . . "Hasseoveo is dead" . . . . Not a house or hut or tent whose occupants did not bow in grief . . . . Only the other day we saw her walking with brisk step on errands of mercy and kindness. Just the Sunday before she had occupied the pulpit with me, and given her usual fine message to her people.

One Indian had just recently said to me, "Why not ordain Hasseoveo for the ministry? . . . . Although a woman, she is capable as the men. Her life is consistent. She knows the Word and speaks well. We all love her." My cousin from Ohio who visited me this summer said, "The quiet, reverent, devotional service, when Emma assisted you in the pulpit, was so fine, although I understood not a word of the Cheyenne. God was there and I was blest!"

Hasseoveo's parents were part Cheyenne and part Sioux. They lived at Pine Ridge, South Dakota, before coming to Montana. The father's name was translated Rolling Bull, and he served as scout under General Miles at Ft. Keogh near the present site of Miles City. Later he served as policeman at the Lame Deer Agency, up to the time of his death.

He had nine children. Emma was the youngest, born on the Muddy, which is a small stream running parallel to the Lame Deer Creek, both emptying into the Rosebud and finally into the Yellowstone River. Emma's mother died when she was quite small, after which "old lady Rondeau," as she was called, took care of her.

At six years of age, she was placed in the Catholic mission school at Ashland. When eight years of age, she was transferred to a large Catholic mission school near Ft. Shaw and Great Falls in northern Montana. She remained there eight years. When eighteen years of age, she married Marion King. Eight children were born to this union, among them James who attended Bethel College last spring, having been in the army over four years, mostly at an airfield in Texas, and then in the South Pacific, particularly on Okinawa and Iwo Shima.

From childhood, Emma had a thirst for God and things holy. She sought the Truth and reveled in it. The Word of God was her meat and drink. More than that, she lived her religion. She lived to serve. She not only served her home and family, but she continually reached out to serve others. Her natural gifts made her service increasingly valuable. She was intelligent and well informed in a wide range of subjects, ever eager to learn and to grow.

She was at home in the kitchen, the laundry, the sewing room, the sick room, the nursery. She was a valuable aid to the nurses and the doctors, especially to the field matron in her camp visitations. Emma not only knew her own rich mother tongue, but she spoke English correctly and fluently. She delighted in the Cheyenne Scriptures and read whole books of it at a time. "We have such a beautiful language, and the translations are so marvelous" was her frequent comment when she discovered some new pearl of expression.

Emma served eagerly in the church, and when emergency called she gave able messages from the pulpit. She and Milton both spoke at the Cheyenne burial service of my husband. Her strong faith in God led her to abound in all kinds of service, ever fervent in spirit, instant in prayer, absolutely trustworthy and faithful.

The nurses loved her dearly. They placed a beautiful floral tribute on her casket, with white ribbons and gold lettering, "Mother of the Northern Cheyenne tribe." One nurse, while weeping bitterly, moaned "We will never, never, never have another Emma."

It was in 1919 that Hasseoveo and her husband were convicted, by a whole series of Cheyenne sermons my husband preached on the ten commandments, to bare to us missionaries and to the general public the secret, devilish demoralizing ceremonies of the Cheyenne priesthood. Marion had been initiated, and his wife according to Indian custom was obliged to be his accomplice. Both had been staunch Catholics. Both joined our church.

In the uproarious weeks and months that followed these revelations when Emma had given the decisive word at the Agency before the superintendent of the reservation, my husband, and a whole roomful of enraged medicine men she never weakened. Those were stirring experiences. Those were the days of Vohokass, Yellowfox, Ironhand, Vxzeta, Matae Esevona and others. The heathen raged. Psalm 2 was our confidence. We rejoiced that the very core of heathendom had been reached by the gospel and its power broken . . . . It may raise its ugly head again and again, but the message of God has been sounded forth and has brought conviction . . . . Three other initiated women were emboldened to give testimony and break with such a diabolic religious system and accept Christ.

We gave Hasseoveo a fitting burial. James directed all the arrangements with loving devotion to his mother, who had borne him up in prevailing prayer all through the war so that he never needed to carry a gun, not even on parade. Ex-service boys, who helped defeat the Japanese at Attu, share in levelling Naha on Okinawa, served in the Philippines, the isles of the South Pacific, and one who served in North Africa, Corsica, Italy, France and who as engineer helped construct the bridges that enabled the allies to cross the Rhine—all neatly dressed in civilian clothes—tenderly bore her body to its last resting place.

Floral tributes were many and beautiful. The church was crowded. Brother Habegger directed the service. Brother Wenger gave the English message. At the request of the family, William Fightingbear gave the Cheyenne message. Mrs. Wenger played . . . . I prepared and gave the obituary, and before the close Brother Habegger sang a beautiful solo, "My task."

Emma had given a ringing testimony to her faith just before her operation, when the Baptist missionary's wife visited her . . . . Other patients in the room were strangely moved by her joy and her utter confidence in the Word. In the language of the poet, she approached her grave like one who wraps the drapery of his couch about him and lies down to pleasant dreams. The Scriptures assure us that such as she receive the glad welcome, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

Emma embodied all that makes a devoted Christian mother. It was this that inspired a former lady stenographer here at the Agency, now in Seattle, to dedicate the following verses to the bereaved children:

Mother dear, we miss you so
Miss you as you come and go
Miss your form and kindly face
Miss your smile and tender grace.

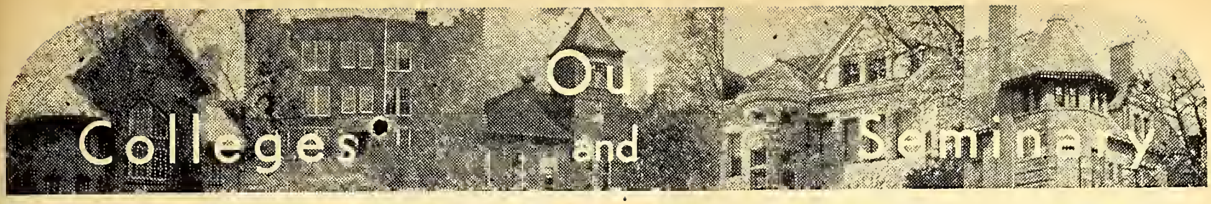
We are very sure and certain
No one else can fill your place
Among your friends and precious loved ones;
All your life was full of grace.

You've set us all a grand example
Of the Christian virtues true,
Whatever good we have acquired,
We, your children, owe to you.

We would not dare to wish you back
From realms so fair and bright.
You've earned the Master's words, "Well done"
For works of peace and light.

So rest, our mother dearest one,
Until the Master bids you go
On other tasks in His dear Name;
Your life in heaven is just begun.

The memory of your precious life
Will bless our Tribe and white men too,
Will draw them nearer unto God
Will make them faithful, kind and true.



CANADIAN BIBLE FREEMAN BLUFFTON BETHEL SEMINARY

MENNONITE BIBLICAL SEMINARY NEWS

During the past few weeks prayer meetings have been led by Alvin Franz of Lind, Washington, and Norman Abrahams of Hillsboro, Kansas. The latter individual is a non-seminary student who lives with us while attending the Illinois School of Optometry. The bimonthly fellowship meeting was led by Esko Loewen and Jacob Goering reporting on the Inter-Seminary Conference at Miami University, Oxford, Ohio, last June where 600 theological students met representing 121 schools and 47 denominations.

The quartet presented a program in Topeka and Nappanee, Indiana, on Sunday, November 16. On this same date Dr. S. F. Pannabecker preached in the First Mennonite Church in Chicago and Don. E. Smucker conducted the services at Pulaski, Iowa.

The new Seminary Bulletin should be in the mail by this time, containing among other things an important article on the history of Mennonite theological education by Dr. S. F. Pannabecker.

FREEMAN JUNIOR COLLEGE

Rev. Orlando Goering and Rev. Louis Linscheid attended the Northern District Ministerial Conference at Henderson, Nebraska. Rev Linscheid is a member of the Northern District Conference Program Committee, which will meet at the same time. Miss Ratzlaff gave a chapel report of the work of the summer service unit at the Rosthern Saskatchewan Youth Farm of which she was the leader. Dean Gross was ill for a few days last week. The Christian Youth Volunteers gave a program at the Silver Lake M. B. Church Sunday night. Leading chapel devotions this week were President Unruh and Prof. Benno Toews. The John Anglin Concert sponsored by the College was well rendered and very much enjoyed by the audience. Anglin is a talented young negro tenor.

BLUFFTON COLLEGE

The student-faculty relief committee sponsored a campaign to buy CARE packages for European relief. The goal of $150 for this purpose was reached. On November 12 the YM and YWCA sponsored the showing of the motion picture, "The Way of Peace." Bayard Rustin, negro representative of the Friends Service Committee, was a campus speaker November 11. For the chapel service he spoke on American-Soviet relations. During the day he discussed the problems of peace with various campus groups. In the evening he spoke on the non-resistant way of life in the First Mennonite Church. December 3 Dr. M. L. Pool, Ohio State University, will give an illustrated lecture on "Atomic Energy and the Bikini Experiment." Dr. Pool witnessed this experiment. He will use slides and motion pictures to illustrate his lecture. The purpose of the lecture is to inform people of the dangers if we drift into another war.

STRONG MUSIC DEPARTMENT AT CMBC

The need for good musical training among the Canadian youth has long been felt by the Conference leaders. It is of great significance that a strong music department be developed in our Canadian Mennonite Bible College. Mr. John Conrad, who is the head of this department is well known as a violin instructor in the Bornhoff School of Music. During the past three years, his students have won eleven medals in the Royal Conservatory of Music, Toronto. Other instructors are: Mrs. Helen Regier, A. T. C. M. Piano, Miss Irma Conrad, A. T. C. M. Piano, and Miss Annetta de Graaff, Holland, Voice.

Sunday, November 16, the College Choir rendered a musical program at Altona and Gretna. A bus was chartered for this occasion. The theme for our deputation work has been, "We would see Jesus." Readings, special numbers and talks are centered around this theme. It has proved to be inspirational and a blessing to all.

DEDICATE GENERAL FARM SHOP AT BETHEL

The new General Farm shop on the Bethel campus was dedicated at the Friday afternoon session of the Rural Life Conference which met at Bethel College on November 14 and 15. President E. G. Kaufman led the dedicatory services which took place in one of the large rooms of the new building. Several short talks were given. Melvin Klassen represented the students who will study agriculture, farm mechanics, and industrial arts in the shop beginning next quarter. Mr. Jonas Voran of Moundridge, Kansas, who is active in Harvey County soil conservation work, discussed the importance of such a building and the courses it makes possible in a farming community. Dr. Kollmorgan of the University of Kansas also made a few remarks. Miss Clara Franz read a letter written especially for the services by her father, Julius Franz of Lind, Washington. Mr. Franz represented Franz families whose generous contributions added to gifts from other friends made possible the new building. This addition to the Bethel College plant will be used by the agriculture and industrial arts departments of the College.

Mennonite Refugees Leave for Canada

by Arthur A. Voth

On Tuesday, October 7, 1947, the Mennonite refugee population of Germany was decreased by 125. Although this number is small when compared to the number that still remain—roughly 10,000—it is by far the largest single group that has left for Canada.

Promptly at 1:30 the train with its refugee "cargo"—they came in box cars—rolled in and stopped along the side of the ship at a distance of sixty yards from the ship. Crowded around the doors of the cars one could see 835 people with happy, smiling faces. That morning they had left the Diepholz Camp, where they had been assembled during the previous week. About half of the group were going to Canada on the "Close Relatives Scheme" and the others were lumber and household workers.

At Diepholz each had received a number, from 1 to 835, and that was the order in which they were to board the ship. At 1:45 the arrangements had been completed and the officials asked those in the first two cars to climb out; with the visum in their right hand and the cabin baggage in their left hand, or in both hands, they lined up in the order in which they had received their numbers. Those with considerable baggage, and especially mothers with children, had a bit of difficulty to walk along in the line, and then also have that precious document, their visum, ready. As soon as the first ones started up the gang plank, those in the third car climbed out; thus the process continued. The children especially could hardly wait until it was their turn to board the ship.

The people that walked up the gangplank of the Heintzelman yesterday afternoon had one thing in common—they were all overjoyed over the fact that they were now actually leaving; yes, they were sure of it now, for the first time. Outside of this one factor there were great differences between the various individuals and family groups. There were the husky lumber workers and the women who would work in hospitals and other public institutions and in private homes. But there was most variation within the third and largest group.

Thinking now of the Mennonites, there was the Reimer family consisting of the father and mother in their forties and the six children ranging in age from twenty years to one year. There were the two Neustaedter orphans, ages fourteen and twelve, traveling with friends. The oldest member was grandfather Foht, a seventy-nine-year-old widower, who several years ago had to leave his home in Poland. Included was also Frau Reimer, a widow of thirty-one years of age, with her two small children.

A Man's Thanksgiving: God of commonsense, I give Thee thanks for the heavy blows of pain that drive me back from perilous ways into harmony with the laws of my being; for stinging whips of hunger and cold that urge to bitter strivings and glorious achievement; for steepness and roughness of the way and staunch virtues gained by climbing over jagged rocks of hardship and stumbling through dark and pathless sloughs of discouragement; for the acid blight of failure that has burned out of me all thought of easy victory and toughened my sinews for fiercer battles and greater triumphs; for mistakes I have made, and the priceless lessons I have learned from them; for disillusion and disappointment that have cleared my vision and spurred my desire; for strong appetites and passions and the power they give when under pressure and control; for my imperfections that give me the keen delight of striving toward perfection. God of common good and human brotherhood, I give Thee thanks for siren songs of temptation that lure and entangle and the understanding of other men they reveal; for the weaknesses and failings of my neighbors and the joy of lending a helping hand; for my own shortcomings, sorrows and loneliness, that give me a deeper sympathy for others; for ingratitude and misunderstanding and the gladness of service without other reward than self-expression.—Arthur W. Newcomb. Taken from Elbert Hubbard's Scrap Book, p. 23; Wm. H. Wise & Co., Roycroft Distributors, New York City, 1923.

Often, as I watched the people climb out of the cars, line up, walk up the gangplank, my thoughts went back eight months, to January 31 and February 1. Yes, it was the same harbor, but how different circumstances and conditions must have been for those 2,304 that boarded the Volendam! Again, in a very definite way, I was filled with a feeling of thankfulness to God for His wonderful, miraculous leading during those difficult, tense days and hours.

The that whole procedure was smoothly and efficently carried out is evidenced by the fact that fifty minutes after the first person had stepped on the gangplank they were all on board. Once on board, the women were directed to the left and the men to the right. They were then shown to their "cabins" on Deck E, which consisted of dormitories accommodating up to fórty people—and this was using only two of the four-decker beds; the ship still had troop accommodation.

The whole ship was neat and clean. Meals will be served cafeteria style, as the people pass by with their trays. Lest they eat too much at first, they will be served a standard helping the first four days. During the remainder of the trip to Halifax they will have the privilege of coming back for seconds. This plan was undoubtedly instituted for two reasons. The first is that as a precaution against sea sickness it is well to eat regularly but not too heavily, and the second is that, having lived on such meager rations for years, the digestive system would need to adjust itself to a heavier, normal diet.

On board ship I visited with a number of our people for several minutes. After long years of persecution, fleeing, suffering, longing, waiting, and last-minute uncertainties they could not, even now, realize that they were really, definitely, on their way to a new home, to a land of freedom and plenty, to waiting relatives and friends. Yes, it will take even a longer period of time than the ocean voyage for them to realize what has taken place in their lives.

It was a privilege to be at Bremerhaven to see this group come into the harbor area, board the General Stuart Heintzelman, and be with them during their last few hours in Europe. May God continue to bless them during their ocean voyage and as they begin life anew in the New World.

Long, long ago when the heathen still persecuted the Christians, there lived in the Roman Empire a fine, Christian boy about twelve years of age, and his name was Cyrillus. The story of this boy and how he came to be one of the first martyr-witnesses to the Christian faith is interestingly told by Jacob H. Janzen in his book, TALES FROM MENNONITE HISTORY If you are looking for interesting reading material for your children, as background for our Mennonite faith today, don't fail to get this little book for them, available through your Conference book stores.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S QUARTERLY

VOL. XII NO. 1
FIRST QUARTER 1948

Introducing
The NEW YOUNG PEOPLE'S Quarterly

For sometime there has been a feeling that more should be done to provide adequately for our young people of high school age and above, in the area of Sunday school literature. The Curriculum Committee, in session at Aberdeen, Idaho, June 10 to 13, 1947, recommended to the Board of Education the "preparation of a Young People's Quarterly, to be ready by January, 1948, by substituting a Discussion Section for Young People."

This action was confirmed by the Board of Education and endorsed by the General Conference at Berne, Indiana.

Beginning with January, 1948, the present SENIOR-ADULT QUARTERLY will remain the same as in the past with the exception of a new name and cover. It will henceforth be called the ADULT QUARTERLY, and the YOUNG PEOPLE'S QUARTERLY will be added to our list of Sunday school publications, with a discussion section designed specifically for young people of high school age and above.

We are asking various ones who have had experience with this age group to contribute, and may we emphasize that this is, to a large extent, an experiment. We trust that those who use it will feel free to send in their suggestions and criticisms.

—Ronald von Riesen, Editor.

ber 2, basing his thoughts on the concluding chapter of the booklet, The Power of Love. He stated that our churches must offer our young people something definite and constructive in order to live our daily lives in the non-resisting and peaceful way which Christ taught on the Sermon on the Mount. Mrs. Myron G. Stucky, Corr.

—Zion Church, Souderton, Pa., The fourth annual presentation of Handel's Messiah will be given on the evening of December 7.

—Missionary Leonard Wiebe writes from Tuba City, Arizona: "We have received several Christmas boxes already, some coming through in fine shape and others breaking. Two boxes came into the post office at Tuba City yesterday broken open, one so badly it was left in the mail bag for the receiver. Will the senders please see that the boxes or cartons are strong and very securely tied. Christmas is coming and with the increase of mail the boxes must be extra secure."

—Missionaries Leave: Rev. Howard G. Nyce, Executive Secretary of the Foreign Mission Board, wrote on November 13, "Yesterday the Burkhalters and Desters left New York for India. I am glad to report that Miss Fast's passport has now been granted and that she is scheduled to sail with the Lester Wuthrichs on the Dolly Turman from Houston, Texas, about the twenty-fifth of this month."

—First Church, Hutchinson, Kansas: Final evangelistic services conducted by Rev. Marvin J. Dirks of the Mennonite Biblical Seminary came to a close November 9. The meetings were very well attended. Rev. Dirks, who is a proficient musician, conducted a choir each evening after the service.—Mrs. J. S. Friesen, Corr.

—Bethel Church, Fortuna, Missouri: We were blessed by the messages brought by Rev. J. J. Esau, October 26-November 2. Rev. Harry Yoder, who solicited here in the interest of Bluffton College, brought the message November 9 and showed interesting pictures in the evening. Our Women's Missionary Society is doing sewing for relief, collecting, and completing mending kits. Our midweek prayer meeting and Bible study is again held in the homes. Rev. P. P. Hilty is confined to his room as a result of several broken ribs. Louise Gerber, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ira Gerber, was married to Hassel Henderson, and Mary Gene Hofsetter, daughter of Ruf Hofsetters, was married to Robert Coale.—Corr.

—Rev. Maynard Shelly, pastor of the Boynton Mennonite Church, Hopedale, Illinois, spoke at a combined meeting of the Pekin and Boynton C. E.'s on the European Tour in which he took part this past summer.

—Deep Run, Pa. One hundred forty-five new garments and 278 pounds of used garments for relief have been sent to Akron, Pa., by the women of our congregation. Our relief worker, Marvin Wasser, has been transferred to France. Rev. Herbert Fretz, together with other pastors called on our new Pennsylvania Senator Lichtenwalter recently to oppose peace-time Conscription.—Mae Gross, Corr.

—Salem Church, Freeman, South Dakota. The total receipts in the flour drive amounted to $4,879.59. Rev. and Mrs. Orlando Waltner were in our church for Mission Festival Sunday. In the evening, pictures of their work in India were shown. The pictures showed the work there from a most interesting angle and were much appreciated by the audience. Rev. and Mrs. Claassen were called to Kansas because of the death of Mrs. Claassen's brother. The ladies have packed the goods for relief. This included new and used garments, comforters, and canned and dried foods.—Elma Waltner, Corr.

—First Church, Bluffton, Ohio: Tuesday evening, November 1, Bayard Rustin, negro representative of the Friends Service Committee and Field Secretary of the Racial and Industrial Section of the Fellowship of Reconiliation, presented a most inspiring and challenging message on "Ameria's Responsibility for Peace." Mr. Rustin also sang a negro spiritual, "The Lord Gave Me a Life To Shine."—Mrs. N. Laurence Burkhalter, Corr.

—Hebron Church, Buhler, Kansas: A total of thirty-three mending kits and thirty-three shoe kits have been been prepared for overseas relief. The Hebron church observed its annual all-day Harvest Mission Festival November 9. Rev. J. W. Nickel, our pastor, delivered the sermon in the forenoon. For the afternoon's mission program our speakers were Puran Banwar, a native of India, and Rev. C. E. Rediger, executive secretary of the Congo Inland Mission. In the evening Rev. Rediger showed pictures of the mission-field of the African Congo. A collection was held at each session, giving us a total of $1,725.51. Of this amount $791.50 was given for relief, $427.70 to foreign missions, and 506.31 to the Friendship Train fund. An interesting C. E. program was given in our church Sunday evening November 16. The deacons were asked to make the program, and the requirement for anyone rendering a number was to have been married twenty years or more.—Mrs. Arthur Neufeldt, Corr.

—West Zion, Moundridge, Kansas: November 9 was observed as a Day of Prayer for Russia and for peace. Sister Lena Mae spoke at our morning service on November 16. The Eden Men's chorus presented a program of sacred music the same evening. We will observe our Annual Harvest Mission Festival on November 23. Rev. Walter H. Dyck will be the guest speaker at both morning and evening services. On the evening of November 19 there will be a roundtable discussion in our church basement on the question of what our Christian attitude toward universal military training should be. The Mission Workers will entertain their husbands as guests at a dinner on November 18, at which time Mr. Menno Schrag, Editor of the Mennonite Weekly Review, will show his pictures of the Holy Land. The ladies of our church made peach preserves, and with the help of the men canned beef for relief. Some of our men will help load a carload for relief to join up with the "Friendship Train"—Mrs. Ernest Miller, Corr.

—First Church, Pretty Prairie, Kansas: The portable canner was here November 13 through 15, and the congregation canned 5,273 quarts of beef, pork, lard and chicken for relief. This is an average of nine quarts per member. The Ladies Sewing Society prepared a number of "Shoe Repair Kits" and "Mending Kits." The Ladies' Sewing Society of the Bethany Church gave us an exchange program here last week. Missionary and Mrs. Orlando K. Waltner will show pictures and tell of experiences Tuesday night, November 18. The two Puerto Rican girl students at Bethel College spoke to us at our last Christian Endeavor program. The Eden Christian Endeavor will give us an exchange program, November 30.—Ralph Krehbiel, Corr.

—Mrs. O. J. Sommer of Pekin, Illinois, passed away November 12, and was buried November 18. Mrs. Robert Kreider, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. J. Sommer, flew from Germany to the United States to be present at the funeral.

—Bethel College Church: Francisca Santos, Lydia Santos, Puerto Rico; H. Leo Beck, Janke Van Wyland, Henk Ens, Holland; recently joined our church as associate members. Other out-of-state students who have joined recently as associate members are Mr. and Mrs. Burt Russel, Portland, Oregon; Neville Lewis and Carl Lewis, Negro students from New York City. —Corr.

—Topeka (Indiana) Church: Rev and Mrs. Russell Schell and family, returned missionaries from the Belgian Congo, Africa, have moved into the parsonage for the winter. Rev A. E. Kreider was the speaker on Sunday morning, November 16. In the evening a quartet from the Mennonite Biblical Seminary had charge of the service. A number of men from this church attended a men's brotherhood meeting of five Mennonite churches held at a cafe in Nappanee with the men of the Nappanee church acting as hosts. —Opal King, Corr.

—Mr. B. Bargen spoke to the Kiawanis of Hillsboro, Kansas, on the subject of "Vocational Counselling" on the evening of November 17.

—The Foreign Mission Board met at Bluffton, Ohio, last week. Rev. Walter H. Dyck also attended the meeting.

—The Friendship Train which passed through Newton, Kansas, on November 21 received a substantial addition when Mennonites of Oklahoma, Nebraska, Kansas, and Montana (Montana Mennonites had their wheat ground into flour in Kansas) added their contributions. Mr. Ernest Bachman reported that Mennonites added at least twenty cars of food to this train. Nineteen cars were loaded with flour and the other with mixed food. Ceremonies were observed at Newton on the morning of November 21.

—Gnadenberg Church, Whitewater, Kansas: Our pastor, Rev. J. J. Voth, will deliver several messages at Gotebo, Oklahoma, on November 21 and 23. In his absence Rev. J. F. Schmidt of North Newton, a former member, will bring the message on November 23.—Corr.

—Bethel Church, Hydro, Oklahoma: Members of our church have completed work on the "mess hall." Fifteen nine-pane windows were put in and the entire exterior of the building was covered with light gray asbestos shingles. The building presents an attractive appearance. The parsonage has also been painted.—Wilfred Ewy, Corr.

—Bethel Church, Langdon, North Dakota: Rev. Don. P. Shidler of the Gospel Missionary Union of Kansas City, Missouri, held a one-week series of meetings. He spoke on the first three chapters of Revelation. He told of the experiences he had while he visited different parts of the world. In one instance, hungry children gathered around him to pick up the orange peelings that he threw away to eat them. These hungry children not only need physical food, but also spiritual food. They know nothing of our Lord and Savior. Rev. Shidler showed pictures of various places ,but mainly of Africa.—Mrs. LeRoy J. Schrag, Corr.

—First Church, Aberdeen, Idaho: Sunday evening, November 2, Henry E. Wiebe, who has spent seven months in Poland with a tractor unit, showed us pictures of his work and his visit to other parts of Europe. Funeral services were held November 5 for Mrs. Anna Wiebe Toevs, who passed away Saturday, November 1. We are looking forward to our first young peoples Bible conference to be held November 26-30. Rev. Harold Burkholder of the Mennonite Church of Los Angeles, California, is to be our speaker.—Arnold E. Bartel, Corr.

Thanksgiving in Austria

by Burt Smucker, relief worker in Austria

Thanksgiving in Europe by and large is a non-existent emotion and principle not only because of the great lack of material blessings, but more because of the great emptiness of heart which freezes out any and all religious feeling akin to praise, adoration, Thanksgiving, and love. Nihilism, "the philosophy of the hopeless," almost cancels the word "Thanksgiving" from our vocabulary.

The position of an American in a land of starvation is psychologically and morally precarious. Having heated rooms, good food, and clothing while millions of other people about you are without these material advantages either makes one callous and unthankful, or the contrast weighs on one so much that he is thrown into a perpetual state of gloom because of his superior position. The fact that we as Mennonite relief workers have the opportunity of relieving the needs of some of these people somewhat dispels our gloom. But with daily decisions as to who should get food and clothing and who should not, we are placed in a position of superiority and power. We are given to feel sometimes that we are regarded as being "the powerful Mennonite nobles" sitting on our vast stock of life-giving supplies from America—on the one hand bringing joy to one group of people as we give them food, and then on the other hand reaping resentment when we refuse to grant clothing to another group of people. It is a real challenge to endeavor to give what we have in a true spirit of Christian humility, wisdom, love and patience so that both the giver and receiver will have a mutual emotion of thanks.

However, as I have indicated the absence of material blessings is not the greatest factor in the lack of a spirit of Thanksgiving in Europe, but rather the deadening of the heart and soul so that one becomes at least momentarily incapable of having any Christian feelings. At this point we again are very thankful that our hearts are still able to praise and thank the Lord; that we are given the grace to love all of our fellowmen, that we still have trust and hope. Some European people feel that it is easy for us to maintain our high Christian principles because we have not gone through the terrible suffering which they have experienced. There is sometimes resentment at our preaching to them because of this fact. Our aim in this matter is to be thankful that the Lord has allowed us to keep our Christian heritage, recognizing it as a gift from Him, and at the same time to appreciate the feeling and experiences of our European friends as it affects their moral outlook and their attitude towards us. With such a balance we have the possibility to doing great things here.

It certainly is not true, however, that the picture is entirely black—that all Europeans are completely incapable of real Christian living and emotions, sunk in waves of nihilistic gloom; and that we are as relief workers in impossible material and moral positions of superiority. There are little candles flickering here and there on the continent which give one hope, courage and real thankfulness. The ringing words of hope proclaimed by Pastor Martin Niemoeller in Oslo, Norway, this past summer as he preached about "The Lord of the Future," indicated another strong voice in Europe for Christ as the true Healer of war wounds. The fine response displayed by the young people listening to him showed us that they not only were in accord with

Now when the crops are gathered in,
The fruits of earth in bounteous hoard,
When harvests fill both barn and bin,
And pantry shelves are richly stored,
We pause to praise thy Name, O Lord.

True, we have toiled with stubborn ground,
With rock and weed, with pest and blight;
But still to thankfulness we're bound,—
The rain was thine, the soil, the light,
Thou Giver of the day and night.

How may we show our gratitude?
One thing alone can make it real,—
Can keep it from a passing mood,—
Can give it power to bless and heal
When we say grace before our meal.

'Twould be, to share our plenteous store
With hungry folk in other lands
Where shelves are empty, hearts are sore,
And Want in every corner stands:
We thank God best with open hands.
—R. W. Graves.

him, but that they had also forgotten their bitterness and hatred towards the German people.

The life and spirit of the Protestant churches which we have contacted here in Austria has also been a matter of Thanksgiving for us. The messages which we hear in the local churches have been a great help to us. At a "Dankbar Sonntag" several weeks ago Pfarrer Kuenzel very forcefully told his Gemeinde that: "The simple fact that we know God is still with us is cause for real thankfulness." Certainly this fine Christian leader has a true conception of Thanksgiving.

Then I think of Pastor Fuellbrandt, of the local Baptist Church saying: "It is a joy to me to see how many Catholics are reading the Bible today. I believe eventually through the force of the Word of God that the Protestants and Catholics will be brought together." Pastor Fuellbrandt has also told us how he placed Russian Bibles on various newstands, and how they were so eagerly taken by Russian soldiers, indicating a thirst among the Russians for the Word of God.

To see a rare old soul like seventy-five-year-old Dr. "Onkel Robert" fearlessly proclaiming the gospel and distributing Bibles to all, including American soldier, Russian Communists and soldiers, to Nazis and to commen Austrian people, is indeed inspiring.

The new relationship of the American Mennonites with the European Mennonites as pointed up by the conference in Basel in August was another candle on the continent. Dutch Mennonites are now helping in the relief program with food and personnel—Swiss Mennonites have sent much food to Germany—and German Mennonites are aiding in the administration of the MCC relief program. It is also inspiring to see the great unshakable faith of the Russian Mennonites.

The gloom of this age in Europe sometimes threatens to cast a veil over everything for which we might be thankful. However, if we look long enough and deep enough we still see much which brings genuine thanksgiving into our hearts. "The simple fact that we know God is still with us is cause for real thankfulness."

The Thankfulness of a Refugee

by Kaethe Kasdorf of Paraguay

The first sunbeams break through the heavy fog which has lifted over valleys and hills. They fall on the tops of the palm trees which majestically look down on the friendly earth below. The sun steadily climbs higher and higher, beaming on the inhabitants of this lovely land. Who are these people over whom the sun sends her bright light? They are people who have come from a distant, restless world to find peace here in God's unadulterated land. They are people who are seeking a home, after great tribulation. They are people who have fought for their faith; and hope, in this country, to find peace.

Now all Nature is awakened, and brisk activity in various forms comes to life in the Mennonite camp. Mothers, with a sigh, begin their day's work. Children, happy, laughing youngsters—these are part of the picture, for this country is meant only for laughing, carefree people. How beautiful Paraguay! My impressions are too deep for words. When I think back to the old smoked-up world I can hardly grasp the fact that I was the fortunate one, after all the suffering, to see this undisturbed land. Those of us who are yet ungrateful, can be so only through spite, for in his heart no one can remain unthankful. I have found Paraguay much more beautiful than it was ever described. True enough, here we don't have the massive structures and modern conveniences for which Europe was noted, but how much lovelier is God's nature than all man's skill; and anyone who has a faint bit of appreciation for Nature's gifts can only exclaim, "Wonderfully has God made the earth!"

Naturally, this expression can't be applied to the camp life; no, for we have been wandering from place to place for nearly four years, and have become weary. One yearns for a quiet home, and the children are in need of an ordered life. True, the youngsters aren't wicked, but they consider possible things which we thought entirely unthinkable years ago. Our seven-year-olds begin school—dear reader, do you remember remember your first day of school? Did not then a new world open for you? Didn't you shyly approach the schoolhouse clinging to the hand of your mother? And where did I lead my pupils? They came running from all corners of the camp and assembled under a beautiful tangerine tree, the blackboard leaning against another tree. That was and is our schoolroom. The little ones looked eagerly at me, nevertheless, as they were seated. I told them that they now were pupils. And, dear reader, is it not also a gift of God to sit under heavily laden fruit trees and learn the ABC's, the eager eyes directed toward the blue sky? Truly it is very wonderful, and our youngsters, I believe, would feel very uncomfortable and crowded in a small classroom. After two months of instruction we have come so far that the first-graders know all the written letters. Unfortunately we cannot think yet of the printed letters since we have no readers. We are not depressed, however, for there will be a solution also for this problem.

When the sun disappears again like a glowing ball behind the green trees, the day closes with a benediction for all. How I like to step outside once more into the open, to gaze again at the dark-blue sky with the numberless twinkling stars. And quietly, with thanks in my heart for God's grace, I commend myself to my heavenly Father for the night.

Worldwide Bible Reading Schedule

For four years, since a home-sick G. I. wrote home suggesting that he and his family would read the same portions from the Bible each day, the American Bible Society has inaugurated a program of world-wide Bible reading during the period from Thanksgiving to Christmas. This plan is widespread, being observed and used by all denominations and in many lands. This year, appropriately, the American Bible Society has chosen as the theme for this period of common Bible reading, "One World — One Book." The common experience of Bible reading with fellow Christians ranging over many lands should be deepening and enriching.

SPECIAL TRIBUTE TO MENNONITES

Newton, Kansas, November 21, 1947—Special tribute was paid to the Mennonites of Kansas here today by both Governor Carlson of Kansas and Columnist Drew Pearson. Speaking at "Friendship Train" dedication ceremonies the Governor of Kansas told of the wheat for relief drive that he had proclaimed some time ago, how it had developed and how the Mennonites of Kansas, and especially Ernest Bachman through his promotional efforts of weeks and months for the Kansas Council of Churches, had given special impetus to the drive.

Drew Pearson, renowned for his Washington Merry-Go-Round column and his radio predictions, also singled out the Mennonites for special recognition. He told how after the First World War he served as head of the American Friends Service Committee work in the Balkans and how there he had worked with various Mennonites and found them very fine people.

These "Friendship Train" activities brought into the light of publicity Mennonite relief activities which might otherwise have gone on comparatively unnoticed by the public at large. Most of the contributions made by the Mennonites would very likely have been made anyhow, but Mennonite groups were especially glad to avail themselves of the free rail transportation offered by the Santa Fe Railroad, thus making their giving for relief go farther. Mennonites from South Dakota, Minnesota, Nebraska, Oklahoma, and Kansas, had a share in this giving. They contributed a total of twenty-six of the cars that were added to the "Friendship Train" at Newton. According to Mr. Bachman, this made a total of 17,680 one-hundred pound bags of flour with a value of $117,000, a car of mixed food from the M.C.C. food depot at Newton with a value of $10,720, and a carload of wheat worth $4,750, with a grand total in value of $132,470. At least about seven more "Mennonite" cars, it was estimated, were to be added at Kansas City. In addition Mr. and Mrs. D. C. White of Kingsdown, Kansas, contributed two cars through the Mennonite Central Committee.

Mr. Drew Pearson, who received credit for originating the idea of a "Friendship Train," estimated that this particular section would be 170 cars long by the time it got to New York. It is the third long section, for two "Friendship Trains" have already pulled into New York. Mr. Pearson estimated that a total of 450 cars ($5,000,000 worth of goods) would result from the "Friendship Train" idea. He said that two shipping companies would transport the food free of charge to Europe, where it would be distributed by church relief agencies, the first shipload by Christmas and the second one perhaps by New Year.

Dedication services began with the singing of "Faith of Our Fathers" and ended with the dedicatory prayer by H. A. Fast, Vice President of the Mennonite Central Committee. Both the French and Italian Embassies had representatives at the services.

Rev. Walter H. Dyck, Office Manager of General Conference Headquarters, reports that more than $40,000 was cleared through the Headquarters office for various Mennonite churches which contributed money for the purchase of flour and wheat.

The Mennonite

Volume 62 — December 2, 1947 — Number 47

In the Name of Christ

By J. M. Regier

pastor of Johannestal Mennonite Church, Hillsboro, Kansas

WHOSOEVER shall receive one of such children in my name, receiveth me: and whosoever shall receive me, receiveth not me, but Him that sent me.“ Mark 9:37. To the above verse we can also add the closing words that Jesus said, the Great Judge will speak to those who stand at his right: “Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me.” Matthew 25:40. As this is being written, the train, that shall draw 120 freight cars loaded with food for hungry Europe, has started. May the train move swiftly as multitudes of hungry children are waiting. Only this morning we received a letter from Grosshessen, Germany, from a mother, who writes almost in desperation, “Ich weisz bei meinen vier minderjaehrigen Kindern (13, 11, 8 und 4 Jahre) bald keinen Rat mehr.” The children and they themselves have neither food nor needed clothes. Scores of supervisors in numerous children’s homes have written at various times, if we could have only seen the happy looks of the children when food arrived, the donors would have been amply rewarded.

Sometimes consecrated Christians wonder how they might render real service to Jesus Christ. In our land none is without this opportunity. American Christians could send many such trainloads of food, definitely serving Christ by feeding hungry children, and in our land we would not suffer.

The picture shows how a few of the 180 children of the Kindergarten of the Wendelstein parish at Nueremberg enjoy their dish of food. Pastor Maier of the Protestant Lutheran Church expresses their sincere thanks to the donors.

How necessary for spiritual reasons that this help be given! We need the inner experience that comes from serving Him by serving such to whom the Kingdom of God belongs. And the children need this service so dreadfully for physical, but also for intellectual and spirtual reasons. Multitudes of children are suffering from tuberculosis. What will it do to children’s faith in God and man if they grow up and learn that their distress might have been alleviated if people had been less selfish. They may wonder whether religious belief does any good. On the other hand, we have had letters telling us that their trust in God was renewed when they learned that people across the ocean were made willing because of their faith in God to send them food. They read it on the flour sacks and on the countless labels that the donors did this “in the name of Christ.” Ministers preached sermons on the clasped hands under the cross. They had believed that Americans considered them their enemies, and now they discovered that in Christ we are united. One minister closes his letter: “In the bond of faith in One Lord we greet you and the generous donors of your church in hearty gratitude.”

It is very necessary that in quiet meditation and prayer we say, “Lord, Lord,” but it is just as necessary to “do the will of our Father who is in heaven.” We do not expect to be saved by good works, but we also know that “we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should also walk in them.” Eph. 2:10.

"Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Christ Jesus"

AS WE SEE IT: .. Howard G. Nyce .. the Editor

And So We Continue

Conference days are over. Boards and Committees have given their reports. No, we do not start all over again, but we continue with the work the Lord has entrusted to us. There may be several new avenues of activity during the coming three years, but even so, as we enter, we are not unmindful of the fact that God has directed. If we should plan to do anything in which He has not directed, we will fail. The Board of Foreign Missions understands the mind of the Conference about the possibility of opening work in Puerto Rico in that the Conference authorized the Board to continue its investigation with the possibility of opening a field. Even in this matter, we do not start all over, but we continue the work which is growing. This is as it ought to be. The missionaries are asking for more doctors to continue the work which has been started in the various fields. Will we continue? Will the new doctors be found? Yes, without a doubt, for this is the Lord's work and He will place His hand on those whom He plans to send as mission doctors. Personnel of boards and committees may have changed somewhat but neither does that mean that we start all over again. New members will soon discover the problems that have confronted the various boards and committees. Suggestions of new members should prove valuable. We should strive to work together for the good of the entire Conference and the glory of God. Nothing should be done for praise or self-glory. Surely, God has entrusted a great work to our Confernce, we dare not fail Him, for He is depending on us to be faithful. To do the work efficiently, members have been re-elected and new members elected. And so we continue by the grace of God.—Howard G. Nyce, Executive-Secretary of the Foreign Mission Board, and President of the Eastern District Conference.

A Vote for UMT Is a Vote for This

A vote for Universal Military Training is a vote for possible war. Wars cannot be fought without the following results as described by a letter from a mother in Europe:

"I got much help from the pastor's visit. He tells me I am not alone in my night troubles. You see, the children so often have bad dreams and nightmares. First one wakes and screams. Soon all are wild. One cries, 'There! There! Hurry, O hurry! There goes a jeep. Run! Maybe Americans will throw away food.' Then they run down the hall and I must catch them lest they fall from fatigue. I quiet them. I put them to bed again but for hours I hear their empty stomachs growl. I hear their teeth grind. I hear sobbing in the night. Sometimes I think I cannot stand it. Then often I seem to hear my husband's voice saying, 'Now, now Anna, be brave. I am counting on you.'

"The day brings hope again. Last week our boy worked 60 hours opening graves. It meant a meal a day and sometimes something in his pocket for us when he came home. The government is doing all it can to prevent epidemics. The graves are dug ready now before the freezing. Into them will be placed those of us who will not survive the winter for want of food and clothing. It is a sobering thought but we do not talk much of it. We all realize it cannot get worse, and there is the hope that help will come. We can endure all things through Christ who strengthens us.

"We wonder sometimes how things are with you. You too have had a war. You too must have suffered much. Tonight when my little ones cry I will comfort them saying, 'This day I wrote American friends. I told them of our daily life. Now, my little one, you must be brave. Perhaps help will come. Sleep well. American friends are counting on you to keep the faith.

"Across the waters we send you all that we have, our faith. Yes, we have kept the faith and it has kept us. May you keep it too.

Sincerely your fellow Christian,
ANNA SCHMID

P. S. This morning our littlest one. Anna Marie, did not wake up. Now we are four. Sometimes I wonder . . . ."

The Christian faith recognizes the existence and horror of sin on the part of nations, but it holds that behind that sin are persons who can be redeemed. The Christian faith holds that the way of redemption lies

"CAN YOU TELL ME WHAT THE WORK OF A MISSIONARY IS?"

by Mrs. Harold Ratzlaff

In The Mennonite of July 22, 1947, which just recently arrived in our home, I read of a daily vacation Bible school teacher in Chicago who asked a small boy, "Can you tell me what the work of a missionary is?" The boy replied, "A missionary is a traveling preacher who goes out to Kansas and places like that." Along with the rest of you, we smiled at this definition. But after a moment, I, being a Kansan, thought to myself, "I wonder what kind of answer our tried and true Mennonites of Kansas would give to the question, "Can you tell me what the work of a missionary is?" And then I, being a missionary, asked myself that question, and I pondered a long time over the answer.

The little boy's answer was certainly partly correct—"A traveling preacher." As missionaries we spend much time traveling, although with the coming of the jeep age this time has been reduced much in comparison with the buffalo cart days. However from Jagdeeshpur it still takes us the better part of two days to go to Conference in Champa and two days to come home, a distance of seventy-five miles as the crow flies. Trips to Raipur must be made regularly to get personal and mission supplies. This also means two days of traveling. Touring is also a time when one lives out of a suitcase, and one certainly is a "traveling preacher" at that time. It has become a matter of routine to me to pack food, bedding, and clothes in such compact form that all can be tied on to a bicycle or motorcycle so that my husband can spend a night or several nights out in the district. Each year a week or ten days are spent in traveling to and from a hill station. Yes, it is certainly the work of a missionary to travel.

As missionaries we listen to peoples' tales of woe. "We just can't make ends meet these days," "My husband beats me. I won't live with him any longer," "Our roof leaks. Please give us some of your tiles." I have to have milk for my sick child. Can you sell me some?" Yes, a missionary listens to other people's troubles. Is that the work of a missionary?

It is the work of every Christian leader, only as missionaries, we have to be able to differentiate between the real troubles about which we should do something and those troubles which are of the complainer's own making or those which are told with the aim of getting something out of the missionary and about which we should do nothing.

As missionaries, we spend hours and hours doing accounts and keeping records—mission and five district church accounts and records, Hindustani Conference accounts and records, statistical mission records, etc. etc. Is this the work of a missionary? It seems to be although many of us wish it were not.

As missionaries, we spend much time doing correspondence—letters to friends, known and unknown, who are interested in the work of missions; thank-you letters to those who have sent gifts, articles for publication, reports of the work. Is this our work as missionaries? A very important part of it, for our work is your work and all of us, you and we, have a responsibility towards God in doing it. And so it becomes our duty as missionaries to share the joys and sorrows of this work with you.

As a missionary wife and mother, I naturally spend considerable time "making a home"—keeping the house in order, mending and sewing clothes, planning meals, helping and guiding a little daughter. Is this the work of a missionary, or is a missionary-wife a "double career" woman? Whichever she is, I know she often wonders whether she is putting "first things first." Furthermore, there are those who feel that one of the greatest contributions we can make as missionaries is to build an exemplary Christian home.

My husband spends much time repairing this jeep, that car, a trailer, or the truck. Is this the work of a missionary? It must be until Indian mechanics get more efficient in this or until a mechanic is sent from America to relieve the missionary of this job.

As missionaries we spend some time teaching and preaching, but we spend the greater part of our time seeing to it that there are Indian teachers, preachers, Bible women, and evangelists out among their own people giving out the Bread of Life to Christians and to non-Christians alike. And this is the essence of a missionary's work. It is not only a matter of employing these workers; it is a matter of guiding, directing, correcting, supervising, encouraging, giving new ideas and new plans, enlarging their vision, keeping them happy and content and above all, zealous for the work of the Kingdom. A missionary teaching and preaching alone can touch a few people; a missionary along with his Indian co-workers can touch many lives. Thus the work of a missionary is broad and varied, but his purpose always remains the same—to present Christ as one's personal Saviour, to help Christians to grow in the things of the Spirit, and to establish more firmly the Church of Christ in India.

A Report from the Church of the Brethren

by Donovan E. Smucker

Because of the affiliation of Mennonite Biblical Seminary with the Church of the Brethren institution, Bethany Biblical Seminary, Mennonite people will be interested in a recent report given by Dr. Rufus Bowman of the General Brotherhood Board meeting of the Church of the Brethren in Elgin, Illinois, during the week of November 10.

The major program in the Brethren church is called "Advance With Christ." It is an all around attempt to reinvigorate the church into a more dynamic program of outreach and evangelism with the opening of new work in new frontiers. Dr. Bowman stated that evangelism was still the primary emphasis in the 1,018 churches which comprise his denomination. He pointed out that there are 486 congregations with less than 125 members, which is 47 per cent of the total; and that the average number of baptisms per congregation was five in the church as a whole each year. The Brethren leaders have therefore determined to increase the emphasis on evangelism in order to have more baptisms each year. A second new development is a greater exchange of students to this country from India, China, Africa and Europe. These students, like Puran Banwar at Bethel College, will mainly be products of Brethren missionary work, although this will not be the case regarding the European exchange. The third fact which was brought out by the moderator of the Brotherhood Board was the tragic plight of the Chinese missionary work and the necessity of opening up a new field. A fourth announcement was in connection with the European program of the Church of the Brethren. He announced that M. R. Zigler, the President of the National Service Board for Religious Objectors and the Director of the Brethren Service Committee, has been asked to go to Europe as permanent secretary of that work. He will be centered in Geneva, and his task will not so much be to organize new churches but to bring to the existing

by J. S. Shultz

" 'The Word of God was simply everything to me,' says Dr. Niemoeller;" "The Christians of Japan in a single order asked 2,500,000 New Testaments and 100,000 Bibles" are two quotations from a recent copy of the Bible Society Record. This same issue April, 1947, also had pictures of our own Peter and Frieda Dyck distributing Bibles to Mennonites in Berlin. This suggests the outreach of the American Bible Society.

At the General Conference in Berne in August, over a hundred laymen gathered to discuss their part in the work of the church. Among various needs discussed was that of Bibles for war sufferers and especially for those of our own faith. This matter received perhaps more support than any other project mentioned for groups of laymen to take up in their respective churches. Unless some more urgent need demands the attention of men in your church, here is one we all can unite on, the whole General Conference over. Have the laymen of your church gotten together since the conference to talk it over? A number of churches report that they have, either men from one single church or the laymen from several neighboring churches.

Your interim committee, Temple, Fretz, and Schultz, is serving as a clearing house for all laymen's interests. Spiritual fellowship, social gatherings, and action can and will all result if someone will but take the lead in each church. We worship, study, pray together as a church but, just as the women and the young people make their faith live and put it into action, so we men are beginning to find our place in the total program of the church and the conference. When opportunities for service surround us on every side —relief, missions, peace and other national and international issues, evangelism, education, deepening our Christian lives in the individual, in the home life, in society—in such days, we dare not stand idle. We must unite and let our light shine. It is our prayer that we laymen in our Mennonite churches, with similar groups everywhere, rally to the great cause of Christ.

churches of Europe the evangelical peace witness of the Church of the Brethren. It was also announced that Byron Royer, a Bethany Seminary student, will go with his wife to Germany this spring to work with German youth. A fifth area, which will be undertaken by the Church of the Brethren, is with colored people. Dr. Bowman pointed out that the very severe persecution of Brethren people in the South during the Civil War period made the church reluctant to work with colored people even though the Brethren communion had totally repudiated slavery. Therefore, it was a great step forward when the Board in Elgin announced that interracial churches will be organized in various parts of the country. Of this he said, "This is consistent with our great missionary program in Africa and this is consistent with the Christian Gospel."

A sixth announcement concerned the development of broadcasting. There will be a Church of the Brethren hour starting soon over station WAIT in Chicago with a splendid radio choir under the direction of Professor Alvin Brightbill of the Seminary.

These were some of the developments indicated by Dr. Bowman who added that the General Brotherhood Board is made up of twenty-five men appointed by the annual conference with this Board then divided into five commissions, such as, missions, relief, education, with a system of checks and balances in relation to the various groups.

Neighbor Has Risen against Neighbor in the Punjab

by Martin H. Schrag

Today, in the land of caste and cow, neighbor has risen against neighbor and countryman against countryman. Driven on by goondas (bandits) and fear, millions have been uprooted and, taking only a few possessions, are forming huge foot convoys. They are trudging into the unknown seeking physical safety. Not since the religious wars of Europe's Middle Ages has there been such social upheaval for religions' sake.

Prior to Indian independence, the jockeying for position by Hindus and Sikhs on the one hand, and Moslems on the other brought communal tension and riots in different parts of India. The granting of independence and the division of India into Pakistan and Hindustan resulted in large minorities living on both sides of the border. Particularly in the Punjab, Moslems, Sikhs and, Hindus were living side by side. The division sliced the Punjab in two with Western Punjab becoming a part of Pakistan and Eastern Punjab a part of Hindustan, or now called the new India. The sudden transfer of power temporarily incapacitated the government to exercise full control, and thus the lawless element seized this opportunity, incited the masses, and in their wake left death, arson, abduction, and suffering. The minds and hearts of many were filled with the desire and spirit of retaliation. Soon the Hindu and Sikh minorities in Pakistan and the Moslem minority in Hindustan began to move toward Hindustan and Pakistan respectively. It is estimated that eight million people are on the move. Fleeing for their lives, these refugees band themselves together in large foot convoys, sometimes numbering 500,000 and stretching for fifty miles, and laboriously walk the distance. Some of the convoys are guarded by tanks, whereas others are open to attack. Many refugee camps are springing up over the Punjab with conditions similar on both sides of the boundary.

It is pathetic to listen to individual refugees tell their stories. With mingled emotions of pity, fear, and hate, this man tells about having lost all his children—that one saw his brother and sister killed before his very eyes in cold-blooded murder—a third tells how all the young women were taken away from his community—still another had his shop looted, the fruit of a lifetime of labor, the hope of his old age, gone in a blaze of fire and a puff of smoke. All realize they will never return.

Very real, today, is the historical relation of the Hindus, Sikhs and Moslems. Ever since the Moslems swooped down from the northwest and attempted to subjugate the country, Hindus and Moslems have been at odds with one another.

Seldom, in the annals of Christendom, has there been such a unique and significant opportunity for Christian service. While Hindus, Sikhs and Moslems are engaged in strife, Christians, maintaining a strict neutrality, can and must play the role of the good Samaritan. Already both sides acknowledge the fine work being done by Christians as indicated by the Hindu official's statement, "You have shown us the way." No longer identified with foreign imperialism, and desirous of registering true Christian concern for fellow men with the new India and Pakistan, Indian Christians and foreign missionaries are, and should be, bending every effort to heal the sick, feed the hungry, and clothe the naked. Although classified as relief work, such efforts may prove the greatest contribution made in recent years toward the building of the Church.

A Unit of five MCC workers has arrived on the scene and will begin work hoping to do their small bit in serving their fellow men.

CANADIAN BIBLE FREEMAN BLUFFTON BETHEL SEMINARY

REV. ANDREW SHELLY APPOINTED PART-TIME FIELD SECRETARY FOR MENNONITE BIBLICAL SEMINARY

Rev. Andrew R. Shelly, Pastor of the Stirling Avenue Mennonite Church of Kitchener, Ontario, Canada, has been appointed part-time field secretary of Mennonitie Biblical Seminary and Mennonite Bible School, according to announcement by Dr. S. F. Pannabecker, Acting President of the Institution.

Rev. Shelly has been granted three months for this work by the board of the Stirling Avenue Church. In addition the church very graciously consented to pay his salary during this period and to cover all expenses brought about by his absence in the pulpit in Kitchener. The time of service will be divided into three periods of approximately one month each, one of these being before Christmas and the other two after New Years. For the first period from the middle of November to the middle of December his work will center in various congregations in Minnesota, Kansas, and Montana.

The purpose of his travels among the churches will be in connection with the financial needs of the Seminary. The primary need here is to retire the debt incurred by the purchase last year of three buildings on Woodlawn Avenue in Chicago and, secondly, to add to the funds of the Seminary for expansion and remodelling of its present equipment. The latter is based on the indications of an increased enrollment which calls for additional living quarters for faculty and students.

Andrew R. Shelly is a graduate of Bluffton College, the Philadelphia School of the Bible, and Hartford Theological Seminary. He is well known among Mennonite people having preached in many of the churches across the country, and has been widely used in various other responsibilities in the church. In Kitchener his ministry has been particularly notable for the cooperation he has helped to achieve among the various Mennonite branches. Recently he wrote an article in Mennonite Life describing some of these cooperative activities in Kitchener. The Seminary rejoices in having him contribute his time in this moment of need. It is believed that it is one more evidence of the way in which God has blessed the institution as it continues to grow and to develop in connection with the training of Christian workers.

FREEMAN JUNIOR COLLEGE

Rev. Willard Claassen of the South Church was a chapel speaker this week. Among recent campus visitors were Harry Graber of Moundridge, Kansas, Kathryn and Gertrude Goering of McPherson, Kansas, Margaret Ruth Tieszen of Marion, and Rev. Hugo Mireau of Freeman. Recent social events include a Junior class party held in the Gym and a social evening enjoyed by the Seniors, who started the evening by a supper prepared and served in the Home Economics rooms. The Academy play cast, under the direction of Miss Kaufman, gave two well-rendered performances of the play, Freckles.

CMBC CHOIR VISITS ALTONA AND GRETNA COMMUNITIES

On Sunday, November 16, the Canadian Mennonite College Bible Choir spent the day in the Altona and Gretna districts. In the morning, it participated in the morning service of the Altona Bergthaler Church. Rev. Arnold J. Regier brought the morning message. The students were graciously invited into various homes for the noon meal. A program was rendered at the Mennonite Collegiate Institute of Gretna in the afternoon. It was the first opportunity for most of the students to see this school, and it gave former students and graduates an opportunity to see the newly constructed auditorium. The M. C. I. students entertained the college students by serving lunch after the program.

Rev. Benjamin Ewert of Winnipeg has started a series of expository messages on the First Epistle of Peter during the Thursday chapel hours. He is a frequent and welcome visitor at the College, for he always has a cheerful greeting for all members of the College family. We admire his youthful spirit and his courage in venturing out during the Manitoba winter as often as he does.

BLUFFTON BIBLE LECTURES MUCH APPRECIATED

The Bible Lectures held during the week of November 16 were very much appreciated. The attendance was the best in many years. The Ministers' Conference and Women's Conference were also well attended. There was a one-day vacation for Thanksgiving. Classes were resumed on Friday. Dean Schultz attended the inauguration of President Fox of Findlay College on November 19. and President Ramseyer attended the inauguration of President Marble of Wilmington College on November 23. Wilmington is operated by the Friends, and Dr. Marble spent the war years in Civilian Public Service.

BETHEL STUDENTS TO BUY FLOUR FOR GERMAN UNIVERSITY STUDENTS

The Student Christian Association launched a drive for contributions from the Bethel College family for student relief funds. This year the local group is working on a special project in cooperation with the

M.C.C. Mr. Walter Eicher, relief worker in Germany, informed the group of the possibility of feeding hungry students at the University of Mainz in Germany. The funds collected will be used to buy flour to give the students bread for several weeks. The World Student Service with which the local S.C.A. has cooperated in former years has voiced its approval of the project.

Miss Icy Gruner, a student from Norway studying in some of the Eastern American universities, spoke in S.C.A. chapel on Wednesday presenting the services of the World Student Service Fund and the needs of students all over the world.

M.C.C. Relief Shipments Reach Record High

October Shipments Valued at $305,842

AKRON, Pa., November, 1947.—Good news for the hungry peoples of Europe and other areas of the world, is seen in the fact that a substantial stream of MCC material aid is flowing from this country to the places where it is needed so badly. The month of October represented a rather large "wave" in this stream. It was reported earlier that a record was reached during October in clothing contributions received at the MCC clothing centers. An all-time high record was also reached in the amount of material aid shipments during October. A total of over 1,167 tons of clothing, food, soap and hospital supplies (valued at a total of $305,842.00) was scheduled to leave port during the month.

This can be attributed partly to seasonal factors, for the materials harvested and contributed during the fall are now reaching the warehouses and shipping centers. Possibly more significant, however, is the fact that our people are becoming more conscious of the acute needs for relief which will prevail during the winter months, and are giving liberally.

Our Mennonite workers in Europe are unanimous in reporting that the needs this winter will be very great. All the food, clothing, shoes, fats, etc., as well as money, that our people are able to contribute, can be used advantageously to save people from hunger and suffering. To continue this ministry of love during these coming months is imperative if we really care.

New Location for Center in France

The MCC Center in France has been moved from Chalon to Nancy, which is near a French Mennonite settlement. At a meeting on November 8, a number of French Mennonite leaders discussed ways in which their people could cooperate in the MCC relief program. These delegates gave a whole hearted response to the work as outlined, and have already begun to carry this out. Continued interest was shown in the flour-sack sewing and canning programs, and this will probably develop into a large project during the coming months. They also expressed much interest in helping in the children's home which the MCC is planning to open at Nancy.

Peter Dycks back in Germany To Work With Refugees

Peter and Elfrieda Dyck sailed on November 15 for Germany where they will be engaged in helping Mennonite refugees. Brother Dyck is to assist C. F. Klassen in the general administrative work connected with the movement of refugees, and tentative plans are that Sister Dyck will be located at Bachnang, the Mennonite refugee camp in the American Zone of Germany.

Brother and Sister Dyck have had considerable experience in relief and refugee work, having served for about six years in Europe in this capacity. During the past few months they have been in the United States and Canada visiting many of our Mennonite communities, relating their experiences in connection with refugee work. Particularly impressive has been their message in words and pictures describing the movement of 2,305 Mennonite refugees to Paraguay aboard the Volendam.

Four Workers Join Skillman Unit

The following workers joined the Skillman Voluntary Service Unit (Skillman State Village for Epileptics, Skillman, New Jersey) on November 16: John C. Kurtz, Elverson, Pennsylvania; Gordon Sawatzky, Newton, Kansas; Bessie Zimmerly, Apple Creek, Ohio; and Dorothy Langenwalter, Gulfport, Mississippi. The leader of the unit, Amanda Ediger, has been in Skillman for several months in preparation for the opening of the unit.

Hospital Service in Mexico

The work which was begun this fall among the Old Colony Mennonites and Mexicans in Cuauhtemoc, Mexico, holds promise of being a growing avenue of service. Plans are going ahead to open a ten-to-twelve bed lying-in hospital, to be located about two blocks from the MCC headquarters, in a house which is now being remodeled for this purpose. The health work in this community was begun by Erna Klassen, R. N., and Randall Heinrichs. The most recent appointments for this work include Ruby Edwards, R. N., of Toronto, Canada, and Brother and Sister Willam Enns, from Winkler, Manitoba, Brother Enns has not only had hospital experience which will be helpful in developing the program, but is also acquainted with many of the Old Colony Mennonites.

Menno Travel Service

Since it was established in March, 1947, Menno Travel Service has assisted in travel arrangements for American students travelling abroad, returning foreign students, missionaries, MCC relief workers, and private tourists. The assistance which Menno Travel Service is prepared to render includes information on passports, innoculations, and baggage, the securing of visas, and the booking of air and ocean passage. Anyone interested in receiving this service, write for further information to Menno Travel Service, Akron, Pennsylvania.

FAREWELL! . . . AGANETHA FAST

Dear Churches, Leaders and Members:

Once more the Lord is calling me to follow Him to war-torn and famine-ridden China, the land of His compassion and deep concern. It is impressive to think that the Lord chose us as a conferenc to be a channel through which He wanted to convey His great love and compassion to the poor sin-tossed Chinese. For this He must needs single out certain individuals to whom He entrusts His message of love and salvation.

When a year or so ago I saw in several of the China missionaries such an urge, so irresistable, their courage so undaunted, I was deeply impressed. Then to see the joy and the enthusiasm with which they made preparation to go back to the land where they had suffered untold harships at the hands of the aggressor and of robbers, having been in danger of their lives for years, I wondered: how could they be so enthusiastic and so full of joy to leave all behind: homes, furnished, comfortable, and then face as it were nothing? I must admit, even I as a missionary was puzzled. Six years I had travelled through the churches and C.P.S. camps. China had always been on my heart and mind and in my prayers, but at the thought of returning a dread had always come over me.

But in February of this year, I too suddenly began to feel I must get ready to return in fall. And that same spirit took hold of me. I well knew the deprivations I would have to face, beginning with even less than thirty years ago, when I first went out. This courage that I now had, this urge, this joy could not be credited to men, but to the great compassionate heart of God. He it is who is calling us once more to go forth. It is His urge, His compassion that seeks to reach out a loving hand to suffering China. Can we, can you, or I refuse to be that channel? You by backing it up with Heavenly love and deep consecration and I by going, and so we follow, but not with fear, for He goes before us, and is with us, with you at home and me in China. And the reward will be alike.

"Dark is the sky! and veiled the unknown morrow!
Dark is life's way, for night is not yet o'er;
The longed for glimpse I may not meanwhile borrow!
But this I know, HE GOETH ON BEFORE.
HE GOES BEFORE! Be this my consolation!
HE goes before! On this my heart may dwell!
He goes before! This guarantees salvation!
HE GOES BEFORE; AND THEREFORE ALL IS WELL." — J. Danford Smith

Our freighter, S. S. Dolly Turman is supposed to set sail November 27. We are expected to reach Shanghai in from twenty-eight to thirty days. We are a bit disappointed not to reach port by Christmas. It reminds me of my first Christmas on my way to China, in a lonely hotel on a dreary rainy day in San Francisco, tied to the room due to severe headache.

Well, I wish all of you a Blessed Christmas and a Very Blessed Year to follow, and thank you all in every church and community and home where I have found such loving reception and kind hospitality, for all you have meant to me, inspiring me and being a source of strength to me. God bless you and may you continue to pray much for the work He has laid at your doors, even China.

Your representative in China for Christ

Our choir also gathers once a week in preparation for a Christmas program. The theme for the Christian Endeavor program given November 23 was "Thanksgiving throughout the Year."—Corr.

—Bethel College Church: Our church council in their November meeting voted to preserve the records of our fiftieth anniversary celebration in the Bethel College Historical Library. They also considered the problem of educating our young people concerning Universal Military Training. The education and the peace committees have been asked to meet with the church council to discuss this matter.—EWG.

FIND CONGRESSMAN SYMPATHETIC TO CHURCH

Perkasie, Pennsylvania, November 12, 1947.—A very impressive scene took place in the office of the newly elected congressman, Franklin Lichtenwalter, in the Allentown Post Office Building, on November 10. Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander, Rev. J. Herbert Fretz, Rev. Melvin Bishop and Rev. Ward Shelly visited Mr. Lichtenwalter to express to him their concern in regard to Universal Military Training. Rev. Shelly, having been a neighbor of Mr. Lichtenwalter for many years and having gone to high school with Mrs. Lichtenwalter, introduced the group. At the close of the conversation all stood with the congressman while Rev. Bishop led in prayer. Mr. Lichtenwalter is very sympathetic with the work of the Christian Church and is very familiar with the relief work of the Mennonites, having had several relatives with the M.C.C. program.

C. H. A. VAN DER SMISSEN NINETY-SIX ON DECEMBER 4

C. H. A. van der Smissen packed a lot of education into his early years. He learned to read and write the Dutch, German, Danish, French, and English languages when quite young, and later he studied Greek and Hebrew. He attended college in Husum and Weilburg. University studies were pursued at Tuebingen, Basel, and Halle. At the latter place he became a friend of Tholuck, a very well liked professor. Rev. van der Smissen treasures his educational experiences with many unique personalities, among them being: Mrs. Kober, a daughter of Bishop Gobat of Jerusalem; Inspector Rappard of Saint Chrischona in Switzerland. Dr. Ludwig Schneller, and Professor Tholuck, whom we have already mentioned. He also traveled extensively in Europe. Before he came to America (where his father was president of Wadsworth Institute) he visited Mennonite congregations in Holland, France, Palatinate, Baden, Prussia, etc.

In the United States C. H. A. van der Smissen entered actively into General Conference activites serving, as pastor, as secretary of the Conference for six years, as a member of the mission board for nine years, as editor of The Mennonite for three years, as editor of the Bundesbote for eighteen years, as editor of the Kinderbote for twenty-five years, and as editor of the German Sunday school quarterly for twenty-five years.

Now he is staying at the Bethel Home for the Aged, Newton, Kansas. During October he and his sister Hillegonda, who is looking forward to her hundredth birthday next June 30, went for a walk nearly every day. He still enjoys telling anecdotes. Happy birthday to you, Brother van der Smissen, General Conference worker for so many years.

BRIEFS FROM "FRIENDSHIP TRAIN" CEREMONIES AT NEWTON, KANSAS

Governor Carlson of Kansas pointed out that this was not the first time that Kansans raised carloads of food for relief. They raised forty cars of corn for the starving in India in 1900 and during the First World War Period several hundred cars of wheat for relief.

Ernest Bachman, who was a head solicitor of wheat for relief in the recent drive, said in his talk: "I could not help but sense the joy in all walks of life in the giving of wheat and money for the feeding of the thousands upon thousands of starving across the waters . . . . life isn't worth living without the joy of giving."

Wanted: A married man within thirty or sixty days to do general farm work. A six-room tenant house with water, gas and electricity provided. Good pay and partial provisions. Farm located on the edge of a Kansas Mennonite community. For information write to J. W. Fretz, Board of Mutual Aid, North Newton, Kansas.

TWO MENNONITE FAMILIES HELP REFUGEES TO COME TO UNITED STATES

Mountain Lake, Minnesota, November 21, 1947.— I have been requested to give some news on the help which A. A. Penner and J. John Friesen gave to the Neufelds - to mage it possible for them to come to the United States Magdalen Friesen, one of our relief workers, became interested in Justina Neufeld, a refugee in Holland. She asked her parents whether it might not be possible for them to have Justina come to the United States and even open their home to her. This the Friesens were willing to do. Justina had a married brother, who with his wife and daughter of eight years, were also in Holland. They did not want to be separated. Mr. Penner was then asked whether he would be willing to finance the passage of this family of three. Inquiry about this family was made from some of our workers in Holland. They recommended them as worthy people. Thereupon arrangements for passage were begun. The four arrived in Mountain Lake on November 5. The Neufelds were taken into the home of A. A. Penners until other living quarters could be found for them. Justina has found a home at J. John Friesens. Justina, seventeen years old, is anxious to begin school, while Mr. Neufeld is working in Mr. Penner's tireshop until he will be able to find other work. On November 20 the Mission society had a miscellaneous shower for the Neufelds. Blankets, bed linens, towels, dishes, kitchen utensils, canned fruits and vegetables, also fresh vegetables were brought. Eight-year-old Lina received a doll. It was touching to see her hug and kiss her dolly again and again. They will now be happy to start their own housekeeping.—Corr.

in tackling the sources and causes of sin rather than in destroying those who are bound by their sins. The Gospel of Christ holds forth release from sin and not the destruction of the sinner. IN MEMORIAM

John H. Schmidt, son of Henry and Helena Buller Schmidt, was born in Poland, Russia, December 15, 1862, and died November 10, 1947. When twelve his parents came to America. They first lived in Pennsylvania and later near Moundridge, Kansas. At the latter place John H. Schmidt was baptized and accepted as a member of what now is the Emmanuel Church. While here he married Miss Susanna Neufeld in 1884. In 1896 they moved to Ringwood, Oklahoma, where they became charter members of the New Hopedale Church. He shared life with his dear wife for fifty-three years until she preceded him in death nine years ago. He is mourned by his children: Hans, Covington; Mrs. Jacob Letkeman, Weatherford; and Mrs. Edwin Cain, Enid, Oklahoma. He also leaves one brother, Rev. David H. Schmidt, California, and two sisters, Mrs. Adam Unruh, Durham, Kansas and Mrs. John T. Unruh, Enid, Oklahoma.

Fred B. Schmidt, son of Benjamin K. and Katie Unruh Schmidt, was born July 12, 1898, at Halstead, Kansas. He lived for a short while at Taloga, Oklahoma. Since then he lived most of the time at Meno. In 1922 he married Miss Anna Buller, and both joined the New Hopedale Church in 1931. When he was operated in March, 1947, the doctors discovered internal cancer. After coming home from the hospital he helped repair the combine and went to harvest with the boys in June, but he came home early because of illness. After another operation and four and one-half months of intense suffering he breathed his last on November 4, 1947. He is mourned by his beloved wife, Anna; son Arthur of the home; his mother, Mrs. Katie Schmidt, Goltry; one brother Cornelius, Enid; and two sisters, Marie of the home, and Mrs. Eva Unruh of Garber.

Mrs. J. H. Stucky was born Helena Kaufman on November 21, 1870 in Volynia Province, South Russia. She departed this life on November 8, 1947. In 1874 she migrated along with her family to Freeman, South Dakota. In the 1880's the family moved to Kansas. When sixteen she was baptized and accepted into the Hopefield Church. Of this church she remained a faithful member for the rest of her life with the exception of seven years when she held her membership in the Monroe, Washington, Church. She was married to Jacob H. Stucky in 1889 and with him shared life for almost fifty-nine years. Eleven children were born to her. Three died when young. The remaining eight, with her husband, survive her and mourn her passing. They are: Mrs. D. J. Stucky, Moundridge; Mrs. B. C. Schmitt, Standford, Montana; Mrs. J. L. Stucky, McPherson; Mrs. A. G. Lennon, Seattle, Washington; Mrs. Jacob Daum, Elyria; Edward, Snohomish, Washington; Phillip, Seattle, Washington; and Marie of McPherson.

Eva Witt Kliewer Regehr was born March 22, 1860 near Thorwin, West Prussia, Germany.

Her parents died early, and she was left an orphan among other people. Since her parents were of the Evangelical faith, she was baptized as a child and later confirmed. When eighteen she, with the help of others, migrated to Peabody, Kansas. She lived in the Gnadenberg community, and in 1884 she entered into wedlock with Andreas Kliewer. She was taught the Mennonite beliefs, baptized, and received into the Gnadenberg Church. After twenty years of life the marriage was broken by the death of her husband. Twenty-six years of trials and hardships followed. In 1931 she entered into a second marriage with A. M. Regehr of Inman Kansas. Eight happy years were spent in the new church and community until death again took her husband. She went to the great beyond on October 25, 1947, moured by her daughter, Marie Rosfeld, and son, Edward.

Loren Lee Gingerich, son of Melvin and Verna (Roth) Gingerich, was born in Washington, Iowa, July 18, 1934; died in the Goshen Hospital, Goshen, Indiana, November 7, 1947. He was seriously injured when an automobile struck the bicycle on which he was delivering papers, and passed away six hours later. In 1941 he moved with his parents to North Newton, Kansas, and in 1947 to Goshen, Indiana. He was baptized on May 25, 1947, and was a member of the Bethel College Mennonite Church, North Newton, Kansas. He is survived by his parents and an older brother Owen Jay. Funeral services were held in the Goshen College chapel November 10, with S. C. Yoder, Lester Hostetler, and E. E. Miller participating. Interment was in the Elkhart Prairie Cemetery.

Agathe Hamm was born in Marienburg, West Prussia, July 26, 1857, the daughter of Peter and Emilie Hamm. She was baptized in 1874 and received as a member of the Heubudner Gemeinde. In 1879 she came to America with her sisters. They came to Nebraska. In 1880 the parents also migrated to Nebraska, but in 1882 they were taken in sudden death. This was a hard blow for the children; however, it led to a rich experience of God's grace. She became so ill in 1889 that the physician gave up all hope. However, God gave her a long period of grace. She experienced the first stroke in May, 1942. While she was an invalid she enjoyed repeating Bible verses and singing hymns. After being an invalid for nine years, she was called home October 29, 1947. She is mourned by two sisters.

Beatrice, Nebraska

My dear Friend Schowalter:

Your good letter of November 8, asking us to continue sending you the JUNIOR MESSENGER for the sake of the grandchildren was indeed a delightful little letter for us to read in this office.

When anyone who has walked with God ninety years as you have, and is still thinking in terms of the grandchildren who come to see you and who love to hear you tell the interesting stories in our children's magazine, that is indeed something for all to be grateful for—the grandchildren, for having such a wonderful grandfather; for us as a Publication Board to have such loyal supporters; and for you, that at age ninety you are still spiritually aware and alive to the needs of those who are around you.

We will treasure your letter as one of the fine inspirations which come to us from time to time in this office. We send you our blessings, and trust that the days may be filled with rich experiences so long as God grants you life.

Cordially yours,
Manager

The accompanying correspondence is not made up, it's real. And let those who write books on how to grow old gracefully, please note.

(The letter from Brother Schowalter was a highlight in the morning's mail not long ago.)

Bernhard B. Neumann, son of Bernhard and Helena Enns Neumann, was born November 19, 1872, at Altonau, South Russia. The family moved to Sagradovka in 1878 and later migrated to the United States. Bernhard Neumann was baptized in 1892. In America he joined the Alexanderwohl Church and later the Tabor Church. While living in Marion he attended the Methodist Church where he was an associate member. He was joined in wedlock with Helena Voth in 1895. After forty years of happiness, death took his wife. In 1936 he married Anna Schmidt. Bernhard B. Neumann served in public offices, as township assessor for sixteen years and as county treasurer for two successive terms and about one year of an unexpired term. He served untiringly in the Mennonite Hilfs Plan for thirty-one years. On November 15, he passed to his reward. He is mourned by his wife, his foster daughter, Mrs. Jacob F. Voth; two grandchildren, Arthur A. Voth, who is doing relief work in Europe, and Helena Voth; two brothers John of Mount View, Oklahoma and Peter of Whitewater and one sister, Mrs. Julius Duerksen, Bessie, Oklahoma.

John J. Wedel, son of Jacob and Anna Stucky Wedel, was born November 12, 1879, in McPherson County, Kansas. In 1895 he was baptized by Rev. Diedrich Gaeddert and received into the Hoffnungsfeld Church, Moundridge. He remained a member of this church until four years ago when he became a charter member of the Walton Church. He was the oldest in this church. In 1901 he married Fanny Waltner, daughter of Jospeh and Mary Kaufman Waltner. To them were born twelve children, of which four survive. On October 10, 1946, the children surprized their parents with a celebration of their forty-fifth wedding anniversary. In August, 1947, he suffered a number of strokes, and on November 19 he quietly fell asleep to be with the Lord. He is mourned by his wife; one son, Milton J.; and three daughter, Mrs. Fred Gehring, Florence; Mrs. Elmer Stucky, Moundridge; and Mrs. W. G. Klein, Burrton.

John B. Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Helen Koehn Jantz, was born October 29, 1885, at Moundridge, Kansas, and passed away October 12, 1947. In 1906 he married Miss Lena Johnson. Most of his life he lived near Goltry, Oklahoma, and since 1938 he lived in Goltry. He was baptized in 1905 and received into the New Hopedale Mennonite Church, Meno, Oklahoma. In 1913 he joined the Zoar Church, Goltry. In May, 1943, a definite spiritual change took place in his life when he surrendered his all to his Lord. This resulted in spiritual growth and deep interest in Christian activity. He is mourned by his wife; three sons, Walter and Harry, Goltry; and Henry of Carrier; six daughters, Mrs. Mary Skorepa and Martha of Enid; Mrs. Mildred Wright of Ringwood; Mrs. Lucille Gradowski, Alaska; Mrs. Minne Gose, Enid; and Mrs. Edna Mae Koehn, Meno.

Gustav R. Esau was born November 13, 1863, at Neukrich, West Prussia, the son of Jacob and Justina Esau. He was baptized in 1879. His parents died early, and he chose adventure in the New World. In 1884 he came to western Nebraska, where he homesteaded. In 1891 he married Johanna Wiebe. In the same year he bought a far near Plymouth. The home was blessed with four children, but two sons preceded him in death, Gustav in 1910 and Adolph in 1941. These were hard experiences. From 1895 to 1919 the family lived in the vicinity of Hoag. After this they made their home in Beatrice. They celebrated their Golden Wedding in 1941. Mother passed away in 1944. Since then father was lonely and desired to be with his God. He was called home quietly on October 30, 1947. He leaves one daughter, Mrs. G. A. Penner, and one son, Loui H. Esau.

Lavina Agnes Schmidt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ben B. Schmidt, was born April 10, 1919, near Goessel, Kansas. She was baptized in 1937 and received into the Alexanderwohl Church. As the first grand-child of her father's family, she brought much joy to her home. She had normal health until the age of eleven after which certain indications of failing health made their appearance. There were periods when her body was strong enough to perform the daily tasks of life, and then again her health had a setback and often laid her on the sickbed. These constant changes had a depressing effect upon her life. But she became increasingly strong in her faith in God. The death of her two sisters made a firm impression upon her spiritual life. Her last sickness was a long and hard battle, but victory came as the soul left the body on November 11, 1947. She is mourned by her parents, her sister Elva and her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Penner of Burrton, Kansas.

Consistent Christian Living

by Ruth Liechty

Consistent Christian living is a factor in which each Christian should be vitally interested. Living a consistent life requires the full surrender of our lives to the Holy Spirit who can then guide and direct us in the path we should tread. It is the full time—not only part-time—duty and privilege of each Christian to live a life that is pleasing in God's sight. Do we earnestly try to live such a life daily?

"We are not here to speak without the living
Of what we claim is ours by grace;
To tell of conquerings in Jesus and wear
No Victor's smile upon our face.

It is not ours to boast that Satan's vanquished
And sup with him in great delight,
Nor ours to wear a robe of virtue for while
We entertain the hosts of night.

We've talked until the hungry world grows weary
Of hearing what we have to say,
Until it turns its longing eyes upon us
And asks, "Why don't you live that way?"

Would we, like one of old, betray the Master,
And bring reproach upon His name?
Ah, no dear Lord! We pray Thee, move within us.
To make our lips and lives the same." *

If, in taking an inventory of our lives, we fail to make a passing mark, may we pray with the Psalmist, "Search me, O God, and know my heart: try me, and know my thoughts: And see if there be any wicked way in me, and lead me in the way everlasting."

How Do You Forgive?

by Amanda Friesen

Forgiveness is like a magical formula and when used correctly will remove friction, erase bitterness, and bring about a sweeter fellowship than was enjoyed previous to the application.

Omit forgiveness from family life for one week and the result will be more noticeable than the omission of soap and water for that length of time.

Is an unforgiving spirit the cause of much heartache among Christians today? Can an individual be a Christian and continue to harbor unforgiveness in his heart? Is it possible for a Christian to go through life without humbling himself to ask forgiveness of another? Truly mercy and humility must characterize the Christian's walk, and in forgiveness and reconciliation we find them both, for forgiveness is mercy in action and to ask for pardon is humility in practice.

Someone has said, "The Devil cannot hinder God's work, neither can the sinner; only God's children are able to hinder it." How the lack of love and fellowship between born again people and their bitter remarks concerning each other must please the Devil, whose work is to uproot and destroy. As sinners look at the lives of believers do they exclaim, "Behold, how the Christians love one another—in their mouths is the law of kindness?" If they would speak thus, many times it would be sheer hyperbole.

Have you as a Christian failed in a moment's temptation when your body was weary? You spoke unkindly. Immediately being reproved by the Holy Spirit you asked forgiveness only to receive no answer from the party you had offended. After repeating your request, an unsmiling "I will this time" seemed to increase your burden and the joy of being reconciled was missing. Does Christ forgive like that? A thousand times no! Confess your fault, forgiveness awaits. Truly He forgives and the fellowship with Him is soothing to our spirit as we contemplate our unworthiness and His unlimited love and mercy. His words to Peter concerning forgiveness were, "Not seven times only but seventy times seven." Dare we allow ourselves to be ungracious to our penitent brother who seeks to be restored to fellowship knowing that we also fail? The disciples were taught to pray, "Forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors." Can we pray these words with joy?

For years Joseph's brothers carried a burden in their hearts concerning the unmerciful treatment Joseph had received at their hands. After covering their sin for years it came forth by confession. What balm to their hearts to hear the one they had wronged say, "Ye meant it for evil, but God worked it for good." What comfort to know Joseph's brother love had not been smothered by bitterness or revenge. How blessed to realize Joseph would nourish them and their little ones. Although he was a ruler in Egypt he would not make them suffer by inflicting punishment or ill treatment on them or their children. Forgiveness blotted out the past and fellowship was restored. Could it have been restored without their admission of guilt and sorrow for their sin? After Joseph assured his brothers that all was well, wouldn't it have been foolish for him to continue repeating the story to others concerning the ill treatment he had received years ago at the hands of his brothers? Forgiveness places a finger on the lip concerning what has been erased by reconciliation.

A child forgives easily. We are reminded of the verse in scripture which says, "Except ye become as a little child ye cannot enter into the Kingdom of heaven." A little child harbors no resentment or bitterness after forgiveness has entered his heart. A child freely forgives and quickly forgets. How gladly is the kiss of forgiveness given. How tightly are chubby arms clasped about the offending person's neck. How like music the happy laughter rings and rosy lips sing out, "We are both nice now."

Dare we be unforgiving in the light of Scriptures? Matthew 15:6 declares, "But if ye forgive not men their trespasses neither will your Father forgive your trespasses." Ephesians 4:32 commands, "And be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you."

Is there a lack of fellowship with the Lord? May the Holy Spirit cause us to search our hearts. May all bitterness and wrath and evil speaking be put away and may we earnestly and joyfully pray, "Forgive us our debts as we forgive our debters."

Dare we fail to ask forgiveness? Confessing your faults is as much a necessity as forgiving. Which of us is guiltless? We have all gone astray. Perhaps we should sing the negro spiritual more often—"Not my brother nor my sister but it's me O Lord, standing in the need of prayer." The poet must have shared this sentiment also when he wrote:

> "What paineth thee in others
> In thyself may be.
> All dust is frail,
> All flesh is weak,
> Be thou the strong man thou dost seek."

Why I Want To Study Medicine

by Jake Friesen

(Student from Paraguay at Freeman Junior College being aided by the Y.P.U. Missionary Education Fund.)

There are many professions which, if fulfilled in the right way, may be a blessing to others, to society, but there is probably no other profession that is greater than that of a medical doctor. Filled with the spirit of love to mankind a doctor can render a service to his needy people and so be a real witness for Christ.

The needs of our people in Paraguay are varied in nature. I think medical care is the most important thing needed there. Since the refugees came and settled down in the new colony. "Volendam," we have four colonies with nearly 8,000 people that don't have their own doctor. Colony Fernheim, my home colony, has its hospital and medical instruments, but for a doctor they are dependent on the Mennonites of North America. The other colonies are still without a doctor who takes care of the health of their people. Medical help is the most needed and also the most appreciated help the Mennonites in Paraguay can get. A doctor's joy would not be only the work done in the hospitals; he would have to give lectures concerning the welfare and health of the people by showing them the danger of some unsanitary conditions that might cause sickness.

Another field for a Christian doctor would be the mission. Our mission work is so young and weak yet; it definitely needs support. Medical service among the Indians would soon win the confidence of these people living in darkness and so would more easily open their hearts for the Gospel. The various tropical diseases can be studied where they occur, and a young doctor could stay right away with the association of doctors (Aerzteschaft) which can be done with six month's work in a clinic.

Thus we can say that Paraguay is an opportunity for doctors. It is mostly pioneer-work that has to be done. My desire is to study medicine, not to get a good career, but because there is a need of doctors who are willing to go out also to the lonely places. With the help of the Lord, I will be able to achieve this goal. Through God's grace and the willingness of the Mennonites of North America I was able to come over and continue in my study. I am so thankful to the Young People of the General Conference to give me such a chance, and my efforts are to show them that it is not in vain what they do for me.

If a Thing Is Worth Doing . . .

By J. W. Benjamin

It was my privilege recently to spend several days with an expert photographer who was making scenic views for a national publisher.

No doubt you take snapshots. How do you take your pictures? Do you see a lovely view, aim your camera, and "shoot"?

This man was not just a photographer. He was a member of a most exacting profession. He was an artist. As we drove along the road he was constantly on the lookout for good views, for possibilities of excellent composition.

He stopped at a famous old church, walked all around, looking at the building from various angles, and finally selected the position for his camera. Then he really went to work. When I thought he was ready, he took a final reading with his light meter to determine the proper exposure time once more. Then he started to wait. For what? For just the proper cloud effect! Twenty-five minutes later, after a final look at his meter and a final look at his view finder, he photographed the church. The result? Magnificent!

He found a breath-taking view of a little village nestling in a deep valley, and put the camera in position to get lichen on a fence in the immediate foreground. He needed a filter to get separation of objects in the valley and a "slow" picture to get detail on the fence. But the wind was blowing. Just as one gust would die down, another breeze would come along. Branches on an old tree, which were also to be in the foreground, kept moving in the wind. He waited forty-five minutes by the watch before getting that view. Again—a really wonderful photograph that was worth waiting for.

Maybe we don't need quite the "patience of Job," that most patient of all men, to do things well, but there are certain tasks that can't be done in the twinkling of an eye.

So let's take a lesson from the photographer, and complete the title above—IT IS WORTH DOING WELL!

Cobwebs

They slip in through night's blackness
And shimmer in the grass
In wait for all observers
Who in the daylight pass;
But in the sun's bright brilliance
Soon there are none to find:
How like the grass's cobwebs
To cobwebs of the mind!

Universal Military Training

The special session of Congress met on November 17 to consider the question of stop-gap aid to Europe, a means of stopping the inflationary spiral in this country and other important legislation akin to these central questions of the moment. Universal Military Training will not be on the docket until the regular session of Congress in January or later.

There will then be a tremendous drive to push through this legislation; "patriotic" groups continue to support this move. Educational and church groups disapprove. The outcome of this legislation if it is passed can well have far-reaching effects on family, educational, and church life, as well as in the shaping of national policy and plotting the destiny of nations in the future.

The National Service Board has suggested that a program for high school and college age young people of vital concern to them would be a study and discussion of Universal Military Training, what it is, what its implications are for the national life, the family, church and school life of the individual.

Available from the Mennonite representative at the National Service Board is material on this subject. Those interested in developing a program on Universal Military Training can obtain information from:

GOD'S ACRE

The Western District C. E. Conference is undertaking a fund raising project to finance the purchase of a District Retreat Ground. This is the major project the C. E. is undertaking during the present year.

The Zion C. E. Society of Elbing, Kansas, is undertaking to raise funds for this purpose through a God's Acre potato crop project. The afternoon of October 29, eight young men assembled at the site, to be used for this purpose, with tractors, plows, axes and fencing tools to prepare the land for the project.

At the C. E. Conference various methods were suggested for raising the money needed for a Retreat Grounds. Another way would be a livestock project. Other means whereby local C. E's could raise money are being considered.

Items of Interest

The LeTourneau Foundation has recently purchased a 444-acre development on Pine Lake, near Little Rock, Arkansas, for the establishment of an interdenominational camp for young people. The new site will replace the Bethany Camp at Winona Lake, Indiana, which is reported to have been sold. (R.N.)

PRAYER FOR PUBLICATIONS

That our editors may be filled with the Holy Spirit.

That our publications bless the readers in the spots of their deepest need.

That the books sold by our bookstores may always and only be such that the thinking of our people may be enriched.

That our pamphlets may find a resting spot in the soul of needy people.

That the Board of Publication may be guided as they undertake the new publications authorized at our recent Conference.

That through the printed word Sunday school teachers and leaders in all areas of our church life may be strengthened and deepened in their spiritual thinking.

Many churches will be observing Youth Week from January 25 to February 1 again this year. The theme for the week in 1948 will be "Jesus Christ is Lord," which is the same theme that was used at the World Youth Conference at Oslo, Norway.

Early this year a radio program appeared on the air on Sunday evening which has been considered to be very unusual. It is called "The Greatest Story Ever Told." It is a program dramatizing the teachings of Jesus. It appears on the American Broadcasting Network early Sunday evening and is produced by a highly trained cast, choir and orchestra.

A recent survey reveals, according to Youth magazine, there is need for 41,000 additional nurses. The survey indicates that of all the public-service professions the nursing profession is hardest hit. Today there are about 320,000 women engaged in nursing in comparison to 807,000 in teaching and 75,000 as social-welfare workers. There is about one nurse to every 300 persons as compared with one to 6,389 in 1900, however, higher standards of medical care have greatly increased the demands on personnel.

A seminary professor began his class with words something like this: "I used to claim that I believed the Bible from cover to cover, but I no longer make such a claim." Some of the students were shocked. The professor went on to explain that he had learned to see that he did not believe (by-live; live-by) all the high and difficult spiritual teachings and requirements of the Bible. He was not that far along in his spiritual growth. There are Christians who undoubtedly feel that they "ought" to believe all of the Bible and therefore say that they do. Consequently, they fail to go into what believing really would mean. And thus pious ardor becomes a hindrance rather than a gain.

Undoubtedly, there was a time when the Hebrew religious leaders had to put forth effort to build up a strong reverence for the Holy Scriptures. Centuries passed, and by the time of the Reformation there again was a critical need for discovering the spiritual heritage that is in the Bible. The Reformation lifted the Bible up high. Centuries passed and many again forgot this spiritual heritage in their mad pursuit after the material and secular. So today many need to come to a new reverence for the spiritual wealth (value) of the Bible. In contrast there are those who know the Book and profess reverence for it.

Among such are those who stand in need of a clear recognition of the fact that they do not believe as much as they may so easily profess that they do. For example, many who profess a very full and deep belief in the Bible do not be-

We Need To See Our Unbelief

Editorial Jottings

Mennonites might well make more use of community conferences, forums, and panel discussions for teaching the way of peace. On another page of this issue is an account of a community conference on world affairs, sponsored by the American Friends Service Committee. Undoubtedly, the participants in that conference heard some things that they ordinarily do not hear or read. The Friends gave them a chance to learn about peace. A Church of the Brethren pastor arranged for a community forum in which a Legionnaire upheld U.M.T. and a scientist opposed it. The United States congressman of the district was the chairman of the meeting. The people who attended were polled before and after as to their sentiments on U.M.T. The results, which happened to be a large majority against U.M.T., were given to the congressman, who had requested them. In this case the congressman was not badgered by one or two individuals but received the will of a large democratic group. Furthermore, those who attended the forum had an excellent educational experience. Mennonites can do something along these lines as is indicated by the fact that a member of the General Conference Peace Committee had an active part in arranging for the community conference described above. Mennonites need to give others a chance to learn.

Goodness for the sake of pride is a very sly temptation that may even bother the pacifist as suggested in the following parable: "Two men stood up in the meetinghouse to pray; one was a pacifist and the other a Legionnaire. The pacifist stood up and said this prayer: 'Lord, I thank thee that I am not like other men, militaristic, prejudiced, or reactionary, like that Legionnaire. I send food parcels regularly to Germany and entertain Negroes for dinner in my home.' But the Legionnaire would not even raise his eyes to heaven but said, 'O God, have mercy on me for my sins.' " Such pride in goodness is a very real temptation until the individual has a very strong grasp of the insight expressed by Paul, "If I give away all I have, and if I deliver my body to be burned, but have not love I gain nothing."

It may be more difficult for us to love "our" enemies rather than everybody else's enemies, and yet the experience of learning to love the enemies which we have created may enable us to love more helpfully and intelligently enemies all over the world. Jesus said love "your" enemies. That may mean someone with whom we differ theologically or someone whose personality traits tend to go against our tastes in general. As pacifists we are bound to have problems very near and real.

It is ever the business of the Christian Church to be vital as it expresses itself on paper, through worship services, and in general fellowship. Today it is being frequently indicted as being lukewarm. An editor suggests that "popular" Christianity could well be labeled "how to dodge the basic issues of the Christian gospel." One of the basic issues that he had in mind in this was the way of nonresistance and relief work as contrasted to the more popular way of war. Another writer suggests that "The close of many meetings leaves an impression simply of the climax of the casual." In contrast to this are some statements about Alcoholics Anonymous, the organization which today is more successful in reclaiming confirmed alcoholics than any other. Of them Wilburn Echols says, "They are incomparably closer together than a group of Presbysterians or Masons or college fraternity brothers . . . no matter who is speaking or how well or how inadequately he gets across, the A. A.'s listen as though their lives depended on attentiveness." To be vital we must be creative. To be creative we must be honest.

Inner control is one of the most distinguishing marks of a Christian and the basis of successful democracy. Americans are showing signs of bankruptcy in inner control in a number of ways. One of them is the "charge all the traffic will bear" attitude of large business. Before the end of price control the National Association of Manufacturers declared, "If OPA is permanently discontinued, the production of goods will mount rapidly and, through free competition, prices will quickly adjust themselves to levels that consumers are willing to pay." But outer controls once removed inner controls were so negligible that today prices stand at an inflationary level and business is jubilant about the biggest pile of profit which it has ever accumulated in American history. Business Week magazine, in its November 1, 1947, issue stated: Business this week was heading down the homestretch of the biggest year, profitwise, in all its history . . . . Unless something completely unexpected happens in the next couple of months, U. S. corporations are going to wind up the year with total income 50% or so above 1946 (itself a record)." After deduction of taxes Proctor and Gamble (soap) showed in nine months of 1947 a profit increase over 1946 of 226.5 per cent. When inner control vanishes, outer control or chaos is bound to be the result. The Christian way is that of inner control.

EDUCATION FOR FORMER C.P.S. MEN

by Lloyd L. Ramseyer

DURING the war, we as Mennonites set aside a portion of our gifts for the support of Civilian Public Service. I believe one can truthfully say that in very few, if any, cases was this really a very great sacrifice. Although the total sum raised by the Mennonite Church for this purpose was considerable, yet none of us really suffered because of what we gave.

Saving forests during the "lean years"

One class of our church members did, however, make real sacrifices. These were the young men who sacrificed time, money, and in some cases social position for conscience sake. They were living up to the best in the Mennonite faith and tradition. The rest of us who believed as they did escaped with minor sacrifices, because of age, physical condition, or occupation.

Some of these young men want to proceed with their education. They received only $5.00 per month as spending money during the years when they were in base camps. Their income did not even pay for their clothing. Even the money which they earned as hospital workers and on other types of detached service was taken by the government. Now, older and with family responsibilities already incurred or looked forward to in the near future, without any savings from war years to draw upon, they are faced with the task of preparing for adequate service to the church and the community.

The various bodies of the Mennonite Church, acting through the Council of Mennonite and Affiliated Colleges and MCC representatives, decided that these young men should at least have free tuition granted them in our colleges. Yet these colleges, always inadequately financed, could not alone accept this extra financial load. Furthermore, this was an obligation of the church rather than of the college. Therefore, in the General Conference, it was decided that this tuition money should be raised through gifts to the Board of Education and backed by this and some other boards.

The Church is offering far less to those young men who followed the path it provided than is the government to those who followed its way. Discharged G.I.'s are getting college tuition, fees, books, and the like up to a total of $500 per academic year. In addition each single G. I. receives a grant for living expenses of $65 per month and each married man receives a monthly subsistence allowance of $90. The church does not grant any CPS man more than mere tuition, which is not more in any case than $250 per academic year.

This allowance is small, not because our CPS men do not deserve as much as other men, but because this money must be raised by voluntary contributions. Even with this small allowance, however, gifts for this purpose have been coming in so slowly as to jeopardize the entire scheme. With the war over and direct CPS expense at an end, can't we at least see this small expenditure through?

Not only do we owe this assistance to those who did our sacrificing for us, but it is to our own interest to see that these young men go on to complete their education. Included in this group are some of our most promising prospects for the ministry, the mission field, and Christian teaching positions in our schools, to say nothing of the number who, through further education,

They carried the banner of the Church will have their value as lay workers of the church increased. When war came they were already sufficiently consecrated to the principles of the church to sacrifice for them. During their CPS experience they had their religious convictions strengthened and deepened through discussions among the group, and through regular programs of camp education. With this background they constitute our most promising reservoir of church leadership.

Thus in the light of an obligation which we owe and also because of its value to the future of the church we must secure the funds to carry this program through. Why not a church offering or two for this cause, after careful explanation to the congregation as to the need and values of the program? Why not gifts from Sunday School classes for this educational fund? Individuals, too, would find giving to this cause a satisfaction and a blessing. Send your contributions to the General Conference Headquarters, 722 Main Street, Newton, Kansas, marked for the Board of Education for this purpose.

These young men are capable and consecrated. They can form our leadership of tomorrow if adequately prepared. They carried the banner of the Church during the war at great personal sacrifice. We must see this thing through.

The Way to the Father - God's Telephone

by Mrs. Erland Waltner

"Lord, show us the Father, and it sufficeth us," begged Philip, and he spoke for us all. Today we are still asking the same thing—and with as little reason. Two thousand years Jesus has been with us and still we do not know Him. We thirst, with the cup before us; we hunger, with the bread in our very hands; we long for communication, with the telephone beside us. "My soul pants for the living God, — where shall I find Him?" is still the cry of our hearts.

We know where to find sinful man, and we know in great detail what he is like. Nearly every Sunday we hear sermons about him. Illustrations are plentiful. Even sinners can point out the faults of sinners, but it takes a friend of God to show us God. Many ministers who start out to preach a sermon in answer to the plea, "We would see Jesus," end by preaching one which seems rather to finish this sentence, "The trouble with man is . . . " The hearer's natural reaction is to bristle with defense, whereas the desired response of repentance is more effectively gained when he sees himself and passes judgment upon himself in the light of a clear picture of the Righteous One.

Does it comfort a child crying in the dark to tell him "You are in the dark"? All he wants is someone to open the door and show him the light streaming in from the Father's room. The way to the Father is the same today as it was for Philip; Jesus is the way.

There is a telephone line outside my house, where strong wires are stretched upon poles—crosses if you will. By means of a receiver I can hear the voice of a friend far away, and he sounds so real that I know it is he, and by what he says I know what he is like. By that same line he can also hear my voice. You see the parable right away; Jesus is the telephone line. The night before His crucifixion, when He was thinking about the fact that in a few hours He was going to be stretched upon a cross, His arms stretched by the weight of His body, and His hands stretched until the nails tore bigger and still bigger holes in His flesh, He said to Philip and the rest, in a figure, "I am going to be a telephone line for you. Before this you have never had a telephone. Talk to God through me from now on. I am your mouthpiece; I am also your receiver. If you speak through Me you will surely receive an answer, that your joy may be full." (John 16:2) "This line cost a great deal to put up, but it is going to be expedient for you, and a great comfort. It is no party line and the phone will never be busy, but you will have to get used to using it. The line is clear; you may now talk to each other."

By the use of this telephone I do not mean only prayer, but also the study of Jesus in all the ways open to us, studying Jesus in the Word, and in the lives of those who seem to live close to Him, and studying His dealings with us.

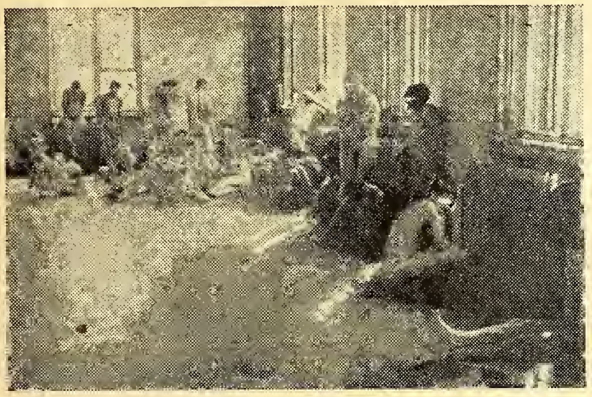
So we lift the receiver and put through a call; and the voice at the other end of the line sounds like Jesus' voice! Is not that a comfort? We may know He looks like Jesus too, and He acts and thinks and loves us like Him. There is no harm in imagining the Father to look like Jesus standing by us when we pray. God is also, as it were, imagining us to look like Jesus. (There is a strange transformer on this telephone line.) We come to God in Jesus' name; God also came to us in Jesus' name.

Having then such a great means of communication, let us not hesitate to use it (Heb. 4:14-16) but draw near with boldness and not think He will not hear us. We know God heard Jesus' prayers, tremendous ones for the raising of the dead and the forgiving of sins. But we need not think we shall receive lesser answers. "Greater things than these shall ye do," said Jesus. We need not say, "Oh, yes, the Father heard Him, because He was His Son, but He would not hear me." Remember that transformer. Every advantage of Sonship and of righteousness is ours when we step into His place. Certainly God will not hear us if we stand and shout up to heaven in our own strength, but if we use the telephone, if we speak in Jesus' name, we may speak ever so softly and He will hear us.

This study of God the Father through Jesus will be a telephone acquaintance which will grow and blossom into a great friendship deepening daily until at last we see Him face to face, "Whom not having seen, we love."

When God thinks of the price of that telephone line, the price of any request we make over it seems small; and when we think of the cost of that line, it makes us thoughtful of what we say over it, humble at how much God wanted to get in touch with us, and safe in the security of such love.

NATIONAL MENTAL HEALTH FOUNDATION IMPROVES CONDITIONS OF MENTALLY ILL



" . . . conditions in mental hospitals are shocking and appalling and . . . something needs to be done about them." (C. Lord photo)

"One out of every 10 Americans living today will be incapacitated by a mental disorder at some time during his life. One out of 20 will spend some part of his life as a patient in a mental hospital. About 600,000 Americans are confined in mental institutions at the present time . . . . The average mental patient is hospitalized for four years. In 1946, an average of $1.22 a day was spent on each patient in state hospitals, which care for 87% of all persons hospitalized for mental illness. This had to cover all costs of medical treatment, custodial care, housing and food. An average of 28c a day was spent for food. For every hundred dollars allotted for the care of any kind of mental disorder, only $1.00 is earmarked for preventive psychiatry. Yet it has been estimated that a typical state saves an average of $3,000 for each person prevented from passing into mental illness. Voluntary agencies spent only 25c per case of mental disease in 1944, as against $100 per case of infantile paralysis. According to Surgeon-General Parran, mental health is America's number one health problem."

Such is the vast need pointed out by the National Mental Health Foundation which is "an organization of citizens dedicated to the preservation and improvement of mental health and to the achievement of the highest possible standards of treatment and care for mentally handicapped persons."

The Foundation has already attracted nation-wide attention to mental hospitals through publicity articles carried by such magazines as Reader's Digest, Life, etc., and through radio programs broadcast in more than 175 communities in the United States and Canada. Furthermore, it has helped to raise the standards of care in mental hospitals by its monthly magazine, The Psychiatric Aid, which is published for attendants, by a Handbook for Psychiatric Aids, through an award to the attendant "who shows outstanding skill in the discharge of his duties, and kindness and devotion to the patients under his care," by securing college students for attendant work in summer, and by doing research upon which can be built more adequate state laws.

The Foundation, which is a non-profit organization, wholly dependent upon voluntary contributions, has been promised grants of $25,000 each from the Rockefeller Foundation and the Carnegie Corporation of New York, provided the Foundation succeeds in raising its budget by December 31. This organization, which is an outgrowth of the work done by C.P.S. men in mental hospitals and which numbers Orie O. Miller on its Board of Directors, is now appealing for contributions to its budget.

Membership in the Foundation is open to all who share its basic objectives. Any person may become a member upon written application and payment of $1.00 annual dues. The address of the National Mental Health Foundation is 1520 Race Street, Philadelphia 2, Pa.

"THE WORLD is passing through troubled times. The young people of today think of nothing but themselves. They have no reverence for parents or old age. They are impatient of all restraint. They talk as if they alone knew everything, and what passes for wisdom with us is foolishness with them. As for the girls, they are forward, immodest, and unwomanly in speech, behavior and dress."—Reported to have been written by a monk named Peter in 1274 A. D.

Urges That Church Openly Refuse To Participate in Another War

South Bend, Indiana: Frederick K. Stamm, pastor of First Congregational Church, Chicago, declared here at a mass meeting on November 2 that the Church must openly refuse to participate in another war. Before the service, more than 300 lay leaders of the local churches, each group led by its pastor, took part in a procession.

ON TAKING THE BLAME OURSELVES

Psychologist Allan Fromme says: "It is when frustration is felt most keenly that we search most desperately for reasons outside ourselves to explain what has happened." An old proverb says: "The poorer the cause the louder the defense." And a Wiser than Them All has warned us against the habit of the hypocrite who hunts motes in the eyes of others to hide a beam in his own eye.

Confession of sin is prerequisite to sin's forgiveness, and Solomon observed that "He that covereth his sin shall not prosper." Newton said, "I have observed that when people are getting religion they are apt to be hard on themselves and easy on other people; but when they are losing religion or are already backslidden they are likely to be easy on themselves and hard on other people."

No doubt we have all found that very much the same conditions we have to meet to find God, we must keep to retain His favor. Just take this matter of confession: in spirit, confession means simply taking the blame ourselves. This does not mean of course that we are to accept blame when we are altogether innocent, but it does mean that we are to be ever ready to accept blame to the full measure that blame is assessable to us.

There is advantage in taking the blame ourselves, for in that case we may seek forgiveness of any who have been injured, and we are assured that we shall find forgiveness and mercy with God. But from the days of the first sin it has been man's trend to pass the blame on—to his wife, she to the serpent, and—but the blame must rest somewhere and it stops with the one at the end of the line.

It is always proper to avoid any course that may lead to blame, even to the point of doing things which are contrary to your best judgment (though not to the point of wrongdoing), for the sense of blame is a disagreeable and tormenting experience. But when there is blame to be attached, and a scapegoat is being sought, it is a happy person who can take his share without complaint.

Asked for the most difficult words in the English language, a man of experience said, "They are those: 'I was wrong.'" Try saying these as often as they are appropriate and you will be rated as a better neighbor, a more agreeable companion, and a more consistent Christian. And by such means you will keep "short accounts with God," in that your sense of grace will always be fresh, and your line of defense will be short and safe.—The late General Superintendent Chapman in the Herald of Holiness

A Meditation on U.M.T.

My son may have to take military training. I don't like the idea, but he'll have to take it like all the rest. Of course, I know there are some C. O.'s who won't take it, and I guess war isn't a Christian thing, but what are you going to do about it? We don't want some country to come and run over us. We don't want to be enslaved. If we didn't have a strong military defense they would be sure to take advantage of us. It's all right to be Christian, but in some of these things we have to be practical. My son could go to one of those C.P.S. camps, but what would that mean? I think a Christian is entitled to a decent job, a home for his family, and a future. Furthermore, we can't let atheism take over the world. We got to be prepared.

But what troubles me is what Friend Y———— claims. He says that another war may mean the end of civilization and that Einstein says that two-thirds of our population would be destroyed in an atomic war. It does seem as though this radiation business is terribly difficult to handle. I wonder if man might go so far as to make this world uninhabitable. But maybe if we can get them first—but the trouble there is that they might use bacterial warfare against us, and they say there is no defense against that either. I guess Y———— is right that even if we won and didn't get killed off too terribly much, we wouldn't have solved the problems of the world. In fact, we'd have the world in more of a mess than now; it would be one big WPA, and we just couldn't stand that. Then too it does seem that if every fellow goes all out for the material things of life, we may eventually start fighting among ourselves. Neither do I care for the idea of all-out conscription in a case of war. Fascism would be terrible. Maybe Y———— is right. What do we live for anyhow? Maybe correcting our own faults would help. Maybe to be Christian does mean to suffer and by the suffering help win the sinner. Maybe the Christian way would mean no more suffering than war and would do a lot more good. But how much of that am I willing to do right now? What is life for anyhow?—by a contributor who prefers to remain anonymous.

FATHER WANTS TO PLACE TWO SONS IN A CHRISTIAN HOME ON A TEMPORARY BASIS

I have two motherless children. They are boys aged two and three. I do not want to give them up, but I would like to place them in some Christian home until I am able to have them with me. I am willing to pay for their board and room and other needs.

BETHEL COLLEGE CORPORATION MEETING

The Bethel College Corporation was in session for its annual meeting on Friday, November 28. The three men who were elected to serve on the Board of Directors were Louis Janzen of Elbing, Kansas, and Sam J. Goering of North Newton, Kansas, who were nominated by the Western District Conference, and Max Smith of Pawnee Rock, Kansas, who was nominated by the Corporation. The report of the President was gratefully accepted, and a feeling of praise and thanksgiving was evident throughout the day. A resolution was adopted to launch a financial campaign for the construction of a library building, with the hope that the corner stone might be laid on the day of the sixtieth anniversary, October 12, 1948. The following is quoted from the report of the President.

"During the last school year our enrollment has increased very considerably. For the school year of 1946-47 the total enrollment including the summer school of 1947, not repeating any names, came to 645 while for the previous year the figure was 429. Our student body came from twenty-five states and seven foreign countries. We had forty foreign students, twenty-seven of them from the five provinces of Canada."

Regarding the financial condition at the end of the fiscal year on July 31, 1947, the following may be noted: Current fund $67,641.45; Value of Plant $622,043.-71; Endowment $618, 225. 43; Net Worth $1,307,910.59. The school has been free of debt for three years.

The report concluded, "On October 12, 1948, Bethel College will celebrate the 60th Anniversary of the corner stone laying of the Administration Building. Our Heavenly Father has been good to our school and may this be a real Thanksgiving celebration. May Bethel College ever press on toward the high calling set for her by our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ, and the founding fathers of the institution. May the school continue to move toward closer Conference affiliation, give more recognition to the true genius of our people and make its long range contribution to the church and Christ's Kingdom by helping to build our destiny upon our God-given Mennonite heritage with Jesus Christ as the foundation."

MARILYN PREHEIM JOINS FREEMAN STAFF

Into this week are crammed the quarter examinations and Thanksgiving vacation. Next week the second quarter begins. Miss Marilyn Preheim joins the teaching staff of the College as instructor in chemistry. Miss Preheim has just finished her college work at Bethel where she majored in chemistry. The past summer she was a member of the student group which spent several months in Europe. The Christian Youth Volunteers have been giving programs in the various churches this year. Rev. Albert Ewert was a recent chapel speaker. A group of students and teachers from the Mountain Lake Bible School were guests of the College last Sunday.

BLUFFTON COLLEGE

School will close for the Christmas vacation the evening of December 19. The recess will extend over three week-ends. During the week of November 30 Rev. Harry Yoder visited in the Pennsylvania territory in the interest of the Auditorium-Physical Education Building Fund while President Ramseyer was on a similar mission in the Sugarcreek, Ohio, community. The students opened a drive for $500 for the December 2 World Student Service Fund. The money is to be used for the relief of needy students throughout the world. Miss Simone Courbot, student from France, spoke in chapel November 28 in the interest of this drive, stressing the great need of students in Europe. Dean J. S. Schultz attended an education meeting in Chicago, November 30.

MENNONITE BIBLICAL SEMINARY NEWS

The Mennonite Student Fellowship met on Thanksgiving Day at the home of Frank King, formerly of Hesston, Kansas, who has lived in this city for many years. An illustrated lecture on a Western trip was given by Frank Smith, a Goshen College graduate who now teaches at Central High School at South Bend, Indiana. New officers are Esko Loewen, Newton, Kans., President; Irvin Richert, Los Angeles, California, Vice President; Mrs. Richard Pannabecker, Bluffton, Ohio, Secretary-Treasurer. The Mennonite Student Fellowship is composed of all Mennonite students in the city in the various educational institutions.

The Executive Committee of Mennonite Biblical Seminary will meet here Tuesday, December 2. On this Committee are A. S. Rosenberger, President; J. N. Smucker, Vice President; R. L. Hartzler, Secretary; E. W. Baumgartner, treasurer.

On the weekend of November 30 Marvin Dirks conducted services at the Buhler Mennonite Church, and Don E. Smucker addressed one of the Regional Middle District Youth Conferences. This series of conferences is to be climaxed here January 3 and 4.

Among the new students who have arrived for the second term is Leo Beck of Amsterdam, Holland.

Mennonite Communities Busy Canning Meat for Relief

AKRON, PA., November 28.—This season of meat canning for relief at Glick's Cannery, Smoketown, Pennsyvania, began on November 17. Since that time 1,000 to 1,200 chickens have been canned each day. In several weeks the chicken canning will be completed and then pork and beef will be processed. This cannery will be operated during the winter as long as there is material which is to be canned for relief.

A number of other canneries in various parts of the country also report similar activity, particularly in Kansas, Virginia, and Ontario, Canada. The meat canned in this manner is an ideal food for relief, and will certainly help much in the program of feeding the hungry.

Government Assists in Refugee Work

The Intergovernmental Committee on Refugees has recently granted to the Mennonite Central Committee the amount of £40,000 which is equivalent to about $160,000. (paid in the form of 60,000 U. S. dollars, 20,000 Canadian dollars and the remaining 20,000 pounds in the form of Dutch currency) to apply on the cost of moving the group of 2,305 Mennonite refugees from Europe to Paraguay aboard the Volendam last February. Application for this assistance had been made prior to the sailing of the Volendam, but it was only recently that various details were arranged so that payment was received. This assistance is indicative of the sincere interest which this agency has shown in helping our people and certainly merits our appreciation. This assistance helps to relieve the burden which our people are carrying and will make it possible for our assistance to reach more of the refugees who are still in Europe.

Official Opening of Heerewegen Home

India Calls

"Heartily I present again the great need of India to those who feel God's call to serve. For you, as for me, it will hold pleasant surprises and constant enjoyment, not from any sheer lure of the field, but from an inner feeling of complete surrender to God's will for our lives."—Ester G. Book.

Short History of M.C.C. Available

The booklet Twenty-five Years gives a dramatic account of the work in which the Mennonite Central Committee has been engaged since its origin in 1920. Profusely illustrated by photographs, diagrams, and maps, the booklet describes the development of this work from the time of the relief activity in Russia in the 1920's to the large program of 1945 which included relief work in various countries of the world, Civilian Public Service, the Peace Section, and Mennonite Aid. Copies of this booklet are available for 15c per copy from the Publicity Office, Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pennsylvania.

THEY TOOK A SWORD

Jacob H. Janzen in his little book TALES FROM MENNONITE HISTORY tells, in language which children can understand, the story of the early Anabaptists, some of whom misunderstood the doctrine of nonresistance and accepted the principle of military force in carrying out their selfish plans. How their military schemes came to naught through the power of prayer is an interesting story in the little book TALES FROM MENNONITE HISTORY, especially for children but to be enjoyed by children of any age. Conference on World Affairs Held in Upland Church

Upland, California, December 4.—A Community Conference on World Affairs was held at the First Mennonite Church, Upland, California, on the evening of December 3. Dr. Harold C. Case, popular Pasadena minister just returned from the Christian Youth Conference at Oslo, Norway, and visits in European countries, was the speaker of the evening. Dr. Case spoke on "Inside Europe Today" at the six o'clock dinner meeting and on "Two Worlds or One—Is There a Way Out?" at the public meeting at eight o'clock. His last talk was followed by a forum discussion.

Rev. Earl Salzman, pastor of First Church, served as chairman of the second meeting. The two meetings were planned and sponsored by the Chaffey Christian Men's Fellowship in conjunction with the Friends Service Committee. The offering of the evening went for Friends Service work.

The Chaffey Christian Men's Fellowship is an organization comprising the Brotherhoods of some fifteen churches in the Chaffey District, including not only Upland and Ontario but also Cucamonga, Etiwanda and the mountain district of Camp Baldy as well. Fontana with its huge Kaiser Steel Mill is also included.

The heart of the Fellowship is a council composed of one layman from each of the participating Brotherhoods. No clergyman or pastor of any church is a member of the council. The council is the governing and policy making body. It meets every month except during the summer. General meetings of the entire fellowship are held in the fall, winter, and spring.

EDWARD BURKHALTERS RODE STORMY ATLANTIC

(The following are excerpts taken from a letter written by Edward Burkhalter, from Southampton, England, on November 21, to Rev. Howard G. Nyce.)

We had a very nice, though small room on the Queen Mary. The stewardess in our section was exceedingly accommodating; in fact, we merely needed to buzz her and she would come with the baby's milk all mixed and heated. . . Yes, we were ill the first two days out . . . . the Queen Mary ran into a very heavy sea, and the skipper seemed in no frame of mind to slow down to accommodate the passengers. The stewardess said it was the worst trip she had ever made. Only about one-fourth of the passengers showed up in the dining room the first few days. They put two-inch boards on the table, wet cloths, and still some of the dishes managed to get to the floor. We were very thankful when we reached calmer seas. We thank the Lord that little Mary Kay turned out to be such a wonderful traveler . . .

On Sunday afternoon, the missionaries on board and those who cared to attend, all gathered in the theatre and had a singspiration and testimony meeting. We enjoyed meeting the missionaries from other denominations. Most of them are with us aboard the Strathmore I don't know the official count, but it has been said there are nearly seventy missionaries and children aboard.

I am typing here in the cabin aboard the Strathmore in Southampton before we leave. It certainly is a spacious room in comparison to what we had on the Queen Mary. The boat is very nice, and we are looking forward to a time of Christian fellowship on this trip.

lieve in the non-resistance taught in the Scriptures. Such do not stand in need of a reiteration of the comprehensiveness of their belief; to reiterate would be like eating one full meal right after another. Such (and to how many of us does this not apply?) need an insight into their unbelief to the end that they may see their need, be convicted of sin, change their mind, and truly believe. By recognizing our unbelief we become prepared for greater belief.

As the Bible is revered on Bible Sunday there is need that we also become aware of the unbelief that actually clouds areas of our lives. Only by such honesty can we enter more deeply into the Life revealed by God.

HEAR WALTER H. JUDD

A number of members of the Fairfield Mennonite Church enjoyed the privilege of hearing Walter H. Judd on Sunday, November 23, and of speaking with him and Chester Gross (the local Congressman) after the address. Judd listed five foundations for peace — Repentance, Justice, Mercy, Co-operation, Faith. He spoke on world conditions and what churchmen can do for peace. He does not favor U.M.T., feels China should get aid, England less, and that aid should go only to those who will cooperate, toward long range development. Prosperity in France depends on prosperity in Germany, but France does not want a strong Germany. On that basis we will have to help France for a long time. Judd seems to have a fine grasp of the situation. I wish we had more like him in Washington.—George Stoneback

January "Mennonite Life" Another Good Issue

The January "Mennonite Life" has many good things in it. The picture at the right is taken from an article on "The Canadian Conscientious Objector." Robert Kreider sees a vision for the Mennonites of today. There are intimate pictures of scenes from the Peter Dyck story. Two novel articles tell of Dutch Mennonite mission work in Java during a whole century and particularly the last war. The work of the Deaconess is beautifully told. H. E. Suderman, Mennonite banker, sketches his rise from janitor to president in sixty years of banking. Wilma Toews tells about Zwieback and dunking. C. Henry Smith tells of N. E. Byers as a pioneer educator. There's a news article of the Mennonite conference in Basel, Switzerland. A special treat is a copy of the Christmas favorite "Jesus ist erschienen." There are other good things, including the editor's outstanding editorial on "For God So Loved." Copies may be had from the Mennonite Book Store, 710 Main Street, Newton, Kansas for fifty cents a copy.

BURKHALTERS' BID FAREWELL

November 21, 1947
London, England

Dear Friends in Christ:

We were glad to meet so many of you at the General Conference, and now we wish to bid farewell for a time as we go to India, our field of service. Already we have experienced the truth of John 10:4, "When he putteth forth his own sheep he goeth before them." The Lord has graciously met our material needs in time of preparation, and we praise Him for His many answers to prayer on the journey thus far. Just as we have definitely felt His guidance in the past, we are trusting Him for the future.

It is our prayer that we shall be channels and clean vessels for use at every opportunity and that we may lead many to the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. We also hope that we can have a part in nurturing these young Indian Christians and in training them to evangelize their own people. As we go forth we are claiming Joshua 1:9: "Have not I commanded thee? Be strong and of a good courage; be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed: for the Lord thy God is with thee withersoever thou goest."

TO CONSIDER PUERTO RICO AS POSSIBLE MISSION FIELD

For several years some of the young people, who were in C.P.S. service in Puerto Rico, have expressed a desire that the Board of Foreign Missions open a mission field in that country. The Board met with several interested young men on several occasions, and finally the Board put the matter before the General Conference in Berne, Indiana, at the last session of Conference in August. The Conference gave the Mission Board the "GO" signal asking that further investigation be made. Mr. N. Paul Stucky of Bethel College volunteered to go along as an interpreter during the Christmas vacation. The Board asked Brother Kreider, President of our Board to go to Puerto Rico and if possible to go to Colombia, South America, from there to visit our work in Cachipay. The brethren Kreider and Stucky plan to leave from New York December 22. We covet your prayers in the interest of these men and their mission.—Howard G. Nyce, Executive Secretary.

IN MEMORIAM

Norah Lambert Sommer was called to her eternal home on November 12, 1947. She was born January 1, 1887, in Elkhart County, Indiana, the daughter of the Reverend George and Amanda Gehman Lambert. She was reared in a home of high ideals where love and a sympathetic understanding for the poor and the underprivileged was taught and understood. At the age of eight years she united with the Mennonite Brethren in Christ Church of Wakarusa.

It seems natural, then, that from such an environment, Norah felt called upon to leave Goshen College to join her sister, Rose, who was serving among the Armenians and the Turkish orphans, as a missionary. After five and one-half years of effective and fearless service in the mission field, she returned to continue her education at Bluffton College. While there she was sent by the College on numerous lecture tours. She spoke in behalf of the great task of mission work remaining. Her zeal and ability to inspire others brought great blessings to her—as well as to her Church.

It was while on one of these tours that she met her husband, Oscar J. Sommer, of Pekan, Illinois, to whom she was united in marriage August 18, 1918, at Elkhart, Indiana. They established their home on the beautiful site of Mr. Sommer's pioneer forefather, where they have since resided. They worked for and planned a Christian American home of the finest type for the three children born to them: Theodore Levon who with his wife, Josephine Conrad Sommer, resides at Tremont and works with his father in the Sommer Bros. Seed Co.; Lois Lydia, now carrying on the family tradition by serving with her husband, Robert Kreider, in voluntary relief in Germany for CRALOG, having been among the first representatives to arrive there after military permission was granted; and John Lambert who is a pre-medical student at the University of Chicago.

Her enthusiastic interest in her fellow-men has grown with the years. She will be remembered by many as a greatly respected lecturer, educator, and scholar. She was an especially diligent worker in foreign relief and a capable organizer of missionary projects. So recently as October 28 she met with a group of Peoria women, inspiring and organizing them for relief work. Two days later, October 30, she attended an all-day meeting of the Women's Organization of the Central District Conference of Mennonites at Carlock in the interest of foreign relief work. From this meeting she returned filled with zeal, enthusiasm, and ambitions, some of which she did not survive to accomplish.

The memory of her humble and unassuming manner endears her to those who worked with her, especially those of her church and community. Although, often not physically able to do what her heart and mind demanded, she served faithfully as chairman of the Women's Council of Relief Organizations, teacher of the Women's Bible Class of Bethel Mennonite Church, an active member of the Elm Grove Unit of Home Bureau, and of the Elm Grove Community Club.

Student Tour to Europe

We met at Akron. Twenty-seven Mennonite college students, with two responsible leaders, were about to set out on a new venture for all concerned. Akron was certainly the place to meet, partly because here we could see in action the American headquarters for much of what we would see in action in Europe, and partly because any Mennonite (and we represented many branches from many states) can certainly find a common meeting ground at these M.C.C. offices.

You read who these twenty-seven actually were and how one of their leaders, Dr. Ramseyer, evaluated the whole experience in the September 23 issue of The Mennonite. Now, you ask, "How did the students themselves feel? What did they gain from such an experience? What will they give to their schools and home communities after such a summer?" The answers are complex, and we hope that some of them have been answered in these home communities to some extent already.

Embark on the "SS Marine Tiger"

Naturally there were "butterflies inside" that drizzly June 24 as we eagerly walked the gangplank of the SS Marine Tiger. Everyone dreams of some day going to these distant lands, and we were no exceptions. This was our dream shaping itself quickly into reality. I say quickly because there is no question of reality when the boat begins to roll. We soon saw that life on board ship was a leisurely process of becoming acquainted and accustomed to one another and the other students going to Europe. The group held its own devotions and language and Mennonite history classes every day and then joined with the other groups in the sings, lectures, and discussions which were given as part of the orientation program held throughout the nine-day journey. We were many groups going for a summer's study, travel, or work in Europe. Nearly all our fellow passengers were from the universities and colleges all over the country—Oslo World Christian Youth Conference delegates, Youth Hostelers. Experimenters in living and many others. The discussions were animated and full of zeal—young people are deeply concerned about the world which is slowly falling into their hands for management, and these expressed their desire to do something about it by first-hand contacts and friendships in an effort to make "one world." The orientation program made all of us realize even more that we would spend only two months in these battered countries and that our opinions and observations would always have to be made with that in mind. Nothing can be so wrong as a quick first judgment. That is why we tell you only what we did and saw and felt in the short moments, we could spend.

England's Green Shores

With this and the caution to be always open-minded to guide our observation and experience, we left the ship for England's welcome green shores. The old tingle of excitement roused again as we boarded the train for London and became a permanent thing all through the next few weeks. The two days in England were packed with sightseeing tours of London and the Shakespeare Country. We visited the historical and cultural spots of Westminster Abbey, the London Towers, Saint Paul's Cathedral, Big Ben and Picadilly Circus, Warwick and Kenilworth Castles, Stratford-on-Avon, and Oxford.

France and Belgium

Then we sailed across the channel to the bombed harbor city of Bologne in France. Quickly from here we were thrust into gay Paris. These days in France were crowded with visiting the Eiffel Tower, Arch of Triumph, Notre Dame and other beautiful cathedrals, de Louvre, the palace which now is a museum housing works such as Winged Victory, Venus de Milo, the Mona Lisa. The scene of the 1914-1918 Peace Treaty at Versailles, with all its Louis XIV elaborate splendor, certainly seemed ironical.

NOTES FOR THE DIARY

The battlefields of Waterloo, and the Antwerp Cathedral, with Ruben's masterpieces, claimed our attention in Brussels. Of special interest to us as Mennonites was the medieval prison of Christian martyrdom in which many Mennonites were executed. In Brussels we were also privileged to meet a few relief workers. Most of the workers were far out of the city. They had made it possible for some of the group to stay in the Evangelical Mission in Brussels; here the hospitality was unlimited. A few of us got the thrill of seeing many of the clothing bundles (which people at home had sent and which had been packed at Newton,) first-hand as we slept right among them in a warehouse during our stay here in Brussels. Then on to Amsterdam—

These crowded first days had their share of smiles. People who grew up back in Pennsylvania's hills and Kansas' prairies, etc., don't just naturally do the right thing all the time when suddenly found in Europe. The camera enthusiasts were risking their all to get just the picture for the folks at home to see. No doubt many of you have heard the "time—got lost" stories or some of the other "rare" mistakes in our language difficulties.

Holland

We welcomed the comparatively lengthy stay in Holland not only for the rest it gave us from the crowded travel schedule of the preceding days but also for the opportunity to become really acquainted with the people. So far, we had been "doing Europe"—a thoroughly bad practice, for it is done too excessively by tourists—but nevertheless almost essential to some extent since the opportunity to see as much as possible can hardly be overlooked when a return trip is very unlikely. Now we could become students and, to the extent which one month and a crowded schedule permitted, learn to know these friends and their way of life better. Most of the group was assigned to the homes of Dutch Mennonite families where we were made to feel a part of the family and taken into the life of the people in the finest kind of manner. An appreciation of others' points of view came very easily around the tea table or drying the dishes. The families gladly changed their schedules to fit into ours. With commuting to Leiden for the University course, this meant pretty early and late hours for everyone.

Study about Holland

The actual course of study, "The Culture of Our Cities," was conducted in English by leading professors in their fields at the University. Here too, through lectures, discussion, and excursions to museums and the cities themselves, we learned much of Dutch history, culture, and general trends in religious life, political life, and social conditions before, during, and after the war. Not only did we learn to appreciate these aspects of the Netherland's people, but in seeing so much of Dutch art (Rembrandt, Hals etc.) we learned a far greater appreciation for art and architecture. There were students here from eleven different countries which also helped to broaden our views in many ways. Mennonite leaders of Holland gave us lectures two evenings each week to present their work and organization. The informal way in which we were able to hear about this and learn to know these people, and many others who also attended, was just one of the good things we remember about the MCC center at Koningslaan. The planning and atmosphere, which the workers here provided for us, made it almost like second home.

Weekend Trips-- Elspeet, Aalsmeer, Roverstein

Week-ends all provided their highlights. The first is memorable for the service at the hidden Singelkirk in Amsterdam. Our first real contact with Dutch youth as a church group was at our week-end visit to their retreat ground at Elspeet. The Dutch speeches based around the theme, "Church and Society," were translated for us, and special discussion groups were held in English for our benefit. The walks in the woods, the games in the heather, and the long talks with these young people rate just as high as the impressive services of the conference.

One Sunday was spent in the garden village of Aalsmeer. The young people here met us at the station, took us to their church services, then into their homes for dinner. We gathered in the afternoon for sailing on the lake. Even with some twenty "rookies" there were no mishaps. We were certainly glad to see a few of the friends made here again in Basel.

Another Sunday is remembered for the visit to the Russian Mennonite refugees and the new children's home near Roverstein. The church service, the fellowship around our "borscht" dinner and after, impressed upon us the grave trials these people had undergone and would still undergo before reaching a home. Most tragic of all are the many broken families. We were again thrilled to see in the storeroom, the jars of food which churches at home had sent. But we realized too that the need is not over.

Friesland and Walcheren Island

The last week in the Netherlands was spent touring into the north, Friesland, and then down to Walcheran Island. In the northern lake country we delved into the scenes of Mennonite history. Menno Simons' Witmarsum and Pingjum and the many plain village churches in that area seemed quite like some of those at home except for age. Here again we stayed in different homes of Friesland village and farm Mennonite folk. The hospitality and kindness here and again in Walcheren villages made the experiences even richer. The Walcheren Island Builder's Unit, which is repairing damage caused by the ocean inundation of the island during war bombing, gave us a first-class truck tour of their work and the island life. That picnic on the sand dunes and the run on the beach bring back memories.

It seemed very strange to think that we were now leaving Amsterdam, perhaps, forever. These people had certainly spread the warmth in their hearts into ours, and the days of daily contact with such friends ended with a degree of sadness overshadowed, only by the gratefulness for the privilege of such acquaintanceship. Their hope and actual action in again rebuilding what is left of the homes they once had and the lives they had is something any of us can take humbly and gratefully as a lesson in faith.

Germany and Alsace - Relief Work

The group began to peer eagerly from train windows as we crossed the border into Germany. The actual sight of the ruins, physical and human, which we saw through that day, far surpassed any picture of war's horror we had been told about previously. We traveled up the beautiful Rhine valley through one battered town after another—Cologne, Frankfurt, then Mannheim. The ghostly sight of this once busy city, now in ruins as we saw it by the lantern light of the depot workers, will certainly always be imprinted on our minds. The M. C. C. truck from the Neustadt relief center took us on into that city in the French zone. Our two-day transit visa gave us only time enough to see some of the relief work in action and then spend an afternoon in fellowship with some of the people here. We spent the next morning visiting the child-feeding programs in Kaiserslautern. Nothing can mirror the horror of war as can the eyes of a hungry child. This look greeted us in every pause we made along the way that day. We stopped for a very nice greeting with the Sembach Mennonites. Their village church heard the echo of a joined choir in the singing of a few of the old German chorales we all knew. During the afternoon, we visited with more of the Mennonites from the area and then were transported by these very gracious relief worker hosts to the unit right across the border into France.

CAMERA FIEND

The Wissemburg Builder's Unit and the Children's Home workers near there took up the hospitality right where the Neustadt unit left it. The contrast of the massive fortifications of the Maginot and Siegfried lines on the one hand and the battered homes and homeless children on the other was a sobering thought. The afternoon at the children's home where we heard their singing and helped with the distribution of Christmas packages, and the evening which followed were two of the highlights of the whole summer. We spent that evening on the two "bruderhofs" near there. None of us will ever forget that machine shed which had been converted into the home of the Hege family after most of the farm had been destroyed by bombs. Nor can we forget the choir's songs, "Lobe den Herrn" and "Grosser Gott wir Loben Dich" as they rang clear in the evening air midst the ruins of what had been their home etched against the setting sun. There is nothing more beautiful than the light of such hope and faith amid such ruin and destruction. Certainly, the American group was learning more and more of this beauty and more too of the gratefulness we could feel for being spared all this.

So we saw some of the relief work. The greatest thing we observed in all the relief work is that it is given to any who need regardless of their belief or background; and still more that it is given "In the Name of Christ." After a stop here and there to see the remains of war along the roadsides and also the American Military Cemetery at Hochfelden, we left the Wissemburg group and the truck at Strasburg to board the train for Mulhouse. Here again we lived with the Mennonites of the area and enjoyed the new friendships and kind greetings of these brothers. Everywhere we went, it was not the points of difference which were most noticed; it was the similarities that were most obvious. Here too, the church service and the fellowship seemed like Sunday night services in many of the communities at home.

We left after a day for the last leg of our journey and Switzerland. Basel was the scene of our first three days here.

Basel - "Spiritual Life Conference"

The relief center workers and the Swiss Mennonites received us and provided for our stay when we arrived here. The Conference opened the next day, August 16, and continued through Sunday night in the Holes Mennonite Church in Basel. The services centering about the theme, "Jesus Christ Our Lord," were conducted in German, English, and French. Translations were made into the other languages immediately following the presentation or during the message.

The International Spiritual Life Conference was primarily a youth conference. Brother Geiser, president of the Swiss Youth Commission, opened the Saturday sessions to a large group of men and women from the various countries represented and including nearly 100 Americans, mostly in European relief work. Brief survey reports on the Mennonite churches in Europe and America by representatives from USA, Canada, Holland, Luxembourg, Germany, Switzerland, and the Waldensian brethren from Italy followed. Meals were provided by the Swiss people on the church grounds.

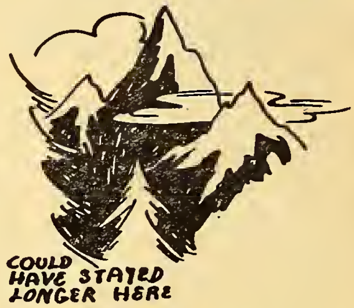
Dean H. S. Bender spoke that afternoon concerning, "What Is the Church of Jesus Christ." In the evening two European brethren spoke of the new creature in Christ Jesus and the power of God.

Early Sunday, a group of the conference young people left the church and walked into the wooded countryside to meet for a service of meditation, song, and two short messages. Brother Geiser and Robert Kreider spoke in German and English. The inspiration of "Deep calleth unto deep" here with the deepness of a forest so near was marked. Morning services included five ministers' interpretation on the theme "Saved to Service." Mission work and nonresistance themes took our attention in the afternoon. Then the evening service summed the entire tenor of the conference, "Jesus Christ the Great Challenge for Our Youth." We have failed, not entirely, but youth of today must live more dedicated Christian lives to build a Christian world.

The inspiration of these messages was greatly heightened by the music given by various groups throughout the meetings. The Swiss choirs and the Wissemburg men's chorus of relief workers were especially fine. The privilege to meet and fellowship with the many representatives from the European Mennonite communities and also those from home in relief was certainly one of the finest experiences of the conference. You've probably heard one of the group mention straw mats. It was here that we found ourselves in especially close fellowship with these people, for we all slept in the balcony (for the girls) and basement (for the men) of a Basel church on straw mats. Any of the group will assure you that a straw mat on a church floor furnishes all the comfort a night's sleep demands.

Switzerland - Then Home

With our hearts still keyed to the high thoughts of renewed dedication, we began to end our journey—wending physically as well as spiritually and mentally to the mountains. You have read of Swiss Alpine beauty. We cannot better describe it to you. So we will leave it saying these were breathtaking moments—to rest in the early morning or late evening after a long mountain hike on a hillock and hear the cowbell melodies as the cattle answer their keeper's yodel far down the valley and wend homeward over their rolling meadows — or to wander down Berne's colonnaded streets and listen and see the famous old clock toll the hour—or to see Byron's "Prison of Chillon" through the willows along the lake—or to stand before the UNO buildings (Can the work here bring any kind of peace?)



COULD HAVE STAYED LONGER HERE

Then came our last contact with European Mennonites, this time with the Swiss in the Jura Mountains. These farming folk live deep among the hills and can be reached along the narrow mountain trails. The stay here was again an experience of brotherly hospitality. We walked the five miles to the lovely church on Sunday morning. As we neared, we saw the congregations coming down the trails from the nestling valley villages. The services, and especially the song festival, held out on the hillside that afternoon warmed our hearts once more.

Thus, our dream come to a very real reality came to its end. All this, and all that we cannot tell or write, for it lies too deep as yet, came to us this summer. Certainly, there were twenty-seven Mennonite young people with a new, vital sense of world brotherhood. The futility of divisions and distinctions in any phase of our lives, but most of all the religious, became deeply a part of our thinking. The friendships of such a summer embracing Swiss, German, French, Dutch, English, develop understanding, and understanding in great quantities must develop peace if it is based on Christian love. Certainly, too, many misconceptions we had so long held were quickly wiped away by actual contact with the people and their way of life.

Mennonite youth, the Mennonite church-yes, the whole world, needs the sense of oneness in Christ and thus, a world consciousness overshadowing any material boundary and a world consciousness characterized by unselfish, unbounded Christian love.—The Bluffton, Bethel, Freeman Mennonite Student Exchange representatives.

Expectation

by Joanna S. Andres

It may be that I too must stand
Quite silent in the night
Until to me shall come again
A new revealing light . . .
Until my soul with wonder stirred
Shall listen to a song
That shall go echoing through the years
And through the ages long.

It may be that I too must leave
My flocks upon a hill
And speed away to Bethlehem
The heart with love to fill.
It may be that I—kneeling there—
Beside the manger bed,
Shall find the new compelling force
A glorious hope to spread.

It may be that my soul must go
A long, far way to Him
Before my spirit humbled be
That I can homage bring.
It may be—when I seek the Christ
The star of grace shall shine
To lead me gently to the place
Where I shall know He's mine.

It may be—Oh, I know He comes
To meet earth's seeking hearts!
And should He come to me this day
Before my journey starts . . .
It may be that my heart could hold
A joy so full, complete . . .
I only know that I should fall
To worship at His feet!

"Christ the Saviour Is Born"

" 'Be not afraid; for behold, I bring you good news of a great joy which will come to all the people; for to you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, who is Christ the Lord.' "

The joy of Christmas is dimmed by the power of destruction that has wrecked the world, is still evident, and threatens to wipe out civilization in the future. Man desperately needs a Saviour, a Saviour who is not generally presented by Christendom, for the power of destruction has become evident in millions of Christians.

Jesus is the Saviour precisely because he saves men from the dark powers within, which when unredeemed destroys them. Jesus healed men. He took veterans of inner wars and made them whole. He brought out the hidden possibilities in men. He knew about the powers of darkness and did something with them. As a result men became new, dynamic, powerful, creative. Jesus called men to repentance and new life.

Unfortunately, Christendom of today calls men to new life but rarely to repentance. The Church with all its idealism and "challenges" has hardly caught up with Jesus who said, "You are like tombs whitewashed; they look comely on the outside, but inside they are full of dead men's bones and all manner of impurity." The world today gives evidence of what this "inside" is like, but the Church generally makes the mistake of shunning sin instead of investigating and discussing it. A doctor has to study a disease to conquer it. So must the Church face and study sin.

Behind sin are tremendous possibilities of power for the good. Drunkenness may be the substitute for improperly used or unused possibilites of life. Sin is indicative of buried talent. As that talent is unearthed and brought into use, it bears interest. Far enough behind every sin lies the desire to love, to give oneself, to share, and to be a part of the living brotherhood. Sinners can become saints.

But if this is to happen on a scale that will make the future more hopeful and joyous, then the average minister, who is a specialist in light, will also have to become a specialist in the powers of darkness. He will have to learn to lead men to repentance.

We need this emphasis as a General Conference. For example, ideally we are non-resistant; actually far more men went into the armed forces than into C.P.S. We need to keep the idealism of non-resistance in mind, but we also need to become clearly conscious of the powers within men which make them go into the armed forces. Only as the two are kept side by side can a new spirit be born in individuals.

The Spirit of Christ is a creative Spirit, who makes all things new. As the individual brings into consciousness the darkness and the light in himself, Christ can come to life within him.

Praying the Lord's Prayer

The Lord's Prayer is a model, given by Jesus to his disciples, when they asked Him to teach them how to pray. Hence it is a model for us too. To them it, very likely, did not become a meaningless form, as one finds it to-day at times. Sometimes in meetings to-day, it is used when no one can be found to offer a prayer, or as a convenient and easy way to open or close a meeting. Often one hears this: "Let us now stand and repeat the Lord's prayer." Yes, often it is a mere repeating of words, maybe without really thinking of the meaning of them.

When we pray "Our Father," what are our thoughts, our convictions about, or our actions toward the poor family living down by the tracks, or the people of another language or color, Jews, colored people and others? How do we help His Kingdom to come and His Will to be done here in our countries, as it is done in heaven, after we have prayed that part? We do not pray "Give me this day my daily bread," but "Give us this day our daily bread." We get our daily food and sustenance, but what do we do to help Him to pass the bread around to those of His other children, who are hungry, starving and cold, especially at this time, when conditions are so terrible? When we pray "Forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors" and in our actions do not forgive others, we are really praying," Dear Lord, do not forgive me, because I am not willing to forgive my brother, my sister." That is praying condemnation down on our heads! Every petition places a grave responsibilty upon us, both toward God and our fellowman, our brother. How can we then so often, so glibly repeat the Lord's prayer. May it be instead, "Let us now pray the Lord's prayer and do it slowly, thoughtfully and reverently."—Marie W. Lohrentz, President, Women's Home and Foreign Missionary Association.

Silent Night Holy Night

The Story of Its Origin

Stille Nacht, heilige Nacht

Stille Nacht, heilige Nacht!
Alles schlaeft, einsam wacht,
Nur das fromme so selige Paar,
Das im Stalle zu Bethlehem war
:Bei dem himmlischen Kind:

Stille Nacht, heilige Nacht!
Hirten wird's kund gemacht;
Durch der Engel Hallelujah
Toent es laut von ferne und nah.
:Jesus der Retter ist da.:

Stille Nacht, heilige Nacht!
Gottes Sohn!—o wie lacht
Lieb' aus deinem holdseligen Mund,
Da uns schlaeget die rettende Stund;
:Christ in deiner Geburt.:

Stille Nacht, heilige Nacht!
Erd' erwach' aus dem Schlaf,
Hoch ertoen' in melodischem Klang,
Hoch zum Himmel dein Jubelgesang,
:Friede auf immer der Welt.:

The most loved and most widely used of all Christmas carols was composed December 24, 1818, by Joseph Mohr (1792-1848), assistant Priest in an obscure German village, Oberndorf, near Salzburg, Austria. At a Christmas celebration in the village school adjoining the church, Mohr withdrew for a time, then returned with a folded sheet of paper on which this carol was written. He handed it to Franz Gruber, (1787-1863), schoolmaster, song writer, and church organist, as a Christmas gift. Gruber promptly composed the tune for the words after which author and composer sang it together, the latter accompanying on the guitar, and a choir of girls from the village joining in the melody. The words and tune became immensely popular in Germany and Austria through their use by wandering Tyrolese singers. The carol first appeared in print in the Leipziger Gesangbuch, 1838. It has been translated into many languages and is today sung in all Christian lands. It was a favorite song of the great contralto, Madame Ernestine Schuman-Heink, and she used it on many of her concert appearances.

(Inscription referred to below)

"Stille Nacht, heilige Nacht!
Wer hat dich, O Lied, gemacht?
Mohr hat dich so schoen erdacht,
Gruber zu Gehoer gebracht,
Priester und Lehrer vereint."

A plaque in the school house at Oberndorf where the carol was first sung bears the inscription in the box above:

This Child Grew to Manhood

by Edmund J. Miller

"And they came into the house and saw the young child with Mary his Mother, and they fell down and worshipped him . . . " Matt. 2:11.

It is easy and natural to worship the Christ Child, especially when the news of His birth is brought to us on wings of music, with angel faces in the background, and all wrapped up in the glamour and haze of poetry. Even in fairyland no one ever heard so thrilling a story—a story that tells how, in a stable in a tiny town under a singing sky and at "the end of the way of a wandering star," God was born a babe.

There is nothing in the face of this lovely, innocent Baby that rebukes us—that makes us uneasy in His presence or casts a sharp, piercing look which penetrates to the depths of our consciences. That is why it is easy to worship Him, to sing praises and bring gifts to Him. That is why for a few days each year, people can forget their petty differences, jealousies, and selfish ambitions at the manger bed of the infant Christ.

But this Child grew to manhood; yet we still try to treat Him like a baby. We bring Him small beribboned packages when He wants our very lives; we kneel down and offer smooth, pious words of praise, when He asks for deeds.

This Child became a Man who had revolutionary ideas about so many things that had been taken for granted; who said that the blessed are, not the rich, the cultured or the famous, but the poor in spirit, the mourners, the meek, the merciful, the persecuted. The Child's voice changed to a quiet but firm manly one: "Resist not evil," it said, "but overcome evil with good; whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn him the other also; love your enemies . . . do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you."

A Christmas Prayer

by John F. Schmidt

Grant us this Christmastide, our Father, the spirit of little children to give and take in glad remembrance of the Son our Lord, who came, a little child, to bring us into holy brotherhood. Let the gracious spirit of Jesus enter our lives and bless them, teaching our love to remember, our anger to forgive, our unkindness to forget.

We thank thee for the honor thou hast put upon our life through him, for the glory of motherhood and the high worth of every human soul. In recognition of that worth grant us grace to bow ourselves to other's needs. Let our hearts hear the cry of the needy and give us to feel the love of the unlovely. Heal the wounds of misunderstanding, jealousy, or regret, that scar our hearts; and let the gentler air of the Christmas spirit touch our lives, as though the cold of winter were touched by the kindlier breath of spring.

May the joy and gladness of Christmas remind us of the great and abiding joy which thou art; may we find in thee the source of all real gladness. Grant the power of the Prince of Peace to all who beneath the guise of mirth struggle with temptations which press them hard and make them more than conquerors through him who strengtheneth them.

As the old year ends, and the new year begins, grant us peace with the world, and peace in our hearts, that those we love, and those whom we may help, may have joy and rest, and all together bow before the Prince of Peace, our Savior Jesus Christ. Amen.

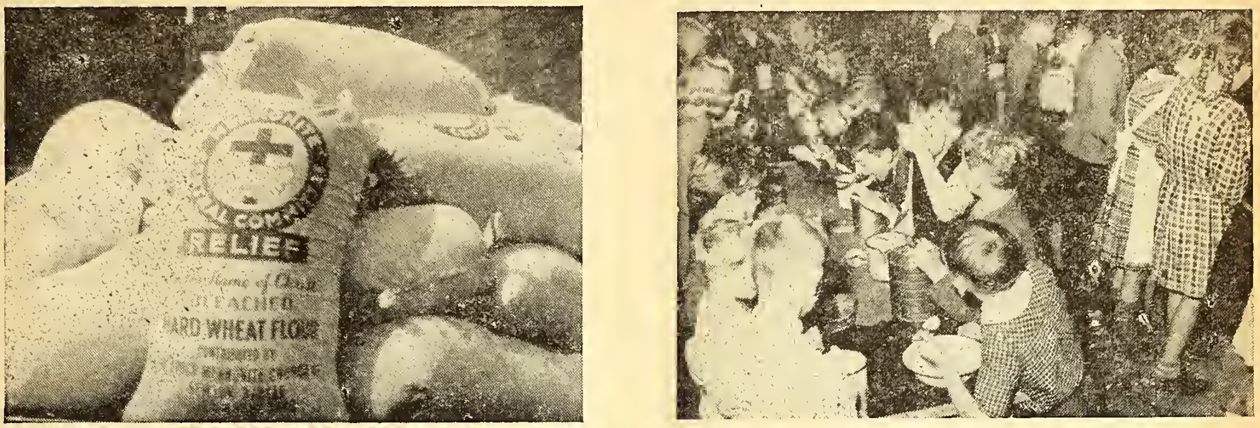
The world is quick to say, "This is madness, it is too much, it runs counter to common sense and upsets all ideas of social order. If everybody did what He asks them to do, civilization would end in chaos; besides, it can't be done. It is all very well to preach about such far-off, shining ideals, but in an unideal world they will not work." And the world wishes that the Man of Galilee had remained the Babe of Bethlehem. How much easier it would be to sing praises to the infant Christ, bring Him a little gold, frankincense and myrrh, and then return home to live selfish and indifferent lives!

The grown-up Jesus was not the Christ that men expected. It is still easy to let our preconceived ideas of what truth ought to be blind us to the truth as it is. Jesus was not the Christ men wanted, but He was the One men needed. How often what we want makes us pass by what we really need! Too often we want to worship the Babe all of our lives when we ought to know the Man who followed the way of the Cross.

Let us, in this Christmas season, not only adore the Child, but accept and follow and serve the Man who became our Savior.

Bringing the Christmas Spirit to Hungry Children

Erna J. Fast, M.C.C. Worker in Germany, Writes:



(Cuts courtesy "Mennonite Life")

November 27.—Yesterday I was working in a basement bunker, clammy and cold, below the Bieberhaus here in Hamburg. We were arranging food allocations for the nine convalescent children's homes which are to receive a daily supplementary meal. Suddenly I spied the name: FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH OF NEWTON, KANSAS, on one of the sacks of flour. That meant very much to me, especially as I began to think of what this flour would mean to those little wan-faced, undernourished children who spend short six to eight week terms in these suburban homes. If only it were possible for the children (and parents) of the Sunday School of the First Mennonite Church to see the happy and grateful boys and girls who receive the little 50-gram "Brotchen" made from the beautiful white flour sent by them.—Sincerely yours, Erna J. Fast

With the letter, Miss Fast enclosed a Menno Karte, evidently for children. On it as is this message to children:

Liebes Kind!

Ueber dem grossen, blauen Ozean lieget ein Land—Amerika—in dem vielen Menschen wohnen, die nicht unter dem Krieg gelitten haben. Die Menschen—unter ihnen auch viele Kinder—haben gehoert, dass hier in Deutschland die Leute oft hungrig bleiben, weil sie nicht genuegend zu essen bekommen. Dies vernahmen auch die Mennoniten, und sie fingen an, in ihren Kirchen und Haeusern Lebensmittel zu sammeln. Grosse und Kleine, Arme und Reiche brachten ihre Gaben, jeder soviel er konnte, bis es zuletzt ein ganzes Schiff voll ergab. Sie freuen sich sehr, dass sie dies "Im Namen Christi" tun koennen und dadurch dazu beitragen, Euern Hunger einwenig zu stillen.

HOW FAR to Bethlehem?

by Ruby Lornell

"THEY tell me a wondrous event has happened at Bethelem. They say a Child has been born, in whose blessed eyes is all the wisdom, all the power and all the love of the ages. How far is it to Bethlehem?"

IT IS A LONG, LONG WAY from our twentieth-century cities to Bethlehem. It is the long distance from arrogance to humility. We give homage to those who are able to command. We honor them that have great wealth. We give the head banquet seat to him who is able to say, "Go and do it," and it is done.

BUT HE SAID: "He that is greatest among you must be servant of all."

IT IS THE LONG DISTANCE from anxious concern to quiet confidence. We pile up great wealth in a desperate effort for security. We work furiously,

NEW MUTUAL AID BOOKLET AVAILABLE

The ninety-page booklet, "Christian Mutual Aid," by J. Winfield Fretz, is now available from the Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pa., for twenty-five cents a copy. This "Handbook of Brotherhood Economics," by the Chairman of the Section for Mennonite Aid of the Mennonite Central Committee, is to be reviewed in a coming issue of this paper.

with no regard for the beauty of today, in order to store up for tomorrow. We even lie and cheat to make the bank book figures tell us that next year, too, we shall eat and drink and be well clothed.

BUT HE SAID: "Consider the lilies of the field, how they toil not, neither do they spin; yet your heavenly Father careth for them. Be ye not therefor anxious for the morrow . . . . ."

IT IS THE LONG ROAD from revenge to forgiveness. We carefully keep ledgers of the treatment we receive. If people are kind to us, we are kind to them in return—sometimes. But if they push us around, let it be known we shall certainly push them back! And harder, too, since they asked for it!

BUT HE SAID: "Father, forgive them . . . ."

IT IS THE LONG WAY from hate to love. We nurse within our hearts the burning hatred of those who have more than we have. It is not theirs by right, and they shall not keep it! And toward those who are trying to gain a greater share of the bounty of this earth, we have a burning contempt.

BUT HE SAID: "A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another . . . ."

IT IS THE LONG WAY from selfishness to selflessness. We are so careful to see that we first have our share, and what is left over can be divided among the needy! We are so anxious that our desires shall be satisfied, that our needs shall be met, that our interests shall be looked after!

BUT HE SAID: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness . . ."

IT IS A LONG, LONG WAY to Bethlehem, and a costly road to travel. Only those who have traveled that road know its cost. But how infinitely worth while! In comparison, nothing else really matters. For only when we have come to Bethlehem can we hear the song of the angels ringing through the heavens and filling the earth with music: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace. . . ."

ONLY IN BETHLEHEM can we see the pure radiance of the Blessed Mother as she smiles at the Christ on the straw. Only in Bethlehem can we come to know the humble adoration of the shepherds. Only in Bethlehem can we see the Light of the glory of God, the only Light which no darkness can ever put out!

COLOMBIAN CLIPPINGS

The American Mission to Lepers has recently made a grant of $150 per child for this year to help in the support of the untainted children of leper parents in our work in Colombia, South America. The Lord has greatly blessed the opening of our work in Colombia. At present the school has twenty-one such children. Scores and scores of other children desire to be taken into the school just as soon as facilities are available. The grant made by the AML will pay about one-half of the expenses incurred in the care of the children.

* * * *

After about six months delay, our mission in Colombia has been granted its papers of incorporation, making them a legal corporation in Colombia, with power to buy and sell property and to take care of all legal matters pertaining to the operation of a mission in a foreign land. The present building that houses the mission is rented, but steps can now be begun to buy or to build adequate facilites for the carrying on of our mission work there. The American Mission to Lepers has a large tract of land in or near Bogota that they are turning over to our mission for its use in carrying on its work in Colombia.

* * * *

The first year of school is drawing to a close in our Colombian Mission. Of the twenty-four children that have been living under the care and guidance of our missionaries, nineteen have been enrolled in the school. Ten of the children made a definite and voluntary decision for Christ. Others of the children had made their decision for Christ previously. Mr. Stucky writes that though it is the first aim of the missionaries to win the children to Christ, this is but the beginning of a much longer and more difficult process—the making of solid Christian characters.

* * * *

What should a missionary be able to do, or how should he prepare to be a missionary? One of our Colombian workers writes that the first and prime thing should be that he ought to know how to win a soul to Christ— to be an evangelist. Besides that he may be called upon to be a teacher, a doctor or nurse, a barber, a shoemaker, a carpenter, a plumbber, an electrician, a writer, an office worker, an accountant, an author, a scoutmaster, an expert farmer, a builder, an expert on legal affairs.

* * * *

It was a genuine pleasure, writes Rev. Gerald Stucky of our Colombian Mission, to talk for several hours over the radio to N. Paul Stucky in North Newton, Kansas. The latter used his own amateur radio station, WHOM, while Mr. Stucky used a short wave station that belongs to a friend in Bogota. The reception on both ends was very excellent, and the two talked about many interesting phases and problems of the mission work in Colombia in conjunction with the proposed mission field in Puerto Rico.

The children of the First Mennonite Church of Nappanee, Indiana, are making preparations to send to the Colombian Mission a much needed piano. Should any other churches desire mission projects, also needed are a microscope and some second hand sewing machines.

Atlee Beechy, European M.C.C. Director, Summarizes Winter Outlook

AKRON, PA., December 5.—Atlee Beechy, European M. C. C. Director, writes:

"The people are facing the most severe winter in recent history." This statement has come to us a good many times during recent weeks in a number of different countries from high governmental officials, railroad employees, farmers, military personnel and others. I do not think this is an alarmist cry generated with a desire to get all help possible, but rather springs from a deep, real fear in view of the prospect for the necessities as they appear at the present time. This fear cannot be hidden, for it is written on the very faces of the unfortunate people."—Atlee Beechy.

Mennonite Contributions Included in Friendship Train

Mennonites in various parts of the country were able to contribute to the food that was transported East on the Friendship Train. These Mennonite contributions, which totalled twenty-seven cars in all, consisted chiefly of flour, small amounts of whole wheat, soy beans, and mixed food. Arrangements have been made that when this relief material reaches New York, it will be channelled through our regular shipping agent making it possible for this particular material to reach the MCC projects in Europe where our workers will distribute it.

(In a letter of December 3, written by Wayne Henard, Director of M.C.C. Material Aid, to Rev. Walter H. Dyck, Executive-Secretary of the General Conference, there were these additional interesting facts:

"We have also been able to make arrangements to handle the car of bulk wheat that was included on the Friendship Train at the last moment. Inasmuch as this wheat came in the bulk form, we are having it shipped, along with a larger lot, that is destined for Bremen, Germany . . . . we will probably have about 23 carloads of food, mostly flour from the Friendship Train on one boat leaving for Germany on the 10th of December. This to date has been the largest shipment on any one boat that has sailed from the States with M.C.C. products.")

Special Projects in Paraguay Terminate

The Sanitation and Child-Feeding projects which had been carried on among native Paraguayans in the city of Itacurubi have recently been closed. The work of supervising sanitation, giving of medication, and making examinations has been carried on by Dennis Lehman during the past few months and was concluded on November 14. A child-feeding work, under the direction of Ella Berg, has been carried on in connection with the schools. Although this work was affected by the revolution, the participating pupils and also their teachers have expressed many times their gratitude for his supplementary nutrition in the childrens' very meagre diet.

These projects have been carried on as expressions of appreciation to the Paraguayan people for the way in which their country has opened its doors to homeless Mennonites.

A group of ten Mennonite refugees from Russia arrived in New York on December 4 on their way to the homes of relatives in this country.

Susanna Toews and her sister, Katherina Dyck, who are aunts of Susie Peters, MCC relief worker in Denmark, are going to the home of their niece, Mrs. G. P. Schroeder, in Minneapolis, Minnesota. Johan and Susanna Toews and their daughter, Greta, have been able to come under the sponsorship of Jacob Toews of Manheim, Pennsylvania, and Peter Toews of Reedley, California. Pauline Greilich and her four children, Klara Timnik, Viktor Timnik, Tamara Timnik, and Ida Greilich, have come under the sponsorship of a sister and brother, Mrs. Ernest Boettcher of Newman Grove, Nebraska, and Gustav Schroeter of Lindsey, Nebraska.

These people are refugees from the Ukraine and have spent the past several years at the Roverestein Home in Holland.

Before this renewal (Romans 12:2) each day and each hour of the day and each knock at the door and each letter that we open becomes alive with the adventure into which we are being once more drawn. Our plans, our friendships, our time, the disposal of our money, our work are no longer settled as they once were settled but are now open to direction. Instead of being locked to our conventional occupations we may be open to consider revising our plans to respond to some call of urgent need. Most of us will not be led necessarily to do radically different things but to do all that we do differently.—Douglas V. Steere

CANADIAN BIBLE FREEMAN BLUFFTON BETHEL SEMINARY

P. E. SCHELLENBERG TO SPEAK AT FREEMAN FOUNDERS' DAY

Founders' Day comes on December 15 this year. As usual there will be three programs that day. Dr. P. E. Shellenberg, president of Tabor College, will be the speaker of the day. He will speak at the morning and afternoon meetings. For the evening meeting the music department, under the direction of Ernest Lichti, will present a Christmas program. A noon lunch will be served to all guests by the Home Economics Department. Mr. Ted Haar, a local business man, is placing his fine collection on display in the museum on a loan basis. The Declamatory Elimination Contest was held this week. The winners enter the Academy Tri-State Contest. New students enrolled for the winter quarter are, Eugene Graber, Delmar Saner, Bernice Gross, and Harold Fast of Mountain Lake.

BETHEL COLLEGE

Dr. J. E. Hartzler, a former President of Bethel College, was guest speaker for a morning's chapel service. His home is in Hartford, Connecticut, where he is professor in the Hartford Seminary foundation.

An annual pre-Christmas Debate Tournament was held in the Bethel College Campus, Saturday, December 6. A total of thirty-eight teams from twelve colleges sent for applications for participation in the tournament. The debate question for the 1947-'48 school year is: "Resolved That a Federal World Government Should Be Established." Reford Wedel and Leland Harder debated as representatives of Bethel College.

An Annual Foreign-Language Christmas Program was presented Friday night, December 5 in the College Chapel. The program consisted of German chorales, a playlet, and Christmas songs in other foreign languages.

The Newton Community Chorus, under the direction of Dr. Walter H. Hohmann, presented the twentieth annual rendition of Handel's oratorio, The Messiah, Sunday, December 7. The solo parts were sung by Miss Maud Nosler, soprano, Evanston, Illinois; Miss Gertrude Hohmann, alto, North Newton; Mr. Orcenith Smith, bass, Winfield, Kansas; and Dr. Suderman, North Newton.

BLUFFTON FUND UP TO $110,000

The college has just received a gift of $20,000. from Mrs. C. H. Musselman and one of $5,000 from from her daughter, Mrs. Luella Arnold. These gifts are to be applied to the Auditorium Physical Education Building Fund. This brings the fund up to a total of approximately $110,000. Mrs. Philips, negro YWCA secretary of Youngstown, Ohio, was a chapel speaker Friday, December 5. She was a representative at the Oslo, Norway, youth conference this past summer and gave an excellent report of her impressions of that conference. The College Church showed the motion picture, "The King of Kings," on Sunday evening, December 7. Rev. Paul Shelly attended a meeting of the General Conference Curriculum Committee in Chicago December 3 and 4. From there he went to Newton, Kansas, for a meeting of the Cultural Conference Committee.

MENNONITE BIBLICAL SEMINARY NEWS

A fine turkey dinner was enjoyed at the Seminary Thursday, December 4, through the courtesy of Gerald Kreider of Goshen, Indiana, and the assistance of a great number of people in the Seminary itself. The joy of the dinner was enchanced by the presence of the following guests: Mrs. Robert Kreider, Stuttgart, Germany; O. J. Sommer, Pekin, Illinois; Cornelia Unrau of the Congo Inland Mission; Ronald von Riesen, Newton, Kansas; Henry Harder, Aberdeen, Idaho; Erland Waltner, Mountain Lake Minnesota; I. I. Friesen, Winnipeg, Canada; Joanna Andres, Newton, Kansas; and Paul R. Shelly, Bluffton, Ohio.

The Seminary was happy to have the Curriculum Committee of the General Conference meeting here in our buildings during three days of this week. We rejoice in the privilege of being a center for creative Mennonite thought and leadership.

Marvin Dirks presented a moving message, based on his experience in the Philippine internment, to the entire Bethany student body and faculty this week. It made a profound impression upon all who heard the message in showing the tremendous difficulties of Christian unity on the one hand and affirming the fact that to know the Lord Jesus Christ truly makes a difference in the characters of men. The latter was proven very forcibly during the internment when the Christian way of life became the only possible answer to those in the camp.

The Seminary staff continues to be busy with speaking engagements. S. F. Pannabecker preached at the Mennonite Bible Mission on December 4 and on the same Sunday John T. Neufeld occupied the pulpit at the Pulaski, Iowa, Church. Edmund Miller has returned from a week of meetings at the Wayland, Iowa, Mennonite Church; Don. E. Smucker was scheduled to address the Christian Workers Band of Goshen College on December 14.

Andrew R. Shelly, part-time fieldworker for the Seminary, has sent us an enthusiastic report concerning his work in Mountain Lake, Minnesota, and his

A Vision for Our Day

BY ROBERT KREIDER

We live in a secular age—either non-Christian or anti-Christian. The old religious faiths have been neglected or rejected. In the optimistic days just past, men paid homage to a god of progress. Man's faith in progress now seems shattered.

This age which has prided itself in scientific objectivity has actually sunk to new levels of cruelty. The brilliant American theologian Reinhold Niebuhr has recently written: "Not only Marxist fanatics are involved in the cruelties of our age, but democratic idealists also. The ancients were certainly not more merciless to their foes than we; no one has been so merciless to a vanquished foe as we since the Assyrians. We are pitiless because we do not know ourselves to be pitiable." We do not know ourselves to be pitiable.

Three weeks ago we saw written large the demonic nature of modern man. The first scene was Dachau—one of the dreaded concentration camps of the Nazi terror. It was a Saturday afternoon. We passed the barbed wire encircled stockade where 18,000 S. S. men are held prisoner. We entered the death enclosure where in years past 238,000 men and women were exteriminated by the Nazi state. We saw the gallows. We saw the pistol range. We saw the sealed torture chamber. We saw the gas chambers where human beings were herded for death. We saw the German instructions on the operation of the gas chambers. We saw the furnaces and the metal carts on which the bodies were wheeled into the furnaces for burning. We saw where the human ashes were piled. Two hundred thirty eight thousand met their death in that house of monstrous evil. It was late afternoon. The shadows were lengthening. The enclosure had the ominous atmosphere of lurking danger and terror. Dachau is of our age.

The following day was Sunday. That lovely Sunday morning we stopped in Heilbronn in the valley of the Neckar. The center of the city has been completely destroyed. We stood on what had been once

A Prayer of Dedication for Food for Relief

by H. A. Fast

(The following prayer of dedication was given by Dr. H. A. Fast, Vice-president of the Mennonite Central Committee at the Friendship Train ceremonies held at Newton, Kansas, November 21. The petitions expressed in it are fitting for all food sent to the needy peoples of the world.)

"Great God, our Father. All good things and all noble impulses come from thee. As we stand in front of this Friendship Train we thank thee for the noble impulse that led to this outpouring of generous Christian concern for the people in need. We thank thee that we are among those who have things to share and need not be among those who must receive. We thank thee that our American people and the people of Kansas have not become calloused to the cry of human need.

"Now we are gathered here in solemn assembly and yet in a glad and thankful spirit to dedicate this trainload of food to the hungry and suffering people of the world. The love of Christ constrains us to bring this contribution and we pray that the people may receive it in the spirit in which we offer it.

"May this food reach its destination safely. May it serve to feed children because children should not be hungry. They should be well and their voices should ring with laughter. May it feed the aged because old people should not go to the grave neglected, starving, heartbroken. May it feed young people because young people should not become bitter and resentful. They should believe in God and good and man and the church and in good government and in high ideals and high adventure. May it feed the middle aged so that home life may again be possible and happy and wholesome and men may again be able to work at great constructive tasks.

"Our hearts and our prayers go with this Friendship Train as it proceeds on its journey. As we cast our bread upon the waters may it come back to us after not too many days in terms of a deepened sense of friendship and understanding and a strong feeling of world solidarity and mutuality. As we reach our hand of friendship across the sea in this gesture of Christian concern may it be but the beginning of a great chain of friendship that shall ultimately encircle all mankind.

"As we dedicate these gifts in a spirit of Christian love to the hungry and bruised peoples of the world we would also dedicate ourselves to the great unfinished task of building a world where people under God will no longer inflict such terrible suffering upon their fellowman but where they will dwell together in peace and security as brothers in a veritable Kingdom of God under Jesus Christ as Savior and Lord.

"Let Thy blessing rest upon these gifts and upon all the people of the world."

the market place—the center of civic and business life. There was only the silence as amid ancient ruins. And as we waited a shepherd came leading his flocks slowly through the paths of the debris, looking for green pastures. It was a sunny afternoon in 1945 when bombing planes swept through the skies above the city and drenched the city with liquid fire and high explosive bombs. It was a thirty-minute raid. Thirty thousand perished in the raid. Another objective was achieved in the strategy of war.

The 30,000 of Heilbronn and the 238,000 of Dachau bear stark, awful testimony to the spiritual decay of our day. If this be the world in which we live, what is the Mennonite vision for and in the world?

I sense here and there little signs that men and women are looking toward the Mennonite formulation of the faith with a new keenness of interest, a new receptive Spirit. In Berlin I spoke to a leading Protestant churchman who said, "I wish the Mennonites had great writers and spokesman—they have in their past a message for Germany today." The man who said these words spoke out of great conviction, for he is one who had to pay the price of several years in concentration camp.

Add up the number of Mennonites the world around and the total is no more than 500,000. What can such a tiny group give to the harsh world today? What can our little brotherhood do to stem the violent flood of world tragedy?

We find the clue to our problem in the teachings of Jesus. It is the paradoxical teaching of leading a life in the world but not of the world. Jesus referred in several ways to the role of the Christian and the Christian brotherhood in the world. The Christians were the "remnant"—the connecting strand of divine truth from one generation to the next. "Ye are the salt of the earth." "Ye are the light of the world." Then again He speaks of the Christian witness as a creed.

I suspect that we shall find our Mennonite world vision not in master plans, not in grandiose schemes, but rather in the beauty of the birth, nurture and fruition of the individual soul and the Christian brotherhood. Our hope lies in being as candles, radiating light amid a world of gloom—the remnant—the salt—seeds of the kingdom.

We may be skirting on spiritually dangerous territory when we speak of a "Mennonite Vision." We run the risk of denominational idolatry—worshiping the 400-year-old institution of Mennonitism more than the Christ which this brotherhood was formed to serve.

Today we as Mennonites stand on the threshold of a new era of prophetic vigor. There were in the early Anabaptist period several decades when the Brethren with great zeal swept through Europe—spreading the glad tidings. Then came the persecutions. And the period of introversion began. Mennonites began to pride themselves in their quietude. This period has persisted for generations. We must confess that as the "Stillen im Lande" we have all too often kept our candles hidden under the bushel. In our effort to save our precious light, we have run the danger of losing that light.

As we point toward a formulation of our Mennonite vision for the world today, it seems to me important that we evaluate rather realistically wherein we have fallen short of our high calling. If we are not to be cursed with the sin of self-satisfaction, it is good that we view ourselves objectively, critically. In this short critique, I draw principally from my knowledge of Mennonites in America. But perhaps the same may be said of European groups represented here.

1. One is conscious of the persistent, ever-present fact of materialism among our people. We love our acres, our good cars, our well-furnished homes. We take pride in our economic respectability in the community. If a strange teacher were to tell us one day, "Go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor," we would go away perhaps irritated.

2. We have blind spots in our ethical responsibility. We are senstive in some area of Christian responsibility—as nonresistance—but in other areas we are blind. Sometimes we have succumbed to political quackery despite the fact that historically we are non-political. Sometimes the loathsome disease of race prejudice has crept in among us: Anti-Semitism, anti-Negro feeling. In one department of our life we may be good—in other departments evil.

3. We have often failed in making our Mennonite faith and practice attractive to others. That strong in-group feeling with the tendency toward self-righteousness and spiritual pride has erected barriers. Often we have lacked love in our hearts for men not of our household of faith. All this is related to a distortion of the doctrine of separation—which is not a cold hostile defense against the world but rather a Spirit-filled life in the world but not of the world.

4. We have been lacking in our missionary impulse. To possess an evangelical, missionary concern, one must have a conviction of the unique authority of one's message. We need to believe that fact and to articulate that conviction. We must live God-intoxicated lives. If we thought we had a message, we would be less apologetic. We would write more. We would do more pamphleteering. We would carry our message to the non-Mennonite world. We have perhaps a group inferiority complex, a quietism. We have been satisfied with just holding our own.

5. The Mennonite testimony has been dimmed by the fragmented character of the church. The intra-Mennonite theological strife, the divisions have been a blight on our testimony of Christian love. In America we have found in the M.C.C. a countercurrent—a bringing together of likeminded Mennonites on common ground. This conference exemplifies these new polarizing forces in our larger brotherhood. I do not subscribe to the position that all Mennonite branches should be welded into one church—finding the best common denominators for one church.

All that we may say in a critique of the Mennonites does not diminish our love for the brotherhood. For me that love for the church has grown parallel with an increasing awareness of the faults of the group.

What is that Mennonite vision which we cherish so much? If we turn back to Mennonite origins in the Anabaptist movement, we catch a glimpse of the original vision of our brotherhood. It was a world vision applicable to our day. "The Anabaptist vision was not a detailed blueprint for the reconstruction of human society, but the Brethren did believe that Jesus intended that the kingdom of God should be set in the midst of earth, here and now, and this they proposed to do forthwith." Immersed in the New Testament teachings, their vision was that the Christian life was one of discipleship, that the kingdom of heaven was to be found and nutured in the blessed brotherhood to which the brethren joyfully commit themselves, that the love of this brotherhood penetrates as far as light can radiate into the world of men about them.

And now our contemporary vision:

1. Ours is a humble vision, which has yet the riches of the kingdom. Ours is an ancient vision,

"Christians are not different from the rest of men in nationality, speech or customs; they do not live in states of their own, nor do they use a special language, nor adopt a peculiar way of life. Their teaching is not the kind of thing that could be discovered by the wisdom or reflection of mere active-minded men; indeed, they are not outstanding in human learning as others are. . . . They live, each in his native land—but as though they were not really at home there. They share in all duties like citizens and suffer all hardships like strangers. Every foreign land is for them a fatherland and every fatherland a foreign land. . . . They dwell on earth, but they are citizens of heaven. They obey the laws that men make, but their lives are better than the laws. They love all men, but are persecuted by all. . . .

"In a word, what the soul is to the body Christians are to the world."—From "The Apostolic Fathers," as quoted in "Time" magazine

The following are excerpts from letters of thanksgiving for flour sent to Europe by Mennonites of the United States:

"There is a great want here . . . Our town with normally 4,000 inhabitants has now to entertain more than 2,000 fugitives from East Germany and till Christmas our little village shall receive 2,000 fugitives more."

"If our children say grace, they pray: God may bless the unknown benefactors in America for this kindness . . . the want is growing daily. Many children and adults are without warm shoes and clothing . . . "

"In a bag of the nicest white flour, which I could distribute here, I found your address and I want to thank you from the bottom of my heart . . . Now we were able to give to some inhabitants where illness increased the need, some flour . . . . There was often no more flour in the houses, when we brought some . . . . God may reward you and all the spenders, for all the good they have done on their German Brothers and sisters.!"

"Many thanks for your great kindness to send a sack of flour to Germany."

which has yet a fresh, new loveliness. Ours is an unfolding vision, which yet has revolutionary explosiveness. In our vision we see that the most significant contribution the Mennonites can make to the world is the God-filled individual Christian character. We want men to find rebirth in Christ. Seeking new disciples is our calling.

Thomas á Kempis gives a pointed description of the life of the dedicated disciple: "Daily ought we to renew our purposes, and to stir up ourselves to greater fervor, as though this were the first day of our conversion."

I like to think of the Mennonites as a lay church where the rank and file pour out their time in the service of the Kingdom. Among Mennonites we should be prepared to give several years of our life to the service of the Church. Consecration ought to reach the pocketbook. The misery of the hour calls us to be frugal. I wish we could present a solid front to the world of giving 10 per cent or more of our income for the work of the church. Our vocations and avocations should mirror the Christ-centeredness of our lives. For the world the Mennonites have a vision of the new man—a disciple of Christ.

2. Ours is a vision convinced that the world needs colonies—growing colonies—of Christian brotherhood. These are "demonstration projects" of God's love in faith and practice. In the family can be the kingdom. In one community of a hundred souls can be the kingdom. These brotherhoods are not walled off from the world but rather in the world of men, and yet not of it. If in the world there be weariness, here let there be energy. If there be discouragement, here let there be confidnce, If there be fear, here let there be security. The function of the blessed community in the world is to draw men into its fold and there nurture them for wider service. Here is a "colony of heaven."

3. Our vision today impels us to reach out beyond our group. Here we have fallen short. There is the spoken word. Like our Anabaptist forefathers, we ought to be captured by the gospel message so that we would want to preach it to the whole creation—not alone through professional missionaries and preachers—and our message is that Christ is risen, repent and believe, come join the fellowship and serve. I have an increasing conviction that we have something to offer to the non-Mennonite world. In Mennonitism there is a unique synthesis of theological conservatism and ethical sensitivity—this synthesis has answers for the needs of this day. Particularly are we called in this day to share with others the faith which lieth within us. If we appreciate our life in Christ—in the brotherhood, let us speak so others may know.

4. Our vision calls us to be bridge builders of love and reconciliation. Mennonites are people who should have the courage to span the chasms of misunderstanding that keep us apart. This we can best do through loving services to those of other lands and groups and it can be done in a variety of ways: relief and reconstruction projects, friendship correspondence, joint conferences, exchange study, joint projects. When the hot winds of fear and anger sweep the world, I would hope we could keep ourselves free of hatred and prejudice. If ever in our 400 years of history there seemed to be the holy war in which Mennonites could engage, some might feel it would be the war against Communist Russia. With the grace of God we must seek to cleanse ourselves of such antipathy. If bridges can be built between East and West, Mennonites should be among the builders.

I like the picture of Mennonites as builders. The world is in shambles. When others destroy, let us always be in the wake rebuilding missions, building schools, building hospitals, building church-centered communities.

5. As in all ages, there are all too few—only a remnant—who have an ethical clean-cutness. Mennonites should give evidence of this uncompromising ethics in the personal virtues—chastity, honesty, generosity. But also we must give evidence of it in the social virtues— where so often the great churches prostitute their position with small and great compromises. I wish we would maintain as sharp a witness against murder in volume as we do in regard to murder in the singular. The world needs the absolutists whose position is not diluted with compromise.

6. Particularly do I cherish for our brotherhood a heart which is universally sensitive—the heart which hears the stifled sob of human needs not only within the brotherhood but also anywhere in the wider world. We know our responsibility to our own people in need. This mutual aid we want to fulfill. But if our ethical sensitivity halts here, our testimony is covered with a bushel. Study the operations of the various relief agencies now in Europe. Most of them represent a dominantly partisan approach to human need—Catholics to Catholics, rebuilding Protestantism, restoring the labor movement, aiding anti-Fascists. If Mennonites can feel sensitive to need apart from all particularisms and partisanships—there is a magnificent vision for the world.

And in our sensitivity to injustice and need—I sense that we should do more than we have in the past in voicing our concerns to those in authority . . . presenting the the case of the wronged, suggesting courses of action. I like the Quaker word "concern."

But we must guard against the tendency of some who think they can make the world over with a mimeograph, who feel their moral responsibility is fulfilled when they write a few letters a year to Congress.

The genius of our position is backing up our sensitivity with deeds large and small. In our sensitivity let us ever be creative—ever seeking out new frontiers of Christian labor.

We have staked out here in our discussion of the Mennonite vision only the broad principles. Coming from different Mennonite groups, we represent each in our own way our individual group genius. We will be led to make, in our respective ways, applications from these principles.

I feel within that we are called for just such a time as this. That there is just such a conference as this at Elspet gives testimony that our brotherhood is sensing the challenge of the hour. I am attracted by the words of St. Dominic to the papal representatives who came in their splendor to help him fight the Albigensian heretics of Southern France. These words might be directed to the disciples of our brotherhood in the struggle against the secularism, the godlessness, the cruelty of the world.

"Zeal must be met by zeal, humility by humility, false sanctity by real sanctity, preaching falsehood by preaching truth. Sow the good seed. Cast off those sumptuous robes. Go barefoot, without purse or scrip, like the apostles. Out-labor, out-fast, out-discipline these false teachers."

Mennonite Refugee from Denmark Finds "Home" at Last

by Walter Gering

(Rev. Walter Gering, who served the Mennonite refugees in Denmark in a pastoral capacity, here tells about the arrival of one of these refugees in Newton, Kansas, recently.)

IT was in one of the refugee camps of Europe that we met A__ for the first time. She was one of those countless numbers of refugees, who during the course of the war, were forced to flee from their home leaving everything behind. The life of a refugee is a most difficult one; to be homeless, separated from loved ones of the family, bereft of all earthly goods, is a role which one must experience in order to understand. Life in a refugee camp at its best is a most trying experience for even the most courageous spirit. The monotony of passing days, the dread of a seemingly hopeless future, the daily wear upon nerves is more than many can bear. A__ was one of these countless unfortunates of the world. Often we had dreamed and spoken of the time when some of these might by God's grace find a new home where life might begin anew. And often we had dreamed of the possibility that we might be on hand to welcome personally into their new home those unto whom we had ministered in the refugee camps.

So it was with a sense of real anticipation that we eagerly paced the platform of the railway station on December 2, awaiting the arrival of the west bound train. The moment was upon us. For months preparations had been made; prayers unto the Lord, countless letters and consultations had gone into the preparations. Hopes had risen and fallen repeatedly, but this time it was to be a moment of joy and thanksgiving, for the train speeding upon its way was bringing to a close a long, eventful journey. A__ was to arrive and begin life anew in the home of relatives. Behind were the smoking ruins of her beloved city, the barbed wire enclosures of a refugee camp with all of its deprivations, the countless tragic experiences which are crowded into such a journey. Life was to begin anew once more in the friendly atmosphere of new found loved ones. Yes, this was the moment for which we had waited.

Once again our spirits sank; we were disappointed. The train had arrived; the passengers had disembarked and gone their way. But A__ had not appeared. Could it be that she had lost her way in this strange, new country? Could it be that she, not knowing that this was the right station, had failed to disembark? Anxiously we hurried from porter to porter inquiring concerning her whereabouts. The train began to move when suddenly from the car came the word: she has gone into the station.

Back into the station we hurried. Nowhere seated in the waiting room could we see anyone who might be the answer to our search. Then it was that we saw her in the telephone booth; she was courageously trying to find her way. At last the moment had come. A—— had come home. Life was beginning anew.

Let Us Give Non-Mennonites the Opportunity To Give for Relief

by Ernest Bachman

WITH many the Friendship Train may by this time be history, but some of us, who were directly connected with it, are pondering where we might have made it more successful. Many and varied were the experiences in dealing with people in all walks of life, the common laborer, doctors, lawyers and ministers. In our travel from county to county, speaking to groups and organizing solicitors, many received us graciously and with a good response; again others were very sarcastic.

Now for a few personal experiences. In one small town (naturally these towns are easier to work than larger towns) the churches united for a union meeting at which I was invited to speak in the interest of relief. After the meeting solicitors were organized to make a house to house canvas and over $6,000 was solicited.

In another county the minister of the Christian church with a membership of about 500 was approached. He remarked that at their last meeting, concerning the drive for the Friendship Train, it was remarked how much the Mennonites were doing for relief and what the motive back of it was—whether the Mennonites here were trying to build a strong Germany again which would make America fight another war. Fortunately, my church affiliation was not asked, and it gave me an opportunity to relate the history of the Mennonite people and their method of relief. This minister then called the ministerial alliance for an organization meeting and in two days time sent in a check for over $1,600.

In another county a very successful house to house canvass was made. When completed a minister from that county wrote me that while I was in their county I mentioned about the CARE package work and correspondence with people in Europe. Through Dr. Krahn I received a group of names and went back into this county to present the work of CARE as a followup to the Friendship Train.

One more experience. In one county I met a young man who was an officer in Europe who related this experience. Army life was very monotonous to him, and he became very well acquainted with several families in Europe who opened their homes (such as they were) to him and he was welcome any time. Upon his discharge he, being an officer, did not have to turn in his supplies to the Government. So he divided all his supplies except what he needed to wear home between four families. Since he is home, he and his young wife have established a home on a farm and have adopted these four families. They follow them up regularly with CARE packages. He is not a member of a Mennonite church.

Conclusion: I have only touched on a few experiences in my travels here at home, but my eyes have been opened. We speak to our young people to consecrate their lives for the missionary cause, and that is well. But is not one of the greatest needs for missions right here in our home land? The young man just mentoned said, "If you could go out and get one family in America to adopt a family in Europe right now and send them food and clothing there would be no European famine and all wars would cease."

Have we as a Mennonite people been hiding our relief work under a bushel? I find our non-Mennonite friends want to do relief work and keenly feel the need of it, but do not have the proper machinery set up. This was very readily expressed in our meeting with Church World Service Inc., which was held in Hutchinson, Kansas. Should not the Mennonite Central Committee officially link up with The Church World Service Inc. and take the lead, sending our young men among non-Mennonites, in our home and distant communities in the interest of relief and thus create a better feeling and understanding for all nations?

I am convinced this would be a real home mission project and that we may fail in our peace testimony if we fail to present the needs of relief to our non-Mennonite friends. We shall not only teach not to bear arms, but how to live and let live.

(Ernest Bachman, Newton, Kansas, served as district field man for the Christian Rural Overseas Program in its recent drive for wheat for the Friendship Train. CROP is sponsored by Church World Service Inc. His task was to get solicitors to make a house to house canvas and to hold meetings to encourage giving to relief. He had ten counties under his supervision. The Governor of Kansas publicly honored him for his part in the drive. Mr. Bachman is also chairman of the relief committee of the First Mennonite Church, Newton.)

Not by the wine drunk, but the wine poured forth;
For love's strength standeth in love's sacrifice,
And whoso suffers most hath most to give."

A TRIP THROUGH GERMANY

By Elizabeth Boehr

EARLY in October I left for a trip through Germany, with two aims in mind—to acquaint myself with some of the MCC units and to visit my relatives near these units. My first stop was in Munich and Bad Toelz, where the army has a headquarter, as well as in Munich. The country is beautiful, but as most of you know the city of Munich is greatly destroyed. Only a part of the treasured Rath-Haus is still standing. It is pleasant for an American to travel here. My AGO card opened all the army stores and officers' mess for me. The same is true of the American Red Cross Headquarters. You can have coffee, sandwiches, and donuts from nine o'clock on through the day.

Early Sunday morning Polly and I took the train to Oberammergau. We spent the day in this charming little village, unharmed by all the battles. We saw the Passion Play Stage and had our dinner in an Austrian cafe — we took coffee, sugar and some cakes with us. Had a good soup, potato-knoedel and a little vegetable. We shared our delicacies as far as they reached. The day was perfect, so we walked through the picturesque streets with their quaint painted houses. Then we visited in one of the Lang homes and looked at some of the beautiful wood carvings these people do. We were told the Passion Play will be given again 1950 —May 15 to September 15.

> Even worse than the shortage of physical necessities is the breakdown of morale and morals in the face of need. People who have been driven, beaten, bombed, and oppressed, need love and feeling that somebody cares. This need is equal to or greater than the craving for bread. Morals, which depend so much on an adequate supply of food, clothing, and shelter, have dropped in the absence of these necessities. With a package of cigarettes commanding a greater price than a woman's body, morals are hard to maintain. Shortage of marriageable men has also made the moral problem worse. For example, in the American zone of Germany there are only sixty men between the ages of twenty to forty for every 100 women of the same age groups. This in itself makes for a terrible moral problem.—Church World Service.

On Monday I left for Nuernberg where I spent two days. Here again I was billeted in an army hotel where I had my meals as well. The city is almost completely destroyed. Those of you that know this beautiful historic city will remember the inner city with its massive walls and towers—the towers large enough for families to live in, the wall wide enough for walks. This wall had forty-four towers—not one had been saved. The city is only 25 per cent Catholic. There were thirty-four churches in this city—many historic Protestant churches. Not one can be used to worship in —every one is bombed and burned out. I walked through the cleared streets early one morning. Ruins all around me. Out of the ruins crowds of people were pouring. Where do they come from? They all live in basements and sub-basements all over the city. The next morning I got a taxi to take me around the city. The Congress Hall which Hitler started is still there but unfinished. The Soldier's Field where Hitler had army reviews is used for army foot-ball. The afternoon I spent at the Palace of Justice which has been completely rebuilt by the American army after the war, as well as the business and living quarters around there. Again army mess and PX stores are at your disposal. I met an American lawyer, who helps at the trials, in Vienna, so she took me into the visitor's section. The I. G. Farben trial was in session. The twenty-four Farben representatives were seated on one side. One of their own members—who turned traitor—was witnessing against them. The prosecuting attorney, his whole staff, the judge and his assistants, as well as the Military Police were American. On the whole people feel this thing has been going on just about long enough.

The next day I arrived in Frankfurt. This is one of the important army headquarters. Here I was conscious that to every seven whites we have one Negro in the army. The American Red Cross is always located in one of the most beautiful large public buildings in the city. It is always crowded with soldiers and and Fraeuleins—at least some of the European woman get good things to eat. You should see them eat ice cream, donuts—drink malted milk, coffee, and take packages with them. These soldiers spend a good deal for these girls—whether it is love, pity of a fling—these hungry folks get food. The next morning I took the army bus to Wiesbaden, and spent the day there with a Vienna girl, that I happened to meet in Frankfurt. The wonderful Kurhaus is the American Red Cross Headquarters—some of you readers may remember the glorious gardens and the sulfur baths for which this city was famous. It is also partly destroyed. The drive from Frankfurt to Wiesbaden is very beautiful, part of the way is the Reichsautobahn—a marvelous highway, powerfully built, winds over and under itself—no crossings as we have. My next stop was in Mannheim. Some of the city park in the inner city is still lovely, but the city too is gone. An extensive building program is in progress here. The American Red Cross, the PX, as well as the ice cream stores were again at my disposal.

HAVING been abroad six and one-half years and havng just returned I am very much encouraged by the active interest in relief in our Mennonite communities. We have not visited many churches as yet, and are, in fact, just beginning to travel about. But when called to a place in Canada, where little advance notice had been given of our coming, we found some 1,700 people. And when in Alberta, we were delayed on account of a car accident and arrived at Rosemary at 11 o'clock at night, we found the little town full of cars—there was a very large tent, a loud speaker and lights—they had prayed and sung and done everything else waiting for us. When we arrived we said, "The meeting is dismissed." But there was no arguing. We stayed until past 2 o'clock. I am, indeed, very much encouraged.

The cause which we represent is a great Cause. I am not able to say anything on the first years abroad, the years in England, and Holland, though much should be said. Having this short time I will isolate the most recent development—that with the Mennonite refugees. I will begin there where the work began.

First, however, I must answer the challenging question of Brother Goering who asked, "Is relief work really a witness for Christ?" Of the relief workers I have met I can say that they are sensitive to that challenge. We know that ours is a great mission. Of course, you people have a perfect right to ask of us relief workers anything you please. We have been your servants! What did we do? How did we do it? I confess that it has often been difficult to combine the two: goods and gospel. It is comparatively easy to distribute goods, or to move a people, or to feed them, and it is possible to get a crowd together and preach the gospel.

"...something positive, a 'plus! had to accompany it."

But you want us to do two in one. We have been puzzled sometimes. Yet we have tried. And the ways used to make this excellent combination is again an entire chapter for which we have not the time today. How would you, for instance, hand out a pair of pants with a "plus"? It is not enough to give it away. Something added, something positive, a "plus" had to accompany it. In Holland we were able to clothe 1,500 to 2,000 people in a week. Food was distributed to 20,000 to 25,000 in a week. As numbers increase the problem of the "plus" increases. I won't go into detail how it was attempted, or may I say done. Each worker had his and her own method.

I would like, however, to point to at least one source of evidence assuring us that this "plus" (the spirit of love as expressed in our motto: "In the name of Christ") was understood and has been received by many people. Hundreds of thank-you letters are at hand, acknowledging the help of the M.C.C. Many begin by saying, "We thank you very much for what we received," and then the letter continues, "But most of all we thank you for the way in which it was given." I believe I can speak for almost 300 relief workers, having met them in England, France, Belgium, Paraguay, Puerto Rico, and Germany. All these units are consciously aware of the fact that our relief work has got to be more than handing out material goods. And we have tried to do more; we have tried to combine goods and gospel.

And now to begin this most recent story of the refugee movement. Many of us have heard something about it. I make no apologies for repetition. In the first place, it is so vital in our Mennonite history, it will stand out in later years as a momentous and historic time. The second fact is that there have been few people directly connected with this work. I feel I should acquaint you with at least some details of it.

When we were in Holland distributing clothing and food, a little wedge was pushed into our work. This was the coming of thirty-three strange people speaking a strange language. Dr. Hilkema came to us saying, "Look what we have here," and handed to us a paper clipping that thirty-three refugees had landed at Maastricht, South Holland. We went down and discovered the first thirty-three of our Russian Mennonite refugees who had come from the Ukraine, walking practically the whole distance across western Europe. They told us a sad story. Having started in a group of over a thousand, some stayed by the roadside, some dissappeared mysteriously. When they arrived in Holland there were only thirty-three left. I recall how we gathered in a small room for worship. We sat on double decker bunks and Brother Hilkema spoke to them on the text "In my father's house are many mansions." How we would have liked to have told them that in Canada and the United States, too, there are many homes and rooms waiting for them. But we could say nothing about homes here on earth for those unfortunate people. There was no country ready and willing to receive our Mennonite refugees. The Dutch Board on Refugees was persuaded to hand over to us and to our Dutch Mennonites these thirty-three, and together we worked out a solution. The Dutch Mennonites took them into their homes. They were the hosts, and the M. C. C. promised clothing, additional food etc. The M. C. C. also quaranteed to take these people off the hands of the Dutch and settle them in the New World.

In sketching very briefly what happened we cannot leave out our Dutch brethren. Certain government officials were approached, with the result that the "Menno-pass" was issued—the only pass of its kind ever issued for Mennonites in the 400 years of our existence. The Menno Pass, of three pages, of blue color and in three languages, had this beautiful quality—if you arrived with it at the Dutch borders you could enter.

In our minds we saw many of our refugees coming in from Germany. Optimistically, I ordered 5,000 to be printed. (Here Peter Dyck went on to tell how only 442 were added to the original thirty-three, how the Menno Pass plan had to be given up because of objection by the Russian government, how Holland sheltered these Mennonites, and how Queen Wilhelmina sent a telegram of congratulations to the refugees upon their arrival in Paraguay.)

The MCC asked that we should go to Germany. I have no time to dwell on the difficulties of getting to Germany. It was impossible through the British diplomatic circles.—Finally, after three and one-half months of negotiation, we were allowed to go, and it was the Americans who gave us permission, not only permission to go into Germany but to go into the heart of the Russian zone, Berlin. Berlin, as you know, is divided politically into four sectors—not zones—French, Russian, and American. Americans have one quarter of Berlin to govern. Everything that happens in Berlin can only happen with the agreement of all four powers.

One hundred fifty Mennonite refugees were stranded in Berlin. Stranded because they could not get food, houses, and official permission to stay. They found themselves a bombed out building and there managed to live under such crowded conditions that their appalling quarters made news in the New York Times.

Then we were called in to see what we could do. The Americans were kind enough to make houses available for these refugees. Heretofore, the method of obtaining food had been to sneak out at night . . . and get some little bit on which to live—never knowing if they would return. This method was stopped when we came in, but how could we bring them food? . . . We remembered having seen the Dutch Red Cross drive ambulances from Holland into Berlin and back again. We inquired and were told that they were empty when coming to Berlin. The MCC had extra relief food in Holland. Could we get this into Berlin? . . . The Dutch Red Cross delivered to our door beans, flour, and other MCC contributed food. The good news spread, and the refugees came. Every week some thirty-two to thirty-five came to us. Every Sunday we filled a bombed out school and thanked God for those who had been added to our growing "family" and prayed, "Lord, send us more." I confess that it was not the wish of the Americans that we raked and combed and finally swept to see if any of our people were left. The "family" grew from 600 to 800, 800 to 900, and finally reached a peak with 1,125 all living on that little "island," depending on MCC food which came in from the Netherlands—a source of supply which might be cut off any day, and then all of them would be forced back to where they had come from. Then, of course, all would be caught. . .

My wife was in charge of the camp organizing and supervising the work. I was much on the road in the British and American zones. Our organization was as follows: at the top was the MCC, twenty-seven key men were responsible to us, and each of those key men had some group leaders under them, in all 125 leaders. Each group leader was responsible for one group of Mennonite refugees. We then worked out a system whereby we sent a letter every ten days to the group leaders and news and comfort out to all refugees, about 10,000 of them. When the war ended there were not 10,000, there were something like 32,000 to 35,000 Mennonite refugees in Germany, and some 25,000 have since then been . . . taken back to Russia. Two thousand three hundred and five went to Paraguay. That leaves about 8,000 Mennonite refugees in Germany to be rescued.

Of course, we had no way to get out of Berlin. We must briefly tell how, after the first months there, we made so bold as to take the bull by the horns and approach the Russians. We hoped to reach some decision. There are three categories of people which, according to the agreement of Yalta, may be forcefully repatriated: war criminals, deserters and collaborators. We know our people as a whole did not fall into those three.

One fine day we had a commission of five Russian officers and five American officers call on us. Our people came in one by one, their faces white and cold perspiration on their brow. Those were harassing experiences, but there seemed no other way out. I pleaded with them. "Please, tell the truth or you will not get through." The Russians asked them where they were from, names, and birthdates and invited them all to go back to their lovely home country. Our people declined the offer. Why? Because they had lost everything in Russia. Lost their homes, land and relatives. They said they wanted to go to Canada; they had an uncle there. I overheard that a number of times. One woman trembling, shaking, and determined to tell the truth was interrupted in her answers by one of the Russian officers who said, "Oh, I know, you want to go to Canada too, you have an 'uncle' there!"

She shook her head, "No, I have five uncles in Canada."

Now, of course, this Russian officer did not believe a word of it. He probably did not know or didn't think of the fact that in the twenties some 21,000 Mennonites migrated from Russia to Canada. Among so many there are bound to be a goodly number of uncles. They wanted to help, but couldn't. They were bound by agreements and technicalities. They could not give them food, nor grant them entrance into the U.N.R.R.A.

camps. As individuals they would have liked to help these frightened and good people, but in their official capacities they dared not.

One question needed clarification, the question of their nationality. The result of the probing into this was amusing and of historic importance. As they were brought before the United States board of officers, one after another said, "I am a Mennonite." The next one came. "What nationality are you?"

"Mennonite."

They had said this in good faith. I was asked to interpret to one of them that in Heaven there might be a Mennonite state, but not on earth. The next one came in, and the next, and finally the Americans called a halt, and decided not to put the question like that. They would put it differently. When the interrogation was resumed again an elderly refugee woman stood before the Board and was asked to say where she felt most at home. Now the country which she would name was to be considered her nationality. In Russia? No. Germany? No. What about Holland? Could not know. What about Canada? She did not know. She was urged to be quite frank and tell where she would feel at home, and finally she answered, "In a Mennonite village." They had gotten exactly as far as they were before—a Mennonite, at home in a Mennonite village.

There you have the crux of the whole matter. What nationality are they? It may seem trivial, but it is very important to clarify the point in Europe today. They have good ground to say and reason to say they are a Mennonite. They are not Russians. The 2,305 which went to Paraguay are composed of 700 families. Out of those 700 families there are only eight mixed marriages—so pure they have kept themselves, even in the last years. Why should they be Russians? And why Germans? Prof. Benjamin Unruh, says, they are of "Niederlaendisch-Niederdeutscher Abstamung." What are they? They are Mennonites. That is not a silly answer. Take the term "Jewism." Is it not a concept? And yet the modern world has extended that religious concept to mean a folk concept, a concept of a distinct people. Furthermore, according to M.N.O. it is interpreted that every Jew is automatically a persecutee. There are Jews of many nationalities—Russian, German, Polish etc., yet they are entitled to United Nation's care' and treatment. Why could not the Mennonites be freed from all that cumbersome nationality business and just be Mennonites. They have suffered and have been persecuted. They have their customs and peculiarities which go far beyond cooking recipes and languages. Why not let them just be Mennonites?

In the meantime, Brother Bender and Brother Orie Miller were very active in seeing what could be worked out at Washington, to see whether Mennonites could immigrate from Germany. Finally the answer came that they could—there was nothing against them as Mennonites—subject to the usual screening and political inquiry. If all was in order they could go. Does it mean from the American zone only, or from the American sector of Berlin, too, was our anxious question. The Refugee and 1) P. department in Frankfurt assured us that this meant the group in Berlin, too. I just couldn't believe it. We will get them all out they said. How? Leave it to us. But the MCC would be responsible financially and in other ways. Eventually, Frankfurt issued to all the Berlin Mennonite refugees certificates of identity in lieu of passports.

Everything was in order when Brother C. F. Klas-

Our Opportunity and Danger

There is posed for us a question which will be uppermost for more than a generation, and that is, "How can we, as a rich and powerful nation, help to restore the balance to those less fortunate and less privileged?" If, by a great act of self-denial which would result in even a lower standard of living for many of us, we could find the way of creative sharing, a spiritual battle of world significance would have been won. If some such achievement is not brought about, then our privilege and our wealth will become the envy of others, and our national and cultural security will genuinely be endangered.

Our threat is not from Russia or from communism, but from our own poverty of spirit and affluence in material goods. To attribute to Russia or to some other country the source of our danger is a gratuitous form of self-deception. If, in the next five years, we could share at least on the lend-lease basis; if we could send, if necessary at our expense, ten thousand dedicated, highly trained technicians to assist in the development of resources, especially in the Asiatic countries; if we could provide the mechanics for a very wide sharing of our cultural, educational, and spiritual advantages with other parts of the world; if we could reduce our military expenditures to a minimum so that we could afford the suggested lend-lease program, we should have gone a long way toward the discovery of a new spirit for ourselves, and we might possibly make some contribution to a revival of hope and a new spirit in the world.—Clarence Pickett, Secretary of the American Friends Service Committee sen came to Germany. He asked how far the matter had progressed. We were ready and went to Frankfurt to check up. We found everything in order and ready for the move. We were congratulated on the fine work, but not a word of warning was spoken concerning the Berlin group of over 1,000 people. I say this because it might easily have cost 15,000 or more if the ship had sailed with half its cargo of refugees. Brother C. F. Klassen went back to Holland and signed the contract for the ship to take about 2,000 to Paraguay. Three hundred of those were in Holland, and when the time came they boarded the ship at Rotterdam. The ship, the good Volendam, then came to Bremerhaven. About 1,000 were put on two freight trains at Munich, M. S. Zone and embarked to Bremerhaven. Then an order was given (by the American military government) that the group in Berlin could not go . . . Why had we ever believed that they could go?

I recall how I telephoned and spoke with the MCC Headquarters asking them to put in a good word at Washington. Next morning the answer came back, "No!" I had hardly the courage to tell the refugees about it. Everything had been tried, and they could not go. We had to tell them now.

There were nearly 1,000 of them sitting quietly, expectantly waiting. What will it be now? I knew what I would say. I would break the sad news to them at once. But when I began I told them about the ship in Holland instead, with the 300 refugees on board. I told them about the group which was leaving Munich . . . . everything was going according to plan . . . and then finally I had to tell them, you are all staying here! If you think they broke down weeping or became hysterical you are mistaken. They had gone through so much, they had suffered such untold pain before, that it was only one more blow—if that was God's way then they would resign themselves to it. My wife and I wept that night. One of the old ladies came up to us, pressed our hands, said she was sorry for us. Sorry for us? And then they all came forward and pressed our hands. They knew for themselves what this meant. That didn't mean they could go next week or next month. It meant that they would not migrate. If they could not go now, when they had a good ship waiting for them and if they couldn't get out now that they had valid passports, they knew the way was to the East. My wife and I could only say that we would stay with them.

Immediately I had to go to Bremerhaven. Brother C. F. Klassen was there, and the refugees had to be loaded on the ship. The Berlin group had received a very definite, "no," and that was final. When I had gone, and was on the boat embarking the others, my wife, left back in Berlin, gathered the group together for prayer meeting. The substance and burden of their prayer was a single word—miracle. They prayed for nothing short of a miracle. They believed God could do miracles, and I am told that when they went back to their houses, they saw their belongings scattered about in the rooms. They asked themselves whether this was right. How can we pray for a miracle and then behave as if we did not believe God could do it! So they packed their suitcases in spite of one of the most definite "no's" ever given by man. They packed their suitcases and everything else to prove their belief. We had a farewell service on the boat. We addressed the 1,300 that were there, wished them a good journey, a happy landing, and a good beginning in Paraguay, sang and prayed with them, and the meeting was over. At the moment of the closing, we were called down to the telephone by military police. When I lifted up the receiver, "General Clay's office." "Is the ship still there?"

"Yes!"

"Can it wait?"

"Yes, if it must."

"All right, your group from Berlin may go."

When through the ship's microphone the good news was announced, when they heard of this answer to prayer, this miracle, you should have heard how they cheered. They could not stop. Their embracing and kissing and kneeling in prayer! . . . No one shall say to me the Lord does not do miracles any more.

In those days much was placed on our shoulders, but when we had done everything humanly possible, we realized that it was not enough. They had to stay. What made it possible, in the last minute, was the Lord and not we.

These people were brought to Paraguay. The story has only begun. This beginning in Paraguay is difficult. There is no time to tell about it.

Please take with you into your communities and to your people and your church the sobering fact that there are 8,000 more waiting in Germany to be rescued, waiting to be brought over to Canada, the United States, or Paraguay, or perhaps the Argentine. They must come out! . . . we have to get the 8,000 out of there and we need you for that. If you will permit, in closing just a thought which comes to me again and again. It was your people here, your fathers and mothers who kept me and my brothers and sisters and others alive when a small boy on the Volga River in Russia. We recall the day we walked barefooted along the village street to the school house where we received our first meal. It was in 1922 when the American Mennonites sent their first food over to Russia, and I stayed alive because of it, and now am here to tell the story and how then the tables were turned. With only thirty-two years, it has been my privilege for over six years "in the name of Christ" to hand our food and give our clothing to other needy people. Have we any guarantee in this world that before I am sixty-four the tables are not going to be turned once more? A guarantee that I will not be standing by the wayside saying, " 'In the name of Christ' please give me to eat?" If that is a possibility, have we not all the more reason to help now, while we may? Must America, must Canada go on in this way? In prosperity and plenty? Will no catastrophe break over our heads? We hope not. We pray for peace and plenty for this great country, and perhaps it will always be as it now is. But how much more reason have we to do all we can for those who are less fortunate than ourselves! There are 8,000 more, 8,000 immediately within our reach. Those we must save. It is good to set ourselves a goal. Here is at least one goal in the field of relief. God has done wonders in the past and I am sure that he will continue to bless every honest and sincere effort. He needs us to accomplish his plans.

Here I visited family friends who have lost all their property and business in the war. By and large the people in the cities are all poor. There are no food stores or any business places with anything to sell. The house-wife spends hours every day standing in line. In a few hours the supply for the day has gone, so she must wait her turn the next day. How can these people live through the winter? There are many relief agencies who are all doing a lot for all the needy in Europe, and I feel that our good God will bless the few loaves and fishes that we have to offer. It is given by our churches in the name of Christ and again passed out in the same spirit here; it is thrice blest. I visited with people as I traveled through the cities. They all agree that it is a judgement from God that has come over Europe.

On Saturday afternoon Paul Ruth came to Mannheim and took me by truck to Neustadt. We crossed the Rhein, leaving the U. S. Zone and entering the French zone at Ludwigshafen. At this point I left the American soldier behind. After a lovely drive we came to the MCC center, a roomy house where all the personnel live and eat their meals. Walter Eicher is leader of this group. Their program is manyfold in the city and neighboring villages. On Sunday morning these folks collected all the young people from the neighborhood. There was an all-day youth meeting in the Mennonite Church in Fridelsheim. This was a big day for me. I met many people and visited in homes and families whose descendants I grew up with in Nebraska. In the evening the MCC took many of these young folks home again.

Through the kindness of this unit it was possible to visit in this community. Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Wiens and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Peachy, who have programs in Kaiserslauten, were especially helpful. On Wednesday evening the Neustadt unit visited the Weiler Kinderheim. I wish the sewing societies in America could have been with me. The lovely colorful quilts on the tiny beds. The nicely made pajamas the kiddies wore. the bath towels—everything came from your societies —Mary Byler has charge of the home. She is a very capable person, and the children all love her. We watched the children eat, and then we were served a delicious meal. Soon we were on our way to Wissembourg with the jeep and Volkswagen. The Builders' Unit here lives in barracks. Mrs. Helen Goering is the house-mother and feeds this dozen or more boys. I appreciated meeting all these fine young people. Most of the men have served in CPS camps and now have the responsibilities of our relief program. It is a privilege to work with these devoted MCC men and women from our churches at home.

The next day I went to Geisberg where I visited for several days. The old, historic, castle homes and barns at Geisberg and at Schafbusch have been completely destroyed. The Builders' unit has rebuilt the Mennonite church at Geisberg, the barracks for my relative-families here, and also built barracks for the relatives at the Schafbusch. These people are grateful for all the MCC Builders' Unit has done for them. Our men are surely rendering a great service and meeting a real need.

Mr. and Mrs. Atlee Beechy, who are in charge of the European MCC organizations, came through Wissembourg from Amsterdam on Saturday, and I traveled with them to Basel. As soon as you come to Switzerland you feel you are in the land of plenty —shops, stores, cafes doing business. The MCC has a very convenient, large house for living quarters, centers, and offices. It is a "touch" of home to fellowship with these friends in Basel. As I traveled through Germany and visited with a number of people who told of their sufferings amid destruction—and how just before the close of the war Hitler broadcasted nation-wide "Mein Volk wird mit mir untergehen." (My people will be destroyed with me.) —the two disciples on the way to Emmaus were brought to my mind. They were so troubled about everything that had happened. We too are troubled; there is so much destruction, sorrow, sickness and suffering in Europe to-day and no rain for crops, very little water for power. So the result is no food, very little fuel and dark streets at night. May their eyes be opened and may they be conscious of the living Christ who saves, loves, and comforts, and who can change things, walking beside them.

Our unit consisting of Bertran D Smucker, Johan van den Berg, Walter Adrain and myself are very busy with our programs. As the winter approaches the need for food and clothing increases. So far we have had little winter and now we are having rain. (This was written several months ago.—Editor)

RELIEF JOTTINGS

"If you saw the faces in central Europe, it would be more than you could stand. You can't educate anybody who is starving. They're bound to have a mentally twisted outlook. You can't build a sound civilization on that."—Rufus M. Jones.

During the war C.P.S. men worked for dairy farmers and others and earned a total of $1,247,018.15 in wages, which were turned into the Treasury of the United States in July, 1947. Repeated attempts to get congress to use this fund of money for relief for children have failed. It is estimated that this sum would have supplied a supplemental meal of 500 calories each day to 100,000 children for one year on the basis of the Children's Fund plan.

To supply libraries burned and bombed in Europe and Asia, Church World Service is asking for back copies of these: Christian Century, Journal of Religion, Christendom, Religion in Life, Theology Today. Don't allow these magazines to stay in your closet where "moths and dust doth corrupt." Send them to Church World Service, New Windsor, Maryand. Feed minds starved for good reading matter.

Europe was poorly fed last year, but the future for her 400,000,000 humans (exclusive of Russia) is far more grim for 1948. She needs to import 22,000,000 tons of cereals to eat even as well as she did in 1947. Grain experts think 15,000,000 tons may be available. By reason of her high agricultural potential, her wealth and her transortation facilities the United States is the chief exporter of foodstuffs. It is therefore to us that Europe looks.

Americans are eating more than before the war. The difference between the abundance in the States and the scarcity in Europe is illustrated by a comparison of the per capita weekly consumption of basic foods in the United States and Great Britain: meat, in the U. S., 95 ounces, in Britain, 18 ounces; bread in U. S., 63 ounces, in Britain 63; eggs, U. S., 8, Britain, 1; milk, U. S., 7½ pints, Britain, 1; butter and other fats, U. S. 14, ounces Britain, 7; sugar, U. S., 29 ounces, Britain, 10.

A MEDITATION ON THE M.C.C.

by Donovan Smucker

Several weeks ago Orie O. Miller of the Mennonite Central Committee addressed the seminary Vesper service. A fine, representative audience was present to hear the description of "spiritual doors standing open all over the world." Various thoughts were stimulated by this memorable meeting.

First, there is the incomparable contribution of Orie Miller as the key leader of M.C.C. Trained in Mennonite schools, he is a disciplined business man who does things" decently and in order"; he is deeply evangelical and committed to Biblical authority and the Lordship of Christ; he is a prophet with a vision for a truly Christian remnant of love in a world where church and state reluctantly but unceasingly wield the sword; he is a fair man with a genius for reconciliation; a great traveler who seemingly never tires out. Finally, he is a conservative Mennonite who has never apologized for his plain clothes while maintaining genuine respect for those who do not follow this pattern.

Second, the Mennonite Central Committee is the largest Mennonite agency in the world. No mission board is even a close rival in personnel or budget or geographic scope of work. It has proven that Mennonites can mobilize on a grand scale with boldness and audacity in a time of crisis!

Third, in many respects the M.C.C. is the best of our various Mennonite agencies. Even though it has specialized in Good Samaritan activities, it has stood squarely on the best Mennonite theological convictions. It has been a voice in the wilderness refusing to have works without faith in Jesus Christ; and faith in Him without works. No one who has penetrated the inner sanctum of the M.C.C. would ever charge it with humanism or half-hearted Christian convictions.

Fourth, the M.C.C. has shown that there are various methods by which the gospel message can reach a people outside the household of faith. Not all sinners can be reached by direct preaching and other forms of direct action. Unqualified love through deeds of mercy in the name of Christ can also be instruments of grace. The European brethren testify over and over again (as in Berne this summer) that the M. C. C. should be considered as a truly missionary agency.

Fifth, the M.C.C. is forcing us to consider our whole conception of stewardship. In the total context of Mennonite life, the huge budget of the M.C.C. can be maintained only through a more thorough application of Biblical stewardship teaching. Other institutions need not suffer because of the program directed at Akron. They may thank God for this dramatic education of our people in the joy of giving.

Sixth, the M. C. C. needs its supporting agencies and these agencies need the M.C.C. For all of its virtues, the M.C.C. can never be our total Mennonite program. The relief and missionary forces need each other; indeed, in China and India the two have actually converged. The M.C.C. needs our Mennonite schools because its calls are always for trained people, disciplined people, reliable people who walk daily with the Living Christ. This is the true objective of Christian education. As a seminary teacher I make bold to venture that the M.C.C. needs Mennonite Biblical Seminary, Goshen Biblical Seminary, and Canadian Bible College and similar schools. C.P.S. showed the need for vital ministers as deep as the depths of Calvary and as broad as the sweep of the Great Commission. Clearly, then, this great committee is not a thing apart. It is intertwined, interlaced with our total, corporate church life.

Finally, the M.C.C. is the greatest achievement in Mennonite unity in the history of North American Mennonitism. We have gone to the frontiers of human suffering together. As yet we can't quite do this at "home"—as yet! Sooner or later, American Mennonites will have to ask what is God's will for our day concerning other areas of unity. Melvin Gingerich recently wrote that our greatest blind spot is economic. I would add the lack of a clear concept of church unity as a twin blind spot with that one.

For all these reasons, thank God for the Mennonite Central Committee.

DANZIG AND EAST PRUSSIA MENNONITES

by William T. Snyder

A number of General Conference Mennonites with relatives in the Denmark refugee camps have inquired concerning the possiblity of bringing their relatives to the United States. Other people also having Danzig and East Prussia relatives who are in Occupied Germany have asked the same question. This brief statement is made for the readers of THE MENNONITE who may be interested; if there are specific questions regarding relatives, the Akron office will be glad to correspond concerning them.

The Mennonite churches of North America are interested equally in Mennonite refugees regardless of background; our refugee brethren are all in need of as much material and spiritual help as we are able to supply. Unfortunately, the governments of the world and the international agencies which deal with refugee problems make a distinction between the Mennonite refugees born in the Ukraine and those from Danzig and East Prussia. The latter are looked upon as "German nationals" since their homelands became parts of pre-war Germany under the Nazi government. This attitude has been unjust to many of our Mennonite people as they are as much victims of circumstance as are other refugees who have been declared eligible for migration. MCC is trying to assist, but the restricttions placed on so-called "German nationals" precludes their admission to the United States as quota immigrants. Our government will accept Germans only if they can prove persecution at the hands of the German government.

Mennonite refugees who were born in the Ukraine are given recognition by the internationl agencies because they are not considered German nationals and they are displaced from their former homes largely because they fear persecution. This recognition was received after much effort and it has resulted in substantial assistance from international agencies who have funds at their disposal for assisting "eligible" refugees.

Thirty-six Mennonites of Ukrainian birth entered the United States in the last year as quota immigrants. We believe more may enter in the future, but this will depend on the enactment by Congress of favorable legislation for the admission of DP'S. The present immigration laws are inadequate because the quotas are small for those countries from which the largest number of DP'S come.

There is little likelihood that persons who are considered German nationals will be able to enter the United States until our country signs a peace treaty with Germany. The restrictions that will be placed on such immigration even after a peace treaty are difficult to predict. Since this situation makes the immigration of Danzig and East Prussian Mennonites very indefinite, and since their present condition in Europe is diffcult, MCC has been exploring possibilities for resettling these brethren in another part of the world. Brother P. S. Goertz is in constant communication with their leaders in Denmark and MCC is investigating whether South America would offer a suitable place of refuge. In the meantime, every effort is made to assure that they will not be forcibly repatriated to their former homes now occupied by an unfriendly power.—William T. Snyder, Director, Aid Section Mennonite Central Committee,

NO "MENNONITE" DURING CHRISTMAS WEEK — A JOYOUS CHRISTMAS TO ALL READERS

Jottings

—Salem Zion Church, Marion, South Dakota. A union service of the Salem and Salem Zion churches was held in the latter church Thanksgiving Day. An inspiring and timely message was brought by Rev. W. Claassen, and a relief offering was taken. The annual business meeting of this congregation is scheduled to be held December 4. The Women's Mission Society has been busy this fall making Shoe Repair and Mending Kits. It also prepared 149½ gallons of assorted fruit jam. They have collected over 600 pounds of relief clothing and other items such as dried fruits and vegetables, honey, soap, and lard. All this was trucked to the relief center at Newton, Kansas. On December 14 Rev. Orlando Waltners are to show pictures of their work in India. Our congregation has been richly blessed by their fellowship among us.—Corr.

—Wayland Mennonite Church, Wayland Iowa: On Tuesday evening December 2, we closed a series of meetings in which Rev. E. J. Miller from the Mennonite Biblical Seminary in Chicago preached for us. The membership was inspired and the church strengthened by Rev. Miller's messages. The offering taken for our Seminary amounted to $192. On Thanksgiving Day our church worked jointly with four other churches in a union Thanksgiving service. We are also working jointly with the two other Mennonite churches to bring the Portable Canner into this community to do meat canning for relief. —Anna E. Mullett, Corr.

—The Melvin Gingerich family of Goshen, Indiana, has asked that the Bethel College Church accept a sum of $100 to be used in the new church building as a memorial to their son Loren who died as a result of an accident several weeks ago. Part of the money was earned by Loren, and the remainder was donated by friends of the family.—Corr.

—Deep Run, Pa., Several of our young folk are taking part in the "Messiah" to be sung at Souderton, December 7. Quite a few members subscribe to Mennonite Life. Three good sized packages were sent by the women's S. S. classes to our relief worker, Marvin Wasser, as a Christmas present. November 22 Brother Earl Myers and Dorothea Segletes were married at the parsonage by Rev. Fretz. A special offering was taken at the Thanksgiving service. Half will be used for home missions and half for foreign missions. After this service our annual congregational meeting was held. It was definitely decided to purchase an organ for the church and to fix up the enclosed sheds for Sunday school rooms. Hymn Sing and Bible Study in the Book of James was brought to a close last evening.—Mae Gross, Corr.

MARIENBURG FAMILY WANTS TO MIGRATE

Who would be interested in helping bring over a well-recommended Mennonite family from the Marienburg sector? They have been outstanding, expert stock breeders of national reputation. They are willing to work for some one, preferrably East of Newton, provided that in time they will have an opportunity to rent or to acquire property of their own. For further details inquire at The Mennonite, 722 Main Street, Newton, Kansas.

—Alexanderwohl Church, Goessel, Kansas: Our congregation contributed 3,820 pounds of clothing for relief. When the portable cannery was in Hillsboro and the surrounding churches were privileged to can meat for relief, the people from our church canned 3,622 cans of meat and lard for relief. Rev. D. C. Wedel of Bethel College was our guest speaker on Thanksgiving Day. The Thanksgiving offering amounted to $5,147.25. Of this $359.30 was contributed by the children. One-fourth of the offering will go for home missions and three-fourths for foreign missions. We had the privilege of having Mrs. S. T. The Women's Mission Society met in the church basement and tied eighteen comforters and packed several large boxes with relief clothing. The past year the pastor was supported by a "love offering" once a month. This is to be continued, and for the next year the entire church budget is to be raised by voluntary contributions instead of by assessment. The men's chorus sings several special numbers one Sunday a month in the morning worship service.—Corr.

The young married couples of the two Beatrice churches have organized a group to which the tentative name of "Christian Homemakers" has been given. Monthly week-night meetings for both of these organizations are being planned. The Missionary Orlando Waltners spent some time in our community and spoke in our church. November 30, Dr. Cornelius Krahn spoke and showed slides in connection with the study of the booklet, "The Power of Love," which the Senior C. E. is making.—Mrs. Elbert Koontz, Corr.

The waitresses and cooks wore Dutch aprons and caps. Wooden shoes were used to decorate the tables, and of course, Dutch food was served. The proceeds will be used for the kitchen of the new building which is being planned for the church.—Lorraine Heppner, Corr.

—Salem Church, Freeman, South Dakota: Gifts for flour for relief amounted to $5,134.69. Flour purchased with this money was shipped on the Friendship Train. —Hoffnungsau Church, Inman, Kansas: Our mission conference was held November 23-27. The theme was, "And ye shall be my witness unto me both in Jerusalem and in all Judea, in Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth." For the opening message Rev. A. E. Kreider used for his text Matthew 28:18, 19, saying, "This is an urgent charge and task Jesus has given to us. It is in harmony with God's purpose, therefore His blessing is upon it." Rev. Kreider also conducted a Bible study each afternoon. Different missionaries spoke to us each day at a session for each men and women and also brought the message of the evening. Guest speakers from the mission fields were: Rev. and Mrs. J. B. Ediger from the Oklahoma field; Rev. and Mrs. Frank Enns, Africa; Rev. and Mrs. W. C. Voth, China; Mrs. S. T. Christmas Greetings to Friends

by H.J. and Maria Brown

It is a long time since we last saw you and talked with you on the subject of bringing the gospel of salvation to the so-called unreached villages of the more remote regions of our China mission field. Since the Communists have come back on us, the situation is not so good. Two-thirds of our Hopei mission field is still under their control. The Christians have been forbidden to hold meetings. The churches have been sealed or else are being used by the Communists themselves. We need to pray harder than ever before. God can and will deliver his people!

The General Committee wanted to rehabilitate Ch'ang Yuan Hsien, but it is confronted with great difficulties. One of these is the crossing of the Yellow River. Both parties do not care to have people cross. Only a few small boats are available, and these do not touch the shores for fear that too many people may climb on and sink the boat. Everybody determined to get on and across must walk through the water up to his chest, both in getting on as well as getting off.

Happily, Tung Ming Hsien is south of the Yellow River. Here the work of the church and school proceeds normally. The General Committee also has a group of eight preachers out in the remote country places of the Tung Ming counties and the southern end of the Ch'ang Yuan county, which lies south of the Yellow River. The work of this group is definitely to evangelize those regions. Then too on our way from Kaifeng to Tung Ming we pass through two counties with their county-seats, which have in the years gone by been very much neglected as far as the gospel is concerned. Here our General Committee is now opening up new stations, namely in K'ao Ch'eng and LanFeng. The result will be that we will have a chain of stations, Kaifeng, Lanfeng, K'ao Ch'eng and Tung Ming.

Some of you friends at home gave us money, namely $100 or more each for engaging evangelists to bring the gospel to more remote regions of our field where the way of salvation has not yet been made known. Formerly $100 should have supported a worker for a year or so, but now it will not keep him going for half that time. Many regions into which we had planned to go are still not accessible on account of the Communists. However, as stated above the General Committee is now undertaking extensive work in new and remote regions south of the Yellow River, both in Hopei and Honan. The number of workers is much smaller than what we had formerly hoped for. Simply because our church workers in Communist territories cannot come out and since the cost of living is so very high and still going up, maybe a smaller force at work longer will even be more effective. At any rate, as it appears now you donors will not have individual evangelists but will be supporting a group of ten or more workers in bringing Christ to the masses. We have no doubt, that you will be pleased with this arrangement and will continue to pray for the work.

This report comes to you through the papers instead of through individual letters as we had originally planned. We thank the editors for publishing it, and we are grateful to you for receiving it as being meant for you personally. We covet your interest and prayers for the future. A Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to you all!

THE READER WRITES

Back to Jesus

Rev. Jesse N. Smucker, the President of our General Conference, at Berne, Indiana, admonished the delegates and visitors in his opening address to accept and stand fast upon JESUS who is the Christ.

Rev. Smucker did not stop there, he also came to our Western District Conference at Enid, Oklahoma, and there continued his admonitions to stand fast upon our Lord and Saviour JESUS Christ.

Thank you, Brother Smucker, for these timely reminders.

When satan, the enemy of mankind, commences the satanic work of removing the faith of a soul in our Lord and Saviour JESUS, who is the Christ, his first step usually is to replace the name JESUS with Christ; the next step is to replace Christ with Master; and then finally, when the would-be believer has yielded sufficiently, he replaces the Master with: "The carpenter of Nazareth," and unless the Lord JESUS, in His marvelous grace does something desperate with that would-be believer, going is easy from here on for satan and his henchmen. It many times ends in the death row at the Sing-Sing Prison or at other places of prosecution and execution.

God in His Holy Word clearly stipulates that our Saviour's name is JESUS and where He got this name from; as in Luke 1:31: "And, behold, thou (Mary) shall conceive . . . and bring forth a son, and shalt call his name JESUS." Then as in Matthew 2:20-21:"But while he (Joseph) thought of these things, behold, the angel of the Lord appeared unto him in a dream, saying, Joseph, thou son of David, fear not to take unto thee Mary thy wife . . . . . . she shall bring forth a son, and thou shalt call his name JESUS: for he shall save his people from their sins."

And now a word to you brethren of the Mennonite Central Committee: May we now have the emblem on all our relief goods shipped abroad: "In the name of Christ," changed to: In the name of JESUS who is the Christ! Please!—Jacob J. Regier, Newton, Kansas.

All of these men have been raised on the farm and have farming experience. They are interested in remaining in Mennonite communities and active in local Mennonite churches. Readers of The Mennonite having farms to rent or knowing of farms in or near Mennonite communities would do these men and their churches a real service by notifying J. W. Fretz, the Board of Mutual Aid, North Newton, Kansas.

PERSONALITIES BEHIND OUR CHRISTMAS CAROLS

It is true that the origin of some of our most loved carols will never be known. They were handed down from mother to child by word of mouth and so are referred to today as old folk tunes. But there are others whose authorship has been preserved for posterity. Yet ask a friend who wrote his favorite Christmas hymn and nine chances out of ten he will be unable to tell you.

Who, for instance, associates Martin Luther with the beloved, "Away in a manger, no crib for his bed. The little Lord Jesus lay down his sweet head"? Yet the great Reformer, the man who defiantly nailed his "95 Theses" to the door of the cathedral at Wittenberg, conceived that carol and wrote it especially for children. And he wrote another, every bit as beautiful in its simplicity: "From Heaven Above I Come to You"—the story of the Christ Child and his mother, Mary, with its appeal to us to worship the "blessed Christ whom God hath given."

As a boy Luther studied music at the choir school in Eisenach. After tuition fees had been met, there was little money for food; and so he was allowed to sing on the streets and before rich homes. His singing attracted the attention of a wealthy woman, Frau Cotta, whose husband took the boy and gave him a good home and food for the three years he attended music school. He graduated with honors, went on to the University of Ehrfurt, and received his degree of doctor of philosophy at the age of 18. Luther's great love for music prompted him to write a number of hymns for his church people to sing, "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God" being one of them.

But Luther is not the only churchman who has given us Christmas music that has endured. To Phillips Brooks we owe "O Little Town of Bethlehem"; to Edmund Sear, "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear"; to Isaac Watts, "Joy to the World"; and to Charles Wesley, "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing."

"O Little Town of Bethlehem," written in 1868, was inspired by a long-wished-for visit to the birthplace of Christ at the Christmas season. Phillips Brooks had climbed the moonlit hills in the still night and had looked down from the Palestine hills into the little town of Bethlehem on Chistmas eve. He had been deeply impressed, so deeply impressed that, home again in America, the scene came vividly back to him and impelled him to write

O little town of Bethlehem,
How still we see thee lie!
Above thy deep and dreamless sleep
The silent stars go by.

All the world sings that hymn today for which Lewis Redner, organist at Phillips Brooks' church at the time, wrote the music.

Another great Christmas hymn beloved by people the world over,

Joy to the world!
The Lord is come.
Let earth receive her King!

is the majestic poem by Isaac Watts, the father of hymnody. At the age of five years, Watts began the study of Latin with his father, a schoolmaster of Southampton. Soon he demonstrated that he had absorbed not only the knowledge of books but had listened to the deeper learning of his heart. While still a small boy, he would sit at his mother's old piano in the living room and make up little melodies—restful, quiet tunes that delighted her. As he grew older he decided that he would be a minister.

As the result of diligent attention to his life's purpose, he was given the pastorate of Market Lane church in London at the age of 26. But ill health forced him to retire after a few years. His friend, Sir Thomas Abney, invited him to rest at his country estate. He remained with Sir Abney for 35 years, during which time he wrote more than six hundred songs and hymns.

Edward Hodges wrote the first musical setting for "Joy to the World," but it is better known through the arrangement given it by Lowell Mason, American composer, who used music by Handel for the lovely words. It is this tune that is now most frequently sung.

"Hark, the Herald Angels Sing!" was the inspiration of Charles Wesley, famous in Methodism along with his brother John. Charles was the eighteenth child born to the Wesleys. He had to work hard, for there were many mouths to feed. Even as a young man, he decided to be a minister. He came to Ameri-

Christmas on the Other Side

by James Pollard

CHRISTMAS and New Year give time and colour to Australia's summer holidays, and put a strain on the Australian family, especially the country family, for they are centred in the harvest season. In that season it is not profitable to take days off, wherever in the world it occurs. In Western Australia, December's insistent sun begins to turn the apples of southern groves to red and gold, and they must be picked and packed and sent to market or to cool store. Northward (we go south to cooler climes and north for warmth) in the wheat country the corn is ripening, and the strippers must work with the sun, harvesting the grain.

From mid-October to mid-January rural workers and Mum and Dad, and their family, have little time for play—though here the youngsters might wish to protest. School-children the world over make play of working in the fields during school holidays. They lend a joyous hand where their elders labour the day long, and they lighten that labour where the bended straws yield grain to be milled, or where in shady orchards the laden trees must be relieved of their fruits by hand.

When Christmas Is Over

Dr. Max I. Reich

Around the Christmas tree we stood
And sang of love and brotherhood;
Hatred and greed were left behind.
We were the friends of all mankind.
But Christmas day has come and gone;
The tree is stripped, its work is done;
The carols we have sung in vain,
For we are pagans once again!
—"The American Friend"

Australia knows no white Christmas, except as a legend or a postcard scene. The country has snow and snow sports on its "Alps" in Victoria, but in June, July and August. When I was sixteen, labouring on a southern farm, come Christmas-time I would miss the atmosphere, the background and the feeling which had been associated with Christmas for me as a growing boy in the Old Country. Christmas on an Australian farm seemed to reflect but faintly a real Christmas. A little later I was to realize that Christmas is not a holiday in the commonplace meaning of that term, but a holiday in its older, truer meaning of holyday.

The summer school holidays begin with Christmas and continue for six weeks, longer in the case of the higher schools.

How do the young people of the harvest fields take advantage of these holidays? The youngsters as we have seen make play of work. Those young people who left school a year or two ago—well, we haven't time yet to think of holidays. We will have at least one day off—rise a little earlier on the Anniversary day, perhaps early enough to glimpse a star in the east, though the morning star fades by five a.m. on this day, and, rising thus early, we will do the necessary chores and dress and travel into town or village, to communion or thanksgiving, and later pay a neighbourly visit or two. (And by the way, the meat for which we will say grace this day is by custom not turkey, but chicken, commonly styled "chook" or fowl.)

We may be back in the fields, or under the apple tree or in the fruit-packing shed, on Boxing Day. It depends on the weather, perhaps, or on how we are progressing with the harvest, or—but you who are rural labourers know that the sun does not wait whilst you take a holiday. Here in Western Australia the summer sun is fairly reliable. It shines for weeks. Rain in January and February is news likely to fill a column in the newspapers.

So Christmas passes and New Year—another day off, usually a bright one devoted to cricket, tennis and summer picnics, unless there be a heat-wave. Yet we keep a promise in mind; and if all goes well, and we complete the harvest in good time, lo! we start the last week or so of the school's vacation by car or train on the road to the coast. After the strenuous labour of harvest season, the workman, the farmer and his family like a spell, a change and a rest. In the Australian summer there's no better place for a spell than the beach. Australia spends its summer holidays on the beaches—as we realize with mixed feelings on arrival when we find that friends, relatives and acquaintances have been enjoying the seaside while we filled our days, and half our nights, with farm work. — Onward.

ca with his brother, but ill health overtook him and he returned to England. It was on shipboard that he listened to some singers and became fired with the ambition to write something that people would sing. During the remaining years of his life he wrote more than 6,000 hymns.

Another minister's contribution to our Christmas music is the song, "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear." These words were written one wintry day in Massachusetts by Edmund Sears. He sent a copy of the poem to his friend, Dr. Morrison, who printed it to a friend, Richard Willis of Boston who com-Sears read it aloud to a friend who had stopped for tea. The friend exclaimed at its beauty and urged the author to put it to music. But instead Sears sent it to a friend Richand Willis of Boston who completed the music on short notice in time for Christmas services.

The Prince of Peace in Holland

by H. de Boer, Amsterdam, Holland

PEOPLE often say to me that nonresistance is a real Christian attitude, and that if everyone would follow this principle there would be no more wars and fighting; but that it cannot be done in this modern time, that it is not practical.

Nonresistance Under Military Occupation

We, Doopsgezinden in Holland, lived five years in occupied territory, and what that means you cannot fully understand, if you have not been in that position. It is difficult to be a nonresistant Christian and remain one, when the enemy takes a family next door to Poland to the gas rooms; when he shoots many men in your streets, picking them from the streets a moment ago; when he steals and tortures, burns and bombs; when he sends thousands and thousands into slavery. It is difficult to be nonresistant when you see women and children starving, when you see that all humanity is gone.

When Christ is Born

There is no more of dark and gloom—
O joy profound, joy without bound!
Today my heart has made Him room,
And light rains round: the Christ is found!

Sing, angles, sing! The Christ is born!
Oh, any day the heart makes way
For Christ, there dawns the Christmas morn,
And his star's ray turns night to day!

by Edith Dunn Bolar

And yet, especially for us from Holland, it is good to know that nonresistance is a thing that can be done. It is good to know that Christ Himself lived in a period in which Palestine too was occupied territory. There the Romans had come and oppressed the Jews. There, as here in Holland, was a government of heathens. The Jews sighed under this oppression and only waited for a leader, who would bring the people to liberty and national independence. At first they thought that Christ would bring them this national liberty, and it is strange to see that in the Gospel very seldom these questions of national importance are spoken of. In this light we see much clearer the greatness of the teachings of Christ on love and nonresistance to the enemy. Jesus takes no part in the political life of His time. He has a far higher aim. He shows us that He wants us to do good and to serve, love our neighbor, and if he does evil, forgive him.

Christ, Himself, lived an ideal nonresistant life, and we, who try to follow in His steps, simply have to be nonresistant too. When at the end of His life He is taken prisoner and His followers wish to defend Him, He rebukes them and refuses to answer evil with evil. "Put up again thy sword into his place: for all they that take the sword shall perish with the sword."

Nonresistance is not practical, as the world says. It will cost a lot of suffering. But the kingdom of Christ is not a worldly kingdom, and cannot be promoted by carnal weapons.

Provision for Conscientious Objectors

In many countries the government understood this and made it possible for those who want to follow the teachings of Christ to do some other state service instead of military service. We in Holland must be very glad that there is such a law here, since 1923, so that our C. O.'s can refuse to take military training without being put into jail.

We must be very thankful to see that many young men nowadays, thinking about their duty to follow Christ, come to the conclusion that it is impossible for them to combine this with modern warfare. When they ask the Minister of War to accept them as C.O.'s, they must defend their faith before a committee. And here the fact asserts itself that we, Doopsgezinden as a whole, are no longer nonresistant. Our young people have heard very little or nothing about this old, real Mennonite principle in our churches. They do not know very much about Mennonite history, even about the Bible, and have had far too little help in finding their own standpoint on the matter. To the many questions of the committee, they have no answer and so very often, alas, they are not accepted as C.O.'s. If they then go on refusing military training, a military court condemns them to three and one-half years in jail.

The Peace Group, who hope to become the center of all the Dutch nonresistant Doopsgezinden, tries to help them as much as possible. The group appointed a man who can look after our C.O.'s, speak with them, answer their questions, and spread knowledge of the possibilities of the law. In that way we hope to give them the certainty that they are not standing alone, but can rely on a group that wishes to support them in any way they need.

Unfortunately the arrears in knowledge on this matter are very great, and the faith very small, so that many young men will have to take the cross of imprisonment, because they were not educated in this faith, and we were late with our help.

For those who are accepted as C.O.'s, we try to get them to some civil work in the way of your C.P.S. camps. Now it comes out that our government has been active in this matter too, and they have arranged a camp for C.O.'s in the north of Groningen—Camp Lauwerpolder, near Ushwert. The camp is starting next Tuesday, and I am going there myself. The work that has to be done there is to assist in harvest work. The camp will begin with about 150 men but it will grow when more men are available. The leading of the camp is entirely in the hands of civilians, and the plan is that, except the leader who is appointed by the government, the camp will be organized and administered by the C.O.'s themselves. The work objects will be pointed out by the Ministry of Agriculture. If I see it correctly, the difference between your C.P.S. camps and this camp is that the Peace Groups here have no direct influence on the projects and the leading of the camp. According to our law the period of civil service of a Dutch C.O. is one year longer than his military service would have been. As was told to me, a second camp for C.O.'s will be organized in the Biesbosch near Dordrecht, especially for the C.O.'s from the western provinces.

C-18

Living a Consistent Life

But nonresistance not only means that a young man can do no military service. No, when you become a nonresistant Christian your whole attitude in the world changes. In your home life, in your work, everywhere, you must be peaceful and unselfish.

As a group we have to do some positive work. Not only have we to work closely together with our government in connection with the C.P.S. plans, but we have to practice the love of our neighbor too. As soon as possible, our group hopes to be in with relief work. As food is still distributed here (rationed) our government cannot allow it to be sent abroad. We would be glad, especially if we could send it to our direct neighbors, to Germany, where it is so urgently needed. But in the course of time we will certainly find possibilities in carrying out some sort of relief program. In these ways we, as members of the Peace Group, hope to be able to testify in our Doopsgezinde Brotherhood to that Biblical attitude of nonresistance to which Christ calls us.

Origins of Christmas Customs

Through the years that people have observed the birth of Christ, many customs and traditions have developed. Sometimes they tend to gloss over the real significance and meaning of Christmas. Some of them do not have an origin connected with Christmas, but they became a Christmas custom. Here are some facts concerning some of our customs which help us to understand them.

The Yule Log Idea

The Yule log idea comes to us from the ancient Scandinavians. During the winter solstire they observed the feast of Juul, during which time they kindled great bonfires. The Saxons and Goths celebrated a winter festival in similar fashion. They called their festival Jul, and from this we get "Yule" as in Yuletide. Amid much merriment and rejoicing the Yule log was cut and dragged to the hearth. Songs were sung as it was lighted "with a brand of last year's log, which had been carefully laid aside for the purpose."

The Christmas Tree

Santa Claus and the Christmas tree are both German in origin. These customs originated as a part of winter festivals and later were translated to the Christmas setting. Some claim that the Christmas tree was originated by Martin Luther. This information is not definite, however.

The Christmas Card

England is the home of the Christmas card. The first one was printed there in 1846. The cards did not appear in America until 1873.

The Christmas Stocking

The custom of hanging up the Christmas stocking dates back to very early times, Nicholas of Myra, patron saint of children about the time Christmas was first being observed. was wont to throw gifts into poor people's homes. According to tradition he dropped coins down the chimney of a poor nobleman and some fell into the stockings which had been hung by the fire to dry. Forthwith the custom become prevalent to hang stockings by the fireplace in the hope of getting gifts.

Western District Mission Rally

by Donald Isaac

Reverend Orlando Waltner, returned missionary from India, who spent six years working among the lepers, was the main speaker at the mission rally held Sunday evening, November 16, in the Bethel College Memorial Hall. The rally was sponsored jointly by the Bethel College Student Volunteer Organization and the Young People's Union of the Western District Conference.

Reverend Waltner spoke on the topic, "Incarnating Our Heavenly Vision," in which he made the challenging statement that they cannot faithfully incarnate the heavenly vision unless they have more skilled workers, more equipment, and more prayers for the mission field. He also emphasized that each individual should have a two-fold vision. Everyone must be able to see what they can become and what they can do.

Reverend Waltner also showed moving pictures of the work carried on in the India mission field, part of it being evangelistic work in the villages and also some pictures of the Leper Home in Champa.

Special music was furnished by some of the surrounding churches. A double quartet from the Whitewater Church and a men's chorus from Walton gave a message in song. Miss Helen Kornelson, president of the Student Volunteers, presided at the rally while Arthur Isaak led in the general singing.

Approximately 168 people attended the fellowship supper at 5:30 in the Bethel College dining hall where a menu of curry and rice, together with tea, was served, giving the occasion an India atmosphere. Two young people's quartets, one from Buhler and the other from Hutchinson, furnished music at this time as well as a men's quartet and a ladies' trio from the Student Volunteers. Short talks were given by nine members of the Student Volunteers who are planning to go into full time Christian service. Remarks were also made by Puran Banwar, Bethel College student who has come from our India mission field, and by Dr. P. A. Penner, veteran missionary who spent forty years in India.

"Behold, I Make All Things New"

BY L. R. AMSTUTZ

In the Valaisan Alps in Switzerland the bells of tiny churches, almost buried under the snow, ring out the Old Year. Photo by Gilbert Meylan. Cut courtesy Official Information Bureau of Switzerland.

NOTHING so universally changes the landscape as the freshly fallen snow. The poet Whittier has pictured this phenomena of nature in poetic language. Describing the aftermath of a severe snow storm, he says:

"And when the second morning shone
We looked upon a world unknown
On nothing we could call our own . . .
No clouds above, no earth below
A universe of sky and snow!"

Now we face a new year, fresh and untracked by man's efforts. For thousands of people, the new year means nothing more than the sufferings of the old year repeated. With Christ it need not be so. Christ is a personal Saviour. He begins with the individual who thus experiences the truth of these words, "Old things are passed away and behold all things are become new."

John Bowering saw the cross as towering "o'er the wrecks of time." Never has this been more true than to-day. However, it must also be said that the cross towers above all efforts of spiritual reconstruction. With Christ it is possible to live victoriously amid the ruins of our age. May the forces of evil be stayed by such a work of grace in the hearts of men is our prayer for the New Year.

We have a risen Saviour to-day. It is a risen Saviour who has said, "Behold I make all things new." Rev. 21:5. The hope of the church is in Christ. This was the hope of the early church. Many people have been sadly disillusioned by an unsettled and unstable peace. Men have put their confidence in world organizations. The church of Christ still needs that upward look. May it be said of us, as of the Thessalonian church, that we "turned to God from idols to serve the living God; and to wait for his Son from heaven."

"Ring in the valiant man and free,
The larger heart, the kindlier hand;
Ring out the darkness of the land,
Ring in the Christ that is to be."

"Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Christ Jesus"

A Meaningful Theology

There is a feeling among some that the theological soup of the past decades was rather thin. Without question it ought to be thick. Today there are various attempts to make it so. One of the best ways to get thick soup is to have the necessary raw materials in quantity and quality. Vital Christian experiences are needed for a vital Christian theology.

Roy L. Smith, Methodist editor, has pointed out, "It is extremely interesting to note that Jesus did not come preaching a theology. He came promising an experience, and the people who had the experience produced the theology in an effort to explain the thing that had happened to them." Too frequently theology remains very largely an intellectual matter, which leaves the heart comparatively untouched. It does little with man's subconscious. Yet it is this very area that needs to be entered if people are to be saved from their sins. Paul, undoubtedly, referred to his struggle with the subconscious when he exclaimed, "For the good that I would I do not: but the evil which I would not, that I do." People need help in dealing with these subsconscious powers if they are to change and grow spiritually. Traditional theology today has little to offer at this point. Far enough back the Mennonites had a history of evangelism and changed lives. Present-day Mennonites have an opportunity to build a theology. May it be one that rests on great experiences, that arises as Mennonites are helped to find more adequately the creative Spirit of Christ, who has the power to change lives. If General Conference theology formulates experiences which spell LIFE in capital letters, it will be a meaningful one.—the Editor

We Need To Do Our Utmost

"Let us not be weary in well doing..... As we have opportunity let us do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith Gal. 6: 9-10.

Our Mennonite people, as a whole, have a reputation of being very charitable in all things and of being liberal donors for good causes. This charitableness is as it should be, and I hope our people will always merit this reputation, although we also have some that can and still do not do their part.

Our Conference has many activities that we should support whole-heartedly. These are foreign and home missions, relief, education, peace, publication, pensions, resettlement of our displaced brethren, and others. We also have our churches, hospitals seminary and Bible school, colleges, and benevolent institutions, and these also need our spiritual, moral, and financial support.

According to Jesus we have a special duty to support these institutions and activities that are of the household of the faith, and if all of our people would do this whole-heartedly, we would be agreeably surprised at the results. Our spiritual and material blessings should also make us feel that cheerful serving and giving is our duty.

Mennonites are a small group and therefore need the strong support of all their constituents in all of their activities. They are doing good work as you can see by the reports that are given in the church papers, and are doing it in a businesslike and economical way, which you can also see by the accounting they give of the money with which you entrusted them. Even where pay is received, the overhead is kept very low and much of the work is done out of love for their fellowmen and the urge to render worthwhile service.

The great need, in all these things now, is a challenge to us to do our utmost, and we should therefore not become weary in well doing to all men, and especially unto them that are of the household of the faith, for the upbuilding of God's Kingdom and the Church, and for the welfare of our country and people and the world.—C. H. Goering, Chairman of the Board of Trustees of General Conference, member of the Board of Directors of Bethel College, and president of the Citizens State Bank, Moundridge, Kansas.

The Theological Situation in the Mennonite Church

by Don E. Smucker

(The following article is an epitome of a vesper service address given by Don E. Smucker at the Mennonite Biblical Seminary on December 7, 1947.)

Anyone discussing the theological situation in the Mennonite church is walking where angels fear to tread. Despite our strife-torn tradition it will no longer satisfy to have two parallel lines which never converge, never openly seeking more common ground and a deeper understanding of the Gospel.

I offer the following discussion in the spirit of the Ephesian letter where Paul counsels us to speak the truth in love so that we may come to the unity of the faith and the knowledge of the son of God unto . . . the fulness of Christ.

I

The first issue is Biblical. The confusion can be resolved by seeing the Bible as redemptive history, giving us the acts and the words of God as the basis of the Gospel.

This Gospel treasure is given in earthen vessels. Some scholars have concentrated on the treasure while ignoring the earthen vessels; other scholars have mainly seen the earthen vessels ignoring the treasure. A truly Christian theology will recognize both while concentrating on the message of the Gospel. In this quest there is one main key and two tools. The key is faith and the tools are historical (or higher) criticism and textual (or lower) criticism. Both of these tools have limits and possibilities as they deal with the background of the Biblical revelation and its written texts in Greek and Hebrew. Trained scholars have a monopoly on this kind of study, and the layman should not presume to speak on issues on which he has no competence. But the fundamental message of the Gospel can be grasped by any laymen who brings faith to the Word of God; and who adds to faith a sincere desire to study for ever more light.

Crucial for the work of Biblical scholarship is to disentangle these studies from liberal theology. The issues between the different theological positions is not scholarship—at least it should not be. Show me ten representative New Testament scholars and I will show you ten different theological positions. The popular belief that only liberals are Biblical scholars simply isn't true.

Thus in my opinion theological clarity here awaits scholars who accept the Bible as the written Word of God. And, then, upon layman and uneducated ministers who will admit the valid role of Biblical scholarship. As Dr. Bruce M. Metzger of Princeton recently said, "Today the Protestant church has no more effective safeguard against the corruption and ignorance of the New Testament than an educated ministry able to analyze the exact meaning of the sacred text."

II

The second area of confusion is the nature and meaning of sin. I believe that the Bible teaches original sin as in Romans 3:23, "For all have sinned and come short of the glory of God."

It is important, however, to see that this fallen nature of man operates on three levels. Conservative Protestantism has tended to emphasize the first level as portrayed in Colossians 3:5, the sins of the flesh. Awareness of sin may begin here but it dare not stop at this Puritanical level. Paul pushes it in the eighth verse of this Colossian chapter to the second level, sins of the disposition: anger, wrath, malice, gossip, lying. A pure hearted saint with a childish, immature disposition will nullify his effectiveness. Finally in the eleventh verse Paul mentions the social sins. Neither Greek and Jew (racial distinctions), circumcision and uncircumcision (denominational difference), barbarian and Scythian (cultural distinction between educated and uneducated) bondmen and freeman (class prejudice). Then Paul climaxes the passage by affirming the primacy of charity, kindness and forgiveness as the heart of Christian love.

If all groups in our church portrayed sin on these three levels instead of only one or two I am convinced greater unity would come about and the Gospel made more urgent and more meaningful to young people. Sin in fallen humanity is all-pervasive!

III

The third need is to clarify our doctrine of the church. The doctrine of the church starts with the Old Testament remnant where God did his work through an uncorrupted minority looking forward to the Messiah whose nature was that of a Suffering Servant. In the New Testament the remnant becomes the church whose Lord is the crucified Saviour. There is, of necessity, only one Body of Christ, only one Christian church even though, according to I Cor. 12 there are a variety of backgrounds, callings and vocations in this one Body of Christ. Hence, unity without uniformity. This has clear-cut implications for a more disciplined church with high standards, on the one hand; and a real quest for unity with other true members of the Body of Christ, on the other.

I suggest that anyone who affirms in faith and pentience the great truth that Jesus Christ is Lord and Saviour must be accepted as a Christian. This is only a minimum statement to be sure. There are many other corollaries to these truths. But such a reduced theological platform will permit unity outside our own denomination as well as pointing to our special denominational beliefs which will be added to this minimum statement. In the larger movements of church unity our Mennonite task is to press for a deeper commitment to Biblical authority, a warmer conception of the church as a brotherhood of love and mutual aid, and the primacy of love applied to every individual and collective relationship.

Thus, the need here is a Mennonite church with the

THE MOST devastating and the most costly war in all history is over. Once again our continent was spared the devastation of bombed cities, towns, and communities. When the war ended we could proceed to carry on the normal business without stopping to rebuild our homes, churches, schools, hospitals, and our business places. We moved directly into a period of inflated prices and prosperity which has continued to the present, and through it all we have been privileged to help those less fortunate then we are.

We have always laid much stress upon the normal growth of the faculties which God has given us. Our heritage carries with it an appreciation for developing the resources that we have to the best of our abilities. Not a few of our parents found it impossible to amass great fortunes, but they did all they could to give their children all the educational advantages possible. For this we are profoundly grateful.

As a people we stand again in a position to carry on this rich heritage. Those of our young men who chose to serve our country under the Civilian Public Service Program rather than in the armed forces gave their services without pay and without provision for their dependents. Many a young man has given three, four, and nearly five years of service during the most promising years of his life, without pay. Nor did they receive any "mustering out" pay, or any educational aid grants from the government as did the men who entered the armed forces.

Our people were quick to realize this disadvantage, and long before the war was over preparations were made whereby some help could be given to the ex-CPS man. Our schools led out in providing a program whereby an ex-CPS man could attend one of our Mennonite and Affiliated Colleges without tuition charges for as many months as he had served in CPS, but not to exceed a total of twenty-seven months. Last year (1946) a total of ninety-nine young men were given assistance in this manner, with a cost of approximately $18,000. Although this represents a considerable sum of money, yet it takes little more than 6000 bushels of wheat, or ten bushels per family from 600 of our loyal supporters.

And who can measure the returns? No one can, except that we look forward to a faithful service rendered by these people. What wiser investment could we make anywhere then to help a group of our own young men (many of whom are now married and have a family) to prepare themselves for their future work in one of our own church schools? There is a potential of power here which can never be estimated in terms of dollars and cents, but which should be looked at rather as a potential power in the hands of God toward the building of His Kingdom.

Can you think of a gift more appropriate than to invest in the future of our church in terms of persons who are preparing themselves in our own church schools? If you feel led to contribute to this worthy cause which must depend upon interested people for its support, will you not send your contribution to the General Conference Headquarters Office, 722 Main Street, Newton, Kansas, and earmark it for Educational Rehabilitation for ex-CPS men.

There were numbers of us who, although in line for being drafted, were deferred because of being essential to the industry in which we were engaged, or for other reasons; at any rate, we were not drafted. Here is one area in which we may share of our means with those who could not earn money while we were perhaps netting substantial financial gains. As good Christian stewards, what is our obligation toward this cause?

"Can you think of a gift more appropriate than to invest in the future of our church in terms of persons who are preparing themselves in our own church schools?"

The Sunday School Lessons for the First Quarter

by Paul R. Shelly

I. THE LESSON FOR 1948

The lessons for the year 1948 contain a separate emphasis for each quarter. The lessons for each quarter should be interesting and helpful. In the first quarter we will study the Great Christian Teachings. In the second quarter we will continue our study of Old Testament life on the theme Captivity and Return of the Jews. This series of lessons will follow the lessons which we discussed during the second quarter of 1947 on The Rise and Fall of a Nation. In the third quarter the lessons will be on Unheralded Bible Characters. The last quarter will deal with the Literature of the Bible where in one quarter we will get a brief approach to the entire Bible. This should be very beneficial to us.

II. RELATION OF THE LESSONS OF THIS QUARTER TO LAST TWO QUARTERS

I dealt with this relationship in the introduction to the lessons of last quarter. It may be well to repeat some of that material here. In the third quarter of 1947 our lessons dealt with Ancient Writings and Modern Problems. These lessons dealt with the practical aspects of our Christian lives covering many of the major areas of Christian living. Then, in the quarter we just completed, our lesson dealt with The Letters of Early Church Leaders. Here we had emphasized both belief and practice. In many of the lessons we saw that we must not only become new creatures by accepting Jesus Christ but also that we must bear fruit in our daily lives. In this quarter now we are going to emphasize the doctrinal phase of Christianity. We should be ready for this approach since we have had the practical approach and the approach which combined the doctrinal and the practical. Probably a better order for these three quarters would have been to have begun with the doctrinal and then have followed with the practical.The final one in this order would have been the approach which combined the doctrinal and the practical. These would have followed each other in natural sequence.

III. AN APPROACH TO THE LESSONS

I feel that it will be more helpful to discuss an approach to these lessons in some detail rather than to discuss particular lessons. My remarks here can be grouped under three headings:

1. The Need for Beliefs. We have come through a period in our history in which people have said it does not matter which you believe. This was the cry of many. We were told it was dangerous to indoctrinate people, that people must make their own choices. A second world war has taught us that it does make a difference what people believe. We have learned that it made a difference what Hitler believed about God, about himself, about power, about others. Many people are again beginning to realize that the only way to combat other systems of thought and other ways of life is to have a clear conception of our beliefs concerning the Christian Way of life. Teachers should welcome the opportunity for this privilege of studying again these Christian truths and of making them real to their classes.

2. Two Aspects of Christian Truth. There are two aspects of Christian truth. I think we should keep this in mind throughout the entire quarter. The first aspect is the objective reality of Christian Truth. Throughout this quarter we will be studying the Christian doctrine of God, Christ, the Holy Spirit, fellowship, world mission of the Church, the personal witness of the Christian, the worth of Christian character, the Kingdom of God, and Eternal Life. We must learn that there are eternal verities in life that are true regardless of what men think of them. This is true in every realm of life. There are certain laws in music and art which are true regardless of our response to them. We need to emphasize all through this quarter that there are eternal verities in the spiritual realm too.

The other aspect of Christian truth must also be stressed, and that is that objective truth by itself is of little value to us. In each of these lessons there must be a personal response. There must be a personal response by each member of each class to these eternal truths before they become real.

3. What It Means To Believe. To believe means two things. This is actually just another way of emphasizing what has been said in the previous section.

To believe means, in the first place, to give intellectual assent to Christian truth. We say "I believe" as we repeat each phrase of the Apostles Creed. It is a good thing to believe the great Christian truth intellectually. However, simply to be able to repeat words is no guarantee that we have experienced these great Christian truths in our lives.

To believe means, in the second place, to respond with our whole beings to the Christian truths in question. It is like the little child who puts complete trust in his parents. He can not tell you much about his parents but he is willing to trust them implicitly. To believe means to give ourselves with complete abandon to God through Jesus Christ.

Throughout this quarter this fact should be emphasized, and as each of these lessons is studied an attempt should be made to have each person in each class to be able to know the correct doctrines intellectually and also to experience these truths in his daily life. This will mean actually to have the witness of God's presence in his heart, to be transformed by by the grace of Jesus Christ, to live a triumphant life in Christ, to experience the abiding presence and power of the Holy Spirit, to witness for Christ, and to experience here in this life a foretaste of the eternal home which God has prepared for His children.

Giving with Regularity

There is much to be said for giving on impulse for the impulse itself is often the impulse of the Holy Spirit Himself urging us to give.

But there is also much to be said for giving "according to plan." The great, eternal rhythms of the Almighty may be reflected in our own lives and in our own church life when the giving becomes rhythmical—that is, it becomes systematical and regular. The early Christian church was admonished to give regularly, each week, according as the Lord has prospered them. And as they found it helpful to be regular, "each week," so too our General Conference churches are coming to recognize more and more clearly that if the entire work of the entire Conference is to be integrated into an effective unity of spirit and action, the giving for Conference purposes must be systematic and regular.

It was that sense of regularity, of dependability, of systematic undergirding which prompted the suggestion on the part of the Board of Publications some time ago that it would be appropriate if the thirteenth Sunday in every quarter were set aside as Sundays on which the collections in the church and in the Sunday school were specifically designated, "For Publications."

Every business has found, before it grew to any sizeable proportion, that the printed word, its publicity, its printed information sheets, etc., were absolutely essential to continued integration and growth of the business. The great business of the Kingdom of God is no different. If it is to advance on all fronts, then all fronts must be fully informed at all times. Now our missionaries are on the front. Our relief workers are on the front. Our schools and colleges are not only on the front, but even ahead of it, and in all these matters if the work of the Conference is to go on, the Conference publications must maintain a continuous stream of information, inspiration, and helpfulness to all concerned.

Many churches have accepted this suggestion, and others no doubt will. Placing it on the calendar—the 13th Sunday in every quarter—the work of the Board of Publications through their Sunday school quarterlies and other publications will be undergirded and strengthened, "according as the Lord hath prospered you."

rigor and earnestness of the early Anabaptists with the breadth and vision of the larger churches.

IV

The fourth issue is that relating missions to service. Both are Biblical; both have the blessing of the Lord Jesus Christ. The only question is to relate them to each and cease wasting energy by suggesting that relief workers are only partly Christian or by suggesting that missions are only preaching stations. The Gospel without Good Samaritan deeds has no chance in our suffering world. Yet mere deeds without the message will not suffice either.

The heart of the Gospel of Jesus Christ is God's unmerited love for sinful humanity. God's love (or grace) is the basis of our salvation; our love for God and man is proof that salvation has taken place. Thus, we love our enemies, neighbors or wounded brethren because God loves them.

Today it is not always possible to bring the preaching first and then the deeds in relation to human needs. Many times in our pagan world we must do the deeds in the name of Christ first—and then the message. I know of a specific case of conversion through an M. C. C. unit in Europe where I am convinced that preaching could not have done the delicate task of awakening a response. To this frightened, despairing individual came the ministry of love and then the question: Whence this love? Why are you here? This led to Bible study, catechism and baptism. Now this will not be the case in every situation. Usually the traditional evangelism can be used. But service and proclamation are different aspects of the same reality. And that reality is the love of God in Jesus Christ.

V

A fifth source of tension is the nature of the Kingdom and the second coming of Christ. The atomic bomb has destroyed our native faith in science as saviour; it has destroyed our unbiblical hope that the Kingdom comes gradually by the penetrating of society with ethical idealism. Recently I heard Dr. Robert McCracken, successor to Dr. Fosdick at Riverside Church. He was the voice of doom, a John the Baptist shouting for repentance. Optimism has been traded for a saddened realism that man is sick, showing the rattle of death.

This permits two groups to draw together. On the other side, premillennialists must cease making their position a test of full Biblical faith. There isn't a single Protestant creed which has ever so considered it from Dortrecht of the Mennonites to Augsburg and Westminster of the Lutherans and Calvinists. Yes, it is possible to believe that history ends catastrophically with the return of the Lord without prescribing the exact formulation of this belief.

Let us use these apocalyptic times to draw together

Relief Director Visits Mennonite Colleges

Students at Mennonite Colleges who are interested in giving relief service were interviewed by J. N. Byler, Director of MCC Relief Program, during the second and third week of December.

Builders' Unit in France Completes Year of Work

It was on November 18, 1946, that a group of ten young men began their work as a Builder's Unit at Wissembourg. Among the types of work done are repairing of roofs, plastering, insulation of temporary barrack homes, repairing of a Mennonite church, interior home repairing, etc.

Open Feeding Programs in Germany

The month of November has witnessed the opening of several feeding programs in the British Zone of Germany. At Gronau 1,500 children up to six years of age and 180 tuberculosis patients are being fed regularly. At Krefeld 7,600 old people are receiving three meals per week and plans are also being made for helping 50-100 returned prisoners of war. At Hamburg a feeding program began on December 1. Activities at Kiel include child feeding, aid to t. b. university students, aid to expectant mothers, and daily personal contacts.

Announcing a Tools for Paraguay Program

The Mennonite refugees who moved to Paraguay recently are experiencing much difficulty because of lack of tools and equipment. The colonists who went to Paraguay a generation ago also faced this problem and managed to make some of their own tools from the scrap metals that were available at that time. The new settlers do not have access to such raw materials.

If all these tools were to be purchased new, the cost would be considerable. However, in many cases the very tools that are needed so badly are such as can be contributed by our people in North America.

It should be noted that only certain kinds of items are useable. Folders have been prepared and are being mailed to the pastor of each congregation, giving detailed lists of the articles needed, and the places to which shipment should be made. IT IS VERY IMPORTANT that the instructions appearing in this folder be followed carefully. If additional folders are desired, write to Material Aid Section, Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pennsylvania.

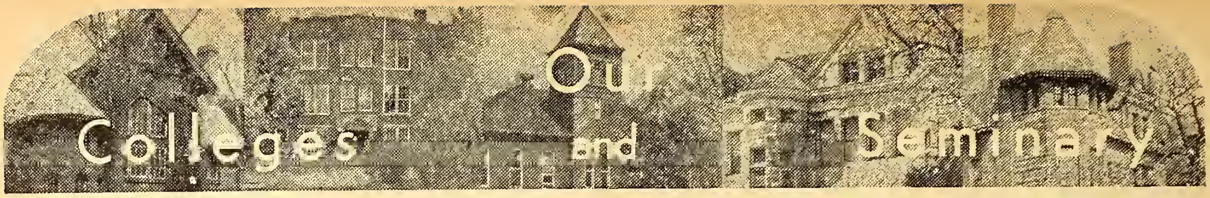
More Refugeees Sail for Canada

On December 1 another group of forty-eight Russian Mennonite refugees left from Bremerhaven, Germany, bound for Halifix, Nova Scotia, according to word recently received from Arthur Voth. Forty-two others could not be included in this group, but will sail later. These individuals have qualified for migration under IRO.

The Canadian Christian Council for Resettlement of Refugees (concerned with resettlement of those refugees who do not qualify for IRO assistance), in which the MCC participates, has been able to secure passage to Canada for fifty refugees aboard the AQUITANIA which is sailing on December 15. It is not known whether there are many Mennonites included in this group.

Discuss Mental Hospital for Mid-west Area

A group of Mennonite Hospital adminstrators, and representatives of the Mennonite constituent groups met at Newton, Kansas, on December 6 to discuss the possibility of providing hospital facilities for mentally ill in the midwest area. Particular need was expressed for facilities to care for the chronic mentally ill and mentally deficient. Consideration was given to the establishment of psychiatric wards in connection with present Mennonite general hospitals but this does not yet seem possible. The concensus of opinion was that the establishment of a Mennonite mental hospital in the midwest area should be further explored.



CANADIAN BIBLE FREEMAN BLUFFTON BETHEL SEMINARY

FREEMAN JUNIOR COLLEGE

On Founder's Day President P. E. Schellenberg of Tabor College spoke twice during the day, and the Music Department presented a full and varied program for the evening. To Miss Aganetha Fast go our thanks for a book loan to the library. The Annual Faculty Christmas Dinner prepared and served by the Advanced Foods class was an outstanding event as usual. The decorations and atmosphere were in keeping with the Christmas season. After the dinner Miss Marilyn Preheim showed some of the pictures she took in Europe last summer. Rev. J. J. Regier was the speaker at the last chapel of the year. Christmas vacation began December 19, and school will be resumed January 5. Most of the students will leave for home during this time.

MENNONITE BIBLICAL SEMINARY NEWS

The sixty-first annual meeting of the Theological Faculties Union of Greater Chicago was held December 12. A memorial to the late President, Abraham Warkentin, was presented by Dr. S. F. Pannabecker. Harold E. Fey of the Christian Century presented an address on "Protestantism and Public Education." In the address he described his experience with the Roman Catholic church as it attempts to secure public funds for parochial education. He urged the group to accept three principles—first, the absolute separation of church and state; second, all churches equal before the law of the land; and third, genuine religious freedom.

On the week-end of December 14 the quartet presented a program in the churches of eastern Iowa. Marvin Dirks sang the baritone solos at the presentation of the Messiah in Berne, Indiana. Arnold Nickel led the mid-week prayer service. A group of Russian refugees en route to Nebraska visited with us along with Brother Russel Drudge, a Canadian Mennonite en route to the M.C.C. voluntary service project in Mexico.

The Mennonite Biblical Seminary Quartet, on its Christmas vacation trip will have visited the following places by the time this appears in print: Mountain Lake Minnesota; Freeman, South Dakota; Henderson and Beatrice, Nebraska. From December 30 on the schedule will be as follows:Goessel, Kansas, December 31; Moundridge, January 1; Garden Township Church, January 2; Hoffnungsau, January 2; Pawnee Rock, January 3, Pretty Prairie, January 4; Hutchinson (P.M.) January 4, Newton, (Evening) January 4; Buhler, January 5; Whitewater, January 6; Hillsboro, January 7; Bethel College, January 8 (chapel). Several other morning and afternoon meetings may be arranged. The following are the members of the quartet: Joseph Mason, Belmont, Virginia; Irvin Richert, Los Angeles, California; Alvin Franz, Lind, Washington; David Habegger, Busby, Montana, Marvin J. Dirks is the director and Harold Thiesen, accompanist and violinist.

CANADIAN MENNONITE BIBLE COLLEGE

Mr. B. Bargen of the Publication Office, Newton, Kansas, was a welcome visitor at the Bible College during the first week of December. The Publication Board of the General Conference graciously granted him some time to help us set up our bookkeeping system. Both students and faculty appreciated his spirit and influence during his stay here. Mr. Bargen spoke to the students on a number of occasions and spent a day in the Altona district, on behalf of the Publication Board.

The Christmas season makes a logical break between the first and second quarter terms. The winter term begins on the fifth of January. Special teachers and lecturers have been secured for this period. Rev. J. J. Voth of North Newton, Kansas, has been given a leave of absence from Bethel College to serve during the month of January. Rev. Paul Schaeffer from the Mennonite Collegiate Institute of Gretna will serve the College with several classes on Mondays, and Rev. J. H. Janzen of Waterloo will be here during the month of March. We are very grateful that these men have consented to serve the College in this manner.

BLUFFTON COLLEGE

Dr. E. Stanley Jones was the chapel speaker on Tuesday, December 9. On December 11 P. C. Hiebert, chairman of the Mennonite Central Committee, was a campus visitor and spoke in the chapel service. The play, "The Importance of Being Earnest," was given by the Junior Class on December 11, 12, and was exceptionally well done. School closes for the Christmas vacation on December 19 and opens again January 6. Recent gifts have raised the total in the Building fund to slightly over $125,000. Since the goal is $250,000, this means that half of the money has been raised. A new Snack Shop has been opened on the campus, serving light lunches and refreshments, and is apparently much appreciated.

BETHEL COLLEGE

Christmas recess began Friday evening, December 19, after the usual busy weeks of traditional Christmas activities, and will continue until January 7. The majority of the students have left the campus, but enough remain to warrant operation of the dining hall. Many faculty and staff members have spent Christmas Day with relatives, and several will use vacation days for Conference or College interests. Bob Tully and Ervin Goering are among those attending the national Recreational Planning Conference in Indiana, sponsored by the Church of the Brethren. Coach Tully will be on the Conference staff. H. A. Fast and J. W. Fretz will attend various MCC meetings in Chicago; L. C. Kreider will represent the Kansas College Athletic Conference at the National Collegiate Athletic Association meeting in New York; N. Paul Stucky, accompanying Rev. A. E. Kreider of the Foreign Mission Board, is spending two weeks in Puerto Rico; and Willis Rich and Puran Banwar plan to visit churches in the Pacific District.

—Bethel Church, Inman, Kansas: We were glad to have Rev. Walter H. Dyck, Newton, with us for our meetings during the first week of December. The following is a summary of the evening subjects: Christ is THE Cornerstone. There is no other foundation than that which already is laid. Salvation is obtainable by grace through faith. We do not obtain salvation through hundred per cent grace from God. It is also man's responsibility to be willing to accept. Baptism takes place after faith. One that speaks the truth needs no oath. To one that does not speak the truth, an oath makes no difference. Our aim should be to overcome evil with good. If a thing can or wants to be overcome, love can do it. Church discipline would not be a problem if all of us were willing to forgive our fellowmen seventy times seven times. During the afternoons the book of Colossians was discussed.—Corr.

—Herold Church, Bessie, Oklahoma: After thorough instruction and confession of faith in Jesus Christ as their personal Saviour, five young people were baptized and added to the church on November 30. —Lehigh Mennonite Church, Lehigh, Kansas: We dedicated our church parsonage on November 16 with Rev. P. W. Goering, our pastor, bringing the message. The choir sang, "Bless This House." The church board members made remarks, and a clear title was presented. The following Sunday Rev. and Mrs. Goering had open house. On December 17, our pastor and Rev. H. B. Schmidt of the Tabor Church exchanged pulpits. We were privileged to have Miss Elizabeth Goertz with us on December 14.—Mrs. F. G. U., Corr.

Ed Duerksen, Avon, South Dakota, speaker, and an offering of about $4,800; Ladies Aid mission sale with receipts of about $1,700 (The women have decided not to have a sale this coming year but to sew for relief and missionaries instead.); services for the following groups with an offering for each: Mennonite Biblical Seminary with Rev. Andrew Shelly as speaker; Global Missions (leper work); and the American Sunday School Union; and the opening of a weekly Bible class at Glendive with an average attendance of over thirty.

Lohrentz, who spoke about her visit to the Canadian mission societies; and Rev. Albert Schmidt, who represented the Oklahoma Bible Academy; and Rev. Walter H. Dyck, who brought the Thanksgiving Day message. The Thanksgiving offering was $458.77, with the Junior C. E. adding $47.45. The offering held for the Oklahoma Bible Academy amounted to $107.87. The church was happy to give wheat and money for the Friendship Train. Nineteen shoe kits and three mending kits were filled for relief. Recently the church canned 680 cans of beef and broth for relief.

—Zion Church, Souderton, Pa. On December 7 the Young People's Fellowship showed the film, "Seeds of Destiny," which is a relief picture. When the fourth annual rendition of "The Messiah" was given that same evening, no mother needed to stay home because of the baby. A Nursery Committee was ready to take care of all babies up to three years of age. This church is interested in religious drama. The young people recently gave a fine presentation of the film, "American Saint of Democracy." On December 28, "Student Recognition Sunday," the evening "College Night" program will be given by members home from school for Christmas.

A HAPPY NEW YEAR

For valid reasons, we are sending sincere greetings to our dear mission friends, not as is customary by mail, but by permission of the editor of our church paper.

They are as sincere as though we were sending them in the usual way from our dear India, our home. God has seen fit to lay us aside from our blessed work of forty years in India. God bless our many friends in the United States and Canada. Recent reports from home are that our churches are not only growing numerically but also in spirituality and an increased desire to bring our blessed Saviour to non-Christians.

While India is torn by strife between Hindu and Mohammedans, our Christians are preaching the "great Light" to all with whom they come in contact. Speaking of the "fine work" done by Christians, a non-Christian said, "You have shown us the way."

Please, pray for India as a whole and for our Christians in particular.

P. A. and Martha Penner, Newton, Kansas

—Deep Run, Pa. An offering was taken for Bibles for Europe. The Girls Gospel Team of Bluffton College will present a program here December 28, at 7:45 P.M.—Mae Gross, Corr.

—Salem Church, Dalton, Ohio: On Thanksgiving Day, twenty-year-old Lillian Sommer was laid to her final rest after an illness of four years. The Thanksgiving Missionary Sale totalled approximately $300, and the relief offering that day exceeded $100. December 7 Dr. L. L. Ramseyer showed pictures of his European trip. His solicitation later in behalf of the auditorium-gymnasium fund yielded $1,217 in cash and pledges. Fifty-five Mission Sisters enjoyed a social evening together with an exchange of gifts. In keeping with the request of the Middle District Education Committee, young people of Sugar Creek were entertained by our young people at a banquet December 13. In rallying the group of about fifty to take the stand for Christ, the speaker, Rev. Vergil Gerig, pointed out that war bonds, money in the bank, free liquor, and Universal Military Training are but fleeting securities as compared in the long run to the security of belonging to the Church of God.

—Calvary Church, Barlow, Oregon: Attendance in Sunday school and church has been increasing. We had a new oil furnace installed recently. The Missionary Society packed another shipment of relief clothing on December 18.—Mrs. L. E. Conrad, Corr.

—First Church, Colfax, Washington: The congregation and the Missionary Society have contributed the following for relief: wheat, Christmas packages, many boxes of new and used clothing, bedding, mending kits, new materials for sewing and cash offerings. We rejoice that Miss Doris Andres of Newton, Kansas, arrived here this week and will assist us in the work for some time."

—First Church, Allentown, Pa. At our annual Christmas White Gift service, December 14, we enjoyed the inspiration of Phil Saint's colored slides entitled "Jesus, Holy Babe of Bethlehem." The picture story begins with the prophecies and sin entering the Garden of Eden and goes on to the birth of the Saviour and finally to His death on the cross. It is a Christmas story with a real salvation message. Gifts of $329.22 were received for the Old Folk's Home at Frederick and seventeen dollars for other causes.—Mrs. L. K. Weidner, Corr.

—Emmanuel Church, Moundridge, Kansas: Our annual meeting, December 1. disclosed that during the past year the church gave a total of $3,461.13. The church has decided to try the 100 Per Cent Church Paper Subscription Plan. A mimeograph machine purchased by the Ladies Mission Society, will enable us to have church bulletins this coming year. The Society's first mission sale, held at Moundridge, netted $324 for foreign missions.—Marie Wedel, Corr.

—Zion Church, Souderton, Pa. The congregation presented a new 1947 Chevrolet Sedan to Rev. and Mrs. Ellis Graber recently. A family night service is scheduled for December 31. The first part of the evening will be a period of fun and fellowship for the entire family in the auditorium. Later, all will go upstairs for a watch night and dedication service in the sanctuary.

—The young people of the Sterling Avenue Mennonite Church, Kitchener, Ontario, added to the vitality of the recent missionary convention by issuing a booklet containing personal messages from missionaries of the various fields. Leona Cressman, a member of this church is now serving in the General Conference mission in India. The church assumes her entire support as it also does of another member, Alice Bachert, who serves in the Latin American Mission in Colombia. The church also gives to other mission work, including among its mission interests, Bluffton College, the Mennonite Biblical Seminary, The Lord's Day Alliance of Canada, etc. Speakers at the missionary convention were: Rev. A. E. Kreider, Rev. and Mrs. S. T. Moyer, and Rev. Dumont Clarke, religious director of The Farmer's Federation in Asheville, North Carolina.

Annual Bethel Bible Lectures

BETHEL COLLEGE announces that the annual Bible Lectures will be held on the Campus March 14—19. Two outstanding speakers have been secured for this occasion.

Dr. Wm. W. Adams, President of the Central Baptist Theological Seminary, Kansas City, Kansas, will give a series of Bible lectures. Dr. Adams was for twenty-one years Professor of New Testament Interpretation, at Eastern Baptist Theological Seminary, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. He is known as a deeply spiritual, scholarly, energetic speaker. He is used widely in his own denomination and is highly appreciated as a convincing and able preacher.

The second speaker is Dr. Jesse H. Ziegler of Bethany Biblical Seminary, Chicago, Illinois. Dr. Ziegler will lecture particularly in the field of personal counselling and religious education. Dr. Ziegler is somewhat younger but has wide and rich experience in his chosen teaching field. He is also very widely and favorably known as a dynamic public speaker and an engaging personality.

Bethel College is announcing this Bible Week at this early date so that churches and people in surrounding communities can plan their program in such a way that they can take full advantage of the opportunity of hearing the messages of these men.—Henry A. Fast

—Dr. P. A. Penner reports that his health has improved. He hopes that he will be able to finish his work on a book in which he tells about his forty years in India.

—Bethel Church, Lustre, Montana: Our missionary, Miss Anna Baerg, has returned to the Hopi-Indian mission field in Arizona. Rev. Andrew Shelly, field representative of the Mennonite Biblical Seminary visited our church December 11. On December 14, the Lustre Bible Academy gave a short Christmas program, and a short dedication was held for the girls' dormitory. The choir meets for short rehearsals after the vesper service. A new "Steinway" piano has been donated to the church by some of it's members. The mission collection consisted of $115.46.—Mrs. Henry J. Franz, Corr.

FINIS?

by Jacob H. Janzen

The Lord willing, I shall preach my farewell sermon here on New Years Eve, December 31, 1947, and, if everything turns out as planned, I will leave the same night for Newton, Kansas, to attend a meeting on January 2 and 3, 1948. If somebody invites me, I will be glad to serve after that in Kansas, or elsewhere, not too far away, lecturing in defence of our faith, and of our way of building the Kingdom of God, against the assults of the so-called scientific agnosticism.

From January 1, 1948, I will be available for such services until the end of the month. In February I will have to stay at home helping out a little here and there in my home church. In March my work will be at the Canadian Mennonite Bible College in Winnipeg, and in Manitoba churches, if they want me there and I have promised to help out at the United Mennonite Bible School at Leamington, Ontario, after Easter until the end of the semester. And if we live to see it, we shall know after that what else the Lord has in store for me.

Yes, I have resigned from my office with the Waterloo-Kitchener United Mennonite Church. This terminates an epoch in my life and service which seems very important to me.

There are periods in my life in which I was more or less satisfied with myself and my achievements. Yet today I do not feel the need, nor have I any desire, to develop further along the lines along which I was traveling at that time. My soul is at rest about the problems and questions which confronted me then.

This does not, of course, apply to my work as a teacher, writer, preacher, church leader, and public worker in general. My work is not completed by far, and my successor at my church here will find lots of work to do, many problems to solve, and many questions to answer. I must hand over to him an unfinished and very imperfect work.

Why does it have to be that way? Why could I not finish the work which I once began with so much enthusiasm and fervor? Why do I still not know "even as also I am known"—after all these years of study, work, experience? When, oh when, shall that pitiably small "knowing in part" be replaced by that "which is perfect"?

So far God alone knows who will take over here in Waterloo-Kitchener when I am gone. He alone knows what the future holds in store for me, and how I, with my faltering heart, will be kept, used, and provided for. His will be done. I am His. Fraternally yours, Jacob H. Janzen, 164 Erb Street West, Waterloo, Ontario, Canada

Carl H. A. van der Smissen writes, "My dear Sister Hillegonda on June 30, 1948, 100 years old, and I being 96 years old, have received so many pretty and nice Christmas and New Year's cards, that we with our shaky hands and forgetful minds can not answer all. We thank our dear friends very much and hope they will forgive and pray for us. God bless you."

CRUCIFY CHINESE CHRISTIANS

A report from China states, "Tens of thousands have been killed in Shantung in the persecution that has arisen recently. The Reds do their utmost to get the Christians to give up their belief in the Lord Jesus. They have burned Bibles, are putting the Christians in prison and torturing them most horribly. Only last week five became martyrs for Christ's sake in East Sung. One of the Christians was nailed on a cross and died after three days. In another area over thirty-five Chinese Christians were nailed on crosses and left to die. God only knows what they are going through."

on the essentials of Biblical escathology and tolerate our differences.

With clearer perspective on these five issues I think then we could re-state the Christian Gospel with greater power and clarity. This Gospel is based on two mighty events which took place in history through acts of God: the Cross and the Resurrection. The Cross is a once and for all event taking away the burden and guilt of sin and it is also a symbol of vicarious suffering to be carried on our backs. There is His cross and our cross. The resurrection solves man's ultimate problem of death and seals our redemption at Calvary. Under the Holy Spirit we are given power to go from Calvary and Easter to the Christian life as patterned by Jesus of Nazareth. It is a pilgrim walk of love with one foot in heaven and one on earth.

Caesar is not king!
The people (demos) are not king!
Satan is not king!

Jesus Christ is King of Kings, Prince of Peace, Lord of Heaven and earth. He is prophet, priest and King—author and finisher of our faith, greater than any theology about Him. Yes, Christianity is Christ.

Time!

Have you ever stopped to ponder about the inevitableness of time? Time in day and night, in week and month, in year and decade. As each second ticks by it is another moment that has gone into eternity. Stop a moment and consider as you are reading this. The moment is passing: it is past. Neither you nor I will ever live it again.

The moments grow into days and years, and our life span grows shorter. When the sun shines and happiness and prosperity shower on us, the moments flit by with joyous rapidity. When the clouds gather and tragedy strikes, the moments grow longer and drag by with poignant monotony. But there is no halt. After a seemingly endless array of painful waking moments, time, the great healer, dulls the aches, the clouds roll away and the sun breaks forth.

The memories are still there, but, strange to say, the sunny days stand out in added brilliance, whereas the cloudy days fade away in the distance with ever lessening pain.

And so, moment by moment our lives fade into the great eternity. A deed of mercy, a prayer—a moment well spent. A shameless act, an evil thought—a moment to regret. The one we wish to cherish, the other to redeem, yet neither can we live over again. They have gone into eternity: fallen on opposite sides of the scale.

Since the beginning of time the moments have run into decades and then into centuries and during all that time human beings have lived their lives on this earth. People in the olden days lived under different circumstances than ours, as far as modes and methods are concerned, but as far as the strivings of the individual, they were much the same as ours. For our bodily needs—sustenance and habitation. For our spiritual needs—peace with God our Creator and the hope of eternity with the Lord.

Organize Young People's Recreation in Freeman

by Marjorie Preheim and Allen Schrag

Clean, wholesome recreation, under the supervision of Christian leadership, is a great factor in the life of every young man and woman. It builds Christian character, helps young people to get together and in that way realize the responsibilities of youth. These are a few of the reasons that prompted Allen Schrag, a young man in our community, to start some form of recreation, here in the Freeman Community.

It was in the spring of 1946 that this idea was told to friends and then to the pastor of his and the neighboring churches. The pastors, Rev. J. J. Regier, and Rev. Willard Claassen, willing to start the program, suggested a committee be formed of members chosen from the surrounding churches. Since there are thirteen Mennonite churches consisting of five different branches of the Mennonite faith in our community, it was not hard to choose one or two members to represent the committee. This committee, Melvin Ratzloff, Joe Hoffman, Betty Preheim, Aaron Glanzer, Palmer Graber, Joanne Waltner, Marvin Ewert with Allen Schrag as chairman, was in charge of selecting advisors as well as furnishing games and entertainment. The committee chose Dan Neufeld as the supervisor. Mr. Neufeld is the athletic director in Freeman College and had some experience with recreation while in C. P. S. It was decided to set aside one night a week for this program, Wednesday night was selected. Cards were specially printed with a place for the member's name and rules to be obeyed. These five rules are: 1. Obey the rules of good sportsmanship. 2. Listen to the supervisor. 3. Proper conduct on the court at all times. 4. Keep grounds neat and clean. 5. Refrain from: tobacco, strong drinks and profanity. At the bottom was printed the slogan, "REMEMBER THIS PROGRAM CAN BE ONLY WHAT YOU MAKE OF IT." The games started around 7 o'clock in the evening and everyone was to be off the campus at 10:30. The following games were chosen: badminton, croquet, volley ball, horse shoe and table tennis. Archery and tennis were on the list but due to the lack of equipment and the expense involved, we were unable to learn these latter two games. These games were played on the Freeman College Campus. Lights had to be put up and the courts for the various games marked off. This was done with donated help from the young people. The opening date was June 4. About seventy young people turned out for the entertainment. About the same number came until harvest after which the attendance decreased. During the evening two young men were appointed to run a small canteen consisting of ice cream and pop. The profit was used to help pay the expenses. Since this didn't cover the expenses, the rest was met by donations from the young people. Our program for next summer will be the same as last summer with one addition, a short period of devotions will be held at the close of each meeting. It will either be led by one of the ministers from the surrounding churches or one of the young people.

After the cold weather set in something else had to be arranged. Martin Thomas, Cleon Graber, Beverly Wipf, Naomi Tieszen, Curt Preheim, Lorraine Mendel, Arlys Ratzloff, Allen Schrag, again as our chairman, and Marjorie Preheim are members of our new committee. We decided on presenting one program a month using local talent. The first program, being secular, was presented to a large audience on November 27. These programs are to continue until we are able to gather outdoors again.

We hope this program will continue to grow and that the young people will take the opportunity of attending them. There is always room for improvement in our community as well as in almost every other community. We believe working with the young people is one way of doing it.

A Year Ahead

A flower unblown: a Book unread:
A Tree with fruit unharvested:
A Path untrod: a House whose rooms
Lack yet the heart's divine perfumes:
A Landscape whose wide border lies
In silent shade 'neath silent skies:
A wondrous Fountain yet unsealed:
A Casket with its gifts concealed—
This is the year that for you waits
Beyond tomorrow's mystic gates.

GERMAN LEADER POINTS TO NEED IN EASTERN GERMANY

Bishop Dibelius, just before his return to Berlin after two months in the United States, asked that the American people not forget Eastern Germany in their sending of relief supplies. Individual packages may be sent to persons in that zone.

In noting that Berlin is a separate area, jointly administered by the four great powers, Bishop Dibelius urged that special attention be given to rebuilding its churches and to developing church-related social activities in order to emphasize the Christian spirit.

Hoffnungsau Young People Hold Retreat

by Cornelia A. Franz

Sixty-five young people, ages eighteen years and up, of Hoffnungsau Church, Inman, Kansas, enjoyed a retreat at Camp Fellowship, Goddard,Kansas, on October 31 and November 1. The purpose of the retreat was to draw apart so we might look at our task as young people in our church. It proved for us a vital experience with God and a fellowship with one another. We discussed some of the ways in which we may serve our church more fully.

Our program consisted of singspirations, devotional periods, recreational periods, and study and discussion. Dr. J. Winfield Fretz served as visiting leader.

The subjects discussed at the retreat were (1) Mennonite Principles by Dr. J. Winfield Fretz, (2) Recreation, (3) What may I a Church Member Expect of the Church? (4) Active Participation in Church Activities.

Dr. Fretz discussed the unique contributions made by the Mennonite Church to Christendom and the points which are of special significance to the Mennonite faith. He stressed seven points: 1. The preeminence of the New Testament, 2. Brotherhood of believers, 3. The simple life, 4. Solving differences according to Matt. 18:15-17, 5. Living by one's word, 6. Mutual aid, 7. Non-resistance.

Crafts, social engagements and sports were discussed under recreation with particular consideration of how such activity could be included in the church program.

The ministry of the church to the individual through spiritual nurture, providing social needs, helping him face life's problems, and providing a channel for his service were discussed. Finally, means by which the individual can actively participate in the church through young people's meetings, visitation, voluntary service, recreation and choir work was considered.

Plan Summer Service in Europe

Tentative plans have been made for a four-week European Voluntary Service Unit for this coming summer. "This short-term service is designed for non-college and college individuals who can afford to take a trip to Europe at their own expense and who wish to contribute a portion of their time in direct service to needs about them." The personnel will be composed of Mennonite and affiliated college students, others from the United States and Canada, and a group of European Mennonite young people. Menno Travel Service will be available to assist in the travel arrangement and a conducted tour of Europe. For further information write to Voluntary Service, MCC, Akron, Pa.

Walter Drudge, of Markham, Ontario, left on Dec. 10 for Cuauhtemoc, Mexico, where he will work as carpenter in the MCC Voluntary Service Unit. Albert and Harvey Harder of Mountain Lake, Minnesota, recently arrived at the Brook Lane Farm RFD 5, Hagerstown, Maryland, to assist in construction work.

The Voluntary Service Unit at Gulfport, Mississippi, is in the process of moving its camp headquarters from the former Camp Bernard to a new location a few miles west. The work which has been carried on during recent years by this Unit will continue as heretofore.

Now Comes a New Year

A Prayer of Youth

NOW comes a New Year, and so, O Lord, I seek thy face in prayer.

May all I wanted to be and could not, be achieved—this year.

Enable me to do the things I have longed to do and could not for lack of courage—this year.

Grant me the insight to understand the inner spirit of the persons with whom I have been at cross purposes—this year.

May I be able rigidly to guard my sacred gift of time—this year.

Save me from useless waste of my emotional power; from an absorption in little things; from blindness to the things that are important; from foolish hope; from false despair.

Forgive me for the mistakes of judgment and the weaknesses of will that have made the Old Year a thing of shame and failure.

Forgive me for the ease with which I make—and forget—good resolutions.

Save me from believing that a new resolution has no meaning—or from thinking that a new form of smooth words will help me to escape what I inwardly am.

In the spirit of Christ. Amen.

SUGGESTIONS FOR ACTION FOR YOUTH

During the last summer a group of young people decided to live sacrificially so that others could live. These young people decided to stop eating pie, cake, ice cream, candy, and pop. This was done with the idea of saving money and sending it for relief and with the further thought that such sacrifice would keep them aware of the need.

If individual young persons, and where possible the entire group, will use self discipline to give help to those who are needy they will find a real pleasure in such action. Young people who realize that three cents a day will provide the supplementary feeding necessary to return a child to health will not be willing to lavish money on nonessentials. Young persons can also move the entire church to further endeavors by such sacrificial living.

There is also a continuous need for voluntary service workers in our clothing centers and other relief projects. This type of service is an opportunity for many to express their concern about the plight of people throughout the world. Persons who work in these projects are making a great contribution to God, country, and humanity as well as receiving the satisfaction of a life of service in ministering to the physical and spiritual needs of others. May this be a challenge to each of us.

According to Capper's Weekly America is a nation that numbers 6 per cent of the population of the world but has for its convenience: 70 per cent of all automobiles, 50 per cent of all telephones, 45 per cent of all radios. 53 per cent of all coffee, and 51 per cent of all rubber. It produces for its convenience: 62 per cent of all the oil; 53 per cent of all the corn, 50 per cent of all the cotton, 34 per cent of all the coal, 32 per cent of all the copper, and 30 per cent of all the iron.

(The above figures are outdated by this time, the percentages being still higher.)

ALL THE TROUBLES of the world begin with ordinary people. The selfish and greedy ways of nations are just enlargements of the ways of individuals. When the standards of the common man drop, so do the standards of the nation and the world. As long as private standards remain at a low ebb, so will the world. Until each of us stops "hogging the road" with his car, stops fussing over the seat on the bus, stops arguing as to who is going to mow the lawn, stops insisting on the biggest piece of pie, there can be no peace in the world. If man wishes real peace for the nations and the world, we must return to and apply the great commandment, "Love thy neighbor as thyself." And this part of the commandment we will find impossible to carry out until we learn to abide by the first part of it, namely, to "Love God with thy whole being." However, this we cannot do until we realize and accept God's great love for us as revealed in Christ Jesus.—Editorial in Bethel College Bulletin

Life's Lessons

I learn, as the years roll onward
  And I leave the past behind,
That much I had counted sorrow
  But proves that God is kind;
That many a flower I had longed for
  Had hidden a thorn of pain,
And many a rugged by-path
  Led to fields of ripened grain.

The clouds that cover the sunshine
  They can not banish the sun;
And the earth shines out the brighter
  When the weary rain is done.
We must stand in the deepest shadow
  To see the clearest light;
And often through wrong's own darkness
  Comes the weary strength of light.

(No issues during the weeks of July 4 and Christmas)

Names of individuals are mentioned only, as a general rule, where such individuals were authors of some article. Each article was cross-indexed by approximately two subject references. The only items appearing in the section "Jottings" were the names of churches and the names of Conference institutions.

This is the second attempt of the General Conference Board of Publication to present to our readers and to research students in general a complete index of any previous year of the MENNONITE. Again we must say, as we said in the 1946 index, that there may be some oversights and some errors. For such we apologize. Despite that, we believe that this index will present to our people something which may lead to greater unity of understanding, to more joy of research, and more satisfaction in the preparation of printed or oral material presented to our churches from time to time. It is presented to our readers in the hope that all who get it will give it some special care and place it where it will be most readily available for reference and frequent use. Additional copies of this index are available at 50 cents a copy.
